

MESSAGES OF THE PRESIDENT

GLORIA MACAPAGAL-ARROYO

2001-2010

BOOK 14 | VOLUME 3

Historical Papers and Documents

ADDRESSES AND SPEECHES

Inaugural Address of President Arroyo, January 20, 2001

INAUGURAL ADDRESS

OF

HER EXCELLENCY GLORIA MACAPAGAL-ARROYO

[Delivered at Our Lady of EDSA Shrine, Mandaluyong on January 20, 2001]

In all humility, I accept the Presidency of the Republic.

I do so with both trepidation and a sense of awe.

Trepidation, because it is now, as the Good Book says, a time to heal and a time to build. The task is formidable, so I pray that we will all be one – one in our priorities, one in our values and commitments, and one because of Edsa 2001.

A sense of awe, because the Filipino has done it again on the hallowed ground of Edsa.

People Power and the oneness of will and vision have made a new beginning possible. I cannot but recall at this point, therefore, Ninoy Aquino's words:

"I have carefully weighed the virtues and the faults of the Filipino, and I have come to the conclusion that he is worth dying for."

As we break from the past in our quest for a new Philippines, the unity, the Filipino's sense of history, and his unshakeable faith in the Almighty that prevailed in EDSA '86 and EDSA 2001 will continue to guide and inspire us.

I am certain that Filipinos of unborn generations will look back with pride to EDSA 2001, just as we look back with pride to Mactan, the Katipunan and other revolts, Bataan and Corregidor, and EDSA '86.

I am certain that pride will reign supreme as they recall the heroism and sacrifices and prayers of Jaime Cardinal Sin, former Presidents Corazon Aquino and Fidel Ramos, the legislators who fought the good fight in Congress, the leaders whose principles were beyond negotiation, the witnesses in the impeachment trial who did not count the cost of testifying, the youth and students who walked out of their classes to be here at EDSA, the generals in the Armed Forces and the Philippine National Police, and the Filipino out there who stood up to be counted in these troubled times.

The Filipino, crises and all, is truly worth living and dying for.

Ngunit saan tayo tutungo mula rito?

Jose Rizal, the first to articulate self-determination in a free society, provides the answer.

Rizal counseled the Filipino to lead a life of commitment. "He must think national, go beyond self."

"A stone is worthless," Rizal wrote, "if it is not part of an edifice."

We are the stones, and the Philippines is our edifice.

On many occasions I have given my views on what our program of government should be. This is not the time or place to repeat them all. However, I can tell you that they converge on four core beliefs.

1. We must be bold in our national ambitions, so that our challenge must be that within this decade, we will win the fight against poverty.
2. We must improve moral standards in government and society, in order to provide a strong foundation for good governance.
3. We must change the character of our politics, in order create fertile ground for true reforms. Our politics of personality and patronage must give way to a new politics of party programs and process of dialogue with the people.
4. Finally, I believe in leadership by example. We should promote solid traits such as work ethic and a dignified lifestyle, matching action to rhetoric, performing rather than grandstanding.

The first of my core beliefs pertains to the elimination of poverty. This is our unfinished business from the past. It dates back to the creation of our Republic, whose seeds were sown in the revolution launched in 1896 by the plebeian Andres Bonifacio. It was an unfinished revolution, for to this day, poverty remains our national problem. We need to complete what Andres Bonifacio began. The ultimate solution to poverty has both a political and an economic aspect.

Let me first talk about the political aspect.

In doing so, I will refer to one of my core beliefs, that of the need for new politics. Politics and political power as traditionally practiced and used in the Philippines are among the roots of the social and economic inequities that characterize our national problems. Thus, to achieve true reforms, we need to outgrow our traditional brand of politics based on patronage and personality. Traditional politics is the politics of the status quo. It is a structural part of our problem.

We need to promote a new politics of true party programs and platforms, of an institutional process of dialogue with our citizenry. This new politics is the politics of genuine reform. It is a structural part of the solution.

We have long accepted the need to level the playing field in business and economics. Now, we must accept the need to level the playing field in politics as well. We have long aspired to be a world class economy. Now, we must also aspire to develop a world class political system, one in tune with the 21st Century.

The world of the 21st Century that our youth will inherit is truly a new economy, where relentless forces such as capital market flows and advances in information and communications technology create both peril and opportunity.

To tap the opportunities, we need an economic philosophy of transparency and private enterprise, for these are the catalysts that nurture the entrepreneurial spirit to be globally competitive.

To extend the opportunities to our rural countryside, we must create a modernized and socially equitable agricultural sector.

To address the perils, we must give a social bias to balance our economic development, and these are embodied in safety nets for sectors affected by globalization, and safeguards for our environment.

To ensure that our gains are not dissipated through corruption, we must improve moral standards. As we do so, we create fertile ground for good governance based on a sound moral foundation, a philosophy of transparency, and an ethic of effective implementation.

Considering the divisions of today, our commitment will entail a lot of sacrifices among us all, as we work to restore the dignity and pre-eminence of the Filipino.

Join me, therefore, as we begin to tear down the walls that divide. Let us build an edifice of peace, progress, and economic stability.

People Power has dramatized the Filipino's capacity for greatness.

People of People Power, I ask for your support and prayers. Together, we will light the healing and cleansing flame.

This we owe to the Philippines. This we owe to every Filipino.

Thank you and may the Good Lord bless us all.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

Vin d'Honneur Speech of President Arroyo on Deepening Democracy and Competitiveness, January 23, 2001

Vin d'Honneur Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On deepening democracy and competitiveness

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, January 23, 2001]

For the second time in 15 years, democracy in the Philippines was lifted up to the light of global scrutiny and was found remarkably, singularly, swift yet decisive, prudent and vigorous, bloodless yet uncompromising. The political crisis that culminated in the dramatic events of the past week was a political crisis that sent the economy into a downspiral. And in a new century where democracy and the market have become inextricably linked, where democracy and the market have become the truest currencies, the political consequences of economic decline are dire and unequivocal. This is true for the nation as it is true for the rest of the world.

In the last few months, we have seen democracy in action and in defense of the market. During my administration, I hope to invigorate the market in order to deepen democracy. Democracy and the market will be the guiding principles of my domestic and foreign policies.

Today, the Philippines faces several realities that characterize its international and regional environment to which we have to respond in order to achieve our goals. The first reality is that China, Japan and the United States and their relationships will be a determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of East Asia. Second, more and more Philippine foreign decisions have to be made in the context of ASEAN. Third, the international Islamic community will continue to be important for the Philippines. Fourth, the coming years will see the growing importance of multilateral and inter-regional organizations to promote common interest. Fifth, the defense of the nation's sovereignty and the protection of its environment and natural resources can be carried out only to the extent that it asserts its rights over its maritime territory and get others to respect those rights. Sixth, the country's economic growth will continue to be friendly to both domestic and foreign direct investment. Seventh, a country like the Philippines can benefit most quickly from international tourism. And eighth, overseas Filipinos will continue to be recognized for their critical role in the country's economic and social stability.

These realities have been with us for varying lengths of time. As in other matters of state, my administration will resist the temptation to take adventurous initiatives and directions for the sake of appearing to be innovative.

In the Department of Foreign Affairs, I shall avoid the practice of using ambassadorships as political concession. Non-career appointments will only be made at the ambassadorial level and those who will be appointed will be selected on a basis of competence alone. In this regard, I would like to announce the appointment of Mr. Roberto Romulo as Senior Adviser on International Competitiveness. Bobby Romulo, known to most of you as former Secretary of Foreign Affairs of President Ramos and Chairman of the e-ASEAN Task Force, will assist me in developing policies related to enhancing the Philippines ability to harness the full benefits of participating in the global new economy. His brief includes foreign policy, international trade, finance and investment as well as information and communications technology strategy.

I have also designated former President Fidel V. Ramos as my personal and special representative with the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the World Economic Forum in Davos. President Ramos has also agreed to continue representing me and the country in other important international events.

And inasmuch as immediately securing the support of our friends and allies is critical, I am asking the following distinguished members of Philippine society to serve as my special envoys: former Ambassador Alfonso Yuchengco, Special Envoy to China, Japan and Korea; former Secretary Rizalino Navarro, Special Envoy to Singapore, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar, Vietnam as well as Australia and New Zealand; Mr. Paul Dominguez, Special Envoy to Brunei, Indonesia and Malaysia; and, former Ambassador Raul Rabe, Special Envoy to the Americas and the Organization of Islamic Conference; and, Ambassador Cesar Bautista, Special Envoy to Europe.

Your Excellencies, we are indeed faced with a remarkable opportunity to advance the cause of the Filipino people in the new millennium. Under this administration, I am committed to build on what has been accomplished – the democracy that was worked for and fought for by President Aquino, the competitiveness that was worked on by President Ramos; and I hope to move the country forward deepening democracy, deepening the democratic process, deepening our competitiveness and bringing prosperity to the greatest number of our people.

I ask you, therefore, to raise your glasses in a toast for the good future of the Philippines and the friendship between the Philippines and the countries that you all represent.

Mabuhay!

Source: University of the Philippines Main Library

Address of President Arroyo on the signing of the Solid Waste Management Law, January 26, 2001

Address
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On the signing of the Solid Waste Management Law

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, January 26, 2001]

THE SOLID WASTE MANAGEMENT ACT: ADDRESSING THE GARBAGE CRISIS

When I spoke to our people after my oath taking at the EDSA Shrine, I said that the world of the 21st century that our youth will inherit is truly a new economy, where relentless forces such as capital market flows and advances in information and communications technology create both peril and opportunity. I said that to address the perils, we must give a social bias to our economic development. And these are embodied in safety nets for sectors affected by globalization and safeguards for our environment. That was in my oath-taking speech.

And it is with distinct pleasure today, that the first piece of legislation that I will be signing as President is one of those safeguards for our environment. Indeed, the new law that we are signing today symbolizes the reforms we would like to implement. These reforms must produce as much as possible immediate and concrete benefits in the daily lives of our people, because there are so many expectations and so little time. Republic Act 9003, otherwise known as the Solid Waste Management Act, deals with the increasing garbage that results from our rapid urbanization and economic activities.

I am glad to sign this landmark legislation that seeks to address the alarming problems we have over our solid wastes. By instituting mechanisms of waste minimization, resource recovery, appropriate collection and transport services, and environmentally-sound treatment and disposal, the new law seeks to address the major causes of the current garbage crisis in Metro Manila, and to arrest similar problems throughout the country.

Indeed, the past years have been replete with destructive effects of poor refuse management in a highly-urbanized center. Uncollected garbage thrown into esteros, rivers and other waterways, or even dumped in streets, or in open areas, which become a constant nuisance.

The tragedy at Payatas last year taught us this painful lesson. Even more tragic is the fact that the persons most vulnerable to environmental disasters are the poor who are exposed to pollution, the unhealthy become ill more easily and more seriously. Their inability to access medical care and medicines multiplies their problems. When viewed in this light, environmental abuse becomes an issue of justice and equity.

Environmentalism promotes just and equitable access to resources. It safeguards the Constitutional right of our citizens to a healthy ecology and to live in harmony with nature.

The Solid Waste Management Act or R.A. 9003 highlights features, which lend better hope on how we should address our problems on solid waste. These are some of the features:

First, it stresses the importance of environmentally sound techniques of waste minimization, such as but not limited to resource conservation, segregation at source, recycling, resource recovery, reuse and composting;

Second, it provides for the mandatory segregation of waste at the household level, with collection vehicles to have the appropriate compartments of sorted wastes or separate collection schedules for specific types of wastes;

Third, it prohibits the open dumping of solid wastes and the establishment of sanitary landfills for final disposal;

Fourth, it mandates the establishment of recycling centers at every barangay nationwide;

Fifth, it calls for the integration of solid waste management concerns in the school curriculum, starting at the elementary, high school and up to the tertiary level;

Sixth, it directs an inventory of existing markets for recycled materials and compost;

And, seventh, it requires the preparation of ten-year solid waste management plans by all local government units.

This law also empowers local government units to effectively pursue their respective solid waste management systems in their area of jurisdiction, by providing them the needed policy and technical support. This includes the establishment of the Solid Waste Management Fund – I hope not another unfunded law, and the National Ecology Center, to provide fiscal incentives and funding assistance. I am thinking of our 190 billion-peso budget deficit, as well as training, consulting information training and networking services on solid waste management.

The implementation of this law is expected to significantly reduce the volume of waste residual for final disposal and thus, alleviate the pressures on the capacity of our sanitary landfill. It shall address major negative aspects of solid wastes, which will discourage a community's hosting of a landfill.

I am told that no other country in the world has adapted this integrated ecological approach – the solid waste management. Thus, I congratulate our Lady and Gentlemen in the head table, the authors and sponsors, and the other members of the legislature, as well as the national and local sectoral agencies, the non-government organizations (NGOs) and the concerned individuals who committed themselves to ecological waste management for pushing for the passage of the Solid Waste Management Act.

Through the National Solid Waste Management Commission, which this law creates, to be chaired by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources and with members from various government agencies, NGOs, the private sector and the media, I urge all of you to hasten the laws' urgent implementation.

Once again, I extend our gratitude to all members of Congress for their dedication and hard work. Indeed, our signing today augurs well I hope, for good relations between the executive and the legislative branches of government. I feel this relationship is very important for the Administration to cultivate, for the Legislature is an important stakeholder in our people's victory along with other strategic sectors like civil society, the basic sectors and the business community.

My past good relations with Congress have allowed me to observe the hard work and dedication of many individual congressmen and senators. Some of them are high profile, many are low profile especially, congressmen from the farther parts of the Philippines. But nonetheless, I have seen their work to be substantive. This is why I have named several of them to the Cabinet for instance, Senator Raul Roco who will be the Secretary of Education, Culture and Sports, is well known to all of us and certainly, is not of the mold that is derisively called "trapo". Congressman Simeon Datumanong and Pantaleon Alvarez of Mindanao – who I see here today – who will be Secretaries respectively of Public Works, and Transportation and Communication, apparently have raised some eyebrows among leaders of the business community. But I believe that is because they are new faces, relatively unknown in the centers of financial power. But isn't that what we are also all about? We need new faces, and we need the face of Mindanao in the Cabinet. This has been the clamor of that long-neglected island, and they don't want token positions in the Cabinet. They want positions that really count – and for Mindanao, the positions that really count are the infrastructure agencies.

Let me say then, that even if there are questions as there are questions raised about them in Makati, largely because they are relatively unknown entities, there is grand euphoria in Mindanao because finally, Mindanao is in the mainstream of the Cabinet, in fact, in the very heart of the Cabinet.

I have not yet named my Secretary of Environment and Natural Resources and that is because for agencies like this, there are many sectors that need to be consulted, more departments like NEDA – you know, which is not so crucially and immediately important to the basic sectors. And so, I am making haste slowly because, when finally the Secretary of Environment is appointed, I want the approval to be almost universal.

In fact, up to yesterday, the approval of my other Cabinet members was almost universal. It was only yesterday when I started getting the criticisms about so many congressmen in the Cabinet, and that's why I felt it was because of Sim Datumanong and Bebot Alvarez. And that is why I am making a special appeal: please give Mindanao a chance.

And so, I am very happy that even as I raid Congress and bring out of Congress these two gentlemen and several others that I have appointed in the past, let me say that I am very grateful to Congress for the laws such as this that they have enacted, and I look forward to other bill-signing ceremonies that will realize our dream for a better life for the Filipino people.

Let us work together to improve the quality of life not only of ourselves in this generation, but of our future generations. And only if we stay united in instituting the needed reforms in our society will we succeed in giving our people what they have long deserve.

Thank you.

Source: University of the Philippines Main Library

Speech of President Arroyo at the presentation of the Congressional Commission on Labor Report, February 10, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the presentation of the Congressional Commission on Labor Report

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, February 10, 2001]

RAISING LABOR PRODUCTIVITY THROUGH EDUCATION AND ICT

In behalf of the Executive Branch and the Filipino people, I am pleased to receive the report of the Congressional Commission on Labor. As I understand it, this is the first draft because under the new dispensation, we have to review what we have inherited from previous work. This important document puts together not only the recommendations for labor and business, but also the roles that the Executive and Legislative Branches must play, to attain our common goal of swift economic recovery and growth.

I recall that in my meeting with the Labor Solidarity Movement last January 25, I listened to the concerns of labor. I also asked labor to sustain the unity it had shown in the last four months. Then, in my meeting with the business sector, I emphasized unity again as we pooled our energies together to revive our economy. With the assurances of cooperation from both sectors that I have received, this Congressional Report on Labor will serve as a draft framework that can be betted among our different stakeholders.

I have said many times – including in my own speech after the oath-taking – that in the new economy, we need transparency and a level playing field in order for the Filipino entrepreneur to compete successfully in the face of the global order. Transparency and a level playing field must also be enjoyed however by labor. And I also said that in the new economy, because we have inherited poverty from the past, we need to have a sectoral and social bias in our guiding development plan. And this includes safety nets for sectors affected by globalization, and, certainly labor is among those sectors that need safety nets.

The Philippines can compete best in a setting of transparency and private enterprise. The proper business of business is business. Whereas government's role is to ensure that a stable and predictable environment both for business and labor, and if the field is leveled for all players in all sectors, then, there would be no room for protecting vested interests. Neither will there be cronies who will enjoy presidential favors. As we rectify the mistakes of the past, all these practices – cronyism, vested interest protection – must be swept away.

As I understand it, the Labor Commission Report emphasizes that the creation of jobs, and an increase in national productivity are the country's most urgent concerns. These twin goals constitute also the basic mandate of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

Smooth and effective employee-employer relations are offshoots of the more important goals of increasing productivity, generating more jobs to keep up with our targeted productivity rate, and considering our workers are human beings and not just as economic resources. I have no doubt that DOLE, under Secretary Pat Sto. Tomas, will see to it that the department will focus closely on its mandate.

Raising productivity ultimately means using the tools of information and communications technology (ICT) and increasing our capital base. This means that we will look closely into our available resources and identify all possible sources of capital. To increase our capital base, we must increase our savings rate, which is presently ranked as one of the lowest in the Southeast Asia. And that is why we are seeking to have a smaller budget deficit, increasing savings by increasing revenues. We must endeavor to solve this perennial problem of a low savings rate, so that we can source our capital funds from the Philippines itself and not keep borrowing from abroad. We have to make our business climate more attractive to potential investors, given this fiercely competitive global environment today. Again, the climate of attractiveness is a climate that needs transparency and a level playing field.

We need a cycle that starts with an environment conducive to growth that creates confidence, which in turn attracts more investments that enhance the healthy environment for the creation of jobs.

We are starting to regain the trust of investors. We have arrested the free fall of the peso and the stock market is starting to rebound. These constitute the silver lining in our dark economic clouds. Because the dark economic clouds certainly are still there, we are still faced with a multitude of problems. These multitudes of problems include being hobbled by a Php225-billion deficit – the largest deficit in the entire history of our economy. That is why we need to tighten our belts significantly, to reduce this deficit even while government increases efforts to raise funds. We have raised our BIR and Customs targets. Customs is groaning that we increased our target from Php100 billion to Php120 billion, thus, they cannot leave no stone unturned, none of us can leave any stone unturned to check smuggling and other causes of inefficient revenue collection.

If you hear about our being able to conk Congress legislate some relief like tax exemption and the allowances of teachers, or like small increases in the pay of those who are killed in action, this is because their budgetary implication is relatively insignificant. But when we talk about large budgetary implications, then we have to really consider that this is maybe counterproductive in the long run, because the ballooning deficit will raise interest rates, reduce our competitiveness, reduce the viability of the business environment and will cause loss of jobs. So it is not easy for those in government to be able to work on a climate where we can create jobs.

It is easy to mouth the standard first prescriptions for a laggard economy, reducing spending and raising revenues, but these are really gargantuan tasks that require the full cooperation of government and civil society. Thus, I appeal for the full cooperation not only of the bureaucracy but of all our citizens as well.

Raising capital also means improving the quality of our human capital, our workforce, and preparing ourselves for the quantity and quality of manpower that will be necessary for our future growth. What we need to do now is to give the highest priority to education skills, training, and, may I add, information and communications technology or ICT in our national budget.

If there is something that I think might not have been thoroughly addressed in the Labor Com Report, to my mind it is that I think that we are in the 21st century, we must recognize the tremendous, almost infinite opportunities provided for employment by ICT. And, we must also recognize the almost infinite contributions to productivity that new ways of producing, selling, and working provided by ICT can bring about. So ICT will create both jobs and higher productivity. And I think that is something that is very important to address, as we vet this Labor Com Report.

We continue of course to recognize the invaluable help that our overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) have rendered to boost our economy. And while we put together the measures that will enable us to be back on the growth mode, and therefore, enable our OFWs to find jobs here where their families are, we will modernize our assistance to them as they work abroad. All these are urgent concerns.

I thank the Labor Commission that even while this administration tries to resolve all these issues, this report has been drafted to provide inputs to our economic road map. I view the submission of this report as a first draft, but a signal from Congress that both Houses intend to participate actively, in the crafting of policies that will enable our economic goals to be attained. In turn, I am asking Secretary Dante Canlas of NEDA, and of course Secretary Pat Sto. Tomas to review the recommendations in this report – to see what can be adopted in our new National Agenda.

In the spirit of true cooperation and in recognition of our shared aspirations for economic recovery and growth, I laud all those involved in this effort. I thank Congresswoman Luistro and all of her predecessors, I thank Senator Honasan and all of his predecessors, this Labor Commission Report has been the fruit of many fathers and mothers because there had been reorganizations in the House and in the Senate, and so I thank them and all who have done their work as chairmen of the Committees on Labor of the House of Representatives and the Senate, as well as all the members of the Congressional Commission. They worked hard to produce this report, and I assure them that this fruit of their labors – though it will not be totally accepted in its first pass – is being received and will be given due attention by the Government and, I'm sure, by civil society so that we can make this yet another venue of what we said should be part of new politics, the politics of institutionalized consultation with the people.

Maraming salamat at magandang umaga sa inyong lahat.

Source: University of the Philippines Main Library

Speech of President Arroyo at the Annual Meeting of the Philippine Economic Society, March 26, 2001

Speech

of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

President of the Philippines

At the Annual Meeting of the Philippine Economic Society

[Delivered at the Dusit Hotel Nikko, Makati City, March 26, 2001]

PUSHING FOR ECONOMIC REFORMS AND GOOD GOVERNANCE

On our 40th anniversary, I feel at home in this gathering as a fish in water, because I am a bonafide economist and I do treasure those years between 1987 and 1992 when I was a member of the Board of Directors of this professional group, whose membership is a list of who's who among the country's economists. It is only when I was elected senator that I discontinued sitting in the Board. But even in the Senate, my main legislative work was economic legislation. And now that I am President, you and I understand each other on the economic imperative that we must confront in this new government and in this new millennium.

When I took my oath of office as President of the Philippines, I said that we must be bold in our national ambitions so that our challenge must be within this decade. We will win the fight against poverty. To make this happen, we must recognize that the world that I inherited is truly the new economy, where capital market and information technology are forces that create both peril and opportunity.

To tap opportunities we must adopt an economic philosophy of transparency and free enterprise, for these create the entrepreneurial spirit to be globally competitive. To extend the opportunities to our rural countryside, we must create a modernized and socially equitable agricultural sector. To address the perils, we must give a social bias to balance economic development in the form of structural reforms, safety nets for globalization and safeguards for our environment. Finally, to preserve our gains against corruption and waste, we must improve moral standards in government and in society. In doing so, we promote good governance based on a sound moral foundation, a philosophy of transparency and ethics of effective implementation. Thus, we shall make market reliance and good governance, the twin pillars of our social and economic policy strategy. We will adhere to policies and institutions that work and discard those that had failed.

A quick look at the past offers many useful lessons. The last half of the past centuries have many fundamental changes. Many of the former colonies won their political independence from the large industrial countries after the Second World War.

Winning economic independence, however, was elusive for many. The exceptions are, setting aside Japan, the four Asian tigers: Hongkong, Singapore, Taiwan and South Korea. They became exporters of manufactured products on a global scale, beginning in the sixties. They achieved full employment and caught up with the real per capita income level of the industrial country. The Asian Tigers became models of successful outward-looking and export-led industrialization.

The 20th century also witnessed the collapse of central planning. At the start of the nineties, the former Soviet Union broke up, politically, that meant the end of the Cold War. On the economic side, it proved that qualities based on free enterprise and market reliance were superior to central planning. Then came the latter part of the nineties. In May of 1997, Thailand's baht was devalued. That ignited the contagion which resulted in shock devaluation of currencies in East and Southeast Asia. The peso, over a period of three months after the crisis erupted, lost about forty percent of its value as against the US dollar. As exchange rate volatility in the region continued, economic contraction set in.

The Asian crisis brought out many helpful but painful lessons. It cannot be denied that the crisis was a question of governance, too. Political factors, greatly influenced the channeling of bank loans to large enterprises. When the crisis simmered down, the investigation removed cronies and behest loans written all over the ledgers of the failed banks.

Many observers agreed that the Philippines, along with Taiwan and Singapore, was not as hardly hit by the Asian crisis as others. The non-performing loans of the Philippine banks for example were nothing compared to those in Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand and South Korea. And so, it proved disappointing to many that when the recovery emerged in the region, the Philippines own turned out to be mild.

In the aftermath of EDS A, the reasons are becoming quite clear, the reasons pertain to governance. That governance was not consistent and orderly. That, actions did not match rhetoric. That public favor is largely flowed not to the poor and helpless, but rather to the powerful and influential. That was the wrong way to confront the challenges of the 21st century. We cannot raise the quality of life of our citizens if we do not reject plunderous governance. We are committed to addressing the social and economic challenges of our country, and let me therefore, spell out our Administration's policy directions for the immediate and distant future.

Starting with our fiscal policy choices, we are committed to balancing the financial position of the public sector by the year 2004. At the center of these efforts is reducing the budget deficit of the national government to 3.8% of the GNP this year, from four percent last year. The past administration, in two years of large deficit spending, left government finances in a precarious state. When the government borrows from the public to finance its deficit, it absorbs funds that otherwise should go to private investments. This is not sustainable. It is private investments and equipment that raise productivity and create jobs.

In pursuit of a goal for a balanced budget, I have issued an executive order that mandates pending cuts in government. Luxury vehicles are the first to go. In addition, I have ordered the review of major capital projects of government agencies. The past administration left another unwanted legacy... government projects assisted by the Official Development Assistance were poorly implemented. The disbursements created new laws on joint and other unnecessary tie-ups that could have been released to other valuable uses. We will correct this situation with the ongoing review by inter-agency committees of the NEDA Board which I chair.

On the revenue side, we are starting with improving the tax collection machinery of the government, the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs. The current state of our tax administration needs fixing. Potential tax revenues are not being realized, instead, we see that small fixed income earners carry a disproportionate share of the burden of taxation. We also need a comprehensive review of our tax system, including special fiscal incentives. Studies indicated a sizeable amount of taxes being foregone as a result of tax breaks, tax holidays and exemptions from customs duties. These foregone revenues must be cut and reduced over time. Only by correcting the deficiencies in our tax system can we make adequate investments and improve on infrastructure like roads, bridges, schools and hospitals which are all in need of support.

In the near term, the most effective way of addressing the needs of the disadvantaged Filipinos is the tax and spending policies of the government. In this regard, we will be a prudent steward of public funds to obtain a peso worth of results for every peso that is spent. We will not use fiscal policy for short term, pump-priming measures. We will use it to protect our core values. To name a few, these are in information and communications technology; skilled intensive service industries like tourism; safety nets for sectors affected by globalization; safeguards for our environment; agricultural modernization and, land reform. In short, our budget deficit program will be a responsible one. As we will try to balance the budget, we protect our fundamental's priority. We will resist shortsighted solutions that will impair our long-term goal of growth of equity.

I am asking you to support our budget deficit program, fellow economists. With this, interest rates should decline. This is already happening as seen in the recent behavior of treasury bill rates. Cash decline will unleash forces in the private sector for investment which will ignite productivity improvements. In consequence, income and employment will grow. As for monetary policy, we respect the independence of the Central Bank. We will not compromise the Central Bank's efforts to reduce interest rates and exchange rate volatility. We will support Central Bank's efforts by not allowing large deficit in the government budget to persist. We will also assist the Central Bank in securing efficient finances intermediation. We must get out of the watch-list of money laundering countries as soon as possible. We can do this by ensuring the passage of amendments to the Central Bank Act and the General Banking Act. With strong banks and a developed capital market, we can expect new savings instruments to emerge. Families are encouraged to raise their savings, enabling enterprises to fund increasingly their investment projects.

The best means for reducing poverty and providing safety nets for sectors affected by globalization is through investments, education and trainings. To begin with, we will invest in the increasing quality of basic education, especially in science and mathematics. But what we have learned in the lower grades is not enough. Rapid technological changes and globalization compel us to prepare workers for the long-term through lifelong education and training. As we do so, we must equalize access and expand the opportunities of the poor, to acquire the kind of education they want. We have piloted early childhood development, so that children from poor families are not disadvantaged, when they enter first grade. We will find the means, or at least pilot projects, that can be expanded and eventually implemented in a national scale. As for higher education, this must be led by the private sector. Instead of government subsidies which will remain modest, we must start thinking in terms of educational loan programs, so that entry into colleges and universities is not determined solely by family incomes. But we will increase government support to research and development, and science and technology. Our current level of growth and development is the result of fast technological choices. Technological developments have not been actively pursued. Our Administration intends to correct this. As a starter, I formed a Cabinet cluster on information and communications technology. This, I believe will help spur public and private investments in advanced technology. It is advanced technology, especially information and communications technology, as it creates high-paying jobs of the future and raise the quality of life of every Filipino.

World technological progress and productivity rises will be a boom to our exports. To sustain exports growth, we will be firm in our support for international trade based on fair and predictable rules. We will continue to take advantage of existing and emerging regional trading arrangements, to achieve our goals of export diversification, and opening new market destinations for Filipino exporters. The value added from our manufactured exports must be increased, and we should reduce our heavy dependence on a few country destinations. Through trade reforms, our micro-enterprises and small and medium enterprises will be able to purchase least cost capital equipment, raw materials, and components that are available in the world market. This would bring us near to full employment since small and medium enterprises (SMEs) have immense potentials for job generation.

All these efforts are meant to promote economic and social security. But we must do more, specifically with regards to our systems of social protection and help in medical insurance. The vision of universal coverage remains. In this regard, we will assist households to raise their savings so that they can share in the cost of expanding the coverage and benefits, from this social protection scheme. One way to do this is to help families especially the poor, exercise responsible parenthood consistent with our cultural and religious values. We must equip the poor couples with the means to equip their children with the education and help needed to be productive. If this is not done, poverty will continue to be transmitted across generation.

Moreover, we will carry out targeted poverty alleviation programs as safety nets. We will pursue food security for the poor. And as our budget resources improve, we will be able to provide temporary subsidies to some of their non-food basic needs. As we do so, we will open up opportunities for the poor to acquire employable skills and carry out livelihood activities. This is meant to reduce their dependence on government subsidies and ultimately be made responsible for their own well-being. Furthermore, we will pursue sustainable development, anchored on sound natural resource management and safeguards for our environment. We will make sure that the standards of living of unborn, unrepresented generations are not diminished by the financial requirements of mending a damaged environment. These commitments demand a new kind of governance.

A highly-centralized government which act as a provider of all services is no longer appropriate. We will forge new partnership with the local government units and with organizations outside the government. We are committed to a full flowering of decentralization and devolution. Local governments are in most instances well positioned to respond to the diverse needs of their constituents. We shall also seek the support of the civil society in monitoring implementation of government projects. Meanwhile private businesses, guided by the price system are capable of providing the many goods and services, that individuals and families demand.

We are conscious of the fact that private enterprises lie at the heart of all modern economy. But the national government will be there to regulate and protect consumer interests when competition by many small firms is not viable. For example, this is true in the electric and water utilities. We will cut bureaucratic red tape and engage in market-friendly regulations. But we also expect private concessionaires to heed their contractor's obligations and not throw unreasonable demands at government. In addition, we will send in the legal division and administrative system to minimize corruption and ensure contractor performance.

Peace and order is the responsibility of government. It is a public good. Development will not take root if this public good is not delivered. I have thus called for a reconstruction of the peace process of the MILF and NDF and I ordered a suspension of offensive military operations in Mindanao and Southern Tagalog, so that peace talks can proceed. Since the guns are silent in Mindanao and Southern Tagalog, I have asked the military to mobilize their assets instead co help the PNP in the war against crime.

We are fortunate that the people as a whole are now more enlightened; that we have a broader middle class, and that People Power II provided fertile ground for the development of a national consensus. In national consensus, we have to be more socially progressive, to keep pace with the rest of the world. Thus, I remain hopeful of this time around, we have the right condition in place, and finally, to win the struggle against poverty if we work at it as a united, unified nation. In this connection, I enjoin all economists, all members of the Philippine Economic Society, to be a part of nation building. This is a moment of great responsibilities and of great possibilities that must not be taken lightly. Since we took office, we have seen positive movements in stocks, foreign exchange and treasury bills market, interest rates are declining, the peso is stabilizing, inflation rate is slowing down.

Moreover, the Supreme Court has ruled in my favor on the legitimacy of my assumption to the Presidency promoting political stability. This development benefits us all. Therefore, I ask you to support our twin strategies of market reliance and good governance starting with our austerity measures. Compliance of stock obligation is a good start on the part of private sector. If we continue to save and invest for the future we will be rewarded with expanding economic and social opportunities and continuing improvement in the quality of our lives. Filipinos have stood up against dictatorship and against immorality in government. Let us continue to do this in the forthcoming elections by voting for candidates who championed core Filipino values like democratic, honest and good governance. Go for the champions of good governance. Vote for the champs.

Thank you.

Source: University of the Philippines Main Library

Speech of President Arroyo at the 7th Meeting of the e-ASEAN Task Force, April 20, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the 7th Meeting of the e-ASEAN Task Force

[Delivered at the Oakwood Premier, Ayala Center, April 20, 2001]

e-ASEAN:
INTENSIFYING REGIONAL ICT DEVELOPMENT

I would like to thank and congratulate the members of the e-ASEAN Task Force and its members for a job well done; and for the strategy that would define our place and role in the post-Cold War, post-ASEAN financial world crisis, and for helping us mold the e-ASEAN initiative forward. In particular, I would like to commend you on your work on the ASEAN framework agreement on information and communications technology (ICT) products, services and investments. With this agreement, we have signaled to the world that here in Southeast Asia, there is commitment of the highest level to undertake the necessary steps to ensure prosperity in the global new economy.

I strongly support the Task Force's strategy of complementing policy advocacy with pilot projects. Pilot projects are important to gain widespread support among the citizens of ASEAN for this important initiative. We need to be able to demonstrate that today, even while the infrastructure has not been fully developed, ICT can make a difference in the daily lives of the people of Southeast Asia. I'm informed that the Task Force has already endorsed about 20 pilot projects in information infrastructure development, e-commerce, e-society and e-government. While this is a good start, I hope that by the time the ASEAN Summit in November, if held, there will be more e-ASEAN endorsed pilot projects. In particular, I would like to see more pilot projects in the field of infrastructure development and e-government.

I'm aware that what I'm asking is not easy, particularly in the period when dot coms and text messages have lost their luster and venture capitals are increasingly hard to find, but I have faith in your creativity and your dedication to the task. I know that you will work hard to ensure the continued success of the e-ASEAN initiatives. I am convinced, that the success of the e-ASEAN initiatives to date is largely due to the strength of public-private partnerships that is engendered, and I hope that will continue.

The Task Force has succeeded because it became a mechanism that allowed the private and public sectors to bring their respective comparative advantages together in preparing for the future. This in turn guaranteed that our e-ASEAN initiatives would be responsive to the real world demands, and not to what policy makers or academicians believe the market needs. The ASEAN leaders were indeed wise in creating a task force that is private sector-driven. And, as we move forward with the e-ASEAN initiatives, we must ensure that the private sector is meaningfully engaged in the process of creating e-ASEAN.

The benefits derived from public-private partnership in ICT development are also something that I hope we are able to reach in the Philippines. On numerous occasions in the past, I have spoken on the importance of ICT for the future of the Philippines. I have said that if the Philippines is to prosper in the 21st century, it must find its proper niche in the new economy. I am happy that the private sector has responded to the challenge of creating the new economy by organizing various bodies like the I-Tech and participation by the private sector to the Digital Philippines Foundation. The Digital Philippines Foundation, which has as its leading members business entities and the largest industry associations in the Philippines, the ICT sector, which aims to contribute towards national development, and the promotion of ICT utilization in all sectors of Philippine society, and the promotion of Philippine ICT worldwide. It supplements the work that has been started by the I-Tech, which is what we have inherited from the previous administration and which we continued to do today.

On the part of government, I have created the Cabinet Cluster on ICT, to ensure swift and coordinated government action on ICT concerns. This Cabinet Cluster which is composed of secretaries of relevant government departments will be the lead government body in ICT policy formulation and implementation. This Cabinet Cluster will also harmonize and coordinate all public ICT initiatives, and will attend to cross-cutting issues that cannot be handled by specific government agencies.

In formulating the new economic development strategy and plans for the Philippines, we must focus on the following: first, enhancing the country's information infrastructure; second, creating and enabling legal and regulatory environment; and third, developing human capital.

For a country like the Philippines, developing the information infrastructure is critical to Our future competitiveness. For this reason, our administration, my administration must pursue as a priority the building of the information infrastructure, or a network of broad-band multipurpose networks that will provide Filipinos affordable access to information and communication services to and from anywhere in the Philippines at anytime. Admittedly, this is a herculean task and we are working at a great disadvantage. Teledensity in this country is low even compared to the leading states in the region. Telephone distribution remains uneven throughout the Philippines. Filipinos in major cities and municipalities have more access in infocom services than their compatriots in the rural areas. But the good news is, we already know the right quality to roll out infocom's network are in the deregulation and liberalization of the telecom market, which clearly shows that these are the best policies to ensure the rapid and cost-effective delivery of communication services. More Filipinos get more telephones now than a decade ago under a competitive telecom markets than during numerous decades of monopoly. The market, however, is not a cure-all and does not address all issues. Of the 6.8 million telephone lines available to Filipinos last year, only 2.8 million lines were subscribed. Affordability of telephone services, particularly among low-income household living in the rural areas accounts for these deserving situations. It is, therefore, important that we look into how we can establish and use a universal access fund to ensure affordable infocom services in rural communities.

We must also seriously explore the concept of community-based and shared infocom resources, to bridge the information gap between the urban and rural areas. Already, our Department of Transportation and Communications is pursuing a strategy of broadening popular access to basic information and communication services through community e-centers or telecenters as they are popularly known. Unlike existing public call centers, these community e-centers will offer a range of services to local communities including communications facilities like phone, fax, voice messaging and e-mail, and business services ranging from photocopying, word processing and printing services. Eventually these community e-centers will become one-stop shops for online services for citizens. In the future, various transactions in government agencies such as filing of taxes, licensing applications and other similar transactions will be undertaken in these community e-centers. In the more populated areas, the e-centers can provide such ancillary services as Cyber Café, ATM services and other services pertinent to electronic commerce transactions. In remote areas, community e-centers can also function as strategic information bases where farmers for instance can access basic data, statistics and information on weather and meteorological forecasts, farm gate prices, transport schedules and other pertinent information. In order to ensure sustainability, these community e-centers must be managed by local community organizations, cooperatives or entrepreneurs. After the initial establishment of the community e-learning center, the role of the initiating parties will shift to local portal and content development, awareness, creation and capacity-building. I am convinced that the private sector and civil society must play a vital role if these e-centers initiative is to succeed. The establishment of community e-centers will also be facilitated by technological and business development that sees the blurring of the traditional boundaries that made cable TV, broadcasting, telephoning, satellite and new services distinct. Convergence or the coming together of consumer devices such as the telephone, television and personal computer can help make advance infocom services widely available ensuring that the benefits of the information society are eventually availed of by the majority of the Filipinos instead of only by a few.

For government, convergence implies a challenge. As it involves a process of market and industry structuring leading to the emergence of a single economic market based on digitization and networking, the integration of the content and information industries will mean radical changes. It will require a paradigm shift on how policy is made and industry is regulated. Much of the existing laws on communications were enacted with the assumption of single network, for specific services. It is therefore important that our laws are made more relevant to current economic and technological realities. Towards this goal, I will transmit to the next Congress as a priority measure, a comprehensive convergence bill that will define the principle, qualities and administrative and regulatory framework that will allow digital convergence to flourish in this country. An important principle that will be inscribed in this proposed convergence law is competition.

Convergence can lead to full service companies that are even bigger than the ones that are currently existing. In the Philippines we are already seeing the merger of two leading cable companies, the telecom companies buying into a TV station, and telecom companies offering convergence services. While this development is in response to market developments, government must ensure that the emergent 'entities will not engage in anti-competitive practices. The proposed convergence law that I will transmit to our legislature will also include the creation of a government agency that will define policy for the ICT sector, as well as a regulatory body for this sector. The creation of a Department of Information Technology and Communications and the reorganization of the National Telecommunications Commission into a National Infocom Commission are important elements in our national new economy strategy. Beyond building the Philippine information structure and creating a policy and regulatory environment supportive of the new economy, the government should also focus on human development.

The demand for technology-savvy knowledge workers have increased as ICT continue to penetrate and transform organization of market in the workplace. This poses an enormous challenge to all education institutions, to be able to adopt both the contents and the method of the training that they provide in order to prepare their students for the digital economy. I am not talking here only of computer literacy but the development of higher order formative skills such as abstracting, planning, critical thinking and problem solving. For in the digital work places of today, the knowledge workers' comparative advantage does not simply lie in his word processing skills or his ability to do broadsheet, but in his ability to think strategically in a complex and highly flexible environment. Clearly, there is a purely technical imperative for bringing ICTs into the classroom, but e-learning promises more than technical competence. The essence of e-learning is developing critical, creative and strategic thinking through exchange and collaboration. The potential of ICT to enhance learner's efficiency, effectiveness and engagement are enormous. E-learning, therefore, cannot only increase the productivity of basic literacy skills but can also improve the planning, problem solving and analytical skills of the learner.

We have already taken the initial step in bringing technology to the classroom and e-learning in Philippine schools. The Government PC for Public High Schools Program will bring computers to a thousand public high schools in the country. This modest step is being complemented by various private sector and civil society initiatives aimed at bringing the power of the Internet into Philippine schools. Undoubtedly, there is much to be done, but I am confident that focus on infrastructure development creating and enabling legal and regulatory framework in human development in the Philippines can now begin earnestly, preparing for the global new economy.

The challenge that the Philippines faces in laying the foundation for prosperity in the new economy is unique. The promise of the information economy remains a dream for the vast majority in the developing world. Access to advance information and communication services is largely limited to those in the developed country, or those in the urban areas of developing country. The skills set required to be employed as knowledge workers is possessed only by a minority in the country. This Great Divide threatens to deepen the gap that already separate the rich and the poor in many countries, but we in ASEAN are fortunate. The governments of Southeast Asia are responding to the challenges of a new economy, from Brunei to the People's Republic of Vietnam, national ICT efforts are being intensified. At the regional level, we have the e-ASEAN initiative. Our e-ASEAN Agreement remains the only covenant among developing countries on coherent strategy for regional ICT development. We cannot afford, however, to be complacent because we cannot afford to be left behind. Fortunately, if recent events can serve as a clue to the future, there is reason to hope that as an individual nation and as a region, we will prosper in the new century – the century of information – the century of technology, and because we are doing what we are doing in e-ASEAN, I hope it will also be the century for Asia.

Thank you.

Source: University of the Philippines Main Library

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 2001 Educators' Congress

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 2001 Educators' Congress

[Delivered at Manila Midtown Hotel, Malate, Manila, April 23, 2001]

I am very happy to be here with all of you today. I feel quite at home in this gathering because I was a teacher too for many years. I taught at the Ateneo, the University of the Philippines, Maryknoll, St. Scholastica's. When I joined the government in 1986, I tried to teach for one more year, but the long hours in government, 16 hours a day, compelled me to give up my teaching load. However, my joining in the government paved the way for my entering in the government afterwards, paving the way for my becoming President of the Philippines; so that now, even if I am not a teacher, I can have a chance to be with my former fellow teachers once again. So I'm glad to be here with you.

When I took my oath of office as President last January, I said, we must be bold in our national ambitions, so that our challenge must be that within this decade, we will win the fight against poverty.

To make this happen, we must recognize that the world our students will inherit is truly a new economy, where capital markets and information and communications technology or ICT are forces that create both peril and opportunity.

To address the perils, we must give a social bias to balance our economic development plan in the form, among other things, of safety nets for globalization.

The best means for reducing poverty and providing safety nets for sectors affected by globalization is through investments in education and training. In this people power administration, we must invest in the increasing quality of basic education, especially in science and mathematics.

As we do so, we must equalize access and expand the opportunities of the poor to acquire the kind of education they want. We have piloted early childhood development so that children from poor families are not disadvantaged when they enter first grade. We must find the means so that these pilot projects can be expanded and eventually implemented on a national scale.

As for higher education, this must be led by the private sector. Instead of government subsidies, which because of the huge budgetary deficit we have inherited shall remain modest, we must start thinking in terms of educational loan programs that entry into colleges and universities is not determined solely by family incomes.

To tap the opportunities of the new economy, I have formed a cabinet cluster on information and communications technology which includes the Department of Education, Culture and Sports. Technology, especially ICT, is what will create the high-wage jobs of the future and raise the quality of life of every Filipino.

That is why your adopted theme, "Learning Through ICT", is a laudable step which is in line with the government's thrust to develop the Philippines as the knowledge center of Asia.

We can increase the impact of ICT in our country's economy by focusing on three areas of concern: physical infrastructure, policy and legislation, and human resource development.

On physical infrastructure. One of the country's disadvantages is the lack of telecommunications infrastructure to support high-speed productivity at relatively low rates so that ICT use can expand to include a greater majority of ordinary Filipinos, and thus, spur the growth of the domestic IT market. Of course, that one is the work of the Department of Telecommunications and Transportation.

On policy and legislation. Government and the private sector must work together in order to come up with a policy framework that will be conducive to the growth of the ICT industry, and that will be responsive to new ways of employment and commerce that are evolving. Of course, that is the work of Congress.

But on human resource development, which is your work, the demand for technology savvy knowledge workers has increased as ICT continues to penetrate and transform the organization of markets and the workplace. This poses an enormous challenge to all educational institutions to be able to adapt both the content and the method of training that you provide in order to prepare your students for the digital economy.

I am not talking here only of computer literacy but the development of higher cognitive skills such as abstracting, planning, critical thinking and problem-solving, the digital workplaces of today, the knowledge workers comparative advantage does not simply lie in his word processing skills or his ability to do breadsheets, but in his ability to think strategically in a complex, highly dynamic environment.

Clearly, there is a purely technical imperative for bringing ICT into the classroom. The essence of E-learning, however, is developing critical, creative and strategic thinking through exchange and collaboration. The potential of ICT to enhance learner efficiency, effectiveness and engagement is enormous. E-learning, therefore, will not only increase the productivity of basic literacy skills but also help improve the planning, problem-solving and analytical skills of the learner.

We have already taken the initial steps in bringing technology to the classroom and E-learning in Philippine schools. The government's "P.C. for public high schools" program will bring computers to 1,000 public high schools in the country. This modest step is being complemented by various sector and private sector and civil society initiatives aimed at bringing the power of internet into Philippine schools.

Undoubtedly, much needs to be done. But I am confident that with the focus in infrastructure development, creating an enabling legal and regulatory environment, and of course, your work, which is human resource development, the Philippines can now begin earnestly preparing for the global new economy.

Philippine education is everybody's business. In the matter of funding, it would not be difficult to seek partnerships in the communities, among education's stakeholders, and even foreign assistance to bridge the so-called "digital divide." Education is a top priority of your government.

Your leadership will give full support to developing Philippine basic education into one of the finest education systems in the world. When we achieve this, our dream of becoming Asia's knowledge center will only be a few graduating classes away.

I know for a fact that as teachers, a great deal is expected from you. I am aware that your calling entails a lot of sacrifices inside and outside the classroom because I've been there. I've been a teacher.

Let me assure you, that as your President, I have the same concern for you as my father, President Diosdado Macapagal, who did his best to uplift your sector during his term. In the time of my father, he approved Republic Act 3665, which upgraded the salaries of high school supervisors and teachers; R.A. 4128, which provided assistance to provincial high schools; and R.A. 3881, which increased the pensions of schoolteachers.

Now, as your leader and fellow teacher, I will do everything within the powers of my office that you have reposed in me to uplift your financial standing.

I am sure you have already heard that to increase the take-home pay of public elementary and secondary teachers during the months that cash is badly needed to pay for your children's tuition and other school needs, DECS has coordinated with the Department of Finance and the BIR to temporarily suspend the payroll deduction for withholding taxes. Hopefully, DOF and BIR will not post such great objections so that this scheme can take effect in May. This would increase the take-home pay for the affected month above the P2,000 threshold.

I am also happy to let you know that even outside the DECS community, our other cabinet members understand the need of teachers to be recognized for your work, which is not only education in the schools but also in the community.

I am happy, therefore, that even the Home Development Mutual Fund is finalizing the mechanics of a P1 B credit facility for teachers. This P1 B facility fund seeks to provide assistance for teachers for your short-term needs because, as know, you have all of these delays in the way that your pay gets to you.

In addition, DECS has been exploring ways and means to modernize your payroll system to address the problem of this delay in the payment of salaries as well as to check corruption. Among the measures considered is the use of automated teller machines through a bank chosen by the teachers of a particular school.

This checkless payroll system will minimize delays which have hampered the present system of delivering checks by mail. It will also insulate the system from "ghost teachers" and other forms of corruption. In the meantime, as I said, the Home Development Mutual Fund will try to help you make ends meet when that P1 B facility is worked out as far as the mechanics are concerned.

These, of course, are short-term measures. In terms of mid- and long-term measures, DECS is now designing a proposed new legislation to rationalize the salary structure for teachers. This initiative will be certified as a priority administration bill to rationalize the salary structure and tax exemptions of teachers to truly make teaching a professional career. The end-goal is a public school system with a professional corps so much so that when a 20-year old graduate becomes a teacher, she or he will have enough opportunity to move up the teaching career ladder, support a family after marriage, and by the time he or she retires at the age of 65, the education system would have optimized her or his accumulated creativity and experience. Under this legislation, we hope to make the salary structure in touch with inflation.

And pray with me, so that when Congress resumes, they will act on the five percent increase in salary that we are going to ask as part of the supplemental budget.

You are the molders of the minds, the intellect and the character and the ideals of our youth. You have in your hands the power to transform their future into a better and more progressive one. You are the role models for our people and perhaps, this is the reason why, of all sectors in our society, you have been chosen to help oversee the conduct of elections in this country.

You are looked upon by our people as moral, efficient, hardworking and trustworthy. People consider your character as unassailable, hence, the people look to you as the vanguards of the sanctity of the ballot, which they consider as the true expression of their will. No doubt some of your colleagues have even sacrificed their lives to ensure that the will of the people is not frustrated. This happened in past electoral exercises, we hope that it will not happen in this electoral exercise.

I have been told by some publishers, especially in Chinatown that so far, election violence and signs of election fraud had been much, much lower this elections than in the past. I hope that this will continue.

As teachers, I need not remind you that when you do your counting, you are I also supposed to be fair and non-partisan. As civil servants, I am supposed to remind you that you are not allowed to use your office to campaign for specific candidates. But as individuals, you can vote and I hope you will vote for the people power coalition candidates.

And, as in the past, I am confident that you will rise to the challenge of promoting and ensuring clean and peaceful elections on May 14th.

It is also my fervent hope that you will take advantage of the new learning opportunity that this conference is providing you on ICT. Take to heart the practical knowledge in ICT so that you may apply your knowledge in your teaching profession and pass it on to your students.

I hope that you will be effective advocates and great teachers of ICT as you go back to your respective workstations. May we, as a nation, be able to utilize ICT as a potent weapon in the fight against unemployment and poverty in our country.

I know many teachers in our country themselves are quite poor, and I hope that you, or at least your children will be able to find the great opportunities for employment, creativity in the new world of ICT. But for the next generation to be able to benefit from that, your generation, you, the teachers must first be the learners.

Thank you. Good luck and God bless all of us.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Message of President Arroyo on her visit to former President Joseph Ejercito Estrada [Filipino]

Mensahe
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa kanyang pagbisita sa dating Pangulo Joseph Ejercito Estrada sa kanyang kulungan sa Fort Sto. Domingo, Sta. Rosa, Laguna

[Ipinahayag sa Tanggapan ng Pangulo, Malacañang, ika 3 ng Mayo, 2001]

Kaninang umaga ay nagtungo ako sa Fort Sto. Domingo, Sta. Rosa, Laguna, para dalawin ang dating Pangulong Estrada sa kanyang bagong kinalalagyan.

Nagpunta ako doon sa mungkahi ng isang kaibigan na isang alagad ng simbahan. Dumalaw din ako upang tiyakin na ang mga bilin ko tungkol sa kaligtasan at kalusugan ni ginoong estrada ay nasusunod.

Natutuwa akong ipaalam sa inyo na maayos ang kalagayan ng dating pangulo. Mainam ang kanyang kalusugan at ligtas ang kanyang seguridad.

Tulad ng nakita ninyo sa TV at mga diyaryo, ang bungalow ay katatagpuan ng mga bagong muwebles, refrigerator, microwave, at iba pang kasangkapan at kaghinawahan, kasama na ang dalawang airconditioning units.

Maikli pero malaman ang naging bunga ng aking pagdalaw kay Ginoong Estrada.

Inuulit ko na ang proklamasyon ng State of Rebellion ay naaayon sa batas at ito’y kapangyarihang ibinibigay sa pangulo ng pilipinas para ipagtanggol ang sambayanan at ang ating Republika.

Ang State of Rebellion ay isang tumpak na kasagutan na naganap sa karahasan noong mayo uno sa harap ng palasyo ng malakanyang ng lumusob ang mahigit na 50,000 demonstrador para pabagsakin ang isang lehitimong pamahalaan at magtayo ng isang “junta.”

Ang PNP at AFP ay nakasamsam noong araw na iyon ng mga matataas na kalibre ng baril, tear gas, patalim, molotov cocktail, sumpak, paltik, bato at pamalo sa mga raliyista.

Dineklara ko ang State of Rebellion nang mga mainit na sandaling iyon. Nanganganib ang buhay ng mga matataas na pinuno ng pamahalaan. Nahaharap sa kamatayan ang Republika. Ang hindi pagkilos ay mangangahulugan ng lalong malaking panganib.

Dahil sa nangyaring paglusob, apat ang nasawi, kasama ang isang pulis at mahigit na 100 ang nasaktan o nasugatan. Apat na pamilya ang nawalan ng ama ng tahanan. Sila’y aking tutulungan.

Mahigit na 100 pilipinong magkakaroon ng permanenteng pinsala sa katawan at isipan. Sila’y akin ding tutulungan.

Subalit walang tulong para sa mga power grabbers na ginagamit ang mga dukhang nagkilos protesta sa edsa para sa sariling kapakanan. Hahanapin natin sila hanggang sila’y humarap sa batas. Nakita natin kung papaano nila ginatungan ang mga demonstrador na lusubin ang malakanyang. Ngayon ay naghuhugas-kamay sila.

Natuklasan din namin ang ebidensya ng kanilang balak na pabagsakin ang gobyerno para iluklok ang kanilang mga lider. Ngayon ay nagpo-Poncio Pilato naman sila.

Milyun-milyong piso na ari-arian at sasakyan ang ninakawan, sinira at sinunog. Sila'y atin ding tutulungan.

Ang State of Rebellion ay paiiralin lamang sa loob ng Metro Manila, ito'y hindi lalabag sa karapatang pantao. At ito'y hanggang Mayo 7 lamang.

Bago ako umalis ay nagbilin akong muli sa mga awtoridad sa Fort Sto. Domingo na patuloy na tiyakin ang kaginhawahan, proteksyon at iba pang pangangailangan ng dating Pangulo.

Ipagdasal natin si Ginoong Estrada para maligtas siya sa anumang karamdaman o kapahamakan.

Maraming salamat po.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Message on her Visit to Former President Joseph Ejercito Estrada in his detention place at Fort Sto. Domingo, Sta. Rosa, Laguna. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412235941/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8597&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo on the National Government Basic Sector's 100 Days Accomplishment Report, May 4, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On the National Government Basic Sector's 100 Days Accomplishment Report

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, May 4, 2001]

THE FIRST 100 DAYS: CARING FOR THE POOR

Kayo, mga leaders na kinatawan ng civil society, ang isa sa mga pangunahing dahilan kung bakit ngayon ako ay Pangulo ng ating Republika. Magkasama tayo doon sa EDSA II, at kayo rin at ang sambayanang kinatawan ninyo ang dahilan kung bakit may pangulo, maging ako man o ibang pangulong nakaraan, o iba pang pangulong darating. Sa isang lipunan, ang mayaman at makapangyarihan ay maaring mag-alaga sa sarili, ngunit iyong mga mahihirap, mga kapuspalad, iyon ang higit na nangangailangan ng pamahalaan na tumutulong, upang sila ay makabahagi ng sapat na atensiyon sa kayamanan at kapangyarihan ng bansa.

This empowering function of the government has become even more important in the last few days. Ang ating mga programa para sa dukha ay nabalangkas na natin noon pa. Kung naalala ninyo nagkita pa tayo doon sa Unibersidad ng Pilipinas nung panahon na mainit pa iyong ating protesta. Matagal na nating nabuo itong mga programang ito at mayroon na naming mga naipapatupad na. Marami pa rin sa ating mga kababayan ay naiinip na at parang hindi na makapagtitiis. Para sa kanila, hindi katwiran na hindi pa ako nagtatagal bilang presidente. Hindi mahalaga sa kanila na isang daang araw pa lamang ako bilang presidente. Gusto nila, naiinip na sila. Nasaan na iyong mga resulta? Palagay ko hindi gagamit ng dahas ang tao kung kumbinsido siyang may mapayapa at mabisang paraan para makuha ang mithiin sa buhay. Palagay ko, ang isang mahirap ay hindi kakapit sa isang patalim na binibigay sa kanya ng pulitikong nagkukumplot kung kumbinsido siya na may gobyernong nag-aalok ng disenteng buhay, dangal, demokrasyang tunay, palagay ko hindi mag-aaway ang iba't-ibang sektor ng lipunan — mayaman at mahirap, babae at lalaki, taga-lungsod at taga-bukid — kung nagkakaunawaan at nagtutulungan ang lahat. Sa madaling salita, palagay ko, walang mahihirap na mag-aalsa kung walang nagdaramdam at nadedehado sa bansa.

Hindi lingid sa ating pamahalaan ang katotohanang iyon. Kaya muling nagpasya ang Gabinete na pabilisin at pag-ibayuhin ang pagtulong sa ating mga maralita. Nagdesisyon ang Gabinete na dodoblehin ang kalinga sa mga kapuspalad.

Itong ating meeting na ito ay matagal na itong naka-schedule, may riot o wala, talagang mag-uusap tayo kung paano pairalin ang makabubuti sa ating mga mahihirap. Pero ang Diyos, magaling siya sa “timing”, tamang-tama na bago ini-schedule natin ito, marami tayong puwedeng ipagnilay doon sa mga pangyayari noong mga nakaraang araw.

Kailangan nating ipabatid sa mga nag-demonstrasyon na ang pamahalaan ay masiglang tumutugon sa kanilang mga pangangailangan, maging trabaho, pagkain, tirahan, edukasyon, medisina, hustisya at iba pa. Dapat nating patunayan sa kanila na hindi kailangang pabagsakin ang gobyerno at maglaban ang mahirap at mayaman upang makaangat sa buhay.

Sa hangaring ito nanawagan tayo sa mga taong malapit sa mga nag-martsa sa Malakanyang. Walang ibubunga ang poot at hidwaan kundi ibayong kaguluhan at kahirapan sa ating taongbayan. Tayo ay magtutulong upang matugunan ang karaingan ng mga kasamahan ninyo. Iyon sana ang ating sabihin sa mga kaibigan, at mga kasama na nagmartsa sa Malakanyang.

When we also call on you, the leaders of the basic sectors to help us reach out to the people who rallied at EDSA and Mendiola along with other disgruntled elements in our society. In fact, kayo at mga organisasyon ninyo, you are the ultimate weapon in our battle against manipulative politicians and rioting mobs.

Kayo, you are the first line of defense against desperation and mass violence. Please help us reach out to our rallyists of past week whose legitimate grievances were exploited by ruthless politicians who don't mind seeing scores massacred in their evil gambit to make murderers out of our police and soldiers, and create a pretext for the government's violent overthrow. Thank goodness, the professionalism and mega-tolerance of our police and soldiers thwarted their dastardly plans. Paumanhin, tumulong kayo, dalhin ang mensahe sa mga sektor na kinatawan ninyo o sektor kung saan may impluwensiya kayo. Sabihin sa kanila, kumbinsihin sila na itong pamahalaan ay tunay na seryoso sa pagtulon at paglilingkod sa mahihirap at kapuspalad.

Ano ang nagawa ng bagong Administrasyong People Power sa unang isandaang araw ng panunungkulan lalo na para sa mahihirap at maliliit. Una sa lahat, nagtatag tayo ng gobyernong matino, malinis at iginagalang.

Noong ika-20 ng Enero, takot na takot tayo, hindi lamang sa hinaharap ng bansa kundi lalo na sa mga pakay at pakana ng pamahalaan mismo. Nagbago iyon sa pagsimula ng Administrasyong People Power at nakinabang ang buong bayan lalo na ang mahihirap. Dahil sa panunumbalik ng kumpiyansa sa pamahalaan, nakabangon ang piso. Nagsimulang sumigla ang ekonomiya at pumasok ang kapital. Sa gayon, napigilan ang pagtaas ng mga bilihan at bumugso ang pangangapital, halimbawa, dumoble ang halaga ng mga bagong negosyo na naaprubahan ng BOI at PEZA dahil doon lamang magkakaroon ng mahigit labimpitong libong trabaho.

Dahil walang palakasan sa bagong pamahalaan, malaki ang nabawas sa smuggling, nahinto nga ang mga smuggling ng mga negosyanteng malapit sa dating administrasyon. Nabawasan ang lubhang agos ng asukal mula sa ibayong dagat na dati ay pumapatay sa mga magtutubo.

Pinawalang-bisa ko ang Executive Order 313 na nagbigay ng malaking bahagi ng coconut levy sa isang grupong maliit ngunit makapangyarihan. Dahil ang talagang pakay natin ay itong pondong ito ay magamit para sa malilit na magsasaka ng niyog.

Napigil ang mabilis na paglaganap ng jueteng na siyang umuubos sa kita ng mahihirap. Sa loob ng tatlong buwan, mas maraming nagawa ang ating pamahalaan kontra sa jueteng kesa sa halos tatlong taon ng nakaraang administrasyon. At dahil sa peace initiatives ng pamahalaan sa problema sa mga rebeldeng Muslim at komunista, halos huminto na ang labanan sa maraming dako ng Pilipinas. Sa gayon, nakabalik sa kanilang mga komunidad ang mga iibo-libong mamamayan na itinaboy ng digmaan upang magpundar ng bagong buhay at kabuhayan. Sa kabilang dako, nilusob po ng pulis ang hukbo ng mga kidnappers, sindikato ng mga droga at ang teroristang Abu Sayyaf.

It is these hard war's gains that there would be power grabbers who threaten to destroy. And I am determined not to let them succeed. I believe, last May 1, you saw that determination. And I thank you for your support.

Ngayon nananawagan ako sa inyo at sa mga komunidad at mga sektor na kinakatawan ninyo na suportahan ang ating pamahalaan sa kanyang pakikibakang ipagtanggol ang mahalagang pamana at nakamit ng EDSA II. We also call on your support to push forward our anti-poverty agenda dahil sama-sama naman tayong gumawa nito noon pa at hanggang ngayon. And at its heart is addressing the inequities that make the majority powerless, marginalized and vulnerable.

We must pursue poverty reduction within the overarching frame of social justice so that policies and programs do not become mere palliatives, but instruments to reduce inequality and promote sustainable development. Hence, poverty reduction is not only an integral part of the medium-term plan in this administration. It is the overarching theme of the updated Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan.

We have also revitalized the Social Reform and Poverty Alleviation Act, and I am proud that I was the principal author of that act in the Senate. At itong ginagawa nating ito, ito ang Simula ng mabisang implementation nitong ating anti-poverty law. And now, we shall make that anti-poverty law more effective.

First and foremost, we are reorganizing and constituting the National Anti-Poverty Commission, and working for an autonomous process of the basic sector representation in the NAPC.

We set up various bodies directly under my office to better address the concerns of marginalized groups. They include Mindanao for the rehabilitation of war-torn Muslim areas. The Office of the Presidential Adviser for Indigenous People's Affairs, and the Cabinet Cluster on Socially Equitable, Agricultural Modernization and Public Services, and on the safety nets for sectors affected by globalization.

We anchor our anti-poverty strategy on the five-core thrust that were enunciated by Ging Deles earlier. But let us repeat them so we can internalize them.

First, the redistribution of physical and resource assets; second, human development services; third, participation of the poor in governance and institution building; fourth, security and protection from violence and fifth, more opportunities for livelihood and social life.

Ang pamahalaan ay naglunsad ng dose-dosenang mga programa para sa mahihirap at kapuspalad. Sa unang isandaang araw ng pag-oopisina, hayaan ninyong banggitin ko ang ilan. Malamang ang programang pinakamaraming direktang nakinabang ay ang programa ng Kagawaran ng Agrikultura para sa mga magniniyog na nagpaabot ng bigas sa isang milyon dalawang daan at limampung libong pesante na natamaan ng mababang presyo ng kopra. One million two hundred fifty thousand peasants. Iyan ang nakinabang sa programa ng DA on rice assistance. At para naman sa kabuuan ng mga magsasaka, mangingisda, at iba pang umaasa sa biyaya ng lupa at dagat, mag-uukol tayo ng Php20 billion para sa modernisasyon ng agrikultura upang lumakas ang ani, lumaki ang kita at makalaban sa mga produktong dayuhan.

The Department of Labor and Employment through its public employment offices has helped more than 110,000 people find jobs nationwide. And it is revoking Department Order 10-97 to stop the oppressive practice of labor only contracting.

Upang matulungan ang mga sektor na apektado ng globalisasyon, gaya ng sabi ko kanina lumikha ako ng Cabinet Cluster on Safety Net for sectors affected by globalization. At ang namumuno nito ay ang Kalihim ng Paggawa at Trabaho. Bilang unang hakbang, maghahanay tayo ng Php27 million mula sa State Insurance Fund para sa nawawalan ng kita pati ang naghahanapbuhay ng sarili hindi sa kumpanya. At upang matulungan ang kailangang mag-aral ng ibang trabaho dahil sa globalization, bubuo and DOLE ng development fund for workers na may pondong Php50 million, kabilang ang Php18 million mula sa President's Social Fund.

The Department of Social Welfare's flagship program, the Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services, has served more than 270,000 families in 100 urban poor communities and almost 4,000 depressed barangays.

The Department of Agrarian Reform distributed titles to more than 10,000 hectares of land to more than 8,000 farmers including contentious private lands like Hacienda de los Reyes in Barangay Imuk, Calauan, Laguna. Sana umabot sa isandaang ektarya ang maipamumudmud natin itong taon na ito. Iyon ang aking panaginip na sana maging totoo.

For our retired soldiers, the Philippine Veteran's Affairs Office, settled monthly pensions of more than 260,000 pensioners for old age, death and disability would total disbursement of Php2.5 billion. Para sa ating mga guro sa ibabaw ng ginagawa ng DECS para sa kanila, pati na rin ang Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) ay nagtatabi ng isang bilyong pisong paluwagan para humaba ang pisi ng ating mga guro habang hinihintay ang madalas na nahuhuling pagdating ng suweldo.

The Health Department provided more than 230,000 TB patients with free medicine and more than 7 million children with vitamin A, 5 million children with the worming treatment and 45,000 youth with immunization.

The DENR reinstated its Community-Based Forest Management Program benefiting more than 400,000 household. At ipinag-utos ko na agad gawing mga lugar ng murang pabahay ang mga lupaing publiko na kasalukuyang tinitirhan ng mga maralita nating kababayan. Halos walumpung libong pamilya ay nakinabang na at mahigit tatlung libong pamilya pa ang matutulungan sa madaling panahon.

Para sa kababaihan, layunin natin ay mabigyan ang mga nagtatrabaho ng mahalagang serbisyo para sa kalusugan, proteksyon sa karahasan, pag-aalaga ng bata at iba pa.

Umpisa po lamang ang mga ito, marami pang kasunod. At tamang-tama itong workshop na ito dahil nga nagbigay tayo ng programa para sa susunod na dalawang daang araw. At dito tayo hahanap sa listahang ito ng mga doables na ipatutupad hanggang matapos itong taong ito.

Mahirap na trabaho ng gobyerno ang gumawa ng programa laban sa kahirapan lalung-lalo na pag mayroon tayong namanang budget deficit na Php 225 billion. Ngunit mas malaking hamon ang maging kabalikat ang pribadong sector sa pagtulong sa mga kapus-palad.

The privileged Filipinos must realize that true justice, development, democracy and reconciliation in our land will not happen without the willingness of the elite to share or give up some of their wealth and power.

I am not preaching communism. I am invoking Christian love, charity and social justice. In this regard and in the interest of leadership by example, let me reiterate my personal contribution to bridging the gap between those who have and those who do not have in our country.

Noong isang buwan, inatasan ko ang HUDCC na iproseso ang paglipat ng Macaraeg Estates — yaong dapat na mana ko mula sa aking yumaong ina sa Iligan City — para sa urban land reform. In addition, the family of my husband Mike is offering more than a thousand hectares of Arroyo sugarland in Negros Occidental for Agrarian Reform.

In the past, we saw how manipulative politicians stoke the flames of class warfare among our poor and oppressed brothers and sisters. That is the wrong way forward. Instead, I call on everyone to embrace the core values of our government — winning the battles against poverty, improving moral standards, promoting the politics of consultations, and leading by example not just in government but all across the society.

Our cause is just. Our objectives are clear. With God's grace and the people's interests in our hearts, we will not fail.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: University of the Philippines Diliman Library

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Message of President Arroyo for World Environment Day [Filipino]

Mensahe
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Para sa World Environment Day (icere sa Telekalikaan sa ika-4 ng Hunyo 4, 2001)

[Ipinahayag sa Living Room, Presidential Suite, Manila Hotel, ika 2 ng Hunyo, 2001]

Mga kababayan:

Nakikiisa ang Pilipinas sa pagdiriwang ng World Environment Day.

Bilang tampok sa ating pagdiriwang sa taong ito, inilunsad itong telekalikasan upang magpahayag sa lahat ng Pilipino tungkol sa importansya ng ating kapaligiran at kung anu-ano ang ginagawa ng pamahalaan upang alagaan ito.

Marami ang ating mga suliranin tungkol sa pag-alaga ng ating kapaligiran. Nariyan ang basura, ang baha at ang maruming usok buhat sa mga pabrika at sa mga sasakyan. Ang lahat ng mga ito’y nagiging dahilan ng ating pagkakasakit. Nariyan din ang pagsasamantala at pag-aabuso ng ating yamang dagat at kabundukan na nagiging dahilan ng unti-unting pagkaubos ng mga ito.

Huwag nating payagan na maubos ang ating likas na kayamanan sanhi ng maling paggamit ng ating mga kababayan. Alamin natin kung papano alagaan at palawakin ang ating likas yaman, sapagka’t ang wastong paggamit ng ating likas yaman ang siyang magliligtas sa atin sa kahirapan, at ang pagpapatuloy ng mga maling paraan ng paggamit nito ang magdidiin sa atin at sa mga sumusunod na henerasyon sa lalo pang dusa at kahirapan.

Makiisa tayo at makialam sa pag-alaga at pagpanatili ng ating kapaligiran at likas yaman. Tinatawagan ko ang lahat na lumahok sa telekalikasan ng DENR. Magkakampi tayong lahat at magtulong-tulong sa paglutas ng ating mga problemang pangkalikasan.

Isipin nating mahalaga ang tulong ng bawat isa sa atin upang magtagumpay ang programang ito. Makiisa po tayong lahat tungo sa pag-alaga ng ating kalikasan hindi lamang ngayong World Environment Day kungdi sa araw-araw.

Mabuhay tayong lahat!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA’s Message for World Environment Day (to be aired during the Telekalikaan on June 4, 2001). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412235908/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8655&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 2001 Bagong Bayani Awarding Ceremonies Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 2001 Bagong Bayani Awarding Ceremonies

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, June 7, 2001]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat acting secretary Brion. Si secretary Brion po ay acting secretary ngayon dahil si Secretary Pat Sto. Tomas ay nandoon po sa Geneva dahil nahalal siya bilang pangulo ng International Labor Organization kaya pinagmamalaki natin ang ating Secretary of Labor.

Other officials of the government; Captain Oca at yung ibang mga opisyal ng Bagong Bayani Foundation; Ambassador Rosting and Ambassador Escalona and the other members of the diplomatic corps; ating mga binigyan ng award itong araw na ito; ladies and gentlemen:

I am very happy that we are all together in this auspicious gathering today. It is very fitting that in paying tribute to the overseas Filipino workers, who are today's new heroes of the nation, the venue we have chosen is the Heroes Hall of Malacañang kasi talagang heroes kayo. And I would like to thank you and all of the overseas Filipino workers through you because yesterday in the cabinet meeting we just had a report na ang linaki ng tinatawag na net factor income from abroad na ito ay malaking bahagi nito ay yung kita nating overseas Filipino workers ay umangat ng 25 porsyento itong first three months of this year. At dahil umangat ng 25 percent ang net factor income from abroad ay umangat ang ating GNP by 3.6 percent. Kaya maraming salamat sa ating overseas Filipino workers. The 11 Filipino overseas working men and women as well as the Filipino crew of a Norwegian tanker who are being accorded the Bagong Bayani Award exemplify the best qualities of the Filipino workers.

These men and women to whom our administration pay tribute — and to whom our admiration goes — represent the world-class caliber our OFWs are collectively known for. They strive to bring out their best and excel wherever they may be. Iba-ibang lugar kung saan sila nagtatrabaho pero lahat sila ginagalang nung mga lugar kung saan sila nagtatrabaho at ginagalang din natin kagaya nitong araw na ito. They are the reasons why Filipinos are among the most preferred workers in any part of the world. What does the Bagong Bayani Award really mean? Many look upon our overseas workers as contributors to the national economy, particularly through their dollar remittances — kaya yan ang binanggit ko, 25 percent increase contributing to 3.6 percent increase in our GNP. The dollars sent back home run up to billions and form a substantial portion of the country's dollar reserves, as well as a substantial portion of our country's growth rate. In fact, in several instances when the economy had a foreign exchange crisis, the consistent dollar inflows from our OCWs saved the economy from collapsing but beyond the billions of dollars in remittances which have built homes, sent children to school, and started small businesses, the Bagong Bayani Award acknowledges the OCW's efforts to keep alive the Filipino values and promote our sense of nationhood wherever they may be.

It is also a test of their character and skills in balancing various roles. More than being OFWs, they are also mothers, fathers, husbands, wives, sons, daughters, brothers, friends and most especially, Filipino citizens.

So many mothers have left home for the sake of a more stable future for their children. Likewise, many fathers have had to become unmindful of the perils that they may encounter while working at sea or some far away desert to pursue higher-paying jobs. Masarap pong magsumikap sa trabaho para sa ating mga mahal sa buhay. Subalit mas masarap ang maghanap-buhay sa sariling bayan kung saan tayo ay makakauwi sa bahay at makakapiling ang ating pamilya pagkatapos ng oras ng trabaho. Mas mahirap 'yung nandoon sa kabilang bansa kaysa 'yung nandito na naghahanap-buhay. Alam nating lahat na ang mahusay na trabaho sa ating bansa ay hindi pa makakamit ng ating mga kababayan dahil mahina pa ang ating ekonomiya.

And while we are doing our best to improve our economy, overseas Filipinos go on with their jobs abroad. And for now many of them have little choice for although our hopes remain undiminished — that someday, soon, our OFWs can work here in our country and still provide well their families with a more comfortable and decent life — I am saddened to hear about families who no longer receive regular financial support or even letters and phone calls from their OFW kins. Merong mga ganon. Whenever I come across cases of old mothers or very young children or angry and confused housewives at the presidential action center, I often ask myself if the Filipinos have cultivated enough values that will nurture not only love and devotion to family but our sense of the “other person” and his betterment.

Then I am told of some of our outstanding OFWs. Halimbawa, hindi ko babanggitin lahat ng nakakuha ng gantimpala itong araw na ito, pero bilang ilang mga halimbawa I am told for instance of what Petronilo Bergantino, maintenance supervisor in Abu Dhabi, who is father to 3 professionals and who has successfully invested in a rice mill, a warehouse, a rice and coconut plantation and a four-door apartment even as he continues to look after the needs of his old parents in Sibalom, Antique. Napakagaling na halimbawa ng OFW.

Or I am told of an Elpidio Quitevis whose professional organization in Bahrain sends scholars in accountancy to the Polytechnic University of the Philippines.

Or of a Dr. Quitquit who spends his off work hours providing free medical services and medicines to the sick and needy Filipino workers in the Sultanate of Oman. Then when I hear about all of them and all the others who have received an award today I realize there is hope, and that the Filipino OFWs indeed a family man or woman and at the same time a man or woman for others.

In return for their good deeds, their vital contribution to our economy and their personal sacrifices, the least we can do is to continuously find ways and means to help them better. Kaya halimbawa ilang linggo ng nakaraan — ‘di ba? — naglagay tayo ng pondo para makatulong sa mga legal problems ng ating mga OFWs. We must also strengthen the basic services that already cater to their needs.

And so therefore I’m looking forward to our overseas workers welfare administration to fortify the comprehensive workers education program. This is to correct long-held misconceptions about working and living overseas as well as plant the seeds from where strong moral values, an upright sense of family and citizenship, and excellence in work will grow and flourish. Kasi sa ‘pag pupunta ako eto ang ating mga outstanding, salamat at outstanding sila at ginagalang sila ng kanilang mga community pero meron diyan napunta doon umiiyak sa half-way house dahil hindi nila akalaing ganon ang mga aabutan nila. So kailangan open eyes ‘pag pumupunta doon, at kailangan alam kung saan ‘yung mga matitinong lugar na pagtatrabahuan at kung alam kung saan ‘yung alanganin at dapat iwasan. Napaka-importanteng trabaho ‘yan ng ating pamahalaan, yung edukasyon at impormasyon na ‘yan.

Even as my administration is determined to reciprocate the many good things that the OFWs have done for our country, we know that there is still much more work to be done. This is especially true for the workers who have returned home for good. The OWWA will hopefully continue with an integrated, practical, doable, and sustainable program that will ensure their successful psycho-social and economic reintegration in the mainstream of Philippine society.

I am also looking forward to the department of foreign affairs and the department of labor and employment that they will address the recurring gaps in the provision of prompt and reliable services and assistance to our workers and their families. Kaya nga ‘yung pondo natin tungkol doon sa legal problems ng ating mga OFWs ay dinagdagan. In paying tribute to our bagong bayani, we are showing to the country and to the whole world, that while there may be a few of our fellow Filipinos who have gone astray, there are certainly many, many more who are living examples of all that are good that the Filipino is and can be.

Let us always pray for the safety, well-being and success of our courageous overseas working men and women as they continue to epitomize the good values and work ethic of the Filipino race in their countries. May the grace of the almighty be with all of us lalung-lalo na ang ating mga bayaning OFWs.

Mabuhay ang mga bagong bayani ng taong 2001!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 2001 Bagong Bayani Awarding Ceremonies. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412235808/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8651&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 103rd Independence Day Celebration [Filipino]

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 103rd Philippine Independence Day celebration of the Filipino-Chinese Community

[Delivered at the PICC Reception Hall, CCP Complex, Pasay City, June 8, 2001]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much Secretary Romulo. Up to eleven o'clock this morning Secretary Romulo was the Finance Secretary, up to eleven o'clock he is now the Executive Secretary, the little president.

Mr. Chua and the other leaders of the Filipino-Chinese Community; officers of the various organizations who are here tonight; members; ladies and gentlemen; minamahal kong mga kababayang Chinoy:

Sa ngalan ng lahat ng kasama kong opisyal ng pamahalaan, binabati ko kayo ng magandang gabi at isang makabuluhang pagdiriwang sa araw ng kalayaan.

Isa pong malaking karangan ang makasama ang mga pinuno at kasapi ng malalaki at respetadong organisasyon sa Filipino-Chinese community sa pagdiriwang ninyo ng kalayaan ng Pilipinas. Binabati ko kayo sa okasyong ito.

Ang programa at hapunang ito para sa araw ng kalayaan ay isa lamang sa mga aktibidades ng inyong organisasyon. Alam ko na ang Federation of Filipino Chambers of Commerce ay nangunguna rin sa pag-anyaya sa buong Filipino-Chinese community sa buong bansa na itaas ang bandilang Pilipino mula Mayo 28 hanggang Hunyo 12 bilang pagbati sa pambansang kaarawan.

Mahigit na 100 Chinoy NGOs ang kasama sa selebrasyon ng independence day ngayong gabi — at nagpapasalamat ako sa inyong lahat, 1800 of you who are here tonight.

Sa pagkaintindi ko sa araw na ito ay nag-deploy din kayo ng 10 medical at dental teams para magbigay ng libreng serbisyo sa mga residente ng metro manila. Binabati ko kayo doon sa ginagawa ninyo.

Anupa't ang mahalagang tulong ng Federation ay nadarama sa mga pambansang okasyon tulad ng araw ng kalayaan at sa pang-araw-araw na buhay sa bansa.

Ang pakikipagtulungang ito ay nagsimula may ilang siglo na — ang nakaraan mula nang ilunsad ang kalakal sa pagitan ng Pilipinas at Tsina noong ika-labing anim na siglo. Ang kalakalang ito ay sumagana, naging malusog at naging isang permanenteng bahagi ng relasyon ng dalawang bansa. Ngayon ay active trading partners and Maynila at Beijing.

At dahil sa kalakalang ito ay lalong lumakas ang ekonomiya ng dalawang bansa. Maraming Pilipino, Chinoy at chinay ang umunlad sa buhay, nakapag-pundar ng negosyo, at maraming inambag sa ekonomiya.

Marami ding chino ang naganyak na manirahan sa Pilipinas, nag-asawa dito, nagpalaki ng pamilya at pinalaki ang mga anak at mga apo sa lipunang Pilipino. Kasama na diyan ang pamilya ng aking kabiya, si Jose Miguel Tuason Arroyo.

Gaya nang aking sinabi sa binondo noong abril 23 bilang (kauna-unahang pangulo ng Pilipinas) na dumalaw sa chinatown, magaan ang aking loob tuwing kasama ko ang Filipino-Chinese community. Pakiramdam ko na ako ay bahagi ng inyong komunidad.

Ito ay dahil, gaya ng alam na ninyo — dahil ilang beses ko ng ikinuwento — ang aking butihing kabiyaq ay galing sa lahi ni Son Tua isang negosyanteng chino noong panahon ng kastila. Hindi nagtagal at ang Son Tua ay nagbago at ngayo'y kilala na bilang pamilyang Tuason.

Marami pong halimbawa ang mga kilalang Pilipino na ang ugat ay galing sa Tsina. Kasama na diyan ang ating national hero, si Jose Rizal at ang mga ninuno ni Pangulong Corazon aquino ay tubo sa Fookien.

Noong kabataan ako, natatandaan ko ang sikat na anthropologist na si Otley Beyer na nagsabing ang Pilipino ay 80 percent Malayan-Indonesian, 10 percent Chinese at 10 percent ng iba pang lahi.

Sa palagay ko'y nagbago nang malaki ang arithmetic ni Mr. Beyer. Tinataya na sa mga Pilipinong may dugong ibang bansa, ang Filipino-Chinese o tinatawag nating Chinoy ang pinakamarami sa buong Pilipinas — mas marami kaysa sa mga Filipino-Hispanic, Filipino-American, at Filipino-Indian.

Ang kasaysayan ng Chinoy sa Pilipinas ay isang drama ng sakripisyo at paghihirap. Ang mga Chinoy ngayon ay kinikilalang isa sa pinakamayaman sa buong bansa. Subalit ang kahapon ninyo'y isang kabanata ng pagsisikap at sakripisyo.

Kilala kayo sa kasipagan. Matipid din kayo. At kahanga-hanga ang inyong pagtutulongan. Walang kaparis ang inyong pagkakaisa.

Sapagkat may angking talino sa negosyo, napalaki ninyo ang inyong hanapbuhay. Karamihan ng negosyo ay nagtagumpay.

Nag-diversify kayo. Mula sa local, kayo ay naging nasyonal. At mula sa nasyonal, pinalawak pang negosyo sa maraming parte ng daigdig.

Ngayon karamihan sa inyo ay matagumpay na negosyante, model citizens at mga lider sa kabuhayan ng bansa.

Ang maganda'y hindi kayo nasiyahan sa tagumpay lamang ng negosyo. Binigyan din ninyo ng pansin ang inyong mga kapitbahay, ang buong lipunan. Kinilala ninyo ang utang na loob ninyo sa bansa at inyong binigyan ng diin ang pagbibigay ng ginhawa sa mundong nasa kapaligiran ninyo.

Sinuklian ninyo ang kabutihan ng inyong daigdig. Ito ang dahilan kung bakit aktibo ang Filipino-Chinese community sa community building at public service. Ngayon ay kilalang-kilalang halimbawa ang binondo Chinoy sa inyong volunteer fire brigade na tumutulong maski saan may sunog. Ginagamit ninyo ang inyong salapi at tinataya ang buhay para makatulong sa inyong kapwa.

Pinalakas din ninyo ang pagkakaibigan ng mga Pilipino at chino sa maraming paraan: mga peryodiko, cultural presentations, community festivities, sports sa inyong lugar, mga eskuwela at mga bahay-negosyo. Sa isang salita, malusog ang inyong social conscience, malakas ang civic commitment at matibay ang sense of community involvement.

Ang work ethic ng Chinoy — sipag, pagtitipid, sakripisyo, pagplano para bukas — ay isang bagay na dapat tularan ng maraming katutubong Pilipino.

Maraming matututuhan ang mga pinoy sa mga Chinese at Filipino-Chinese. Marami ding aral ang ating bayani maging Chinese blood o hindi Chinese blood dahil ito ay ipinagdiriwang natin ng June 12, alalahanin din natin ang ating mga bayani ay marami ring naituturo sa ating mga Pilipino tulad ng sakripisyo para sa bayan, pagbabago sa sarili, at pambansang pagkakaisa para umunlad ang lipunan.

Sa gabing ito at sa Hunyo 12, ang araw ng ating pambansang kaarawan, matuklasan sana natin ang mga aral na iniwan ng kabayanihan nina Jose Rizal, Andres Bonifacio, Emilio Aguinaldo, Apolinario Mabini, M.H. del Pilar, Tandang Sora, at si General Pawa, ang Chinoy na kabalikat ng mga katipunero sa pag-aalsa laban sa kastila.

Sa gabing ito ay may ilan akong magandang balita na gusto kong ibahagi sa inyo: naaprubahan na po ng Senado at Kongreso ang Administrative Naturalization Law.

Ang administrative naturalization law ang magbibigay ng Filipino citizenship sa mga qualified at deserving aliens. Ito'y isang paraan para maging legal na mamamayan ng bansa ang mga banyagang gustong maging Filipino citizen.

This law makes the naturalization process for native-born aliens in the country less restrictive, through a special administrative process, in order to facilitate their integration into the mainstream of Philippine society.

I understand the predicament of aliens born in the Philippines who find it difficult to share the spirit of nationhood when they feel that the government has been half-hearted in making them citizens of the country which they want to serve.

Despite their being born in the Philippines and their continuous residence here, they continue to be regarded and treated under the existing laws just like all other aliens, mainly because of their foreign parentage.

The requirements set by law for their naturalization are not much different from those provided for other classes of aliens.

Regardless of which foreign lineage he comes from, why should a respectable and responsible individual born and raised in the Philippines be not welcome into being a full-pledged Filipino?

And if that individual can prove that he loves the Philippines as the land of his birth, that he acknowledges the responsibilities of Filipino citizenship, that he is willing to be a productive member of our society, and, more importantly, that he is willing to fulfill and respect the duties and responsibilities of being a law-abiding citizen of this land, then he should be accepted with open arms as part of the Filipino nation.

Nagpapasalamat po ako kay Mr. Dante Go dahil siya ay nagbisita sa akin noong Marso 17 para ikwento sa akin na may panukalang batas sa Kongreso na tinatawag na Naturalization Bill. Marami siyang mga binigay na payo sa pagbuo ng batas na ito.

The passage of this law is a pivotal chapter in the history of local-born aliens in the country, majority of whom are Chinese Filipinos. With a faster and much-improved naturalization process, there will be less obstacles to those whose fondest wish is to live in the Philippines permanently and be acknowledged as productive members of our society.

Through this law, our country also hopes to reduce the brain drain caused by the flight of graduates educated and trained in this land but lured to work in countries where alien hiring is more liberal. We want these graduates to put their expertise to good use in this very nation where it is needed most.

The approval of this law is just part of the many improvements that my administration is working on to achieve unity, peace and stability for all sectors of our society.

Kanina po nagkaroon ng bill signing sa Malacañang. Dalawang importanteng panukalang batas ay pinirmahan ko at nating batas na. Iyong isa ay iyong power sector reform bill at iyong isa naman ay iyong pangdagdag ng sweldo sa ating government employees.

Kanina hindi nahabol itong panukalang batas ng naturalization dahil hindi pa natatapos ang imprenta. Kaya lang pagkatapos noong signing na iyon, natapos ang pagka-imprenta, napirmahan ng Speaker, napirmahan ng Senate President at tamang-tama pwede kong pirmahan ngayong gabi sa harap ninyong lahat.

At gaya ng sabi ko kanina, ito ay isang paraan lamang kung papano magkaisa ang bayan maging katutubong Pilipino o Chinese-Filipino. Marami pang ibang paraan kung papano tayo magkaisa.

Halimbawa, magpatayo tayo ng isang monumento ni general pawa, isang outstanding Filipino-Chinese leader noong panahon ng Philippine Revolution. Hihintayin ko ang inyong payo kung saan dapat itayo ang monumento ni General Pawa.

At humanap tayo ng paraan para maisalin sa mandarin ang “Noli Me Tangere at ang “El Filibusterismo. Gawin natin ito para lalong tumibay ang ating samahan at pagkakaunawaan.

Sa ating Konstitusyon, nakalagay na dapat ituro ang mga wikang Spanish at Arabic bilang optional languages sa mga kolehiyo. Dapat siguro ituro din ang wikang Chinese, lalo na ang Mandarin sa paaralan.

Bukod sa mayroon tayong 1.2 bilyong tao sa Tsina, kapit bansa natin sila at malaki ang kanilang potential para sa ating mga produkto. Sa Asya ay milyun-milyon ang mga Chinese. Ang wikang Chinese ay siyang pinakamalaganap na wika sa buong daigdig ngayon. Kung ganon ay dapat gawing optional language din ang mandarin sa mga kolehiyo.

Dapat mag-aral ng wikang Chinese ang mga Pilipino. Dahil dito balak kong atasan ang Commission on Higher Education o CHED na pag-aralan ang pagtuturo ng Mandarin sa lahat ng kolehiyo at unibersidad bilang optional language, kasama ng Spanish at Arabic.

Dapat ding gawing policy ng CHED na palaganapin sa mga kolehiyo ang kamalayan sa foreign language education. Ang makabagong Filipino ay dapat marunong sa iba-ibang mga wika — Chinese, Spanish, Arabic, Japanese, Bahasa at iba pa. Ang isang dahilan ay malaking bagay ang wika sa ating buhay sa international trade, foreign relations, cultural relations at general education.

Dahil sa globalization, kailangan ang mga eksperto sa iba’t-ibang wika. Sa pakikipag-ugnayan sa ibang gobyerno, negosyante, mga kapitalista, maraming pinto ang nabubuksan ng kaalaman ng maraming lengguahe.

Importante ang foreign languages hindi lamang sa mga international conferences at global conventions kung hindi sa mga corporate boardrooms at sa mga tanggapan ng gobyerno sa Beijing, Tokyo, Berlin at Paris.

At gawin nating modelo ang ating national hero, si Dr. Jose Rizal, Ingles, Pranses at Aleman. Na marunong sumulat at magsalita sa wikang Kastila, Ang kailangan ko ngayon ay isang tutor sa inyong wika. Isang volunteer sa hanay ng aking mga kaibigang Chinoy.

At isa pa: magtabi tayo ng isang araw para sa deklarasyon ng Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day, para sariwain ang papel na ginagampanan ng mga Chinoy sa ating cultural enrichment and economic and social development of our country.

Meron akong personal na interes para ibigay sa inyo ang mga nasasabing plano. Matagal ko nang sinusundan ang giyera ng mga lahi sa kapwa lahi, ng mga tribo laban sa kapwa tribo sa buong asya, at nakakatakot ang gulong nangyayari.

Kailangan mapigil natin ang mga gulong nangyayari sa ating paligid. Kaya ang misyon ko ay tapusin ang gulong nangyayari ngayon sa may ilang bahagi sa Mindanao, at ang gulo sa pagitan ng komunista at ng pamahalaan.

Let us lay the ground for harmony right now. Let us think of what will unite us rather than what will divide us. We after all desire the same things: a stable and growing economy that will sustain the good life for ourselves and our families.

Cultural integration is a long process that needs to be nurtured not only through policy but more importantly through the day-to-day interaction between persons and groups.

Sana'y magkaisa tayo sa isang diwa, isang prinsipyo at isang damdamin. Ito ang panawagan ng aking administrasyon: bayan, magkaisa!

Magandang gabi po sa inyong lahat at maraming salamat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's 103rd Philippine Independence Day Celebration of the Filipino-Chinese Community. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213633/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8649&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo on the Ceremonial Signing of the Omnibus Power Bill, June 8, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On the Ceremonial Signing of the Omnibus Power Bill

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, June 8, 2001]

THE OMNIBUS POWER BILL: RATE REDUCTION THROUGH GREAT COMPETITION

Una'y gusto kong pasalamatan ang mga senador at kongresista na tumawid ng party line at nagtulung-tulong para maipasa ang Power Reform Bill. The passage of this bill demonstrates that healing is more productive than hatred. So, "To God be the glory".

Dahil sa batas na ito, matitigil na natin ang napakalaking ibinibigay ng gobyerno sa NAPOCOR bawa't taon bilang subsidy. Malaki pong halaga iyan. This law unburdens government from having to maintain and operate generating plants. At Php38 billion annually, government subsidies to the power sector could be used to fund other services. This amount can build more than a hundred fifteen thousand classrooms. This, almost a hundred twenty seven thousand hectares, can put up 76,000 low-cost houses or construct 6,300 kilometers of road. This aspect to me is most significant, for it enables government to stretch its finances to meet other basic needs that our people should have immediately.

Dahil sa batas na ito, sana hindi na magkakaroon ng problema ang gobyerno na maghanap ng dagdag na puhunan para sa energy sector. At the core of this law is the framework for greater competition and the provision of a level playing field for power generator.

Dahil sa batas na ito, ay malulutas ang utang ng NAPOCOR. Kung hindi pumasa ang Power Reform Bill, patuloy sana ang paglobo ng utang na ito. Iyan na po ang ilan sa mga dahilan kung bakit masyadong mataas ang presyo ng ating kuryente at isa sa pinakamataas sa buong Asya. Ito ang dahilan kung bakit napakamahal ng presyo ng mga bilihin. Sa pagpasa ng power reform bill, magkakaroon ng kumpetisyon. Inaasahan natin, bababa ang presyo ng kuryente.

Our reputation as having one the most expensive electricity rates in Asia will hopefully change, with the law's mandates of rate reduction of around 30 centavos per kilowatt-hour for residential consumers. The law also provides for a reduction in industrial power rates.

Kung bababa ang presyo ng kuryente, dapat susunod ang pagbaba ng presyo ng mga bilihin o kaya man lang maiwasan ang malubhang pagtaas pa ng mga presyo. Magiging competitive tayo sa ibang bansa. Marami po ang pabor sa batas na ito at marami din ang tutol. Pinakinggan ko pong mabuti ang dalawang panig. Pinakinggan din sila ng mga kongresista at senador. At sa isang makasaysayang boto, nagpasiya ang ating mga matatalinong mambabatas na ipasa ang Power Reform Bill.

Many of our countrymen and even some legislators who voted for this new law believed, that this new law can still stand some improvement. In particular, they want the law to level the playing field more in the power industry, and to institute additional safeguards to protect consumers.

I believe these are valid concerns. And I am directing the incoming Secretary of Energy, Vicente Perez, who is right here, to conduct public hearings to determine if further amendments are needed, and what amendments are needed to further protect the public interest. And with the indulgence of our senators and congressmen who have worked so hard, if the hearings come about with conscientious amendments, then I hope they will indulge me, when I certify in the 12th Congress as urgent, the enactment of this needed conscientious, amendment to the law.

May magkasama pong ginhawa at sakit ang batas na ito. May ginhawa po at ang mga ginhawa na nandiyan ay magsisimula kaagad, iyong pagbaba ng ating electric bills. Ang mga sakit naman ay inaasahan nating unti-unting mawawala. Ngunit kung hindi po natin inalis o ginamot ang karamdaman lalo pang gagrabe ang mga sakit. Gagamitin po natin ang perang mase-save gaya ng sinabi ko kanina, para sa mga prayoridad natin. Katulad ng murang pabahay, libreng gamot, imprastraktura, and mass education. Pasisiglahin natin ang ekonomiya at ang kalidad ng ating buhay.

Maraming salamat muli sa mga senador at mga kongresista. Ladies and gentlemen of the 11th Congress, aside from thanking you for passing this bill, I also offer you the deep appreciation of the Filipino people for all your accomplishments during this Congress.

This Congress has set many “firsts”. This is the first but hopefully, the only Congress of our country that has worked with two administrations.

And, it is this Congress that will finally see the passage into law of what is perhaps, the longest running bill in our history, because it spanned three administrations and two Congresses, indeed, the longest running bill in Philippine contemporary legislation, the Electric Power Industry Reform Bill, which will soon become Republic Act 9136.

I am glad, that the soon to be Republic Act 9136 is the product of the joint efforts of this immediate, past and the present administration. It was in the past administration that this bill reached the Bicameral Conference Committee level. This administration has ensured that the work done to push the bill would not come to naught. As the child of two administrations, this law should prove that when the interest of the Filipino people is at stake, Congress and the Executive Branch will readily set aside politics and join hands to benefit our people.

Let it also be said here that this administration will continue to implement sound policies started by previous administrations.

Maraming salamat din sa mga NGO na sumuporta sa atin. Ang pagpasa ng Power Reform Bill na pinagdebatehan noong nakaraang siyam na taon ay isang demonstrasyon ng bagong diwa ng pagtutulungan ng mga Pilipino. Ipagpatuloy po natin ang diwang ito ng pagkakaisa para sa ating bayan, para sa ating kabataan, para sa ating kinabukasan.

Today, we also witness the signing into law of Republic Act 9137, or the Supplemental Appropriations for Fiscal Year 2001. Nagagalak akong pirmahan ang panukalang batas na ito, na bukod sa ibang bagay ay magbibigay ng limang porsiyentong dagdag sa sahod ng mga government workers. This supplemental budget is vital to the operations of the bureaucracy of a total Php10.9 billion in the supplemental budget, Php1.45 billion will cover the second installation of the salary increases for the Philippine National Police, as mandated by Republic Act 8551; five hundred million pesos covers the increase in the monthly old-aged pensions of veterans and surviving spouses under Republic Act No. 7696; and, one billion pesos will go to the deficiencies in the appropriation of foreign-assisted projects, as well as a counterpart requirement of projects that will be implemented starting this year.

The bulk of the supplemental budget amounting to 7.95 billion pesos will cover salary deficiencies and adjustments. Of these amounts, 4.15 billion pesos will be used to pay 5,000 teachers hired in fiscal year 2000, the increase in government share of health and insurance premiums of government employees, retirement benefits for PNP personnel, and the deficiency in the regular retirement benefits of our government personnel. The remaining amount of Php3.8 billion, will be used to cover the five percent across the board increase of all national government employees.

Ako na ang unang nagsasabi na hindi pa rin sapat ang umento para lubusang tapatan ang pagtaas ng presyo ng mga bilingin. Ako na rin ang unang aamin, na matagal nang dapat ibinigay ang nasabing umento sa mga government workers, dahil matagal ng nalampasan ng private sector salary scale ang salary scale ng public sector.

Isang napakaimportanteng bahagi ang government service sa ating programa para sa reporma. Hindi natin matatapos ang ating mga piano kung wala tayong matatag, masisipag, at edukadong government workers. Taun-taon ay nababawasan tayo ng magagaling na government workers, dahil sila ay lumilipat sa private sector, o di kaya naman ay umaalis patungong ibang bansa. Bilang isang ekonomista, hindi ko sinisisi ang kanilang desisyon dahil prayoridad nila ang interes ng kanilang pamilya. Makatuwiran ang kanilang desisyon. Pero sa katagalan, ang kawalan ng edukasyon at disiplina ng government workers ay makakaapekto sa paghahapit ng serbisyong bayan sa mga mamamayan. Ganoon pa man kailangan nating pataasin pa ang kalidad ng government service sa pamamagitan ng training, improved recruitment at better pay. Sinisikap natin ang sapat na sahod ng mga government workers sapagkat malaki ang kanilang serbisyo sa bayan. Kung sabagay, ay hindi laging salapi ang kabayaran ng public service. Ang makatulong sa pagbuo ng bansa ay isang uri ng tinatawag nating psychic income, isang kasiyahang loob na mahigit pa sa salapi. Pero nariyan pa rin ang pangangailangan sa perang nasa bulsa o nasa bangko.

Bukod sa Php3.8 billion na salary increase na binanggit ko para sa mga government workers, uulitin ko, dadagdagan din ng batas na ito ang sahod ng mga pulis, mga guro, ang pension para sa mga beterano, at popondohan din ang retirement benefits para sa mga kawani ng pamahalaan.

Kaya gusto kong pasalamat muli ang Kongreso sa kanilang pagpasa ng supplemental budget na nagkakahalaga ng Php10.9 billion. Pinasalamat ko ang mga magiging na senador at congressmen na nag-overtime para siguraduhing magkaroon ng dagdag na umento ang mga masisipag na empleyado ng pamahalaan. Salamat po sa inyong lahat, mga senador at congressmen.

You, the members of the 11th Congress have made your work as legislators and statesmen, with more than 400 new laws to your credits. These last two laws to be signed soon, are testaments to the sincerity and the political will of both the Legislative and Executive Branches in searching for enduring processes, systems and plans that has positive impact on our people's lives.

I am particularly happy that after I became President, Congress passed a hundred three bills including the last two bills, and 20 of them are of national application.

Since I have been President for only a hundred forty days, this means that during the time you worked together, congressmen and senators, you passed almost one law per day. And I hope that the 12th Congress wherein many of you will still sit, will be as productive.

Take a bow, ladies and gentlemen of the 11th Congress and a cheery applause of the Filipino nation. It has been my great honor to have worked with you. At sa lahat ng ating mga kapuwa Pilipino, bayan magkaisa.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: University of the Philippines Diliman Library

Speech of President Arroyo during the grand salute to the Filipino Flag by the Chinese Filipino Business Club Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the grand salute to the Filipino Flag by the Chinese Filipino Business Club

[Delivered at the St. Stephen's High School, Binondo, Manila, June 11, 2001]

Maraming salamat Mr. Go.

Please sit down.

Honorable Bishop; other officials of the Chinese-Filipino business club; other officials of St. Stephen's high school; students of the various Chinese schools; ladies and gentlemen:

Kok we chaw an'. Ta chia haw. A pleasant good morning to everybody. Magandang umaga po sa inyong lahat.

Pasensiya na lang kayo kung medyo baluktot ang aking Chinese. Pero gusto ko malaman ninyo kung gaano kalapit sa aking pamilya ang Chinese. Alam ninyo naman na ang aking mahal na kaniyang, si Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo ay may malakas na dugong Chinese. Ang kanyang ninuno, si Son Tua ay isang negosyanteng Chinese na napalapit naman sa mga kastila noong panahon ng 17th century.

Nasabi ko nga sa talumpati ko noong Biyernes sa Federation of Filipino Chinese chambers of commerce and industry — at ang buong Filipino-Chinese community — sa PICC na kung inuutos ng ating konstitusyon na gawing optional languages ang Spanish at Arabic sa mga kolehiyo, kailangan pag-aralang maisama din ang Mandarin. Ang Chinese language ay ang pinaka-malaganap na wika sa buong mundo. Ginagamit ito ng mahigit na isang bilyong Chinese. Ito ang wika ng milyon-milyong Chinese sa Pilipinas, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand at Indonesia.

Magpunta ka sa maraming bansa at lahat halos ay mayroon Chinatown. Every nation has its own Chinatown. Mayroong maliit na China sa bawat sulok ng daigdig. Ang isa sa ipinagmamalaki ng Chinatown ay ang narito sa Binondo, isang makasaysayang distrito ng Maynila.

Kaya balak kong atasan ang Commission on Higher Education o CHED na pag-aralan ang pagtuturo ng mandarin sa lahat ng kolehiyo at unibersidad bilang optional language, kasama ng Spanish at Arabic.

Ang totoo'y dapat palaganapin ng CHED ang Foreign Language Education sa ating bansa. Hindi na sapat na ang isang Pilipino ay mahusay sa tatlong lenggwahe — ang Tagalog/Filipino, English at ang kanyang regional language. Ang makabagong Filipino ay dapat marunong ng maraming wika, tulad ng Spanish, Japanese, Arabic, Bahasa at Chinese.

Mahalaga ang isang foreign language sa international trade, foreign relations, global security and defense. Mahalaga ito sa research at scholarship. Importante ito sa person-to-person relationships.

Kailangan ay marami tayong eksperto sa mga lenggwahe. Pero magsimula tayo sa Spanish, Arabic at Chinese. Ito ang gawin nating foundation ng ating "linguistic literacy." Tulungan po ninyo ako na mapatupad at magtagumpay ito.

Pero bago ako makalimot, hayaan ninyo munang batiin ko ang mga pinuno at kasapi ng Chinese-Filipino business, club, inc. At ang mga guro, estudyante at administration ng St. Stephen's High School.

Binabati ko kayo para sa inyong selebrasyon ng ating Independence Day. Nalulugod ako na naisipan ninyong isagawa itong “a grand salute to the Philippine Flag.” At ako ay nasisiyahan din sa inyong malaking kontribusyon sa ating mga kawal na namatay o lubhang nasugatan dito sa giyera sa Basilan.

Ang kalayaan ng Pilipinas, na ating nakamit noong Hunyo 12, 1898, ay galing sa sakripisyo ng mga bayaning Pilipino at ng mga kakampi nila noong rebolusyon ng 1896 at iba pang pag-aalsa bago pa doon.

Ang mga kakamping ito ay galing sa ibat-ibang lahi. Kinikilala nila ang ating panaginip at tumulong para tayo makalaya. Kabilang sa kanila si Dr. Ferdinand Blumentritt ng Germany at si General Pawa, Filipino-Chinese na nagbuhat ng itak at riple noong rebolusyon.

Pero bago pa sumapit ang rebolusyon ay may ilang siglo ng pagkakaibigan at kalakalan ang China at Pilipinas. Dahil sa kalakal ay naging malapit ang dalawang lahi. Maraming Chinese ang nag baka-sakali sa Pilipinas, tumira, nagtayo ng negosyo at nagpalaki ng pamilya dito.

At nagkaroon ng isang maliit na Chinese community na lumaki sa Pilipinas ng panahon. Lumago ang kanilang negosyo at lumaki ang mga anak dito. Naging leader sila sa business community at sa civic life. Naging isa mahalagang haligi ng ekonomiya at ng bansa.

Kayo, mga Filipino-Chinese, ay modelo hindi lamang sa kapwa Chinese kungdi lalo na para sa maraming Pilipino.

Modelo ang Chinese sa inyong work ethic — sipag, tiyaga, tipid, sakripisyo at pagpaplano sa kinabukasan.

Modelo kayo sa negosyo. Hindi kayo nasisiyahan sa pagiging empleyado. Ang karaniwang hakbang ay entrepreneurship, ang pagiging self-employed sa halip ng 9-to-5-employee. Ang pagiging employer ng tao sa halip na maging kawani ng iba.

Kaya saan mang industriya — maging banking, insurance, transportation, communication, energy, media, service, manufacturing — mayroong mga lider na Chino.

Modelo kayo sa civic service. Katulad ng binondo volunteer fire brigade. Kamukha ng civic leader at crime-fighter na si Teresita Ang See.

Modelo kayo sa kultura at sining. Karangalan ng bansa na itanghal bilang isang bayani o National Artist, si Ang Kiu Kok — ang bantog na pintor — bilang isang National Artist. Ang ina’t ama ni ang Kiu Kok ay 100 percent Chinese, pero siya ay lumaki sa Pilipinas at nagpamalas ng talino sa pagpinta na kinaiinggitan ng marami.

Anupa’t tukuyin mo ang anumang larangan at mayroong modelong Chinese na makikita.

Gusto ko ring makita ang mga Chinoy na modelo sa pagkakaisa, sa pagbibigkis ng mga lahi, katulong ng pamahalaan sa pagbuo ng isang bansang Pilipinas.

Marami na tayong Pilipino na may lahing Chinese na naglilingkod sa gobyerno. Dumami pa sana ang kanilang bilang.

Sana ay magkaroon tayo ng maraming second-generation Chinese sa executive at legislative tulad ni Congressman Harry Angping ng third district ng Maynila na nahalal na muli noong may 14 para sa kanyang second term.

Samantala’y hinihimok ko ang mga Chinese-Filipino na ipagpatuloy ang inyong papel sa ating lipunan. Palakasin ang inyong negosyo at palawakin ang dami ng trabaho sa komunidad.

Tumulong sa pag-anyaya sa mga investors. Himuking dalhin ang puhunan dito.

Palawakin pang inyong community involvement. Damihan ang mga medical at dental missions. Magtatag ng dagdag na volunteer fire brigades sa maraming parte ng Pilipinas.

Ipakilala pang lalo ang inyong cultural heritage sa mga Pilipino. Hanap nating maging kasapi kayo ng lipunan pero dapat ding pagyamanin ang katutubo ninyong kultura. Maraming natututunan ang mga Filipino o katutubong Filipino sa inyo, at kayo sa amin.

Nagagalak akong ibalita sa inyo na nung makalawa ay nilagdaan ko ang Naturalization Act of 2001. Maraming ideya sa batas ang galing kay Mr. Dante Go. Malaki ang kanyang tulong sa pagbalangkas ng naturalization law. Maraming salamat, Dante.

Ang Naturalization Act ay magbibigay ng citizenship sa mga qualified at deserving aliens na gustong gawing legal ang kanilang residence dito at gustong lumahok sa lipunan. Mapabibilis ang inyong citizenship — baka marami sa mga estudyante dito ay hindi pa Filipino citizen kaya ngayon mapapabilis ang inyong citizenship sa tulong sang batas.

Ngunit ang citizenship ay hindi nabubuhay sa isang piraso lamang na papel na nagbibigay ng pagka-mamamayan. Hindi ka tunay na citizen kung ipinagmamalaki mo lamang ang inyong naturalization papers. Hindi ka citizen dahil naging legal ang pagtira mo dito.

Ang citizenship ay pinagtatrabuhan, citizenship is earned. Citizenship is not hanging up your residence papers on the wall but living day to day as a true Filipino. It is earned by fulfilling the obligations of citizenship — like voting, paying taxes, obeying the laws and — if necessary — bearing arms and fighting for your country.

I know that most aliens — including Chinese nationals — who will opt for Filipino citizenship will honor their status and reciprocate the goodness of their new country. This is as it should be. And the Philippines welcomes its new citizens. Together, the new citizens and the nation can work in unity — toward a single purpose, under one flag, the flag that we honor this morning.

Nalaman ko na ‘yung batas na ito para pumasa sa House at sa Senate na isang anyo at hindi matatagalan na dumaan pa muli sa Bicameral Conference Committee ay hindi nakalagay ng budget para patakbuhin ‘yung opisina. Kaya hahanap ako ng budget sa aking discretionary fund para puwede nang magsimula kaagad ang Solicitor General na simulain ang proseso ng mga citizenship application papers.

Kaya marami sa inyo dito ay Filipino sa kaluluwa at Filipino sa diwa, ngunit hindi pa Filipino sa papeles. Sana sa madaling panahon, ‘pag tayo’y nakapag-celebrate na ng Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day, ay makikita kong buong-buong Filipino na kayo sa puso maging sa inyong mga papeles.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA’s Speech during the Grand Salute to the Filipino Flag by the Chinese Filipino Business Club. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213610/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8644&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 100th Anniversary of the Supreme Court of the Philippines Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 100th Anniversary of the Supreme Court of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Manila Hotel, Manila, June 11, 2001]

Thank you very much, Chief Justice Davide; Mrs. Davide.

Speaker Belmonte; members of the diplomatic corps headed by his Excellency Archbishop Franco; Members of the Cabinet; Members of the Senate headed by Senator Rene Cayetano; Supreme Court Associate Justices; visiting Chief Justices and Justices; Supreme Court Officials; Judicial and Bar Council; retired Supreme Court Chief Justice Fernando and the other retired justices; Court of Appeals Justices; Sandiganbayan members headed by Justice Garchitorena; members of the Constitutional Commissions on Independent Bodies; Mayor and Mrs. Atienza; ladies and gentlemen:

It is my great honor to join in this celebration of the Philippine Supreme Court's centennial.

On this occasion, the message we proudly proclaim to all nations of the world is that good governance which is premised on justice and the rule of law is strong in the Philippines, defended by a judiciary that is fiercely independent by any international standard.

We proudly proclaim, as the bible's reading said today, that the kingdom of heaven is at hand, that god rules the Philippines, because we have a centennial supreme court that enjoys the great respect of our people because of its integrity.

Democracy cannot flourish without a free and credible judiciary. The Supreme Court is an essential pillar of Philippine democracy.

Apart from being the bastion of justice, the interpreter of the law, the official guardian of civil and human rights, and oftentimes, the unofficial government watchdog, the bench, especially the high court, is our people's conscience, the guarantor of its peace of mind, and our people's psychological comfort zone. The Supreme Court is the strongest judicial bulwark in our system. As long as the highest tribunal has the respect of the people, democracy will be safe in our country.

Chief Justice Davide was named the Filipino of the year 2000. His role in the impeachment trial and in the call for me to take my oath of office as president last January 20th and the role of the supreme court justices on three 13-0 votes regarding my legitimacy — the legitimacy of my president — have again thrust the supreme court into the highest consciousness of the people, and in so doing, the supreme court has underscored the ascendancy of the rule of law in our country.

The high standing of the Supreme Court in the hearts and minds of the Filipino today underscores our historical record as Asia's oldest democracy with the longest legal tradition. From Spanish law and American jurisprudence, we have now evolved our own legal culture with a wealth of precedents. The Supreme Court's ruling on the incapacity of the former to perform the functions of the presidency last January was one of its many landmarks over its hundred years of existence. And as it celebrates its centenary, the Supreme Court now has an auspicious opportunity for building the future of our judiciary. The judicial reform program instituted by the chief justice is bearing fruit and is appreciated by our people.

For instance, the expanded use of mediation which I helped launch last march as we saw in the video is a fitting tribute to the centennial celebration of the Supreme Court. It is an official recognition of mediation as a modern form of conflict resolution engendered by the reemergence of democracies. And let me say that what we have seen tonight, the multi-visual, multi-media presentation and the way that the whole program has been conducted tonight is but an illustration that indeed, the Supreme Court is well on its way to e-justice — electronic justice, paperless justice — bringing the Philippine Supreme Court right into the third millennium.

Of the three branches of government, the judiciary is the one that provides constancy of direction. Members of congress have to face the judgment of their constituents every three years. Holders of the highest posts in the national and local levels of the executive branch must also present themselves to the verdict of the people through the ballot.

In contrast, the members of the judiciary are appointed almost for life. Thus, they reinforce the Filipino sense of continuity especially during changes of administration. Because its members are appointed for almost for life and are more carefully chosen, the judiciary reinforces, indeed, the Filipino people's sense of continuity because it is important that whenever we have a change of administration we have something that is continuing. We have the civil service but we also have the judiciary. In more ways than one, like the diplomatic corps and the military, it is a model of professional civil service. Its autonomy helps foster an internal culture of reward for excellence and penalty for mediocrity. For this reason, the members of the judiciary must indeed be carefully chosen.

When on January 20th of this year, I took the option provided by Chief Justice Davide to take my oath of office as president at noon of that day, I declared among my core beliefs that:

“We must improve moral standards in government and society in order to provide a strong foundation for good governance.”

Improving moral standards in government and society mainly involves the judiciary. This is so because it is the judiciary which interprets what is right or wrong and what is lawful and what is not. Thus, it is essential that the process of selection of the members of judiciary be in itself a model of high standards. It is essential that the screening process by the judicial and bar council be one of strict adherence to high moral standards, especially because the process is not as public as the screening process provided for Cabinet members, senior diplomats and ranking military officers in the commission on appointments.

I wish to quote Chief Justice Davide's words in the Davide watch. And he said: “members of the judiciary and court personnel must unerringly adhere to the constitutional precept that public office is public trust and he continues, dishonesty, immorality, incompetence, inefficiency and any form of unbecoming conduct are impermissible. Indeed, wonderful words to hear from the Filipino of the year 2000.

The same requirements of integrity and honesty should be applied to all other public servants. In the executive branch, I have consistently campaigned for the observance of the highest standards of integrity and morality, especially among my Cabinet members, for they must lead by example.

My first administrative order prohibits government agencies from entering into any business contracts with my relatives and those of my husband. I have also banned the use of luxury vehicles by government officials and ordered their immediate disposal through public bidding. These measures will not necessarily eliminate graft and corruption at once but they are essential to set the tone for integrity and a modest lifestyle which are important ingredients of honest and effective governance.

Under the executive order number 12, I have also created a presidential anti-graft commission, a stronger one than its predecessor body. This commission is designed to strengthen our institutionalized measures against graft and corruption. The body is composed of a chairman with the rank and privileges of a presidential assistant ii and two commissioners with the rank and privileges of presidential assistant I.

The commission is empowered to investigate or hear cases against all presidential appointees occupying starting from the positions of assistant regional director up to highest rank of Cabinet member. It has the power to administer oaths and issue subpoenas and it can also call upon and secure the assistance of any office, committee, bureau, agency or department in the executive branch including government-owned and controlled corporations. It can conduct studies on its own and in cooperation with other government agencies or NGOs, on new measures to prevent and minimize the opportunities for graft and corruption at all levels of the bureaucracy. And to ensure its administrative efficiency, it is exempted from the prohibition against hiring of new personnel as prescribed in administrative order number 100.

The presidential anti-graft commission will put more teeth in our campaign against crooks and thieves in government.

In close partnership with other government agencies and non-government organizations, it can, and it will make the goal of good governance hopefully, a clear reality for our people.

I am also developing the concept of a governance advisory council to be composed of respected leaders from the private sector. I view this body as a key strategy for demonstrating that our country is transparent in governance and that it does not and will not tolerate corrupt practices.

The council will be a body of private sector industry statesmen and women appointed by the president for a fixed term. It will be advisory to the president on a range of governance issues. It would use its stature to reform corporate and government behavior using such instruments as codes of conducts, awards programs and policy round tables. It would seek system-wide solutions to the governance and corruption issues it is tasked with advising the president on.

Its members will be private and will receive no emoluments from government. It will be advisory to the president. Its secretariat will be funded privately.

Under the terms of reference of the council, governance shall be defined as the manner in which power is exercised in the management of a country's resources for development and in an organization's resources for growth and profitability.

The holy bible, which states in proverbs 21:3: "to do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice. Justice is the primary service delivered by the judiciary.

I am strengthening the anti-graft commission and forming the governance council because I am inspired by the leadership of the Supreme Court and its drive towards integrity.

There can be no nobler initiative than to ensure that all the courts are able to deliver justice efficiently, effectively and quickly. Justice is inseparable and indispensable to good governance and democracy.

Hopefully, the presence of an anti-graft commission and an advisory commission on governance will demonstrate the seriousness in which my administration takes good governance to heart because that is the least i can do with the Supreme Court rulings on the legitimacy of this government.

The scope and coverage of the commission will be the promotion of corporate governance within the private sector and industry, facilitation of reform among regulatory agencies, and the projection of a strong anti-corrupt practice of this government through the development of a strong code of ethics for organizations and individuals of all types.

Programs that may be developed and promoted by the council would include:

- 1) the promulgation of a Philippine code of corporate governance; 2) the development of a Philippine corporate governance awards program; 3) the promulgation of a code of ethics to guide anti-corruption practices; 4) a study of tax evasion and reforms in the area of tax process simplification; and, 5) a study of how to strengthen the judicial system in dealing with graft and corruption.

I commit the full support of the executive branch to the judiciary's worthy endeavors, especially the Supreme Court. We in the three branches of government have common aspirations, and our nation and people can only benefit from whatever cooperation we can extend to each other in the course of providing public service of the highest quality.

I proudly reaffirm this administration's commitment to justice and the rule of law. Nothing less than democracy itself has been on trial in this country, and I submit that it has survived stronger than ever, thanks in no small measure to the integrity and the probity of such men as Chief Justice Hilario Davide.

Tomorrow, we celebrate our independence day. It is providential that the Supreme Court's founding anniversary is so close to our country's commemoration of independence. An enduring judiciary, bound by the rule of law and not of men, is required of a truly independent and democratic nation. A high court with the highest integrity and capability guards not only the nation's sense of justice but also its freedom and liberty. I am heartened that the centennial Supreme Court is one that enjoys a reputation of the highest integrity and capability.

I celebrate with the Filipino people the centennial of one of the proudest judicial traditions in Asia. It is a tradition that produced some of our noblest statesmen.

In behalf of the Filipino people, I thank the Supreme Court for standing by the side of freedom, constitutional democracy and good governance in the finest traditions of Chief Justices Cayetano Arellano, Jose Abad Santos, Jose Laurel and Justice Claro Recto. I am one with the Filipino people in felicitating the members of the Supreme Court on its glorious centenary.

Mabuhay ang ating Korte Suprema! Mabuhay ang katarungan sa Pilipinas! Mabuhay ang sambayanang Pilipino! At bayan magkaisa tayo sa paggalang sa ating Korte Suprema, sa ating judiciary.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 100th Anniversary of the Supreme Court of the Philippines. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213624/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8643&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Toast for Independence Day Vin D'Honneur

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Toast for Independence Day Vin D'Honneur

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, June 12, 2001]

Thank you very much.

Her Excellency, former President Corazon Aquino; the Vice President and Secretary of Foreign Affairs Teofisto Guingona; Chief Justice Davide; his Excellency Archbishop Antonio Franco; your Excellencies of the Diplomatic Corps; heads of specialized agencies of the United Nations and other international organizations; members of congress; members of the cabinet; other government officials; the armed forces chief of staff and the major service commanders; ladies and gentlemen:

We celebrate today the 103rd Anniversary of Philippine Independence amidst great changes taking place in the state of affairs among and within nations.

The economic fulcrum has shifted to North America, Europe is largely at peace with itself — a happy change after being the center of two world wars — the middle east continues to face and present challenges, Latin America seeks progress through closer cooperation among its member states, democracy is encouragingly taking hold in areas in Sub-Saharan Africa, and Asia, the region where the Philippines belongs, strives for economic recovery even as new powers arise in the region.

There is a lesson to be learned as we examine the success and failure of nations at nation-building and this is that nations with a free and united people, and energized by effective governance, have the best chance of survival even under an adverse international situation.

For a combination of freedom and unity among a people, who are pulling together in the same direction to the cadence of a leader's call, creates a powerful, if not inexorable, force for creativity, productivity and achievement.

Therefore, as my five-month old administration takes on the task of reviving our economy and addresses the inherited problems of insurgency and crime, we are also laying the foundation for the long-term change of the Philippines into a nation of inner strength and resolve.

Unity is the theme of this year's independence day celebrations. This is also the basic theme that underlies my program of governance. Unity among our people must go hand-in-hand with the democracy we enjoy if our nation is to move forward.

Thus, we are embarked on a program of strengthening the moral fiber of Philippine society through leadership by example and the inculcation in our people, particularly the youth, of a deep sense of nationhood as well as the values of integrity, hard work and perseverance.

Thus, we are also embarked on programs to address poverty and the lack of education among many of our people so that no sector of society will feel alienated or separate from the rest.

Thus, we are also extending our hand of peace and reconciliation to those who have taken up arms against the government because of their political or ideological beliefs.

I am also happy to note the willingness of both the administration and opposition members of the Philippine congress, as well as our local officials, to work together for the nation's good, a sure sign that the political healing process has started.

I am also gratified to witness the collective resolve to deal with the threats to law and order which equally lessen us all.

Right now, we cannot confirm the report which was made over a radio station in Mindanao about the supposed killing of a hostage. The military has alerted its intelligence network in Mindanao to get a verification of the Abu Sayaff's claim that they have beheaded Mr. Guillermo Sobero.

If the Abu Sayaff's claim is accurate, it only emphasizes the fact that it is a merciless, ruthless group that has no qualms at all in murdering an innocent person for the sake of ransom money.

We condemn in the strongest possible terms this reported beheading of Mr. Sobero. To murder and even behead a helpless person is as ruthless as it is cowardly.

The reported murder of Mr. Sobero only strengthens our resolve to decimate once and for all this cold-blooded bandit group.

Sabaya's statements that the beheading of Sobero is a "gift" to our government on the occasion of our independence celebration, that our troops should fast look for the headless body before it is eaten by dogs, that they did the dastardly act to prove they are not "kids" making empty threats underline the ghouliness and viciousness of the Abu Sayaff.

They emphasize the depths of cruelty which this group is capable of. It shows that this terrorist group has trampled and will trample on all the values of humanity. Sabaya has even trampled on Islam, when he threatened to behead even the Ulama, or religious leaders, for appealing to him to release his victims.

We acceded yesterday to their request that a Malaysian citizen participate in the talks with them, after they threatened to kill an American hostage if we did not do so. After we made the announcement, the terrorist leader Sabaya even announced over radio that they would no longer push through with their threat to kill a hostage.

With his claim he has beheaded Mr. Sobero, Sabaya does not even honor his own word.

Nonetheless, I am confident that as a united people, we will surmount our difficulties and achieve the progress we so desire through our own efforts and in active cooperation with all your governments and peoples.

On this note, Excellencies, allow me to offer a toast to the understanding and friendship among our peoples and to the health and success of the heads of state of your respective countries.

Mabuhay!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Toast for Independence Day Vin D'Honneur. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213559/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8637&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 103rd Philippine Independence Day celebration of the Filipino-Chinese Community

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa pagdiriwang ng ika-103 na anibersaryo ng Araw ng Kalayaan

[Ipinahayag sa Quirino Grandstand, Luneta, ika 12 ng Hunyo, 2001]

Maraming salamat Secretary Richard Gordon.

Ang aking kabiyak, si Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo; ang akin namang kabalikat sa pagpatakbo ng pamahalaan, si Vice President Teofisto Guingona, kasama na rin yung ibang mga kasapi ng gabinete; his Excellency Antonio Franco and the other members of the Diplomatic Corps; ating mga sundalo at mga pulis; mga kasapi ng senado; mga kasapi ng kamara; napakaraming narito, itong araw na ito — yung ating mga justices kasama na rin yung mga nagbibisita mga justice galing sa ibang bansa; mga opisyal ng pamahalaan; mga bisita; kayo, aking mga minamahal na kababayan:

Happy Independence Day sa inyong lahat.

Sa araw na ito ay ginugunita natin ang pagka-proklama ng kalayaan ng bayang Pilipinas.

Sa araw na ito ay tumatanaw tayo sa nakaraan.

Isandaan at tatlong taon na ang nakalipas mula noong nag-proklama sa Kawit, Cavite ang ating kasarinlan; at kung saan ay winagayway ang ating bandila, at tinugtog ang ating pambansang awit, bilang pagsilang ng isang bansang may karapatang maging malaya.

Bilang inyong pangulo, isang malaking karangalan para sa akin na batiin kayong lahat sa pagdiriwang ng 103rd na anibersaryo ng kalayaan ng ating bansa.

Muli pong mapagmalaki ng bawat Pilipino ang naging tagumpay kamakailan lamang ng demokrasya sa ating bansa.

Ang araw ng kalayaan itong taong ito ay dapat higit na makabuluhan dahil dito sa mga panibagong tagumpay ng ating kasaysayan. Ang pagpanalo ng taong-bayan sa EDSA dos. Ang nabigong pagsisikap ng mga ambisyosong puwersa sa pagsamantala sa madla, at ang ating halalang nasyonal at lokal noong Mayo katorse — lahat nito ay muling pinapatibay ang determinasyon ng Pilipino na manirahang malaya, demokratiko, at may dignidad sa bansa.

Sa araw na ito ay ginugunita natin ang nakaraan upang muling sariwain ang kagitingan ng lahing Pilipino. At sa pamamagitan ng alaalang ito ay manumbalik sa atin ang lakas ng pagkakaisa at determinasyong magtagumpay at manguna sa anumang hamon ating haharapin sa mga darating pang panahon.

Sa lugar na ito, kung saan iginarote sina Padre Gomez, Burgos at Zamora; kung saan pinaslang ang ating pambansang bayani na si Jose Rizal; kung saan pinatay ng mga kastila ang maraming miyembro ng katipunan, tayo'y pinapaalala na ang ating kalayaan by pinagbuwisan ng buhay ng ating mga bayani.

Dito sa Luneta, limampu't-limang taon nang nakaraan, ay itinaas muli ang bandila ng Pilipinas at ibinaba ang bandila ng Amerika at tayo'y naging isang malayang republika muli.

Dito rin sa Luneta ay prinoklama ng aking ama ang petsang ito bilang araw ng kasarinlan.

Habang nagdiriwang tayo nitong napaka-espesyal na pangyayari, alalahanin natin hindi lamang ang ating mga panibagong tagumpay kundi na rin ang mga hrap at pakikibaka ng ating mga ninuno upang gawin ang paraan para sa kalayaan ng Pilipinas. Hayaan ang kanilang dakilang sakripisyo maging inspirasyon natin habang tayo ay sumisikap ngayon na palakasin ang ating minamahal na republika bilang isang makapangyarihang ekonomiya at isang buhay ng dignidad at kapayapaan para sa bawat Pilipino. Hayaan natin ang mga aral ng nakaraan, kasama ng siglo ng kasalukuyan na magbigay sa atin ng sipag at inspirasyon na kailangan natin upang makamit natin ang ating bahagi ng responsibilidad bilang Pilipino sa siglo beinte-uno. Noon, nagkaisa tayo ng pagmamahal sa mga simbolo ng kasarinlan at kalayaan na ipinakita at narinig sa Kawit, Cavite: ang ating bandila, ang ating pambansang awit, ang ating mithiin na hindi na muling mapailalim ang ating tinubuang lupa sa anumang banyagang bansa.

Sa ating pagkakaisa noong mga nakaraang panahon, napakita ng Pilipinas na kaya niyang manguna sa sandaigdigan.

Ang pagdeklara ni heneral aguinaldo ng ating kasarinlan ang simula ng pagkatatag ng unang republika sa buong asya. Ito rin ang unang matagumpay na rebolusyon laban sa kolonyalismo sa buong kontinente. Ang ating republika at tagumpay laban sa kolonyalismo ang naging inspirasyon o simula ng pagnanais makawala ng iba nating karatig-bansa sa pananakop ng mga dayuhan.

Ang pambihirang pagkakaisa ng Sambayanang Pilipino sa edsa noong 1986 naman na People Power Revolution ay hindi lamang hinangaan sa buong mundo, ito rin ang nagsilbing inspirasyon upang matagumpay na makamit ng ibang bansa ang maging malaya at itanghal ang demokrasya sa mapayapang paraan.

Tunay nang nanguna ang ating bansa. Muli ay nagkaisa tayo sa Edsa dos upang mapalaya ang sambayanan mula sa malaganap na katiwalian. At nang ako ay naluklok bilang bagong pangulo, hiniling ko na isantabi na natin ang hidwaan at 'di pagkakaunawaan. Sama-sama tayo muling itayo ang ating pagiging isang bansa.

Sa pagkakataong ito ay inuulit ko ang panawagan sa lahat ng ating mga kababayan na muli tayong magkaisa. Ating higpitan ang pagkakapit-bisig upang malunasan ang kahirapan at manguna tayong muli sa mga demokratikong diwa at gawa sa ating rehiyon.

Mahirap ang ating pagsisikap. May lumabas na balita na ang American hostage na si Ginoong Guillermo Sobero ay pinugutan na ng ulo ng Abu Sayyaf bilang regalo sa akin sa araw ng ating kalayaan.

Hindi pa namin nakukumpirma hanggang ngayon iyung report sa isang radio station sa Mindanao. Ginagawa ng armed forces ang lahat para makumpirma ang alegasyon ng mga tulisan.

Nagdarasal ako na sana ay walang katotohanan ang balitang ito. Umaasa pa rin ako na mangibabaw ang takot ng mga miyembro ng Abu Sayyaf sa panginoon.

Magkaganon man, ito'y nagpapatotoo lamang sa pagiging berdugo at mamamatay tao ang mga Abu Sayyaf na walang awa at walang patawad sa buhay ng tao para lamang makakuha ng salapi. Lumalabas na salapi ang kanilang panginoon.

Ang galit ng taong-bayan ay umaapaw na. Ang ginagawang pandurukot ng mga Abu Sayyaf sa mga inosenteng civilian ay labag sa batas ng kristiyanismo at ng Islam.

Huwag sanang akalain ng mga bandido na lumalambot ang pamahalaan.

Minamahal kong kapwa Pilipino, ang ating pakikibaka para sa kapayapaan, katahimikan at kalayaan ay hindi lamang dapat maiwan sa isang kabanata ng ating kasaysayan. Ito ay dapat magpatuloy ngayon at araw-araw sa ating mga buhay hanggang makaya natin maligtas ang lahat ng Pilipino mula sa parusa ng labanan, pansamantala at kahirapan.

Wala pong katapusan ang ating pagsisikap tungo sa tunay na kapayapaan at kalayaan hanggang ang bawat Pilipino – lalung-lalo na ang maliliit at maralita — ay nabubuhay na mapayapa, marangal at maunlad.

Ito po ang natatanging mithiing inaasahan kong panggagalingan ng pagkakaisa nating lahat ngayon at sa harap ng anumang hamon ng panahon.

Itong araw na ito, sa ating pagdiriwang ng 103rd na anibersaryo ng kalayaan ng Pilipinas, nananawagan ako sa lahat ng Pilipino sa lahat ng lugar na tumulong sa pagtayo muli ng ating bansa tungo sa higit na kapayapaan, kaunlaran at prosperidad.

Ang araw na ito ang unang araw ng kalayaan sa Pilipinas sa bagong siglo at bagong milenyo. Ito rin ang unang araw ng kalayaan sa ilalim ng aking administrasyon. Sana ay magkaisa na ang buong bayan para makipagsabayan tayo.

Sa pagkakaisa ng layunin ng pamahalaan at taong-bayan, sa wakas ay sana makamit ng ating inang bayang Pilipinas ang kaginhawaan at kasiglahan na matagal na nitong pinapangarap.

Mga kababayan ko, sa gitna ng mga simbolo ng ating kasarinlan at kalayaan, humihingi ako ng inyong tulong at tulong ng poong maykapal. Samahan ninyo ako, magkapit-bisig tayong lahat upang ibalik ang kapayapaan at katahimikan sa ating kapuluan. Magkaisa tayo upang ganap na labanan ang kahirapan sa ating bansa. Magtulong-tulungan tayo upang mabilis na isulong ang ating ekonomiya at magdulot ito ng higit na kapakinabangan sa lahat ng ating mga kababayan.

Minamahal kong kapwa Pilipino, sa araw ng ating kasarinlan, mabuhay tayong lahat, mabuhay ang republika ng Pilipinas! Maligayang araw ng kalayaan sa inyong lahat! At bayan, tayo ay magkaisa!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 103rd Independence Day Celebration. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213527/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8640&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Message of President Arroyo on the inauguration of the Kuala Lumpur Central Railway and LRT Station

Message
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
On the inauguration of the Kuala Lumpur Central Railway and LRT Station

[Delivered at the Office of the President, Malacañang, June 13, 2001]

Congratulations to his Excellency Dato Seri Dr. Mahathir bin Mohamad and the people of Malaysia for the successful opening of the Kuala Lumpur central railway and LRT station or KL Sentral.

The construction of the central railway and LRT station is a major technological breakthrough in this era of global economy. The development of KL Sentral and its surrounding area as a new high technology business and commercial district will definitely bolster local and foreign tourism and investments in Malaysia.

We welcome the ingenious ‘city-within-city’ development concept of KL Sentral. This world-class undertaking serves as a model in information technology development for the Philippines and other countries in Southeast Asia.

The promotion and development of the information and communications technology (ICT) sector in the Philippines is among the priorities of my administration. With the inauguration of KL Sentral, I look forward to promoting cooperation between our two countries in the field of ICT.

Again, congratulations and more power to KL Sentral.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA’s Message on the Inauguration of the Kuala Lumpur Central Railway and LRT Station. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213513/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8632&Itemid=38

Message of President Arroyo

Message of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Main Living Room, Malacañang, June 21, 2001]

Mga kababayan, kinausap ko ang pamilyang Cheng sa Malakanyang para sabihin sa kanila na ako'y nalulungkot sa mga maling paratang na kanilang tinanggap tungkol sa pagkakidnap kay Mary Grace. Ipinaliwanag ko rin sa kanila ang dahilan kung bakit ko ibinunyag ang report tungkol sa balak ng ilang tao na yanigin ang aking pamahalaan. At ako'y nagpaumanhin sa pamilyang Cheng.

There are two reasons why I revealed this report. First, there is a discernible pattern in these crimes even in text messages about crimes that did not happen. They seem to have been planned and executed for maximum media effect. The obvious reason is to destabilize the government.

Second, I want to be transparent. The public, to my mind, has a right to know all information that affects the stability of the country. My aim is to assure them that i know what is happening and that the concerned government agencies are taking the appropriate steps. Investigation is on-going.

I did not name anyone. While the political opposition has the right to deny complicity, it is not true that i am looking for scapegoats.

Let me assure the country that the government is in full control. No destabilization plot will succeed.

Maraming salamat po.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Message. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213505/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8628&Itemid=38

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the opening ceremonies of the League of Corporate Foundations

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the opening ceremonies of the League of Corporate Foundations

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, July 2, 2001]

Thank you very much Vicky, founding president of the League of Corporate Foundations and, now, hopefully as head of the presidential management staff, I hope you feel even more empowered to help the poor than when you were in the NGO world.

Cecille Alcantara and the other officials of the League; chief executives of the Philippine's leading corporations; ladies and gentlemen:

Let me begin by welcoming you all to Malacañang and greeting the members of the League of Corporate Foundations on the occasion of the observance of the second corporate social responsibility week.

This is only the second time that we are marking this event. But I believe this year's celebration is especially significant because the times demand that we together send the message loud and clear that Philippine business is unequivocally committed to corporate social responsibility.

The philosophy behind corporate citizenship is the belief that the people, our people are more than consumers, more than laborers, more than hired help. Corporate citizenship acknowledges that we all belong to one society and that we are all responsible for the well being of one another, beyond business and even beyond politics. It recognizes the special role of institutions such as business corporations and being responsible for the welfare of our people beyond their role as consumers and employees.

Aside from celebrating the second annual corporate social responsibility week, I also congratulate you for choosing the theme of volunteerism.

The United Nations general assembly, in its 52nd session on November 20th 1997, proclaimed this year, year 2001 as the international year of volunteers. So it is so appropriate that this year's theme should be volunteerism.

The main objectives of the year of volunteerists are the recognition, promotion, facilitation and networking of volunteer contributions worldwide. As expressed by the U.N. general assembly, "the choice of the first year of the new millennium is not coincidental. It represents an eloquent message as to the paramount importance of volunteer contributions to the welfare and progress of all nations and through their role in helping address problems of global concern in the future."

Your theme of "putting volunteerism into action" appropriately guides us in what we have to do to translate this commitment to reality.

The traumatic events of the last 12 months have highlighted the enormous tasks and challenges that lie before us. I hardly need to recite the figures and indices of poverty in our society to remind us of what we are facing. And you, because you are foundations, you know how your resources are being stretched to the limit by the growing demands for programs and services as poverty continues to encroach on our communities and as the poor increasingly find the voice with which to vent their frustrations against their poverty.

When I became president last January, many of you who are here today were also there at EDSA. And many of you heard me say that we should win the battle against poverty within a decade.

This decade brings in the 21st century, truly a new economy where relentless forces such as capital market flows and advances in information technology create both peril and opportunity.

In this setting, our government's blueprint for fighting poverty has four components.

First, to tap the opportunities we need an economic philosophy of transparency and free enterprise. For these are the catalysts that nurture the entrepreneurial spirit to be globally competitive.

Second, to extend the opportunities to our rural countryside, we must create a modernized and socially equitable agricultural sector.

Third, to address the perils, we must give a social bias to balance our economic development, and;

Fourth, to ensure that our gains are not dissipated through corruption, we must improve our moral standards.

Corporate social responsibility is the business embodiment of the third aspect of our blueprint, the social bias to balance our economic development.

On the part of government, the social bias to balance our economic development is embodied in safety nets for sectors affected by globalization, safeguards for our environment, and a national anti-poverty strategy which consist of five core strategic thrusts: asset reform or redistribution of physical assets to the poor, provision of financial and institutional requirements of human development services, provision of security and protection from violence of the basic sectors, increasing employment and livelihood opportunities for the poor, and strengthening of the capacity of organized groups to participate in social life.

I would especially like to seek your support for the thrust of increasing employment opportunities for the poor, not only in the work of your corporations but also in the work of your corporate foundations, particularly for out-of-school, out-of-work urban poor youth in Metro Manila. I want to put together a visible outreach program for this special sub sector under the operational implementation of the department of the interior and local governments and the Philippine national police.

This program will consist of providing emergency employment for the out-of-work, out-of-school urban youth in Metro Manila. Now, their number is estimated to be about 300,000. We are talking here about the kanto-boy-types who, if we cannot provide them with emergency employment, will always be available as cannon fodder for political adventurists.

And so even as we work on structural reforms through the four components in the blueprint to fight poverty, and give them lasting employment opportunities, someday, hopefully in the near future, as we are working on structural reforms which take some time we need this instant-gratification-type of emergency employment to pacify a social volcano.

We need to organize these out-of-work, out-of-school urban youth of Metro Manila into brotherhoods or gangs, not the sputnik gang type, who get-together to do drugs and to rape and to hold-up and to kidnap, but rather work gangs to repair the leaking roofs or broken railings of their community's tenement houses, or clean the drainage canals of their slum neighborhood, or act as sentry in the school premises of the community public schools.

This is similar to the emergency employment program of my father, the late president Diosdado Macapagal and also the Tennessee Valley Authority of Franklin Delano Roosevelt during the great depression. The difference is that, we are not doing this for the whole country, we are doing this for a very particular sub-sector of our society — the out-of-school, out-of-work, urban poor youth of Metro Manila.

In closing, let me once more commend the League of Corporate Foundations for consistently leading the business sector in addressing your social responsibilities. Vicky told me that you were barely ten when this was founded about ten years ago, and now you're 50, you have grown about five-fold.

And while we have been through some very trying times, your commitment to maintain, if not enhance the level of your exposure in various social development programs, provides our government with the flexibility it needs to focus its resources on other equally urgent national priorities, or provides our government the flexibility it needs even with our own priorities because you are there to support us.

Your continued support for our common agenda of winning the battle against poverty will give our people hope, strength, and faith in themselves. If our people see that other Filipinos care for them, then they will realize their own worth, and appreciate their own possibilities. In the process, they will be empowered. We build, in the process, a truly just and cohesive society, in whose progress all of us have a vital stake.

I can only hope that your good example, the members of the League of Corporate Foundations, will inspire other sectors of our national community to likewise make meaningful contributions to advance our nation building efforts.

My fervent wish is that you will continue to be actively involved in corporate social responsibility work, and tailor that work to partner with the government in our special outreach programs.

Congratulations and good wishes on all your activities. And may the League of Corporate Foundations grow by leaps and bounds even more as we go deep into the 21st century.

Congratulations! And thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Opening Ceremonies of the League of Corporate Foundations. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213441/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8671&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 54th anniversary of the Philippine Air Force (PAF)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 54th anniversary of the Philippine Air Force (PAF)

[Delivered at the 250th Presidential Air Wing Hangar, Villamor Air Base, July 2, 2001]

Thank you very much Secretary Reyes.

General Villanueva; General Defensor and the other officers of the Philippine Air Force, General Calimlim, the AFP major service commanders; the members of the diplomatic community; the former Air Force commanders and their ladies; the ladies of the Defense and of the Armed Forces of the Philippines; distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen.

I am happy to be back here at Villamor Air Base, the seat of our country's air power and home of our finest airmen and airwomen. Actually, I in this grounds, this very grounds almost every week of my presidency because this is where I take-off to wherever I must go, whenever it will take a flight either a fixed-wing flight or a helicopter flight.

And so, I am happy to be here again for the umpteenth time, countless times. I greet you all a very happy and meaningful 54th anniversary.

I also warmly congratulate the individual and unit recipients of this year's PAF awards headed by General 'Santi' Santillan. And I am happy to say, to note that captain Jaji who received a gold cross medal today received his 13th gold cross medal. So this is a record in the Philippine Air Force.

Aside from my almost weekly or even twice weekly trips to this particular airfield where we are having our ceremonies, I visited the Philippine Air Force in Villamor shortly before I became president. And I addressed the men and women of the Air Force then. Hence, I need not recant my gratitude for your role in EDSA Dos.

Since EDSA dos, we experienced new challenges to constituted authority, our freedom, our national direction, our unity as a people, our collective morality and the way we nurture our fragile peace. These have been continuously facing challenges. The failed siege of Malacañang and the revival of the Abu Sayyaf scourge – have especially been gripping concerns that called for PAF heroism.

Our nation saw the power of restraint and resolve during the times surrounding may 1st, the force of freedom was also seen, and, let us not forget, the divine power and the power of prayer. Through all these, we recognize the force of our air power, a force that has delineated the PAF's role as force multiplier and at the same time as peace-giver.

Last year, the PAF was a key player in five major offensives that led to our victory against the secessionists. Your pilots completed 1,800 missions in enemy-held areas, destroying 70 percent of enemy camps without sustaining damage to our aircraft. I was vice president, then, and I remember being able to greet your pilots in Cagayan de Oro airport just after their first day of their successful operation in Abubakar. Their spirits were so high, and on my part I was so proud of them. And I'm even more proud of you now as Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Forces and the Philippine Air Force.

You also proved your mettle at Mendiola, where four trucks and a fire truck under your 710th special operations wing augmented by other units helped contain the May 1st rioters. Please accept once again the profuse thanks of a grateful president.

When I became president with your valuable support on January 20th with your commanding general, among the generals who were there to watch my oath taking, I said that we must be bold in our national ambition and seek to win the battle against poverty also means that within the decade. Our fight against poverty also means that within the decade we should have no more impoverished soldiers. Towards this end, I have asked Secretary Angelo Reyes to draft a bill for me which I shall submit to congress as an administration measure setting the pay of soldiers as equivalent to that of teachers.

I trust that the bill I signed into law last march granting exceptions, tax exemptions on benefits and allowances of the Armed Forces, I trust that that is now being implemented.

But I am sad that some elements have sensationalized the plight of the families of 224 active military personnel whose homes are within the area of a national shrine, specifically the Libingan ng mga Bayani. I have a special attachment to the Libingan ng mga Bayani. My parents are buried there. My mother rehabilitated it as part of her civic work as first lady when my father was president. But even then, even when my father was president, he already set aside a part of Libingan ng mga Bayani to serve as home lots for soldiers' families. His proclamation was set aside by his successor. And therefore, I have re-issued the proclamation, and I thank Secretary Reyes for volunteering to withdraw a notice of eviction issued earlier in order to give way for the proclamation. So indeed, we can carve out a portion of the Libingan ng mga Bayani as not being part of the national shrine. Because what is more important is the well-being of our living soldiers even as we pay homage to those who have died, the soldiers who have died, including the departed Commanders-in-Chief like my father who is buried in Libingan ng mga Bayani. I know that my father in his grave will be honored to have soldiers being his next doors neighbors, living soldiers not only the dead soldiers.

This proclamation will give the chance for our landless soldiers living in the designated area to buy the land and therefore, be squatters no more.

I am also taking this opportunity to renew my commitment to the modernization of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. The first year of modernization implementation requires a budget of 10 billion pesos. Last year a SARO was released amounting to 5.4 billion pesos. Earlier when I spoke before the Armed Forces, I said that when you have spent one-third of this 5.4 billion, I would replenish it. But now I realize that this 5.4 billion cannot be spent until the end of the year because it is only the end of the year when the bidding process will be over.

And therefore, I have to revise my commitment. Now, I have given instructions to make the whole 10 billion pesos available this year. I instructed the department of budget and management that it should convert the 5.4 billion pesos SARO into an actual release to the modernization trust fund. I also instructed the Secretary of Finance to help the Department of National Defense find the balance of 4.6 billion pesos to make a total of 10 billion pesos for the year 2001 as available for modernization. Secretary Camacho is now working with Secretary Reyes regarding this and probably the means of making this available will be primarily through a lease package. Indeed, I welcome innovative approaches to get the AFP and the PAF modernization program going.

I am aware that the Philippine Air Force direly needs more aircrafts. I wanted to transfer one of my helicopters to the Philippine Air Force for your use, but given that, we haven't still identified who can afford to pay for the maintenance and given that, I have my weekly travel needs, what we now have is a time-sharing arrangement between the presidential wing and the rest of the Air Force.

Right now we have only one operational c-130. This has been your workhorse to meet your multifarious airlift missions. It carries troops and supplies to and from various battlefronts. And now, the only c-130 we have must also deliver relief goods to the victims of the Mayon eruption.

With only one c-130 in operation, still the Philippine Air Force has proudly achieved so much, way beyond the endurance of men and machines. What more if you have more C-130's?

Seeing the acute shortage of our airlift capacity, our government has made representations with our friends in the United States. And the U.S., too, our friends in the U.S. too, are aware of this need and how much you have done with so little.

I am happy therefore, to announce that our U.S. friends have responded favorably. The transfer on a grant basis of one more c-130 is now going through final processing by the U.S. congress and we are assured of approval and you can expect to have another C-130 soon, courtesy of our friends in the United States.

I am also happy to announce that we appealed to the United States to accelerate the delivery also on a grant basis of refurbished Huey helicopters that you requested from them last year. Again, they have favorably responded and promised to deliver 5 helicopters in the next few months.

I have also agreed in principle to the acquisition of air sensor surveillance capacity. The unfortunate hostage taking at Dos Palmas highlighted the need for sensor capability. Just like the officers and men of the PAF, I would like to see our aerial surveillance capability in place to ward off not just hostage-takers but also illegal fishers, smugglers and foreign poachers.

I know these needs are urgent, and I know we have to balance them with other similarly urgent concerns that demand attention and expenditure of our scarce resources. For instance, just as the law says that the first year of Armed Forces modernization should allocate 10 billion pesos for that. The law also says, that the first year of agricultural modernization should allocate 20 billion pesos for that. And so therefore, there indeed are competing uses for our scarce budgetary resources. To contribute further to the PAF modernization program, I have also instructed the Secretary of Defense to sell my presidential plane and use the proceeds for Philippine Air Force modernization.

On this therefore, your anniversary, I ask you once again to carry on with your dedication, professionalism and inspiring courage. And be assured that you have the full support of the second Macapagal who is Commander-in-chief of the Republic of the Philippines.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 54th Anniversary of the Philippine Air Force (PAF). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213454/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8672&Itemid=38

Message of President Arroyo for Partners: Mel & Jay 5th Anniversary Celebration [Filipino]

Mensahe
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa pagdiriwang ng ika-5 anibersaryo ng Partners: Mel & Jay

[Ipinahayag noong ika 3 ng Hulyo, 2001]

Isa pong mainit na pagbati ang aking ipinaaabot sa lahat ng bumubuo ng “Partners: Mel & Jay” sa pagdiriwang ng inyong ika-limang taong anibersaryo, lalung-lalo na kina Mel at Jay.

Sa nakalipas na limang taon, ang inyong programa ay naghatid ng makabuluhang pagtatalakay sa mga napapanahong isyung pampamilya at pang-komunidad na patuloy na bumubuo sa ating buhay bilang isang bansa. Hindi lamang kayo nagdulot ng tuwa sa inyong manonood, kundi nagmulat din sa kamalayan ng ating mga kababayan sa iba’t-ibang aspeto ng buhay at nagturo ng mga ginintuang aral na binabahagi ng inyong mga panauhin. Sa pamamagitan ng buong pusong pagkukuwento at masusing pag-usisa sa mga indibidwal na karanasan ay nasasalaming ng “Partners” ang sinasaloob, pagpupunyagi, tagumpay at kasawian ng marami nating kababayan. Ang mga butil ng karunungan na ibinubunga ng inyong bawat pagtatanghal ay malaki ang naitulong sa pagbuo ng pagkatao at kamalayan ng inyong mga taga-subaybay bilang mga Pilipino.

Inaasahan ko na patuloy nating makakasama ang “Partners” upang magbigay ng makatotohanan na pagtatalakay sa mga paksang panlipunan at magtampok sa mga karanasang gumuguhit sa buhay at sikolohiyang pilipino. Nawa’y patuloy kayong magbigay ng inspirasyon sa inyong milyung-milyong taga-pagtangkilik upang magtagumpay sila sa mga pagsubok sa buhay.

Muli, maligayang anibersaryo at nawa’y lumawak pa at tumagal ang “Partners: Mel & Jay”. Binabati ko ang tambalan ninyo, Mel at Jay, para sa inyong serbisyo sa pamilyang pilipino at para sa inyong pagsusumikap na mabigyan ng makabuluhang panoorin ang ating mga kababayan sa loob ng nakalipas na kalahating dekada.

Mabuhay ang “Partners: Mel and Jay”!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA’s Message for Partners: Mel & Jay 5th Anniversary Celebration. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213432/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8668&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference for Human Development

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference for Human Development

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, July 6, 2001]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much, Ging.

My other cabinet members; our honorable bishops especially his Eminence, and also Reverend Cari'o who is the co-chairman of the CBCP, and also Bishop Villena; my former boss, Secretary Concepcion; Mr. Jaime who is honorary co-chair of BBC; Bishop Gutierrez; Ambassador Dy; Itto Carlos; Architect Ferrer; other participants of this conference; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

Thank you for this opportunity to be once again with the bishops-businessmen's conference. I've been with you many, many times before. I remember being with you when I was newly elected as vice president of the Philippines and I'm glad to be with you again this time as president.

The bishops-businessmen's conference reminds us that we are not only citizens of a country, but as St. Paul wrote in Philippians 3:20, also "citizens of heaven.

Notwithstanding the separation of church and state, there is really no conflict in promoting the principles of both church and state, because both church and state aspire for righteousness and truth.

I am reminded of what his holiness Pope John Paul II stated while emphasizing the spiritual goals of the great jubilee. He said: "the Christian community is called to walk with Christ along today's man, sustaining him in the difficult search for truth and helping him in some way to perceive the presence of the redeemer where he lives out his daily life marked with uncertainty for tomorrow, injustice, disorientation and sometimes desperation.

This is also what I see as my mission for the people of the Philippines as president, especially for the people who feel injustice and desperation. I hope that what I can do as president will be to bring the face of the redeemer to these people. That is really what I would like to do as a Christian president.

And it is important to believe as, cardinal said earlier, Cardinal Vidal, about the timing of the lord, also that we may not know when the crisis will end, but the lord knows and his timing is perfect.

Some say it was wrong timing to arrest former president Estrada before the elections. Well, in the first place, that decision was not in my hands, it was in the hands of the Sandiganbayan. And if we are to practice new politics and morality in public service, if the constitution says the Sandiganbayan is separate and independent of the executive, we must respect that independence.

In fact there was a special committee of my cabinet members in charge of security who would meet on planning the details of having to carry out the arrest, and once or twice they met with me and they asked me, when do you think the arrest should be, before or after the elections, and I would say, that's not my call, that's the Sandiganbayan's call. And as far as I'm concerned, anything that is not within my call, anything that is not within my control, I consider as totally within God's control and I must accept whatever timing he gives because the Lord's timing is perfect; and the Lord's timing is perfect for when he will solve the crisis our country is in today.

If I could only tell you what I saw in the intelligence reports after elections! And how the timing saved the life of my government, but I cannot share them with you lest my critics will attack me again for revealing raw information. But I can say that what I learned afterwards affirm me in my trust and my faith that the timing of the arrest as dictated by the lord was the perfect timing. And so I ask all of you, bishops and businessmen, it is true, let us have faith, let us have faith in the Lord, his timing is perfect as there was each one of us will do our part. But if we will not do our part, if I will not govern well, and if the businessmen will say, wait and see, then the lord will not be obliged to give us his perfect timing. When the lord did his first miracle at Caena, first, he said that they must put the jug there. So before he could turn the water into wine, man had to do his part. And if we are to expect that god will exercise his perfect timing, let us all do our part. Businessmen and bishops have much power and the lord expects you to do your part. I know he expects me to do my part and everyday I seek to the song what my part is. So I'm very grateful for the prayer that was made earlier that it said give the president and her government the discernment to do what is right for the welfare of the people. I need that prayer because everyday I do that discernment.

Aside from despair and being unwilling to do our part. One of the evils of today's evil society is growing materialism, growing materialism feeds greed. The comforts and glamour of physical or material power abets man's natural desire for it. Earlier, there was much talk about corruption and, yes, we must fight corruption. But there are also things over and above corruption that we must fight because they may be not corrupt practices in themselves but they reveal a sense of materialism that is not right for public service.

It may not be illegal to earn P5-10 million a year from a government corporation position, that may not be corrupt in itself but it shows materialism if the executives continue to resist when the president has already called attention that it is too much for a bleeding people. I am speaking here of presidential appointees and nominees. I am not speaking of career executives who rose from the ranks and for whom the fruit of their labor is their only source of income. They, of course, deserve that fruit of their labor. And so career executives are not covered by the pay cut that I have asked for, only presidential appointees and nominees. I am stressing this because some recalcitrants in order to get support from the rank and file and the career executives are pretending to champion the career executives in their disguised counter-attacks against the drive for CEOs and board members to exercise simplicity and austerity. And so I call up on the CEOs and members of the board, do your part, do not drag the career executives into this quarrel because they are not involved at all.

On the other hand, I want to thank and appreciate and recognize those CEOs and members of the boards who have already agreed to their pay cut or have agreed to donate their excess pay to the government. There are a number of them and their names had been published in the newspapers.

Winning the battle against poverty within the decade is indeed the main goal of this administration. So I'm glad that the bishop-businessmen's conference and the government are exactly on the same wavelength.

My colleagues in the profession, in the economics profession, said that this government has been sidelining poverty. No, we are not sidelining poverty. That is the work that I spend most of my time doing but that is not the work that makes headlines. So let me say that our work is indeed poverty. I leave the war — except for a new major announcements — to my defense officials and my military officials. I leave prosecution and retribution — except that make so much headlines — to my prosecutors and the Sandiganbayan. My micro management goes to the fight against poverty.

The battle against poverty in the world of the 21st century is set in a battleground that is truly a new economy. In this new economy, relentless forces such as capital market flows and advances in information technology create both peril and opportunity. In this battleground, our road map in our fight against poverty consists of four components that I have announced many times before and I believe I cannot announce them too often.

First, to tap the opportunities of the new economy, we need an economic philosophy of transparency and free enterprise, for these are the catalysts that nurture the entrepreneurial spirit to be globally competitive.

And so I congratulate the community of Cebu, the bishops and the businessmen of Cebu, because of your transparency drive. And as Secretary Concepcion said that the rest should replicate this, may I ask the bishop-businessmen's conference to replicate this in the Bureau of Customs.

In the Bureau of Customs, well, I think, more or less, the smuggling has been reduced significantly. Why do I say this? Because the Bureau of Customs has exceeded its collection target — that means the leakage has gone down. But where, I think, the bishops and the businessmen can help in the transparency is in the daily transactions that the legitimate businessmen who need to import the raw materials and supplies for their ordinary business have to go through. Open drawers or whatever is the symbol of how they do it now that is where the bishops and the businessmen can help because lack of transparency not only erodes government coffers, it also erodes the working capital of businessmen and thus reduces profit margins, reduces jobs for our people.

Second component of our fight against poverty, to extend the opportunities to our rural countryside, we must create a modernized and socially equitable agricultural sector. Secretary Concepcion said that never have there been budgets for one percent, more than one percent of the budget goes to poverty alleviation. One reason perhaps is that agriculture really has never gotten more than P12 billion in any one year, and even in the year that it got P12 billion last year the release was about P6 billion. This year, because it's a reenacted budget, the allocation is still P12 billion but because of the power realignment and the power to be able to float bonds, the budget that we will provide for agricultural modernization is P20 billion for the year 2001.

Third component in our fight against poverty: to address the perils, we must give a social bias to balance our economic development, and these are embodied in safety nets for sectors affected by globalization, something we have always talked about but never really attended to. And that is why Pat Sto. Tomas is working on that — she has given as a framework for that. And I hope that we will be able, at last, to have a really focused program for these safety nets.

Another embodiment of a social bias is, of course, safeguards for our environment, and a sectoral anti-poverty strategy which is being put together by the national anti-poverty commission.

Fourth component of our fight against poverty — our blueprint — is to ensure that our gains are not dissipated through corruption. Indeed, JC cannot forget what I said when I became president, we must improve our moral standards because as we do so, we create fertile ground for good governance based on a sound moral foundation, a philosophy of transparency, and an ethic of effective implementation.

Let me go to the third component because our main task is to fight poverty and therefore, the direct battle, frontline battle, against poverty is the social bias to balance our economic development. The sectoral anti-poverty program was formulated by the national anti-poverty commission under Ging after several months of consulting with the people from the time we took office last January 20th.

And as a result of their consultation, our sectoral anti-poverty strategy has five core thrusts. One of them is asset reform and I was told by a businessman, you know I read your five core thrust if I couldn't understand what they mean, how can the poor understand what you are trying to do to them? So let me put asset reform in layman's language — concrete and quantitative. What we mean here, for example, is that secretary Sonny Alvarez is not only supposed to safeguard our environment but he is also supposed to redistribute 100,000 hectares of public agricultural land a year for land reform. That is a specific objective and a specific assignment under assets reform.

More fundamentally, the secretary of Agrarian Reform must also distribute, per year, 100,000 hectares of private agricultural land, and I am confident that notwithstanding the controversies that Nani Braganza is getting into — because these are all inherited problems — I've told him, Nani, you give those inherited problem about old cloas that got returned, or whatever it is, to your most hotshot undersecretary because to me, what you will answer for is whether you will be able to distribute 100,000 hectares to the poor this year. And it looks like he's on the way to doing it because we are now in July and he has already redistributed 70,000 hectares.

So the headlines may talk about the 5,000 hectares that we inherited that are still undergoing controversy. But there is no headline when he's able to redistribute them to the poor. 70,000 hectares of no headline is true attention to poverty more than any headline we can make about the Abu Sayyaf and Erap's detention.

To Mike Defensor, he set his own target because of what he has already accomplished. And I think because of what he has already accomplished, we will be able to grant security of land tenure to 300,000 urban poor families this year. Is that correct Mike? You'll be able to do that? Where is he? He ran away. But he's done it because when I was 100 days in office, I announced that we have distributed security of tenure documents for 100,000 families — a thousand families a day. When I finished my, now that I was looking and preparing for the SONA, I saw that he has done a 170,000 families so he's still doing a thousand families a day. So I guess, if we have roughly 300,000 days a year, then he'll be able to do 300,000 families. And that's why I believe that this kind, again, of asset distribution, while it doesn't make headlines — unless we do it right there in the community, and we have very nice photo opportunities — that is really putting the poor in center stage and not in the sidelines.

A second thrust of the anti-poverty strategy is, well — I erased the technical language but just to illustrate — it says, providing the financial and institutional support for strengthening human development services. Oh what does that mean? It simply means according to the targets I have given, I told Secretary Manolito Dayrit that within 12 months, my target for him is to reduce the price of basic medicines used by the poor to one-half of current prices. Also, I've also asked Secretary Raul Roco that when he constructs school buildings, he must make sure that every barangay will end up with at least one school building.

Then you have, as part of this sectoral anti-poverty strategy, safety nets for the poorest of the poor, such as livelihood, training, grameen financing; and in the P20 billion mentioned that we will be making available for agricultural modernization, when the budget was just P12 billion, the budget for irrigation was only P2 billion but the agricultural modernization law says that in the first year of modernization we should provide P6 billion for irrigation. So, the money was not for the mouth was. And three weeks ago, I asked Leony Montemayor, well, if we've only got P2 billion let's spend that first. How much have you spent? He said P700 million. No, I said Leony by this time, you should have spent P3 billion. And I am very happy to say that last week he came to me very proud and said, we already have P4.9 billion obligated. By the miracle of budget management Emy Boncodin made available to him nearly P5 billion and he is very confident he will get that last P1.1 billion, and we will have P6 billion for agriculture specifically for irrigation in the year 2001.

My personal pet project for the urban poor — and I mentioned this already to the league of corporate foundations — is a special emergency employment program for the out-of-school, out-of-work urban poor of metro Manila. I don't know exactly how many they are but I'm guessing there must be 300,000-strong, but I hope that we can give them some kind of employment whether it is fixing the leaking roof of their tenement house or the broken railing or cleaning the estero. And I am very happy to say that when I was flying over Manila today by helicopter, a lot of the flooding has gone down that's because since three months ago, we started cleaning up the estero. There were no headlines when we cleaned-up the estero I hope there will be some headlines about how fast the water has gone down.

Another portion of the anti-poverty strategy is to empower the poor, to participate in governance and decision-making. And in your bishops-business conference this morning you demonstrated how the poor can indeed participate. In the NAPC which we are making as the most important forum for our anti-poverty fight, we have started and will continue to have institutionalized consultations. This will be the main avenue for the poor to participate in governance — through their duly selected representatives in the national anti-poverty commission.

And finally, protecting the underprivileged sectors against violence and exploitation. What does this mean? Domestic violence, sexual harassment. For among the underprivileged sectors those who especially need this kind of protection are what they call the five fingers of social work: children like street children; youth like those who become victims of the drug pushers; women victims of rape, sexual harassment and even sexual exploitation in the home — incest; persons with disabilities who are discriminated against in the area of work; and older persons who are neglected and made to feel that they are no longer useful. Then we have in our prayers the poorest people in our country today, the indigenous peoples. And I am very happy that Ambassador Howard Dee is there to make sure that they are not marginalized.

With regard to the grameen, or microcredit system, indeed I hope this will proliferate. The government's direct contribution is supposed to be the people's credit and finance corporation. And this is supposed to be, indeed the grameen replication of the government, but I am sad to say that there is so much red tape in PCFC that up to now the P2 billion portfolio has not really reach the poor. What a waste, P2 billion. We placed an O.I.C. there while we were looking for a permanent head, and I looked at the successful grameen banks, and I wonder whether she's a member of the bishops-business conference but I think that I am really quiet impressed in Negros Occidental with its excellent grameen bank — the Negros women for tomorrow. So I hope the head of the Negros women for tomorrow grameen bank, Cecile del Castillo will agree to be head of the people's credit and finance corporation. Help me convince her to accept the position cause I don't know whether she will accept it yet.

Indeed the tasks are formidable but, as my former boss says, the Filipino can, yes, they are doable. And all of the quantitative schedule targets I have given are doable and all of the budgetary outlays that I have mentioned are doable because we vetted them in the cabinet. And from the examples of your plenary session on Tabang Mindanaw, the Payatas social housing initiatives, it is evident that our people may be poor but they have the sincere desire and the capability of helping themselves.

The theme of your assembly — “upgrading the quality of life through dialogue and partnership” conforms indeed with one of my core beliefs: the need to graduate from traditional politics of patronage to the new politics of institutionalized consultation with the people. As we dialogued, and we find out exactly what the people need in a particular community and we are able to together look for solutions, that is the new politics of consultation rather than the old politics of patronage.

And I am happy to note that the bishop-businessmen's conference is now working with and engaged in dialogue with our government on issues that pertain to the poor. And as you have seen from our anti-poverty strategy, your concerns on housing, employment, health and education for the poor, as well as the protection of the environment and our indigenous communities are among the priorities of this administration.

In my speech after taking my oath of office as president, indeed I said that one of my four core values is to improve moral standards in government and in society. And it was in pursuit of this value that I issued administrative order no. 1 prohibiting agencies, government agencies from dealing with my relatives on the matters of contracts, supplies, and appointments to positions. It was in pursuit of this value that I devolved to the NEDA the president's power to review contracts worth P50 million and above. And that resulted in something good because our ODA absorption which was terribly low last year has been praised now by your ODA sources as much better now. And according to Dante Canlas, one of the reasons for the bottleneck last year was that all those contracts P50 million and above were getting stuck in Malacañang so therefore the absorption capacity was low. But when I devolved it to an institutionalized agency which has its own set-up already mechanism for reviewing contracts and projects — the NEDA — then it move much faster.

One example were when you seek to promote morality, you also provide efficiency in government and better services. It has also in pursuit of this value that we are four-square behind the commissioner on Internal Revenue Rene Baez in his drive to clean-up his agency. The man is suffering for the good work he is doing. We are just grateful that in the TRO fight, the supreme ruled in his favor but no sooner did the supreme court ruled in his favor that now the very same people who sued him for the reshuffle are now suing him for plunder, no less, of a case that was done when he was still in the private sector and therefore he can only get a private lawyer he cannot even get a public lawyer to defend him in this case. And what you don't know is that he has also been receiving death threats. So, you can imagine the pressure from his family and his dearest friends. And because the bishops are very close to heaven, and the businessmen are concerned with transparency in government — especially the BIR and Customs — let us pray that Rene Baez will stay the course, keep working because we do not want a resignation of somebody who has been fighting so hard, we do not want him to surrender to the forces of evil. We must all be behind him in action, in declaration and in prayer.

It was also in pursuit of the value of improving moral standards in government and in society that I banned the movie Live Show. I remember the first opinion survey conducted after that which showed my approval and trust ratings down. And according to the analysts, one of the reasons indeed for my decline was certain unpopular decisions including the banning of “live show.” but if that is the sacrifice I have to make as a president — to improve moral standards in government and in society — then I am willing to sacrifice my popularity all over again. Thank goodness, however, that in the last survey which just came out today — the lord's timing is really perfect — my approval ratings and trust ratings have jumped up again. So, the lord is affirming me that I must be doing something right.

Today in the gospel, Jesus Christ said, go and learn the meaning of the word I desire mercy not sacrifice, and in today's newspapers, the evaluation or the analysis of why my ratings improved again was the healing that I have been trying to do. So there may be some who demand retribution and they do not approve of what I do. But now I have been affirmed not only by the survey that came out but also by the gospel reading of today that healing is start of leadership.

Improving moral standards in government and in society includes fighting crime. We recognize the challenge of maintaining peace and order and a climate acceptable to the bishops and attractive to the businessmen. And the government, let me assure you, is not willing to be held hostage by kidnap syndicates. Thus we have gone full stride with a relentless pursuit of these syndicates.

I expect that the new anti-crime council that I am creating today — I asked Nonong Cruz to rush the papers so I can sign them today — led by the justice secretary and including the defense, interior, investigation, police and intelligence agencies, will boost the campaign against kidnapping. This council includes representatives of the Chinese-Filipino community whose advise is crucial and whose support is essential to our anti- kidnapping efforts.

And if you do not believe the statistics that show that notwithstanding the headlines of today, index crimes are down 10 percent since a year ago, perhaps I can cite some headlines from the first six months of the previous administration to refresh your memory: July 6, 1998, Inquirer, kidnappings up again, says anti-crime group; July 8, 1998, Inquirer, 2 Tsinoy Kids Kidnapped, 1998 not year 2001; July 8, 1998, 2 fil-chi schoolgirls abducted; Star, July 4, 1998, Muslim rebs kidnap 9 Zambo students; July 15, 1998, from the newspaper today, 30 jeepney passengers in Basilan abducted; Philippine Star, July 19, 1998, LTO auditor, 2 companions kidnapped; Inquirer, July 20, 1998, kidnappings result in -b capital flight; Philippine Star, Sept. 21, 1998, soldier's son abducted, captive auditor escapes; Malaya, Sept. 11, 1998, Taiwanese family of 3 snatched; Bulletin, Sept. 11, 1998, Abu Sayyaf men kidnap 3 Taiwanese; Inquirer, Sept. 12, 1998, kidnappers take 3 Hong Kong traders, different from the Taiwanese; Sept. 14 1998, Manila Times, 1998, kidnapped Taiwanese son warns: we'll close shop if Ma is not rescued; Times, Sept. 16, 1998, kidnappers strike again; today, Sept. 16, 1998, kidnappers test Erap, take 8th victim in just one week; Standard, Sept. 16, 1998, sixth kidnap victim in 7 days; Star, Sept. 26, 1998, DAR chief's daughter kidnapped by influential landlord; Star, Oct. 7, baker's daughter kidnapped; Star, Oct. 7, 1998, new kidnapping; Journal, Oct. 11, 1998, kidnap cases rise; manhunt on for killers of abducted Fil-Chi trader, that's different from the earlier Fil abductions in the headlines; Oct. 12, 1998, Filipino-Chinese groups score new kidnap wave; Manila Times, Oct. 12, 1998, hotel owner abducted by law enforcers?; Malaya, Oct. 12, 1998, no ransom means getting killed; Manila Times, Oct. 12, 1998, kidnap-for-ransom cases up under Erap; Oct. 15, 1998, negotiator slain; 3 more abducted; Oct. 19, 1998, kidnappers grab another trader; Manila Times, Oct. 19, 1998, kidnappers strike again; Inquirer, Oct. 22, 1998, kidnappers taunt Erap, grab two more; Businessworld, Oct. 22, 1998, another kidnapping reported; Philippine Star, Oct. 22, 1998, Sayyaf rebs snatch Zambo physician; Philippine Star, Nov. 22, 1998, kidnappers seek P8 M for 3 Hong Kong men; Sandard, Nov. 25, 1998, jeepney operator, aide kidnapped; Philippine Star, Dec. 20, 1998, 2 children killed; today, Dec. 29, 1998, kidnap cases in '98 up by 6.7%; Philippine Star, Dec. 21, 1998, kidnapping cases remain high; Inquirer, Dec. 29, 1998, kidnapping rose in '98, says solon.

So, even if the first six months of the previous administration, however, seem to be no better then our record after all if you recall. We are determined to stamp out violent crimes because we are not interested in just being better than the previous administration. We are determined to stamp out violent crimes particularly kidnappings. And we have scored some successes in this battle, in fact 70 percent of all cases have already been solved. And just recently, speaking of Cebu, you remember in Cebu there was this Japanese from a project that was shut up, well, the perpetrators has been caught but it's not in the headlines. That's the trouble: the kidnapping is in the headlines, the solution is not in the headlines. Seventy percent of the crimes have been solved. And oh I don't know if I should announce this, sasabihin na naman raw information. Well discount it as my information pero in fact I have raw information that Itto Carlos' kidnappers have already been arrested too — but that's raw information.

With the arrest of several criminal gangs in the last couple of weeks, we certainly have made a lot of in-roads. And with the new council giving top-level attention to the crime problem, we expect to apprehend more kidnappers and substantially diminish their nefarious activities.

In fighting crime, in fighting poverty, and in meeting the challenges of this new century, we must pursue an aggressive renewal of Christian values. Let us have faith in ourselves. The international creditor community, IMF, world bank, they still have faith in us; and, — well I will be getting ahead of him but he will give perhaps details to make more headlines — secretary Lito Camacho has takers for his million bond flotation and they are takers for ten years period. Usually Philippines only gets three years but he has takers for ten years. Others still have faith in us because of our good governance.

Businessmen of the Philippines, have faith. Let us all move forward together, united in god's will and armed with his mercy and compassion. Let us proceed to build a renewed and reinvigorated and god-loving Philippines both in the church and in the business world.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Bishops-Businessmen's Conference for Human Development. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213421/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8662&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during her visit to urban and rural poor housing project [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa kanyang pagbisita sa proyektong pabahay para sa mga maralitang taga-rural at taga-lungsod

[Ipinahayag sa Commonwealth, Lungsod ng Quezon, ika 6 ng Agosto, 2001]

Maraming salamat kapitan. Kagalang-galang na punonglungsod ng Quezon City, Mayor Sonny Belmonte; ang Congressman sa pinakamalaking distrito sa buong Pilipinas, Congressman Chuck Mathay; ating mga Cabinet Members, si Mike Defensor na namamahala ng pabahay; Secretary Sonny Alvarez, namamahala ng pagbibigay ng titulo galing sa national government; si Secretary Dick Gordon, godfather ng mga maraming maralitang taga dito sa Commonwealth; si Percy Chavez, ang Chairman for the Commission on the Urban Poor; nandito ang aking kabalen na nagpapatayo ng mga tahanan, si NHA Manager Ed Pamintuan; mga opisyal ng mga barangay na sakop daw sa ating mga beneficiaries, mga nag-graduate sa pagiging squatters na 1,300 families, congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Ang aking layunin nga ay 150,000 families ang mag-graduate mula sa pagiging squatter bawat taon. Itong taong ito nakumpleto na natin iyon. Kaya congratulations din. Kung kayo naka-graduate, si Mike Defensor, naka boundary. Kaya mayroon siyang bagong kukulitin ko, kailangan naman iyong housing. Pero alam ko kayo mayroon naman kayong tahanan, hindi iyon ang hinahanap ninyo. Ang hinahanap niyo katiyakan sa paninirahan sa lupa. Kaya iyong ibinigay sa inyo ngayon ay transfer certificates of title. Kung ano ang inyong hinahawakang papeles iyon din ang hinahawakan na papeles na taga Forbes Park. Kaya magiging full homeowners na kayo.

At sa darating na panahon, inaasahan ko makapunta naman sa kabila, sa National Government Center East dahil iyon ang susunod na bibigyan natin ng mga TCTS. Kaya salamat at tayo ay sabay-sabay na nagtrabaho. Hindi ba dito Chuck iyong pinopondohan mong technical working group, kaya noong nag-in-between elections at sa iyong ibang mga sumumpa, si Congressman ay nagbigay din ako ng pondo para maipagpatuloy ang pagpapatakbo.

At alam ko na pag mayroon tayong malaking mga komunidad ng maralitang taga-lungsod, marami diyang people's organizations. Marami diyang mga tumutulong. Marami mga urban poor leaders. Ang ginagawa natin ay, dahil ako ay pangulo ng lahat ng taongbayan, lahat ng mga people's organizations basta't matagal ng nakatayo at mayroon na talagang maraming mga kasapi ay kinikilala natin bilang mga lider ng urban poor.

Kaya upang mapabilis ang aming trabaho, ang ating trabaho, na mapabilis ang papeles ng proklamasyon; mapabilis ang papeles ng pagmumudmod ng mga titulo, sana huwag na kayong mag-away-away sa inyo-inyo. At kung may grupong kinakausap dahil may mga kasapi na magiging benepesaryo, huwag naman sanang magselos iyong ibang grupo, dahil kinakausap din silang lahat. Lahat ng grupo kinakausap.

Isang araw, itong samahan; sa isang linggo, iyong isang samahan. Lahat kinikilala natin dahil ang inyong lingkod ay Presidente ng buong Pilipinas. Kaya magkaisa tayo. At ako ay nasisiyahan din na sa ibabaw ng 1,300 families na itong araw na ito ay nag-graduate mula sa pagiging squatter at nagiging full homeowners. Nasisiyahin din ako na bago kami tumuloy dito, kami nila mayor, congressman, mga secretary ay nanggaling doon sa isang bagong complex natin, iyong labing apat na buildings. At doon ay mayroong bagong mga apartment units for almost 700 families. At sa 1,300 ngayon halos 700 doon, so 2,000 families ang ibinibigay natin nakakatiyak ang paninirahan.

So within two weeks, inaasahan natin na iyong mga bagong apartment units na mayroon ng papasok at matitira na roon.

At huwag ninyong kalimutan..., mayroon tayong sampung libo, iyong unoccupied. Para doon sa talagang nagahahanap ng tahanan at hindi kayo namimili kung saan, ngayon pa lang mag-apply na kayo. Kasi mayroon tayong 10,000 housing units sa iba't ibang bahagi ng pilipinas. Nakatayo na iyon, walang nag-o-occupy. Kaya kung payag kayong lumipat basta't may bahay kayo kahit na saan, magsabi kayo sa ating mga housing authorities para sa ganoon pumunta kayo doon at magsimula ng bagong community ninyo.

Sabi nga ni Sonny, bakit mula noong umupo ang inyong lingkod, kami na rin, lahat kami bagong upo sa puwesto. Si Sonny bagong upo sa mayor. Si Chuck bagong upo sa pagka-congressman. At iyong mga cabinet members, sila po ay bago lahat, dahil nga ang pangunahing layunin natin ay labanan ang kahirapan. At noon pa man, alam natin na dito sa lungsod, ang pangunahing hiling ng mga maralitang taga-lungsod ang katiyakan sa lupa. Iyan ang ating binibigyan ng focus. Magkamali man tayo sa ibang programa, pumalpak man tayo sa ibang programa, basta't importante magtagumpay tayo sa pamamahagi ng katiyakan ng tirahan sa maralitang taga-lungsod.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during her Visit to Urban and Rural Poor Housing Project. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213353/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8710&Itemid=38

Departure Speech of President Arroyo for Malaysia

Departure Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines For Malaysia

[Delivered at the Villamor Air Base, August 7, 2001]

The most important realities that characterize our country's international and regional environment to which we have to respond in order to achieve our goal. First, more and more Philippine foreign policy decisions have to be made in the context of ASEAN. Second, the international Islamic community will continue to be important for the Philippines. Third, the country's economic growth will continue to involve direct foreign investments. Fourth, a country, like the Philippines, can benefit most quickly from international tourism. And fifth, overseas Filipinos will continue to create a critical role in the country's economic and social stability. Let me elaborate on each of these ...

On ASEAN: the commitment to ASEAN remains a cornerstone of Philippine foreign policy. The Philippines will remain firm in implementing its commitment in ASEAN as a strategy to achieve global competitiveness towards attaining sustainable growth and development. As charter members of ASEAN, the Philippines and Malaysia share a common task and look forward to a common future.

In our state visit, we will discuss with our Malaysian friends how we can put back on track the east ASEAN growth area and thus, make Mindanao – the most vulnerable of our regions – our gateway to ASEAN.

On the Islamic community: the Islamic community of nations is extremely important in the search for lasting peace and broad-based development in southern Philippines. The Philippines and Malaysia are specially, organically intertwined. We are not only the closest of neighbors, we are ethnic cognate with deep ... language culture and religion. Recognizing Malaysia's role both as an ASEAN neighbor and as an Islamic brother, my state visit is a journey for security and stability. While in Kuala Lumpur, I shall express appreciation to Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad for Malaysia's assistance in fostering political stability in Mindanao.

My delegation will join hands, as well, with our Malaysian counterparts to collectively address the insidious threat of terrorism and piracy that lay siege to our common...

On investment: in an increasingly integrated global economy, foreign capital and technology and market are important for the development of the Philippines. While in Kuala Lumpur, I shall solicit Malaysia's cooperation in my administration's efforts to stimulate economic growth in the Philippines, especially southern Philippines. With industrialists and businessmen, my program for foreign investors is what we shall strive to communicate.

On tourism: the tourism industry which is a labor intensive, broad-based, geographically diffused sector that quick returns, will be made the top of our development priorities. In order to help achieve this, I shall propose intensification of cooperation in tourism, particularly in ... arrangement whereby Malaysia will encourage the tourists who go there to come to the Philippines as well. And the Philippines will encourage tourists who come here to go to Malaysia as well.

On overseas Filipinos: the Philippine economy will, for the perceived future, continue to be heavily dependent on overseas worker remittances. On the basis of this, and of the nation's humanitarian responsibility to its people – wherever they are – our government will work doubly hard to strengthen overseas workers' protection. We will strengthen bilateral relationships with countries hosting large numbers of Filipinos – including Malaysia. With the 600,000 strong Filipino community in Malaysia, I shall convey the gratitude of our people for their personal sacrifices and support of the economy of our nation.

I leave for Kuala Lumpur filled with hope that this visit will reinvigorate the precious ties of friendship between our two peoples and lay our bilateral relations on even firmer ground. It is a journey for peace and development, as my administration seeks to strengthen and broaden mutually supportive arrangements with Kuala Lumpur to advance reconciliation and secure abiding prosperity in southern Philippines.

In pursuit of these objectives, I shall endeavor to deepen the friendship and spirit of cooperation that I have been privileged to share with Prime Minister Mahathir since my days as vice president of our country.

While in Kuala Lumpur, I shall extend the fraternal greetings of our people to his Majesty, the young one among.

Have already laid the groundwork within the last six months, no less than ten high-level emissaries ... to Malaysia – Vice President Teofisto Guingona, former President Fidel Ramos, Finance Secretary Jose Camacho, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Senior Presidential Adviser Alberto Romulo, Special Presidential Envoy Paul Dominguez, Presidential Adviser Eduardo Ermita, Presidential Adviser Norberto Gonzales and Presidential Adviser Farank Hussein.

With the 21st century mode of teleconferencing, I have also personally addressed the Malaysian people on two occasions – the opening ceremony of the Kuala Lumpur Central Station and the world's Economic Development Congress.

All these undertakings had one common purpose – to convey to the government and the people of Malaysia our ardent appreciation for the work that pervades our relations.

Indeed, Malaysia plays a vital role in our development as a nation. Intimately linked as friendly neighbors, cultural brothers and regional allies, it is to our mutual interest to continually broaden and deepen our common connections.

Towards this end, I have adapted as the theme for my visit the vision of making the Philippines and Malaysia partners for peace and prosperity.

I seek the assistance of all involved to make this vision a reality in our time.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Departure Speech for Malaysia. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213347/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8709&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo in Davao City [Filipino]

Talumpati
ng
Kagalang-galang Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
Pangulo ng Pilipinas
Sa Lungsod ng Davao

[Ipinahayag sa Lungsod ng Davao, ika 10 ng Agosto, 2001]

...Marawi City bilang kinatawan ng Muslim Mindanao. Dahil kung ano ba tuloy hiningi ko kay Prime Minister Mahathir na binigyan naman niya, dahil ang malaking bahagi ng Mindanao at ang Malaysia ay kapuwang mga Muslim ang taungbayan. Kaya maraming tulong ang ibinigay ni Prime Minister Mahathir sa Pilipinas ay dahil sa mga Muslim ng Pilipinas, dapat ang malaking biyaya ng mga tulong niya ay pupunta rin sa Autonomous Region ng Muslim Mindanao. Dahil iyon ang kanyang malaking minamahal. Iyon ang malaking minamahal ng lahat ng Islamic countries dito sa ating bansa. Gusto nilang makita ang tagumpay ng Muslim Mindanao Region. At lahat sila ay binabantayan nila iyong ating darating na halalan sa August 14. At inaasahan nila na ang taungbayan ng Pilipinas ay buong-buong susuporta dito sa Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

Ngunit papaano natin makukuha ang suporta ng buong Pilipinas at ang buong OIC at ang buong ASEAN, sa Muslim Mindanao kung hindi makita sila sa Pilipino at kaibigang muslim sa ibang bansa na mismo lahat ng Muslim Pilipino ay sila ang unang nagsusuporta sa Muslim Mindanao.

Kaya ako ay narito ngayon upang ipaalala sa inyo na may mahalagang halalan sa darating na martes para sa kinabukasan ng Muslim Mindanao. At upang ipaliwanag ang iba't ibang mga biyaya na hinihintay ng Muslim Mindanao sa ilalim ng bagong administrasyon ng anak ng Mindanao na si Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Una sa lahat, gaya ng sabi ko, doon sa Malaysia, anu-ano ang mga nakuha nating biyaya. Una na sa lahat doon ay iyong kapayapaan. Gaya sa malaking tulong ng Malaysia ay nagkasunduan ang Philippine Government at ang ating mga kapatid na Muslim na ituloy itong ating ceasefire agreement dito sa Mindanao. At nagkasunduan na rin ang MILF at ang MNLF na sabay, na imbes na nag-aaway at imbes na inaaway ang pamahalaan, sabay-sabay lalaban para sa mga prinsipiyo ng kapayapaan.

In other words, kapayapaan na ang hangarin ng dalawang dating rebeldeng grupo. Nagkaisa para sa kapayapaan. Nagkaisa para sa katarungan. Nagkaisa para sa pagsasama-sama at pagiging tapat at pare-pareho na lamang lahat ng Pilipino maging tagalog, maging bisaya, maging Muslim. Justice, equity, peace, iyan ang mga prinsipiyo na pinirmahan ng MNLF at ang MILF noong sila ay nagkaroon ng kasunduan doon sa Kuala Lumpur.

Ngayon na nagkaroon ng magagandang kasunduan tungkol sa kapayapaan sa pamamagitan ng MILF at MNLF, at noon pa ang MILF ay nagkasunduan na sa kapayapaan sa Pilipinas doon pa sa Jakarta. Iyon MILF naman ay nagkasunduan ng ceasefire dito sa Kuala Lumpur. Iyong MILF at iyong MNLF ay nagkaroon na rin ng kasunduan kaya lahat-lahat, government of the Philippines, MNLF, MILF, nagkakaisa para sa kapayapaan.

Ngayon at nagkaisa tayo para sa kapayapaan, magkaisa naman tayo para sa kaunlaran. Iyong davao maunlad na. Iyong Cagayan de Oro maunlad na. Iyong Zamboanga City maunlad na. Ang hanapin nating kaunlaran ay iyong kaunlaran ng Muslim Mindanao.

Noong nandoon ako sa Malaysia, isa sa malaking hiningi ko sa mga Malaysian government at Malaysian businessmen, maging doon sa anak ni president Khadaffy na nagpunta sa Malaysia para lamang makipagkita sa inyong lingkod at malaman kung papaano tutulong sa Muslim Mindanao. Ang isa sa mga hiningi ko sa kanila ay sana, dahil ang Malaysia ngayon, ang Kuala Lumpur, ang Selangor noong malaking probinsiya sa kapaligiran ng Kuala Lumpur na noong araw punong-puno ng palm oil plantation ay naging malalaking siyudad na iyon, kaya inililipat na nila iyong kanilang palm oil sa ibang lugar. May nililipat sa eastern Malaysia, may nililipat sa Sabah, may inililipat sa ibang bansa. Basta ang importante hinahanap nila kung saan iyong 8 degrees latitude and below going towards the equator. Iyon ang magagandang lugar para sa palm oil. Sabi ko sa kanila, naghahanap lang din kayo ng ibang lugar kung saan ninyo dadalhin ang palm oil, dalhin naman niyo doon sa Pilipinas.

Kaya kahit na 160,000 hectares kung mahahanap natin iyong mga hectarage na iyon sa Muslim Mindanao ay payag pumasok ang Malaysia dahil sa ngayon ay naghahanap sila sa buong mundo 8 degrees latitude and down, kung saan ilalagay ang palm oil. Agawin natin iyong pagkakataon na iyon dahil kung hindi dito pupunta, pupunta rin naman sa ibang bansang karatig natin. Sana kaysa doon dito na lang sa atin.

At iyong anak ni Khadaffy ay nagbisita sa akin Presidential Suite sa Shangri-la Hotel, sabi niya iyong Khadaffy Foundation, handang-handa na ang aming salapi para mag-invest sa 35,000 hectares para sa palm oil. Handang-handa na iyong aming partner sa Malaysia na magbibigay ng kanilang technical expertise, pero nasaan iyong lupa sa Pilipinas. Marami akong tinurong lupa. Sabi ko, alam mo, ginoong Khadaffy, mayroon ng nabukas doon sa Agusan del Sur. Mayroon na doon sa Bohol. Mayroon na doon sa North Cotabato. Sabi niya, hindi. Ito ay Khadaffy Foundation, marami na kaming pera, pero ang layunin namin ay tumulong doon sa Muslim Mindanao. Kaya Muslim Mindanao ang ituro mong lupa.

Gusto ko ring sabihin iyong iba't ibang mga biyaya na inaalok. Alam ito ni Congressman Bobby Dimpapuro na iyong Islamic Development Bank ay handa ring tumulong, pareho ng tulong na ibinibigay ng World Bank sa maraming bansa. Pareho na ibinibigay ng Asian Development Bank sa maraming bansa ng asia. Ang Islamic Development Bank din ay handang tumulong, kaya lang dapat sa Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

...na ipaalam sa mga mamamayan ng marawi kung anu-ano ang mga biyaya na puwede ninyong hintayin, at kung anu-anong kondisyon para makamit itong mga biyaya. Ngayon ako ay nagpapasalamat sa inyong hospitality. Kasi noong una, sinabi ng Presidential Management Staff na ako ay pupunta dito, ang unang sinabi kay Governor Adiong at kay Mayor Ali na gusto ko ng private meeting.

Noong ako ay nasa Malaysia, makalawa, nalaman ko iyon hating-gabi, sabi ko, bakit private meeting, bakit ko ipaalam itong mga biyaya na nanggagaling sa Malaysia, Libya, OIC, Islamic Development Bank sa isang private meeting lamang. Gusto kong malaman lahat ng mamamayan ng Marawi City, kaya imbitahin na rin iyong iba makapunta doon sa programang ito.

Kaya kahapon, si Mayor Ali at si Governor Adiong ay nag-petition na hindi lamang private meeting. Kung sino ang makaalam ng meeting dahil very short notice, imbitado na rin. Nagpapasalamat ako na kahit isang araw lang ninyo nalaman na ako ay darating, one day notice, standing room tayo sa gymnasium. Maraming salamat sa inyo.

Salamat rin kay Dr. Urva, ang pangulo ng MSU, kasi parati kayo ang host sa lahat ng meeting na pinupuntahan ko rito. At hindi ko makalimutan ang MSU. Siguro hindi ninyo makakalimutan sino ba ang nagtayo ng MSU? Alam ba ninyo kung sino ang nagtayo ng MSU? Kung sino ang pangulo? Oh, siguro alam na ninyo, hindi ko na babanggitin, para hindi ako magyayabang tungkol sa aking pamilya. Ipagyayabang ko na lang ang ikinabubuti ng Muslim Mindanao. Ngunit, siguro masasabi ko, na itong ating pagtitipon-tipon nitong araw na ito ay napakaganda. Wala pa akong ibang napuntahan na lugar para magkampanya para sa Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao. Kaya lang kung may isang lugar lamang po sana makapasok dito, sana iyon na nga ang Marawi City. At kung ang Marawi City ay hindi papasok sa Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, masyadong malungkot, masyadong mapapahiya ako dahil hindi ko maibibigay sa inyo iyong mga biyaya na ikinuwento ko sa inyong lahat dahil lahat doon ay talagang nakatukoy sa Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

Kaya puwede bang maasahan ang Marawi City, na handa kayong umasa sa mga biyayang ito? Maraming salamat sa inyong suporta, at tuloy-tuloy magsuportahan tayo sa isa't isa sa ikinabubuti ng kaunlaran at kapayapaan sa Muslim Mindanao, sa buong Mindanao, sa buong Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech – Davao City. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213313/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8707&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 21st National Prayer Breakfast

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 21st National Prayer Breakfast

[Delivered at the Manila Hotel, August 16, 2001]

...Says, the Philippine national prayer breakfast has been a tradition or To give thanks and ask for God's blessing. This annual event reaffirms our heritage as a God loving nation.

It has been more than six months when I accepted the mantle of responsibility to lead our people as your president. And it is time for us to have this prayer.

My work ethic is guided by the philosophy, do what is right, do your best, and God will take care of the rest. But to do what is right, I need prayer to discern what is right. To do my best I need prayer for the grace, for the health and the energy. And to make sure that God takes care of the rest, I need prayer to ask God because he will answer if we ask Him.

God's taking care of the rest when we do what is right and do our best can also be summed up in the article of faith that all things work for the good of those who have a covenant with the Lord.

I believe, like Tita Cory, that my being president is part of the covenant with the Lord. While I do not believe in fate, I believe in divine providence. And as leaders of society, we are placed where we are because of a reason, because of a plan, a divine plan for all of us. And each one of us must pray to discern what that plan is, then act according to our best light to comply with that plan. And yet, always maintain a childlike faith, but it is not us but rather it is God who will have the final say in the fulfillment of his plan.

The key in manifesting God's plan in our lives lies in our ability through prayer to discern his divine wisdom and to apply it in our daily lives.

The theme of our celebration today reflects how we must go about fulfilling God's wonderful plan for all of us, as individuals, and as a people. Today's theme as read by Tita Cory, from 2 chronicles 7:14 says, if my people who are called by my name will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven. I will forgive their sins and heal their land. This was the verse that we were singing in all the prayer rallies leading up to EDSA 2. It is still the verse that we still keep singing today whenever we get together to pray and to celebrate EDSA 2.

The first stanza of the song version quotes the verse. And the second stanza is our answer. It declares that we are complying with God's condition for hearing, forgiving and healing us. The second stanza of the song that we all sing in EDSA 2, in EDSA commemorations, tells the Lord that we are calling Him by name, that we are humbling ourselves and praying and seeking his face and turning from our wicked ways. Then we ask Him to hear from heaven and forgive our sins and heal our land.

What does it mean to humble ourselves? For each one of us there is a particular meaning. For me, it means staying detached from the trappings and perks of power. It means, reaching out to those who still carry hatred or cynicism in their heart. It means, forgiving those who have done wrong rather than using my power to do vengeance upon them. And what does it mean to pray?

Let us recall the four kinds of prayers and let us pray in all those different ways. First, there is a prayer of adoration. Let us worship God, simply because he is God, and not only because he is good to us.

Second, there is a prayer of thanksgiving. Let us indeed thank the Lord for all our blessings. Let us not think for a moment that these blessings that we have, we have achieved by ourselves. That we have achieved them because of our own talents and efforts. Because our talents come from God. And our efforts come from the energy provided by his grace. And when we reflect on it, we realize how much God's role is, and how little our role is in the blessings that we enjoy.

Again, when I reflect upon it myself, the best example is myself. It was God who planned that I would be vice president at the time of EDSA 2. It was God who orchestrated, revenge that made me president today. Indeed, in a sense, I'm more fortunate than Tita Cory because she had to lose her husband to martyrdom before she became eligible for the presidency. All I had to do was to be vice president at the right time. And therefore, that to me, is one great source of a gratitude to the Lord. And once again, I say, to God be the glory that I am president of the Philippines today.

Third, is the prayer of contrition. This is the prayer that we were singing in EDSA 2. This is the prayer that we are singing today when we gather together to celebrate our freedom, our democracy and the restored morality of our nation. Even today we ask God to forgive our sins. Indeed, the true God is such a forgiving God, so different from the God that the pagans worship or the gods of mythology whose vengeance makes up the bulk of the stories we read about them. But for our true God to forgive us, he said in chronicles and in many passages, that we must first call Him by name, humble ourselves and pray. This is the prayer of contrition.

Let us not pretend to be so perfect. Let us accept that we are imperfect, that there are times when we do wrong. And let us take advantage of our forgiving God by asking for his pardon.

Finally, there is a prayer of petition. And this is the prayer that almost everyone prays. People may forget to pray in worship, or to pray in thanksgiving, or to pray for forgiveness, but we are always asking God for so many things. But he is such a good God that he wants us to ask. He wants us to petition. He said: ask and you shall receive.

In today's theme, we are petitioning God to heal our land. Indeed, our land needs so much healing. But I give thanks to the Lord that the healing will probably be made easier from now on, because the mainstream of our society is united. The unity of our society's mainstream shows in the results of the last may elections. It shows in the eroded capability of those who have been seeking to grab or re-grab power. It shows in the way that the masses have been responding to our outreach. It shows in the fact, in the economy, that after all the reforms in the Bureau of Internal Revenue have been started with great difficulty, last month at last, the BIR exceeded its revenue target. The unity of our mainstream shows in the fact that notwithstanding the doomsayers, here to date, we are still p11 billion pesos below our deficit ceiling. And we can still overspend by p11 billion in the months to come, and still be within our targets. The unity shows in the fact that despite, again, the doomsayers, that the unofficial results of the ARMM elections indicate that Marawi City and the province of Basilan and possibly Cotabato City have voted to join the expanded Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

All these show that the mainstream is united. And when the mainstream is united, the healing is made more possible. But the healing that our land needs today is not really among the mainstream, it is the healing that is needed between those in the mainstream and those in the margins. Healing between the administration and the political opposition. Healing between civil society and those who attempted to do an EDSA 3. Healing between the indifference among the majority and the bitter among the poorest of the poor.

The Lord says in chronicles, that he will heal our land if we turn from our wicked ways. He will heal the hurts between the administration and the opposition if we show in our actions that while no one is above the law, yet no one in power exacts vengeance on the vanquished.

He will heal the cancer within the civil society and the minor but multitude of players of EDSA 3 if we turn away from sanctimony. He will heal the prejudice within the middle forces and the lumpen if we comprehend rather than condescend.

And today, I pray to the Lord, give us the discernment to differentiate between prosecution and persecution. The difference between being principled and being pharisaical. The difference between imposing our values on others and imbibing and emphasizing with their sentiments.

We are, at the moment, of great spiritual opportunities. To choose to do right in the light of God's will. Those of you who are here are devoted to the mission of leading the spiritual renewal and strengthening our people. There are many who are not here, but also devoted as well to that mission.

I call on all of you and all of them to continue the prayers that we are doing today. And I hope we will do it at least for the entire week. Let us make this week a week of prayer and fasting, for the intention of glorifying the lord, of praising Him for his goodness to our nation, of begging his forgiveness for our sins as a nation, and as individuals, and of asking Him to bless and heal our land.

When I read the bible this morning, as I do everyday, I purposely avoided reading what we had to read in the prayer breakfast today. And so, looking at other readings, I had a chance to reflect upon Matthew chapter 18 verses 21, up to chapter 19 verses 1, which tells of the episode, when peter approached Jesus and asked Him, Lord, if my brother sins against me, how often must I forgive Him? And Jesus answered: I say to you not seven times but seventy seven times. Indeed, if God can forgive us, each time we repent, then we can do no less to those who hurt us especially those who are reaching out to us.

This is one reason why the Lord's Prayer is a perfect prayer. It asks God to forgive our sins as we forgive those who sin against us. The Lord's Prayer is also the perfect prayer because it begins with worship before going into supplication. Hollowed be Thy name, Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, before he says, give us this day our daily bread. We are not perfect, but we can say the perfect prayer, the Lord's Prayer and other kinds of prayers that the Lord teaches us thru the bible. Indeed, we must say the perfect prayer. This is our duty and our privilege because we are God's special people.

In the chronicles verse that Tita Cory read, God says: if my people who are called by my name. We are that people called by his name. We are Christians. In fact, we are the only Christian nation in Asia. And yet, at the same time, we must remember that our country, our society is a multi-ethnic society. And even if our Muslim brothers call themselves by another name, we are all worshipping the same God; only he is called by a different name. We are his new chosen people. Let us live as his people who are called by his name. Let us humble ourselves. Let us pray. Let us seek his face.

How do we seek God's face? Again, for each one of us, we have a different inspiration on how we must seek God's face. And let me share my inspiration on how I must seek God's face. Where do we see the face of Jesus?

When I was praying as I was writing this speech in prayer, the answer came to me in the story of the last judgment, where the Lord said: when you did it to the least of my brethren, you did it to me, says the Lord. And I ask you my friends, in this prayer breakfast, to pray for me — that I must always seek the face of God in the faces of the least of our brethren. In the faces of the like of Jason, Jomar and Erwin, the children from Payatas who sent me their message of petition in paper boats which they sent floating down the Pasig river. In the faces of those like them who look for a home, a school, a job. In the face of those who do not eat three meals a day. Pray for me because as President of the Philippines, it is imperative that I seek the face of God in their faces. It is imperative that I worship Him by serving them. It is imperative that I do not stumble as I seek to empower 150,000 urban poor families a year to be able to buy their own homes. As I seek to build schools for the unserved 4,500 barangays within the next three years. As I seek to create a million jobs in agriculture before this administration ends. As I seek to provide food for every table. I need you to help me to pray so that I can do what is right, do my best and let God take care of the rest, in providing the jobs, the schooling, the homes and the food on every table.

Let us then unite in the spirit of God's undying love. And reaffirm through prayer and action that moral and spiritual strength are, indeed, the key elements of God's good leadership.

For while the new century bring us a new economy, with all its new opportunities and new perils, the moral imperatives remain the same: to worship and love God with our whole heart, our whole mind, our whole soul and to love our neighbor as we love ourselves. Let us unite in faith that we may be able to generate the strength that we need to bring us to the fulfillment of God's promise of a land that has been tilled.

Today's gathering is a blessed way to start a day in prayer, united in the spirit of fellowship and proclaiming God's promises on the family. It is also a good way to start our work in the Lord.

Philippians chapter 4 verses 6 tells us, that in everything by prayer and by supplication, with thanks giving, let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of god which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Jesus Christ. Let prayer, indeed, be our strongest bond as a people. Let us pray for each other. And as Philippians says, let our petitions be known to God. He knows, of course, what we want even before we have asked it. But we must ask it because we must humble. We must humble ourselves and pray. Because he is our God and we are his people.

Let our prayers be filled with praise and worship and adoration, for our dear Lordunceasingly rewards us with his grace and blessings. Let us pray for the fulfillment of our nation and our people as God's special nation, God's special people. Amen.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 21st National Prayer Breakfast. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213154/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8704&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 48th Annual Convention of the PHILSUTECH

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 48th Annual Convention of the PHILSUTECH

[Delivered in Cebu City, August 16, 2001]

Thank you for inviting me once again to participate in your discussion of the Philippine sugar industry. PHILSUTECH is familiar to me, and I am a familiar face to PHILSUTECH. Because all these years that we have been having your conventions, almost every year, you would invite me because, as you all know, my husband's family is in the sugar industry, and you have always considered me as a member of the sugar industry. Now, you have the sugar industry in Malacañang.

And so, of course, it is important that in your first convention during my presidency, I should be here once again. As we all know, being members of this industry. For a long time, the sugar industry was a bastion of Philippine agriculture. Its history has, in many ways, been the history of our economy and our society. Its problems are the nation's problems. Its hopes are our people's hopes. Today, more than ever, we need to strengthen the link between the sugar industry, the government and the public.

We inherited very difficult problems. From 2.5 million jobs less four years ago, unemployment now stands at four million. From a budget surplus in 1997 of more than a billion pesos, now my government inherited a deficit exceeding P140 billion. I am only so grateful to the lord, and to my economic managers, that near to date, we are now P11 billion below our budget ceiling and, therefore, there is room to spend more on agriculture, more on the sugar industry.

Between 1997 and the year 2000, poverty incident rose from 37 percent of the population to 40 percent. And that is indeed a large number. And unlike the situation in 1997, when a battered Asia could still lean on the strength of the advanced economies, today, our main trading partners like Japan and America, which also is the main market for our sugar are slowing down as well. These are tremendous challenges enough to face any new administration, but I will not back down. I will not shirk responsibilities that any president of the Philippines must be prepared to assume and to discharge. However, I cannot do it alone. I cannot fight poverty alone. I am not a miracle worker. And all of us must do our share.

Our challenge is clear — fight poverty. To succeed, our national agenda must revolve around four components:

the first, is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; the second, is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity and that includes sugar;

the third component is a social bias towards the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan; and the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

So much remains to be done to modernize agriculture. Crucial to the modernization of the agricultural sector is the attainment of stability of productivity growth. And with the agricultural sector accounting for half of the population and 77 percent of the poor, it is most important to be able to broaden the base of rural development. We cannot accept that increasing poverty and inequality are necessary caused, a result of development. Therefore, the most vulnerable in these changing times must be sheltered from the pains of adjustment to the new economy. So, therefore, in agriculture, our specific objective is to create one million jobs in the agricultural sector. And we will do this through several means. The implementation of the agriculture and fisheries modernization act of 1997 is our main means, specifically, targeting public investments in the identified key strategic agricultural and fisheries development zones, or SAFDZ.

Just now, before we were greeted at the airport by governor Garcia, Gerry Montemayor and I came from the tiny town of Pintuyan, in the far away island of In the Province of Southern Leyte. And we went there in order to launch the strategic agricultural and fishery development zone in that town of Pintuyan, because we want to begin the development of agriculture in a way by which it will produce one million jobs in the next three years.

When I was in Pintuyan, I instructed secretary Montemayor that hoping that the mayors of the 18 towns of southern Leyte will contribute P1 million through the identified agricultural projects in every development zone for agriculture and fisheries in their town, the D.A. will also contribute P1 million for every town. So in the 18 towns of southern Leyte, I instructed secretary Montemayor to distribute P1 million each or P18 million as the minimum contribution of the department of agriculture for agricultural modernization. We shall be doing this in every town in the Philippines. At 1,500 towns, the given minimum contribution of P1 million for the identified programs, already pre-identified programs for agricultural modernization. That means P1.5 billion. But since we are below our deficit ceiling by P11 billion as of last month, near to date, I told Gerry Montemayor, this is the time to release P1.5billion to start agricultural modernization to start the creation for the one million jobs. Because by releasing that money at this time, we will not suffer inflationary pressures and we will not suffer pressures to raise the interest rate. This is the best time to begin to spend on agricultural modernization, this particular month of august. So I think it is good that the PHILSUTECH convention is being held this month. Because, of course, of the 1,500 municipalities all over the country, I am sure many, many, many of these are in sugar. And therefore the project money that will be released, will be released for sugar modernization in those areas identified as key competitive areas for the crop of sugar.

Another way by which we will look for the one million jobs in agriculture is broad based development with targeted policies and programs to shelter the most vulnerable groups from their adjustment Attendance to development, especially safety nets for sectors affected by globalization. And to the extent that we will see that, indeed, sugar is affected adversely by globalization, then a great portion of that fund for safety net should go to sugar.

The agricultural and fisheries modernization act or AFMA, defines the principles that we followed in modernizing the agricultural sector and specified in detail the mandated programs and streams of public investments necessary. This is not a new law , but this is the first time that we will be implementing AFMA fully. Because the losses that in the first year of implementation, we must provide P20 billion for agricultural modernization. The budget we inherited provided only P14 billion. And while keeping with the difficult target of keeping our budget deficit at only P145 billion by making sacrifices in many other kinds of spending, we were able to increase the allocation for AFMA by P6 billion. And this year, we can, for the first time, comply with the law, that P20 billion should go to agricultural modernization. AFMA's major provisions include reforms and reorganization in the provision of public production and marketing services. For instance, there will now be a focus and concentration on public investment in what I have told you earlier, the identified strategic agriculture and fisheries development zone. These are defined geographical areas of competitiveness and comparative advantage based on bio-physical and socio-economic endowment. And I would suggest that PHILSUTECH should Immediately with the regional director of agriculture in your region to identify where the SAFDZS are in the various areas where sugar is being planted.

Another provision in AFMA is the crafting and execution of medium and long term agriculture and fisheries modernization plans in full consultations with all stakeholders and based on this strategic agricultural and fisheries development zones. I hope that this convention, PHILSUTECH, the biggest convention of the sugar industry, will be a way by which the department of agriculture and the sugar regulatory agency can consult with the stakeholders as we draw up the medium and long term plan for the sugar industry.

Another provision of AFMA is the phase out and consolidation of all directed credit into the agro industry modernization credit and financing program so that you will all know where to borrow. And right now where to borrow is the land bank of the Philippines.

Also in AFMA, there is a provision for strategic principles and guidelines for irrigation and watershed development providing for economic cost recovery and the devolution of communal systems to local government units, promotion of private sector led development of minor systems. For the first time, in the history of Philippine government, this year, we are providing P6 billion for irrigation. Of the P6 billion for irrigation, P5 billion 600 million is for ongoing large irrigation projects.

And I am happy to know that this September, we'll have three of those major irrigation projects graduating so that they can provide for irrigation for thousands of hectares of farmland. One of them is in Luzon, and that is the CASECNANDAM which shall be opened on September 28. The other two are the Cabulnan and the Malmar Irrigation System in Mindanao. Malmar is thirteen years in the making. And actually, I said, that if it will not be finished this September, I will give it to the army engineering brigade to complete. And lo and behold! It will be finished this September.

So we will inaugurate those. And what about the Visayas? I think the best way to do irrigation, the quickest gestation period is in communal irrigation systems, small water impounding projects and shallow tube wells and that is where we are putting the rest of the P400 million that are still available for spending this year. Of the P400 million, P300 million have been obligated. And the bidding started at the beginning of this month. P100 million is what is still available for new programming. And I hope that the sugar industry will work with the department of agriculture to see where you need to have new irrigation projects for this year, but even if you don't fit into the 100 for this year, next year there will be another P6 billion available for agriculture modernization and irrigation.

Another provision of the AFMA is the establishment of the national marketing assistance program and the national information network. And I believe these two together will make up over a billion pesos of expenditures. And this is important, therefore, that you all touch base with the marketing assistance units, although in sugar we don't have much of a problem in marketing, because you already have a sugar quota as your main market. But this portion, the marketing assistance program, includes assistance in negotiations, assistance in market access. And I think that the PHILSUTECH should take advantage of this so that you can hire the appropriate experts to give us a good bargaining leverage for negotiating for greater market access, or at least for protecting our market access, or even for protecting our domestic industry from undesired intrusions of market access into our own country.

Another provision of AFMA is the coordination between the department of agriculture, the DPWH and the local government units in the formulation and implementation of the agricultural and fisheries infrastructure plant. I hope that every province and every district will have an agricultural fishery plant jointly for the department of agriculture.

This is probably one of John-john Osmeña's first job, as chairman or presiding officer of the provincial development council of Cebu. Another provision is, product standardization and consumer safety, and establishment of the bureau of agricultural and fisheries product standards. And so, these are the main provisions of AFMA; and these are what we will seek to carry out. Because a law is a dead letter law. To a dead industry, if it is not implemented. And now we will begin to implement this law in full.

Agricultural modernization will include, of course, measures to modernize the sugar industry so that we can shift from what we refuse to accept? That this is a sunset industry. Remember many years ago, they were telling us that sugar is a sunset industry, but we have never accepted that, and we must not accept that. We must make it one that is competitive in the new economy by modernizing. And PHILSUTECH is a great vehicle for modernization.

Yes, the sugar industry has its challenges, but it also has its opportunity. The increase in sugar production, this crop year, for example, shows how Filipinos can surmount adversity and perform better. Imagine at that time, when our major markets, the U.S., slowing down, we experienced an increase in production. That is a good sign for this industry.

Our sugar farmers and millers worked harder to produce 1.8 million metric tons of sugar. And you increased your output this year by more than 11 percent from the previous year's production of 1.6 million metric tons. And that means we must give congratulations to the sugar industry for its increased production and increased productivity.

This performance is a collective effort of all the players in the sugar industry – from the field laborers to the planters, the male workers, the millers, the truckers, the shippers, the traders, all contributed to this exemplary performance.

The Philippine sugar technology association or PHILSUTECH, contributed much to this development. The primary function of PHILSUTECH, as I am aware, is to disseminate technology. And you have, by disseminating technology, contributed to the progress of the industry. The industry absorbs and adopts new technologies because of the thrust of PHILSUTECH to inform and to educate the players of the industry about this development.

So your theme for this year, “addressing challenges, exploring opportunities,” reflects the progressive thinking of the industry. PHILSUTECH, I recall, was established by the sugar industry on its own, with operations funded out of contributions from the producers. And now, we are beginning to see the results in productivity.

I understand that the distribution of high yielding sugarcane varieties was one of the reasons for the increase in production this crop year. I understand, too, that you expect productivity to improve further because the industry has already laid out its action plan for the next five to ten years. This is a model for other agricultural sectors to emulate. And because you have already laid out your five to ten years plan for the industry, this is what the department of agriculture should now examine and adopt in its own medium term plan because every sector is supposed to have a medium term plan that is done in coordination with the department of agriculture so that we can synchronize your own private investments as well as where the government will spend its P20 billion a year on agricultural modernization.

To provide initial funding for your action plan, I have facilitated the release of P278 million out of the total funding of P600 million from the sugar And because providentially, yesterday, Secretary Camacho gave a good news that we are P11 billion below our deficit ceiling, I think, Leony, you should work for the balance of the whole P600 million to be released to the sugar industry.

This fund will be used by the sugar industry through the PHILSUTECH, through your ...district development councils rather, to promote productivity. For such projects such as the setting up tractor pools for small farmers, the improvement of micro-propagation laboratory, the establishment of field nurseries, the purchase of road building equipment for the repair and maintenance of farm- to mill roads and the establishment of organic fertilizer plant using sugar by-products.

How will we To P600 million if it is spent on these things? Some of the money will be spent for farm-to-mill roads. This will actually be part of the P1.5 billion that we have allocated this year for farm-to-market-roads. And as for your nurseries and your laboratories, this will be part of the P2 billion that for the first time, the government is allocated for research and development in agricultural modernization.

Your leaders visited me in Malacañang a few months ago, and gave me a list of policy issues. Most of these issues are related to tariff, WTO and AFTA policies. You requested to modify your duties on fructose and sugar with flavoring or color. The tariff commission conducted a public hearing last June 28, that is two months ago. Therefore, I ask secretary Montemayor to convey my instructions to the commission to report the results to the Cabinet Committee of the Tariff and Related Matters immediately.

You ask to transfer sugar from the temporary exclusion list to the sensitive list of the CETT, AFTA, the Cabinet Committee has approved your request. Our negotiators will bring the proposal formally to the AFTA council meeting in the month of September — next month. However, they have already laid the groundwork for the transfer since they have discussed this at various meetings of the senior economic officials of the AFTA countries. I know also that we need to address your problems with regard to farm-to-mill road and the installation of irrigation systems. That is why I said, it is important to let you know, that for the first time in history, as I said earlier, the government is budgeting P1.5 billion for farm-to-market-road which will include your farm-to-mill-roads. And P6 billion with irrigation within the next twelve months. And that is why I advise you to work for the department of agriculture to make sure that a large part of your needs are included in the detailed program for farm to market road and irrigation of the department of agriculture.

In turn, I ask you to use labor intensive methods to contribute to the one million jobs that we need to find in agriculture. We need to create one million jobs in agriculture over the next three years. Our growth rate so far is above average. But if you only use the same old method, this growth rate can result in jobless growth. That is why we need to specifically use labor enhancing technology rather than labor displacing technology.

The global and political environment has been harsh and trying in recent times. It has been pushing us to the limits of our capability and resources, but we will prevail. We will prevail because the mainstream of our society is united. Sugar belongs to the mainstream of our society, and let us all therefore be united. Let us remain united, that we can work together to alleviate the pressures bearing down on our people. With the increased production of sugar, I hope the trend towards the reduction of sugar import will continue. And I hope this will eventually lead to the attainment of self-sufficiency in sugar. If we continue our unity, better times will lie ahead for our people, not just for a few planters and millers and traders, but for the many workers in the industry and other industries as well.

Let us therefore be united. United in vision. United in perseverance. United in hard and honest labor. If we continue our unity, we can win the battle against poverty within the decade and find the rightful place for our beloved sugar industry in the new economy in the 21st century.

Thank you

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 48th Annual Convention of the PHILSUTECH. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213212/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8706&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Brunei State Dinner

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Brunei State Dinner

[Delivered on August 22, 2001]

I thank his majesty for the privilege of being here in your beautiful and prosperous country.

I thank his majesty for the warm welcome and gracious hospitality accorded to my delegation, and for the excellent arrangements made for the visit.

His majesty and the people of Brunei and the Philippines are continuously reinforced by frequent visits at the highest levels between our two countries. This is a tradition that is as old as many centuries. It dates back to the time of his majesty's ancestors and mine.

One such visit was that of Rajah Lakandula, my ancestor and a descendant of Sultan Bolkiah V. Around the year 1575, Rajah Lakandula came to Brunei to visit his cousin Sultan Saiful Rajah.

Previous Philippine presidents have visited Brunei as well, and his majesty has visited the Philippines several times. I thank his majesty for receiving me in Brunei in 1995 when I was still a senator, and I cherish the times that I had the privilege of welcoming his majesty to Manila when I was vice president.

Now, I come to Brunei again, this time as president and as your state guest. I come not only in the name of friendship and neighborliness but also to pay my respects to his majesty the sultan as the current leader of ASEAN. The original leader of BIMP-EAGA, as a member of the committee of eight of the organization of Islamic conference, as an economic giant, and as a benevolent host of overseas Filipino workers.

I am excited that my first ASEAN summit as head of state will take place in Brunei. Knowing that the Brunei government did an outstanding job hosting APEC last year, we are confident that Brunei's hosting of the ASEAN summit this year will be just as spectacular.

ASEAN is especially important to my administration for two special reasons. One is our high hopes in BIMP-EAGA and the second is our anxiousness for the early conclusion of the code of conduct in the South China Sea.

On BIMP-EAGA, my delegation and I express our faith in his majesty's leadership for the active revival of BIMP-EAGA, not only at a sub-regional level but also at a bilateral level. On the South China Sea, it gratifies me to know that Brunei agrees with the Philippines on the settlement of disputes in accordance with recognized principles of international law.

Your majesty, I thank Brunei for contributing to peace and development in the Philippines by being a member of the committee of eight charged by the O.I.C. to monitor peace and development in Mindanao. And I ask Brunei to be an advocate to help explain to the other O.I.C. members what we the Philippines is trying to do in Mindanao.

Your majesty, today, our two countries signed a memorandum of understanding on defense cooperation. I trust that the military cooperation provided for in this agreement will help to ensure peace in Mindanao. Hopefully, it will also lead to more collaboration in other areas such as fighting transnational crimes.

Your majesty, Brunei is a small country of 300,000 people but it is a petroleum giant. Tomorrow two Bruneian corporations and two Philippine corporations all associated with Shell will sign two agreements. One for joint exploration and the other for training our people with regard to running our new gas pipeline. But the most welcome news I can bring home to our people is that his majesty is instructing his investment managers to study the petrochemical consortium proposed by the Philippines with a view to participating in the said consortium. Your majesty, my gratitude for this is boundless. This development is as important to my administration as Brunei's 0 million budgetary support loan was to the administration of then president Corazon Aquino. Incidentally, with regard to that loan, I am proud to report that since the grace period has expired, our government is now religiously paying it back.

I am grateful to his majesty for acknowledging that there is plenty of room for expanding and deepening bilateral linkages. For instance, I understand that there is a proposed agreement on the avoidance of double taxation and the prevention of fiscal evasion with respect to income. This and other cooperative endeavors can be pursued in the forthcoming Philippine-Brunei Darussalam joint commission for bilateral cooperation, which is scheduled to be convened next year. Another bilateral linkage is the training that Royal Brunei Airways is doing for Cebu Pacific, the Philippines newest international airline.

Tomorrow another Philippine international airline, air Philippines, will sign an agreement for chartered flights between Brunei and the Philippines. This will certainly boost tourism between us.

Your majesty, I come also to express the gratitude of my people to Brunei for being a second home to 20,000 Filipino workers. For almost 50 years now, Filipino workers have been part of Brunei's development. Brunei has been a benevolent and considerate host to the Filipino community.

And I thank his majesty for repeatedly acknowledging the contributions made by the Filipinos in Brunei and I am confident that my countrymen can continue to count on Brunei's open doors in the years ahead. One indication of this continuing benevolence is the agreement mentioned by his majesty to be signed tomorrow that will accredit Filipino seafarers for service on Bruneian vessels.

Your majesty, in this spirit of common historical and cultural heritage and mutual interests and goals, which are the anchors of our close bilateral relations, I am confident that the cooperation and friendship between our two nations will continue to flourish well into the future.

In behalf of the members of my delegations, I wish to reiterate our heartfelt gratitude for the hospitality accorded us and the excellent arrangements made for our visit. I look forward to your state visit to the Philippines as well. Meanwhile, my countrymen will wait for you, and in the meantime, they join me in wishing your majesty continued happiness and good health. May the blessings of god almighty be upon you as you lead your nation and people to even greater prosperity and success.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during Brunei State Dinner. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212955/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8700&Itemid=38

Departure Speech of President Arroyo for Brunei Darussalam and Singapore

Departure Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines For Brunei Darussalam and Singapore

[Delivered at NAIA, August 22, 2001]

Senate president Franklin Drilon, speaker de Venecia, the ASEAN ambassadors, members of the cabinet, the chief of staff of the armed forces and the commanding generals, other distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen, my countrymen.

Today, I am once again embarking on a journey to strengthen and reinvigorate existing fraternal ties with our ASEAN neighbors. This time with Negara Brunei Darussalam, and immediately thereafter, Singapore – my second and third state visits as President of the Philippines.

A feature of foreign relations is the universal practice of exchanging state and official visits. Generally, state visits are those made by heads of state and government. While official visits are those made by other officials. If circumstances do not warrant a formal state visit, visiting heads of state or government are accord of the courtesies given in official visits.

State visits are not primarily working trips, but are designed primarily to promote goodwill. In general, state visits are vehicles for improved or closer relations and better understanding between the nations concerned.

In making state visits, it is expected that the head of state assure the domestic conditions justify her travel abroad. Thus, I did not schedule any state visit during my first six months as president because we were still in the period of consolidation after EDSA II.

When I made my first state visit in this month to Malaysia, I had to satisfy myself that domestic situation justified our departure for abroad. Indication of a satisfactory local situation was the fact that we had started peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and the National Democratic Front; our may elections were peaceful and its results validated the unity of the mainstream; Congress gave bilateral support to the power sector reform or law; and our program of government had been launched in my State of the Nation Address.

I intend to keep my state visits to a minimum, because I believe that my homework will not permit me to leave the country often. However, it is essential that I make state or official visits to, at least, the original ASEAN countries.

In Brunei, where I am visiting upon the invitation of his majesty the sultan, I will place particular emphasis on the intensification of activities in southern Philippines which forms part of the BIMP-EAGA.

The sultan of Brunei has been a leader in this sub-regional grouping. I will call for the reinvigoration of the BIMP-EAGA through collaborative projects which I hope to flesh out in the state visit.

I will also have meetings with regard to possible investments of Brunei in the Philippine petrochemical industry. I will discuss issues of defense in order to ensure a conducive security environment as is expected of the ASEAN community of nations.

After my state visit to Negara Brunei Darussalam, I will immediately proceed to Singapore, upon the invitation of his Excellency President S. R. Nathan.

The last time I visited Singapore as vice president, the prime minister go was enthusiastic about cooperation between our two countries with regard to information and communication technology. This will be the theme of my state visit to Singapore.

During the visit, we will also enter into a tourism twinning arrangement with Singapore, wherein Singapore will help us promote tourism to the Philippines, not only among Singaporeans but also among 3rd country tourists, as a package with visits to Singapore. To facilitate the expected increase in tourism traffic, the Philippines has decided to permit a larger sitting capacity for Singapore-manila flights.

I look forward to meeting with the members of the Filipino community both in Brunei and in Singapore. We have a strong presence of about 20,000 Filipinos in Brunei, many of whom are employed in skilled and semi-skilled industries.

In Singapore, with more than 100,000 overseas Filipino worker-investors, I will inaugurate a 28-room bayanihan center where they can upgrade their skills, to remain competitive and to prepare them for eventual reintegration into the Philippine work force upon their return.

I will bring our overseas countrymen encouragement from back home. As well as housing benefits to include them in the 100,000 economic low cost housing that they want to build every year.

I ask for your prayers and blessings and look forward to returning with meaningful results.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Departure Speech for Brunei Darussalam and Singapore. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409213010/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8701&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo at the Dinner hosted by the Philippine-Singapore Business Council, August 25, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the Dinner hosted by the Philippine-Singapore Business Council

[Delivered at the Mandarin Hotel, Singapore, August 25, 2001]

PHILIPPINES AND SINGAPORE AS ECONOMIC PARTNERS

I would like to thank the organizers of this business forum for putting together this occasion to discuss the new developments happening in many sectors of our economy.

My Cabinet Secretaries who made their presentations have already expounded on the latest developments insofar as the Philippine economy is concerned.

You've heard about the progress made in several areas, as well as the reforms we have undertaken and other market corrections we intend to go through. You heard it from them, and I would like to confirm that they spoke with my full authority.

Some of the reforms are not easy. There is no single formula for the myriad of the complex issues that our economic sector faces.

But our policy goals are straightforward. We want to win the battle against poverty within the decade by being competitive, by finding our niche in the new economy, by creating jobs for the Filipino people.

To attain such goals, we are ready to reform, and reform with strong and serious political will.

Our competitive advantage is clear and direct: human capital is the most valuable resource of the Philippines. Its strength is in its rich pool of well-educated, highly trainable, culturally adaptable, and English-speaking work force.

We have government-declared economic zones within the confines of over a hundred industrial and business parks across our vast archipelago well-suited to a variety of economic activities from agro-industrial manufacturing to high technology, this is in addition to the tandem of Clark and Subic, our showcase freeport ecozones. The choice of feature and location is wide, like the menu in a good restaurant.

I am reminded of the call during the National Day Rally made by Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong, with whom I will meet after this forum to discuss what our two economies can do further together.

Prime Minister Goh saw the need to broaden the basis of Singapore's growth and the need for a new economic model for the future. The Prime Minister urged Singaporeans that as they had made great strides against the odds in the past, you can do so again in facing the longer term challenges for the new Singapore.

In consonance with that call, I urge you to include the Philippines as part of the basis for your growth.

The new economic model calls for going beyond the territory and into the region.

The Prime Minister also said that the years ahead will be very difficult. But we have done it before, and we can do it again. “We have the resources,” he said, “We have the ability, and you can do it.”

I believe your Prime Minister and I believe that together, we can be partners in overcoming the economic difficulties of the 21st century.

The Philippines can be Singapore’s partner especially in the high-growth sectors that inherently draw strength from human resources.

The Philippines has land and human resources. Singapore can be the Philippines’ partner as a provider of technology, capital, and marketing know-how.

The combined assets of “our two economies augurs well for business collaboration.

Thus, this is our call to you in the business sector – to rally and overcome the economic impasse that the world faces. And as you do this join us as we dare to be bold in our national ambitions. Join us as we boldly go forward to face both the perils and the opportunities of the 21st century.

Come to the Philippines. Thank you!

Source: University of the Philippines Main Library

Speech of President Arroyo during the Dinner hosted by Philippine-Singapore Business Council

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Dinner hosted by Philippine-Singapore Business Council

[Delivered at the Mandarin Oriental Hotel, Singapore, August 25, 2001]

I would like to thank the organizers of this business forum for putting together this occasion to discuss the new developments happening in many sectors of our economy.

My cabinet secretaries who made their presentations have already expounded on the latest developments insofar as the Philippine economy is concerned.

You've heard about the progress made in several areas, as well as the reforms we have undertaken and other market corrections we intend to go through. You heard it from them, and I would like to confirm that they spoke with my full authority.

Some of the reforms are not easy. There is no single formula for the myriad of the complex issues that our economic sector faces.

But our policy goals are straightforward. We want to win the battle against poverty within the decade by being competitive, by finding our niche in the new economy, by creating jobs for the Filipino people.

To attain such goals, we are ready to reform, and reform with strong and serious political will.

Our competitive advantage is clear and direct: human capital is the most valuable resource of the Philippines. Its strength is in its rich pool of well-educated, highly trainable, culturally adaptable, and English-speaking work force.

We have government-declared economic zones within the confines of over a hundred industrial and business parks across our vast archipelago well-suited to a variety of economic activities from agro-industrial manufacturing to high technology, this is in addition to the tandem of Clark and Subic, our showcase freeport ecozones. The choice of feature and location is wide, like the menu in a good restaurant.

I am reminded of the call during the national day rally made by Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong, with whom I will meet after this forum to discuss what our two economies can do further together.

Prime Minister Goh saw the need to broaden the basis of Singapore's growth and the need for a new economic model for the future. The prime minister urged Singaporeans that as they had made great strides against the odds in the past, you can do so again in facing the longer-term challenges for the new Singapore.

In consonance with that call, I urge you to include the Philippines as part of the basis for your growth.

The new economic model calls for going beyond the territory and into the region.

The prime minister also said that the years ahead will be very difficult. But we have done it before, and we can do it again. "we have the resources," he said, "we have the ability, and you can do it."

I believe your prime minister and I believe that together, we can be partners in overcoming the economic difficulties of the 21st century.

The Philippines can be Singapore's partner especially in the high-growth sectors that inherently draw strength from human resources.

The Philippines has land and human resources. Singapore can be the Philippines' partner as a provider of technology, capital, and marketing know-how.

The combined assets of our two economies augurs well for business collaboration.

Thus, this is our call to you in the business sector – to rally and overcome the economic impasse that the world faces. And as you do this join us as we dare to be bold in our national ambitions. Join us as we boldly go forward to face both the perils and the opportunities of the 21st century.

Come to the Philippines. Thank you!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Dinner hosted by Philippine-Singapore Business Council. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212948/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8697&Itemid=38

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during her visit to Pampanga

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During her visit to Pampanga

[Delivered on August 30, 2001]

A pleasant good morning to all of you. And I join Mayor Lazatin in welcoming you, not only to the Philippines but to my province of Pampanga.

I think I can also welcome you in behalf of the department of social welfare and development. Because when I was vice president, that was my work, I was secretary of social welfare and development . And now that the secretary is in Indonesia on official business, I told her, okay, dinky, I'll take care of welcoming them in your behalf. So in behalf of the DSWD, welcome too.

In fact, I was telling Lulu Pablo that it's a good thing — I am able to come today, because when I was in DSWD and we had this consultation in Subic, I could not make it. Now that I am president, I can make it. I am very glad to be here at last.

And so to all of you, I truly congratulate you for this laudable undertaking, the sixth global consultation on child welfare services, which is the fourth to be held in this country.

The enduring partnership which you have forged since the first global consultation in 1993 should continue to be nurtured and strengthened. This partnership includes the DSWD which is the current agency of the Inter Country Adoption Board, or ICAB; the child caring agencies, both NGOs and the reception study centers for children without whom the entire program of child care services would certainly not have taken off and, of course, the foreign adoption agencies, our international partners in a united effort to give to our children and all the children of the world a rightful home of their own.

I think it is very fitting that we are holding these consultations here in Angeles city. Because Mayor Lazatin has told you earlier about what he is very proud of — his street children's home. And let me say that the street children's home of Angeles city is the best street children home outside of Makati and Muntinlupa. And Mayor Lazatin also has his own proactive street children than program in Angeles.

When I was vice president and secretary of social welfare, you may not know it mayor, but I was always monitoring the activities. Because every time we would do something in metro manila, Mayor Lazatin would do it also in Angeles city. He would also do his own echo or replication, so it's a very good place to be in, in a city that loves children and takes care of them . Who among us does not have a soft spot in our hearts for children. The roman poet Cicero once wrote that, "of all natures gift to our human race, children are the sweetest." even our lord Jesus Christ was recorded in the bible to have said to his disciples when they tried to prevent children from coming to him, "let the little children come to me, and do not hinder them for the kingdom of god belongs to such as this."

I read the bible everyday. And I remember on the day that we had our first meeting when I was still the DSWD regarding the launching of the long term plan for children, that was the reading of the day. And so I felt inspired—indeed we must not close our doors to children. And I still remember what my predecessor said — Lina Laygo, the previous secretary of social welfare, who said the most important part of her social welfare work was the work for the children. Thus, there should not be any reason for anyone to cause these innocent, sweet, and lovable members of our race any pain or sorrow. Sadly though, this is not the situation in the real world. The sad plight of many children can make many of us ashamed of ourselves — for either being indifferent, or contributing to the condition that we find these children in In this country as well as all over the world.

There is a ray of hope, however, in this day and age of computers and cell phones, of the internet, of distance education, and of teleconferences, now that we have come to realize that the youth, the most valuable resource of every country in the world, need above all, special care and protection. It is now undisputed that the state has an interest in the rights and welfare of children. With this recognition has come a consequent shift in their treatment by the state.

Whereas within the last decade or so, the primary objective of adoption laws and programs was to provide childless couples with children, now the paramount consideration in adoption is the promotion of the welfare of the child.

The two principles that now guide attempts to find homes for children eligible for adoption are:

first, decision shall be made in the best interest of the child; and second, the goal should be for permanency in a secure, stable, nurturing and loving environment.

Today, while parents remain primarily charged with the upbringing of children, numerous laws have been passed not only by your state, but also the international community, directly and indirectly affecting children. Most important among international treaties are the convention on the rights of the child, signed on November 20th 1989, and ratified by the Philippines on July 1990. The Philippines was one of the first to ratify this convention. And then we have the Hague convention on the protection of children and cooperation in respect of intercountry adoption signed on may 29,1993, and ratified by the Philippines on June 7, 1995.

While we can say that much has been done in efforts to promote the welfare of children, much remains to be done, however. Adoption has long served as means of providing care for children whose natural parents are unable to raise them for economic or other reasons, including the fact that they may have passed away. It has also become an alternative means of building a family for couples who are unable to have their own children. Many cases of adoption have been successful, in fact, I would say most cases of adoption have been successful. And countless adopted children and adoptive parents have given immeasurable joy to each other. Presently, however, there remains a need to collect information on adoption trends, adoption demand, and characteristics of children waiting to be adopted or placed in permanent care arrangements, as this information is crucial for formulating adoption and child welfare policies.

Republic act no. 8043, or the intercountry adoption act, created the intercountry board, or ICAB, which is the Philippine central authority in matters relating to the placement of Filipino children who had been cleared for intercountry adoption. The DSWD, through its programs and special projects bureau, functions as the competent authority on intercountry adoption.

This year's theme for your global consultation, I understand, is "a child's right to a family," which focuses on current trends and practices on alternative family care. This is appropriate. While we in the Philippines and many countries all over the world have now realized that adoption is not meant mainly to serve the interest of the childless couple but rather to cater to the interest of the child, so also should we now address the issue of welfare, foster care, kinship care, privacy in adoption, and research and reunion issues.

I have been watching on TV these beautiful ads looking for foster parents. Please, just for a little while somebody to love me while I am looking for somebody permanent. I hope that many volunteers come forward because of that moving advertisement looking for foster parents.

Today, it is estimated that there are about 7,000 children residing in child caring institutions throughout the country including the ones here in Angeles city. And I understand now that the consultant of the Angeles city street children's home, Father Rocky Evangelista, has moved his own street children from Makati to the Muntinlupa, Alabang facility that we facilitated for him to build a really new and big one. Well, there is also the one of chosen children which is ran by my classmate Angelita Peypoch.

I remember one time, Gina Lopez, who also loves children. There was a time when she wanted to be the one to handle the RSCC. And she said, just watch me. I will transform this into a paradise for children. When I went to Lita Peypoch Fullerton's chosen children, I said, "this is the paradise for children. I found it." but well, Gina was unable to work out the terms and conditions for RSCC, but she is building her own now in Bulacan. And I hope therefore this will be another paradise that she will be able to provide.

Still and all, a great number roam the streets day and night, living with their parents in what may be farthest from what we know as permanent homes — or just living in the streets. There is a dearth of local adopted homes. Adoption continues to be primarily a kinship affair. And illegal adoptions through simulation of births continues to be practiced unabated.

What are the statistics? How many simulated births continue to be practiced regardless of the laws that we have enacted, regardless of the international treaties and conventions that we have ratified, regardless of the right of every child to a name and to true information regarding his or her birth family. How many children are still used and abused by the very parents whose major function in life should be to protect them, care for them, help them develop their full potential.

One time when I was still vice president, I went to this squatter area where there was a house smaller than the platform. And I went there because the newspapers had reported that the mother there, or the grandmother, was selling the children for she was giving birth to sell her children. And when I went there with the social workers, and I said, why are you doing this. And as we talked and talked, it dawned on us that she didn't realize that what she was doing was a crime. She didn't realize that there was something wrong with children being produced and being made a source of the family income. So indeed, much work remains to be done not only in regulation but in education.

We may not have all the answers today, but a group such as yours, of course, is expected to move in the direction we are all longing to achieve for our children — the joy and security of a permanent family.

Today, we are gathered to acknowledge. But though we take care of our own children, we cannot do it alone. Hence, the Hague treaty of 1993 was concluded, its main purpose being to protect children's rights, and for countries to cooperate in programs that safeguard and protect those rights and their persons.

We acknowledge with gratitude the role that our partner agencies and receiving states have done and continue to do, in assisting us to protect and care for our children. In turn, we try our best to improve our services at the state of origin, both in preparing our children for intercountry adoption as well as shortening the period of waiting, making sure that interim care of acceptable standards are provided the children, be they in child caring institutions or in foster homes, and in instituting more efficient process of applications. It is my wish that by the 7th global consultation next year, we will have satisfactorily put in place the solutions that may have been arrived at in this current consultation.

When I made my state of the nation address last July, I said that within 12 months, all agencies that render frontline services are required to submit a program whereby they will cut the number of steps required for their services by one half. Today when I was coming up the stairs, I told acting secretary Lulu Pablo, "the ICAB, the intercountry adoption process, is one of those areas where we must cut the number of steps by one half."

I hope that the issues regarding the appropriate alternative family care services and statistics on the Philippines as well as other states of origin particularly in the Asian region, will be truly online and effective.

And I would like to congratulate ICAB for signing an agreement today with Ireland, yet another country that will accept with love the children coming from the Philippines.

Our work is made more urgent by the dramatic increase in international adoptions, which have occurred in many countries. Intercountry adoption has now become a worldwide phenomenon involving the migration of children over long geographical distances from one society and culture to another very different environment. In the case of Ireland, it's a catholic country. In that sense, it's the same culture; English speaking, same culture; very I.T.-advanced. Hopefully we can say that's the same culture, but there are many other differences in culture also between Ireland and the Philippines. To begin with, one is Caucasian, the other is Malay. So let us all provide the leadership and cooperation needed for the achievement of excellence in the protection of children and in the promotion of their well-being within their adoptive families, communities, and countries.

So I am very glad to be here with you today. And I congratulate ICAB and this conference. And because I am in Pampanga, and I see the Pampanga media being here – usually they want to find out not so much about the conference but what's the latest thing I have to say. And I want to tell the people of Pampanga that starting yesterday, the dredging for the floods already started. You may not necessarily see it, because I think it begins in the mouth of the river, which is outside the Pampanga boundary. There is a There, and there is another That will be pulled out from another place – a bigger one than that – so that it can proceed faster.

So I hope that as we improve the lives of the people in central Luzon, as Mayor Lazatin and And the other mayors who are here – I saw several of them here – work to improve the lives of the children in their different municipalities and cities, and all of us work to improve the lives of the children worldwide, I hope that intercourty adoption will continue to be a transparent and welcome way by which we can spread love and friendship across the world.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during her visit to Pampanga. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212906/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8676&Itemid=38

Message of Sympathy of President Arroyo to the U.S. President

Message of Sympathy of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines To the U.S. President

[Delivered on September 12, 2001]

Nothing can describe the shock and horror of all humanity in the face of the unimaginable acts of terror inflicted on the United States today. All mankind is diminished by the extreme evil we saw unleashed on your cities. The mindless violence exceeds our most extreme fears about organized terrorism.

The Filipino people extend their most profound sympathies to all the victims of this unspeakable crime. We share your grief at this moment of unprecedented tragedy. We extend whatever support we can muster at this most horrific moment.

I have asked our security authorities to immediately secure all US nationals within our jurisdiction. We will help in whatever way we can to strengthen the global effort to crush those responsible for this barbaric act.

Organized terrorism threatens no country in particular. It is a specter that threatens every thread of civilized society. All humanity must now join hands to defend decency and defeat the insanity that has invaded our age.

Millions of people are now in prayer for good to triumph over evil. Your pain is ours, too.

This is a moment that summons the best in all of us.

This will be, we hope, the day that mankind musters its resolve to end the threat of organized terrorism.

Please accept my deepest condolence and my most ardent prayers for your people. This is a dark for all who abide by the basic kindness that makes communities possible and brotherhood a desirable condition.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Message of Sympathy to the U.S. President. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212858/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8716&Itemid=38

Arrival Speech of President Arroyo from Japan

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines On her arrival from Japan

[Delivered at the Our Lady of Peñafrancia Basilica, Naga City, September 15, 2001]

I am honored to arrive from my official working visit to Japan in time to join our brother Bicolanos in commemorating our devotion to our Lady of Peñafrancia. Hindi makakaila na ang mahal na ina ang pinagdadasalan ng mga bikolano sa lahat ng bagay sa kanilang buhay, habang patuloy din siya sa pag-akay sa lahat patungo sa puso ng ating maykapal. Sa panahong ito na may pangmundong terorismo, pinagpala tayo dahil mayroon tayong ina na umaantabay at patuloy na nagsisilbing giya at gabay.

Bilang inyong Pangulo, umasa kayo na gagawin ko sa abot ng aking kakayahan na makiisa sa mga namumuno sa iba't ibang bansa upang bigyan ng lunas ang mga suliranin na nanggagaling sa napakasamang pangyayari noong nakaraang Martes.

During my trip to Japan, Prime Minister Koizumi and I jointly condemned the act of terrorism in the United States. We are united in grief and indignation with the United States and Japan, and other mourning nations, because innocent Filipinos, Americans, Japanese and other nationalities perished from the senseless violence.

As strategic allies of the United States, Prime Minister Koizumi and I confirmed our readiness to extend utmost assistance. And very importantly too, as charter members of the united nations and as part of the international coalition against terrorism, we must actively implement united nations' security council resolution number 1368 na pinasa unanimously noong September 12. Let me refer to specific paragraphs of said resolution.

Paragraph 3 calls on all states to work together urgently to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers, and sponsors of these terrorist attacks, and stresses that those responsible for aiding, supporting or harboring the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of this act, will be held accountable. Paragraph 4 calls also on the international community to redouble their efforts to prevent and suppress terrorist acts.

We must take any possible executive actions against money laundering immediately related to this. Money laundering has moved into a new category. Last week it was an economic and commercial issue. From now on, it is an international political issue. It has moved from being a question of financial corruption, and has become a question of abetting terrorists. Let us not make the world believe that the Philippines is a haven for terrorists' money, and that the terrorists themselves are not far behind.

This perception will affect not only new investments, but also existing investments. We must get a credible money laundering bill passed by September 30th. Money is now linked in the investment community's mind to terrorism.

Before the Tuesday attacks, OECD sanctions would have hurt the Philippines with foreign investors for commercial reasons. Now it has moved far beyond that. We must not let financial sanctions group the Philippines with countries who are not fighting terrorism.

Prime Minister Koizumi and I noted the stabilizing presence of the United States in the Asia Pacific region. We confirmed that our respective alliances with the U.S. have contributed to this effort. I told the prime minister that a strong U.S.-Japan security cooperation would contribute to the continued peace and stability in the region.

As between the Philippines and Japan, the Prime Minister and I confirmed our two countries' resolve to continue the close relations between us, and to elevate our cooperation into a higher level of partnership. We reaffirmed the need to immediately schedule the first politico security talks between our two countries as yet another forum to enhance dialogue between us. This politico security relationship elevates our cooperation beyond our current level of partnership, which even, as of now, is excellent; with Japan being our biggest source of Official Development Assistance, or ODA, our second largest investor, and host to a large number of Filipino workers and seamen. As our biggest source of ODA, the Japanese officials were gratified that my administration has maximized our capacity to utilize Japanese ODA. They congratulated us for bringing up the rate of disbursement on yen loan projects to 94 percent of target. This is the highest ratio in the history of ODA from Japan, and it is probably the highest in the region today.

We are encouraged by the response of Japan to our efforts and initiatives. Because even if Japan is now reducing its worldwide ODA by 10 percent in yen terms and 20 percent in dollar terms as a result of its economic difficulties, it seems that the level of its assistance to the Philippines will not be adversely affected by that global cut.

Among the projects we endorsed to JICA is a proposed resettlement project to Mt. Mayon evacuees. Among the candidate projects under the Obuchi Fund is the proposed engineering equipment project for local governments, which is strongly being pushed by the chairman of the league of governors, Camarines Sur governor Luis Villafuerte.

Japan is a major contributor to the world, which is considering the proposed Bicol river basin development project. And ongoing is the third elementary education project co-financed by the World Bank and the Japanese bank for international cooperation which involve the construction of school buildings in Bicol. In spite of the world economic slow down, major investments from Japan to the Philippines are forthcoming.

Sankyu Seiki will increase its investments in the Philippines by (US)200 million within three years. Sumitomo leads a consortium that will set up a nickel processing plant costing about (US)150 million with an expected foreign exchange revenue of (US)54 million every year.

Camabarra will expand its shipbuilding capability by (US)45 million. Honda will open a transmission plant in may next year to export 40,000 units per year to other ASEAN countries.

And as a female leader of our country, I am gratified that Prime Minister Koizumi acknowledged the issue of comfort women. He said that the Japanese government recognizes that the issue has affected the honor and dignity of former comfort women. He said that the Japanese government has provided atonement money and letters of apology from the prime minister. And I would read part of that letter as follows. And I quote: "on the occasion that the ASEAN women's fund, in cooperation with the government and people of Japan, offers atonement from the Japanese people to the former wartime comfort women, I wish to express my feelings as well. The issue of comfort women with an involvement of the Japanese military authorities at that time was a great affront to the honor and dignity of large numbers of women. As prime minister of Japan, I just extend anew my most sincere apology and remorse to all the women who underwent immeasurable and painful experiences and suffered incurable physical and psychological wounds as comfort women. We must not evade the weight of the past or should we evade our responsibilities for the future. I believe that our country, painfully aware of its moral responsibility with feelings of apology and remorse, should face up squarely to its past history and accurately convey it to future generations."

Prime Minister Koizumi said, that the government will continue to put concern on this issue. And now that the ASEAN women's fund project will be finished at the end of the year, I suggested to him that our 2 countries should think of innovative ways to extend support to the surviving comfort women.

I thank over 240,000 kababayans in Japan for their help in keeping our economy afloat and stable. Beinte singko porsiyento ng ating mga marino ay nakasakay sa bapor na mga hapon. At beinte singko porsiyento din ng ating remittances ay galing sa ating mga marino. Our overseas Filipinos in Japan generally contributed P650,000 for our poverty alleviation program.

My visit to Japan was also a sentimental journey because it gave me a chance to have a reunion with their majesties, the emperor and empress of Japan. Their majesties were guest of my father, President Diosdado Macapagal when they were still crown prince and princess in 1962. Now as President, I had a chance to renew our friendship of 40 years, a friendship not only between families, but a friendship between our peoples.

It is fitting that in this new century, my visit to Japan paved the way for an enhanced strategic partnership between our two countries and peoples appropriate to the Asia-Pacific of the 21st century.

I thank you for all your support and prayers.

I have declared tomorrow as a national day of prayer and solidarity against terrorism in deep sympathy with the American people and all humanity. Tomorrow, let us take up again the torch of freedom as we assert our determination to conquer the forces of terrorism. Believing that the path to peace is through prayers, I call on all our countrymen to go to their churches, mosques and other places of worship tomorrow, Sunday, September 16, to pray to the almighty for the victims and help the world end this scourge of terrorism.

Nuestra Señora de Penafrancia, our lady of sorrows , pray for us, who have recourse to thee. Amen. Dios mabalos, saindo gabos.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Arrival Speech from Japan. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212824/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8713&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo for the Overseas Filipino Workers of Japan

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
For the Overseas Filipino Workers of Japan

[Delivered in Tokyo, Japan, September 15, 2001]

... Ang ating secretary of labor. Binabati ko rin ang ating balikbayan na ambassador, kilalang kilala ng Hapon – si Ambassador Jun Siazon. At gusto kong makilala ninyo ang iba't ibang mga opisyal na hinalal ninyo at hinalal ng mga kamag-anak ninyo. Sila ay narito ngayon bilang kinatawan na rin ng ating bansang Pilipinas para bumati sa inyo. Unang-una, si Sen. Tessie Aquino-Oreta. Nandito rin ang Congressman ... Sa Ilo-ilo — Cong. Raul Gonzales. ... Kanyang misis, former Congresswoman ng Zambales Pacita Gonzales. At nandito rin si Cong. James Gordon. ... Si Cong. Ace barbers. Ang pangulo ng lahat ng mga gobernador sa buong Pilipinas at gobernador ng Davao province – Gov. Dolfo del Rosario. Ang gobernador din ng Palawan na pinupuntahan ng mga turista – si Gov. Joel Reyes. Ang parating kausap ng ating mga kaibigan dito sa Hapon dahil ang laki-laki ng itinutulong ng Hapon sa ating Official Development Assistance – si Sec. Dante canlas. At kanina ay nakilala ninyo ang tumutulong na magbigay ng tulong sa pabahay, ang humahawak ng ating housing – si Sec. Michael Defensor. At ang ating Secretary of the Press Noel Cabrera. Mga Filipino community leaders dito sa Hapon, mga kababayan ko na narito sa Hapon, magandang umaga sa inyong lahat. Ang ating ka-pampangan... No agda ilocano... Doon sa mga ... Sa mindanao... Maayong buntag kaninyong tanan... Ilongo, maayong aga sa inyong mga tanan. Sa mga Waray, maupay nga aga ha iyo tanan. At meron bang Bikolano dito?... At Happy Peñafrancia Day, ang araw na ito ay Lady of Penafrancia, kung naa-alala pa ninyo nung kayo ay nandoon. At sa inyong lahat, ako ay natutuwa na nagkaroon tayo ng pagkakataong magsama-sama itong araw na ito dito sa magandang lunsod ng Tokyo.

Narito po ako sa Japan dahil sa imbitasyon ng kanilang gobyerno. Ngunit isa pang mahalagang dahilan kung bakit ako naririto ay para makausap ko ang overseas Filipino workers at seamen dito sa Japan. Gusto ko ring pasalamatan ang all Japan seamen's union na siyang tumatayong host natin ngayong umaga...

The all Japan seamen's union is not only hosting us today, they have taken into their field thousands of Filipino seafarers who act as crew for Japanese vessels.

25% ng ating mga marino ay nakasakay sa bapor ng mga Hapon. 25% din ng ating remittances ay galing sa ating mga seafarers. Saan man ako mapunta, labis ang aking pagmamalaki at pagpuri sa ating mga kababayan na andoon sa mga bapor. Ngunit nagmamalaki rin ako sa ating mga kababayang nakatira at nagtatrabaho sa ibang bansa kagaya ninyo.

Pinupuri ko kayo sapagkat kayo, sa pamamagitan ng inyong husay sa pagtatrabaho, ina-angat ninyo ang pagkatao ng sambayanang Pilipino. At sa maganda at magaling at masipag na pagtatrabaho ninyo — matapat na pagtatrabaho ninyo — naipamalas ninyo sa mundo na ang Pilipino ay dapat ipagmalaki at hangaan.

Sa buong daigdig, nararamdaman ng mga bansa na may puhunan at mga magulang ang malaking tulong ng mga Pilipino. At sa Pilipinas, tinatanaw ng pamahalaan at ng taong bayan ang kontribusyon ng OFWs sa ekonomiya at sa kabuhayang bansa.

Ang inyong malaking tulong ay nagpapasigla sa ating ekonomiya at nagtutulak sa kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Milyon-milyong kabataan ang nakakapag-aral o nakakapagtapos ng edukasyon dahil sa mga ipinapadala ninyong tulong sa Pilipinas. Libo-libong bagong bahay ang naipapatayo — ganoon din karami ang nagkakaroon ng bagong buhay.

Halimbawa nga ay ang kaninang ginawa natin — nagbigay tayo ng isang housing unit sa isang OFW na taga-Quezon city. At sa pamamagitan ng ibinigay nating paluwang ay makakakuha siya ng housing unit doon sa smile project sa Quezon City.

Para sa mga kamag-anak ninyo at minamahal sa buhay, ... Saan galing ang ibabayad doon? Walang iba kung hindi ang inyong pagod dito sa Japan.

Dahil sa inyong tulong ay nakapag-lunsad tayo ng napakaraming negosyo. Iyong mga ipinapadala ninyong remittances ay nagiging puhunan sa mga negosyo ng inyong mga kamag-anak, minamahal sa buhay – mga small businesses na namumulaklak sa buong bansa dahil dito sa remittances ninyo. Ang matagumpay na negosyo na naipatayo dahil sa inyong remittances ay napakalaking haligi ng ating ekonomiya.

At dahil sa inyong remittances ay sumigla ang maraming barangay, maraming bayan, maraming lunsod, maraming probinsiya sa mga kontribusyon ng OFWs at kontribusyon ng mga seamen.

Kaya kayo ay hindi lang overseas workers or seamen. Kayo ay major economic investors ng ating bansa. Alam ninyo, pumupunta ako rito para humanap ng investments. Maglalagay daw ang sumitomi ng investment sa palawan, ipinagmamalaki natin — 0m. Pero kayo, sa kalahatan ng ating mga OFWs at mga seamen, b ang ipinapadala ninyo sa ating bansa. Kaya kayo ang mga bagong investors talaga sa Pilipinas.

Kaya dapat na baguhin ang bansag sa inyo ng bansa. Hindi kayo overseas workers at seamen lamang. Ang dapat na itawag sa inyo ay overseas Filipino investors.

Kayong mga overseas investors, ang araw-araw na puhunan ninyo para sa kaunlaran ng bansa ay ang inyong productive years alang-alang sa ating bayan. Nagsasakripisyo kayong malayo sa inyong mga mahal sa buhay para makamit ang mga pangarap nila. Ngunit, gaya ng sabi ko, ang kabuuan ng ipinapadala ninyo, hindi lang pangarap ng mga kamag-anak at minamahal ninyo ang binibigyan ninyo ng katotohanan, kung hindi pangarap ng buong Pilipinas. Kaya saludo ako sa inyo.

Kaya dapat lamang na suklian ng bansa ang inyong tulong. At doon sa kongreso, sa aking State of the Nation Address, sinabi ko nga ang mga prayoridad ng ating gobyerno. At nagpapasalamat tayo sa ating senadora at congressmen, dahil ang panukalang batas ng absentee voting para sa overseas workers ay nabibigyang malaking prayoridad doon sa kongreso at sa senado.

At sa kanilang masipag na sumuporta ay sana sa madaling panahon ay makakaboto at makakapili ng mga namumuno sa ating pamahalaan itong ating mga overseas Filipino investors.

Sa ibabaw ng karapatang bumoto na ngayon ay lumalakad doon sa senado at sa kongreso, meron ring ibang mga biyaya. Halimbawa, ang social security system recently launched a flexi-fund for OFWs. This is a voluntary provident fund type of program which could provide you, if you're a member, with additional sources of loans and retirement benefits.

Isa ring ginawa natin, we have a housing program for the OFWs. This is part of our goal to provide 100,000 housing units a year for workers a year – whether the workers are working in the Philippines or outside.

Kaya doon sa halimbawang ibinigay natin kanina, meron pang 10 sa ating mga OFWs and investors na dito naka-enrol sa programang ito – dito sa Hapon. Sana ay mas marami pa. Kaya sana ay mag-apply kayo sa embahada ng maging kasapi ng pag-ibig. Sa ganoong paraan, mula rito ay makakabili kayo ng murang pabahay sa Pilipinas, kahit na kayo ay narito sa ibang bansa.

We feel that we should try to give you whatever we can do in order to serve. Because the reality of the Philippine economy is that, for the foreseeable future, it will continue to be heavily dependent on overseas worker remittances.

Ang mga trabaho sa mga korporasyon at kagawaran ng Pilipinas ay mas kaunti kaysa sa mga trabaho na nanggagaling sa ibayong-dagat. May mga 7m Pilipinong nagta-trabaho sa ibang bansa. Hindi uma-abot ng 7m Pilipino ang nagta-trabaho sa industriya ng Pilipinas. Kaya mas malaki kaysa sa industriya ang ibinibigay ng mga nagtatrabaho sa ibang bansa.

And so, on the basis of this big contribution of yours and only because even if you are not giving big contribution, it is still the country's responsibility to its people wherever you are, our government wants to work doubly hard to strengthen the protection of overseas Filipino workers.

For a start, the Philippine embassy will be open on Saturdays to take care of the needs of the Filipino workers.

And we will strengthen bilateral relation with countries hosting large numbers of Filipinos. Kasama na dito sa Hapon.

Alam po ninyo, nung isang araw ay nagkaroon ako ng malaking pagkakataon na makabisita sa kanilang emperador at emperadora. At nagkukuwentuhan nga kami tungkol sa kanilang pagbisita sa Pilipinas noon — nung ang aking tatay ay pangulo pa. Nung 1960's nagsimula ang ating magandang relasyon muli sa isa't isa pagkatapos ng giyera. At nagkukuwentuhan kami na mula nung panahon, lumawak ng husto ang relasyon ng ating dalawang bansa. Kinukuwento ko sa kanya na ang Hapon ang number one na pinanggagalingan ng oda ng Pilipinas, number two sa investment sa atin, number two sa trading partner, number two na pinanggagalingan ng turista at ang dami-daming mga Pilipino ang nagta-trabaho dito... Siya ang nagsabi. At ang sabi ng emperador, "ang dami-daming mga Pilipino na andito sa Hapon at minamahal namin sila".

Tapos sinabi ko, "Opo, marami tayong mga overseas Filipino workers na narito at maraming mga Pilipino ang nagtatrabaho sa mga barko ng mga Hapon". Tapos sabi niya, "at marami ring mga Pilipino ang nag-asawa na sa mga Hapon". Siyempre, dahil siya ay Hapon, iyon ang itinuturing niyang special na aalagaan dahil naging Hapon na rin ang mga nag-asawa sa mga Hapon — kagaya ni Ambassador Siazon.

Tapos sabi niya na marami doon sa mga nag-asawa ng Hapon ay hindi lahat nakatira sa Tokyo. Marami ang nakatira sa iba't ibang probinsiya. At sabi niya, isang panalangin niya na sana ay maganda naman ang adjustment sa buhay at kultura ng Hapon. So ganoon ang pananaw ng pamahalaan sa mga Pilipinong naririto — minamahal kayo at gusto nila na iyong matagalan na titira rito ay talagang hindi nahihirapan sa pag-adjust sa bagong klaseng buhay, sa bagong kulturang ina-abot nila, ngunit ina-angkin na bilang kultura na nila sa pangmatagalang buhay.

And on the multi-lateral front, we're intensifying our campaign for the ratification of the 1990 united nation's convention on the rights of migrant workers and their families and the adaption of the new U.N. Resolutions on the protection of women migrant workers.

Ang aking pagtungo dito sa Hapon ay napakahalaga upang pasulungin ang ating hangarin na lalong patibayin ang ugnayan natin sa bansang ito at makamit ang cooperation ng kanilang gobyerno sa ikakaunlad ng ating bayan.

In my State of the Nation Address last July 23rd, I cited the serious challenges facing the Philippines. Our economy, as of the time when I gave my state of the nation address, was — as far as our statistics our concerned — tight and daunting.

4m jobless Filipinos, compared to 2.5m jobless four years ago. And of course, when you have more jobless, there is a corresponding rise in poverty incidence. And now, the poverty incidence is now at 40% of the population compared to 1/3 of the population 4 years ago.

4 years ago, there was a budget surplus of 1B. When I came in, there was a budget deficit of more than 140B.

Kaya iyon ang ekonomiyang minana ko – ang kahirapan ng ating bansa. Ngunit, salamat sa inyo – mga overseas Filipino investors and other Filipinos in the country – thank you for proving our mettle as a nation and as a people, because our efforts are paying-off.

Noon nga, ang ating ekonomiya ay nahihirapan. Nung 1997 ay hira ang buong mundo, pero hindi gaanong hira ang Pilipinas dahil ang ating mga malalaking trading partners ay hindi nahihirapan. Nagkaroon ng asian crisis noon pero ang america na malaking bumibili ng ating produkto ay hindi – malakas. Pero ngayon, itong taong ito – 2001 – hindi lamang naghihirap ang asian countries kundi na rin pati ang ating major trading partners. Pati na ang Hapon, dahil sa kahirapan nila ay magbabawas na sila ng kanilang official development assistance sa iba’t ibang bansa. Salamat na lamang at mukhang hindi sila magbabawas ng tulong sa Pilipinas.

At dahil sa malaking tulong ninyo, at dahil na rin sa ating pagsisikap, pagkakaisa, nung lumabas ang statistics ng growth rate sa buong asia, maliban sa china yata, wala nang ibang mas mataas na growth rate kaysa sa ating bansang Pilipinas.

Marami sa ating mga karatig-bayan — Singapore at iba diyan — negative ang growth rate nila. Tayo, 3.3%, kung hindi kasama ang OFWs, ofis and seamen. Pero kung isasama kayo ay 3.4%. Kaya ang ibang negative or .01 or 1%, ngayon ay hinahangaan nila ang Pilipinas dahil ngayon ay mas mabilis ang ating pag-angat kaysa sa kanila.

Dahil sa inyo iyon. Salamat! Thank you for your kontribusyon to our real growth domestic products — which is 3.3%, gaya ng sabi ko — it’s part of the global economic weakness. Kasi, ang exports natin ay malaki ang bagsak. Kaya nung malaki ang bagsak ng exports natin, akala ko ay baka babagsak ang ating ekonomiya.

Kaya noon nga, nung pinag-uusapan namin ng mga economic managers nung February — nung nakikita naming nagkakaroon ng slowdown ang world economy, bumababa ang exports — sabi ko, “ano ang gagawin natin?” sabi nila, “mag-asa.. Tayo sa ating sariling mamamayan, agrikultura, small and medium enterprises, housing at ang remittances ay darating iyan. Hindi pumapaltos ang ating overseas Filipinos”. And so, including the remittances of overseas Filipinos, the Philippine economy displayed a resiliency that has been the result of your thinking Filipino, buying Filipino, investing Filipino. Maraming salamat sa inyong kontribusyon sa ating ekonomiya.

When I became president last January, I told our people about my vision of winning the war against poverty within the decade. Trabaho, edukasyon, sariling tahanan, pagkain sa bawat mesa – iyon ang sinabi ko sa kongreso, that this is the core of my vision.

And I also urged everyone listening to my SONA last July 23rd, to set aside bickering and politicking for at least one year. Sa halip na alitan, hiningi ko ang isang taong magtulungan sa ikakabuti ng taong bayan.

Salamat na lamang na napakarami sa ating mga leaders ay pumayag na magtatrabaho tayo muna sa ikakabuti ng ating bansa, itabi na muna ang politika.

In fact, marami nga ang nagtataka, actually sa house ay hindi masyadong nahahalata kung sino ang opposition or sino ang administration. Pero sa senate ay halatang-halata, kasi kaunti lang sila. At marami ang nagtatanong, bakit tinanggap ni Sen. Tessie aquino-oreta ang imbitasyon para pumunta sa Hapon? Iyon nga ang simbulo na sa ikakabuti ng ating bansa ay itabi na muna ang alitan at magkasama muna, para ipakita sa mundo – lalo na sa Hapon na parating nine-nerbiyos kapag maraming coup d’etat and instability – na makita ng Hapon na kahit na ibang partido o ibang panig ay nakiki-isa sa mga ipinapahayag ng ating gobyerno sa gobyerno nila. Mas luamalaki ang respeto at mas lumalaki ang tulong.

Dito nga sa Hapon, kilalang-kilala ang mga pamilyang aquino, kaya tamang-tama, hiniling kong sumama si Tessie at pumayag naman siya. Malaking kontribusyon...

In order to succeed, our national agenda must revolve around 4 components. Apat na elemento ng pakikipabaka sa kahirapan.

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. Pagnenegosyo upang dumami ang trabaho.

The second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. Palalaguin ang kita at ani ng maralitang taga-bukid.

The 3rd component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. Pagkalinga sa mga bahagi ng lipunan na naiiwanan ng kaunlaran. And the 4th component is the improvement of moral standards of government and society. Moralidad sa gobyerno at lipunan bilang saligan ng tunay na kaunlaran.

We are promoting fast growing industries where high-valued jobs are most plentiful. One of them is information and communication technology or ICT. And also, aside from ICT, we have the competitive edge in tourism.

I have, therefore, identified tourism as one of the industries that can create tremendous opportunities for the Philippines' economic recovery. But tourism needs the help of all the 7m overseas Filipinos. Usually ay kasama ko si dot secretary dick gordon. Ngayon ay hindi siya kasama. Ang kasama ay ang kapatid niyang si Cong. James Gordon.

So sa pangalan na lang ni Dick, ako ay nananawagan sa inyo – the overseas Filipinos – to support the Philippine Department of Tourism which is looking for volunteer tourism promoters among our overseas Filipinos.

Sa turismo, may trabaho, may tahanan, may pagkain, may edukasyon. Sa isang turista lamang ay makakatulong ka na sa bayan.

Kaya kung kayo ay uuwi, magba-bakasyon ng disyembre, sana ay magsama kayo ng isang turista. O kung hindi kayo makakauwi, sabihin ninyo sa isang kaibigan ninyo na taga-rito, "I cannot go home this Christmas. Why don't you take a vacation in the Philippines and give my regards and my christmas gifts in the Philippines?" baka uuwi sila at pupunta bilang turista. Kasi iyan ang programa ng department of tourism – volunteer tourism promoters.

And, with all of our work that we are trying to do, we also want to have a million new jobs in agriculture and fisheries.

Upang lumikha ng 1m trabaho sa kanayunan, taun-taon ay gagastos tayo ng p20b para sa agrikultura. Ang hinihingi ko sa inyo, mga kababayan, ay inyong patuloy na pag-unawa sa mga nangyayari sa ating bayan at pagtitiwala na ginagampanan ng inyong pamahalaan ang aming tungkulin sa abot ng aming kakayahan. Ang hiling ko ay maki-isa kayo sa amin.

In closing, I wish to greet all the Filipino community leaders who are here with us. My greetings go to the various members of the various associations represented.

Marami tayong mga organizations at leaders dito sa Hapon. 37 yata ang ambassadors. Ngunit, ang magandang katangian ay nagkaka-isa kayo. You are united here in Japan and I am very happy about that.

Ito ay mahalaga upang maalagaan ang kapakanan ng bawat Pilipino sa bansang ito na ngayon ay halos 200,000 na. At kung bibilangin natin ang mga seamen ay in fact, mahigit sa 200,000.

You make us proud of your contributions in unifying the community here in Japan. We thank you for your leadership and your unwavering commitment.

I would like to acknowledge the efforts of all those responsible for the success of this gathering here this morning.

First, we have the Philippine embassy in Japan, the officers and members of the various organizations in Japan, the members of the organizing committee for this activity and all the OFWs and seamen who are now OFIS.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech for the Overseas Filipino Workers of Japan. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212804/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8714&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the National Basic Sector Anti-Poverty Conference, September 21, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the National Basic Sector Anti-Poverty Conference

[Delivered at the Golden Bay Hotel, September 21, 2001]

SAMA-SAMANG PAGKILOS
KONTRA SA KAHIRAPAN

Isang malaking kasiyahan para sa akin na makasama kayo. Maraming nag-isip na hindi mangyayari itong ating meeting. Kasi siyempre naman, sabi nila, hindi tayo magkakampi. Sabi nila, kakampi kayo ng dating pangulo. Sabi nila wala kayo sa EDSA 2. Sabi pa nga nila mayroon sa inyo doon sa EDSA 3.

Totoo man o hindi itong paratang na ito tungkol sa inyo, ako ay narito pa rin, dahil ako ay presidente hindi lamang ng mga taga-EDSA 2. Ako ay presidente ng buong Pilipinas. Kaya naman ako rin ay presidente ng mga taga-EDSA 3.

Laging sinasabi ko na isang matibay na haligi ng ating administrasyon ay ang pagkakaroon ng malawak na konsultasyon sa lahat ng sektor ng ating lipunan. Ako, sa abot ng kaya ng aking oras, bukas ang aking pintuan, at ako ay bukas parati ang aking mga tainga para makinig sa lahat ng may gustong sabihin sa akin, sa abot ng aking oras.

Kung tumagal itong meeting natin hanggang ngayon, ito ay hindi dahil iniwasan ko, ngunit iyong oras ay ngayon lang umabot iyong pagkakataon. Diyos naman ang pumipili ng oras, siguro sa palagay Niya ito ang tamang panahon. Napakahalaga ang prosesong nakikinig sa taongbayan, lalo na sa ating paglaban sa kahirapan.

Noong ako ay naging pangulo, sinabi ko ang aking apat na saligang paniniwala, una sa lahat, kailangan matapang tayo sa ating pambansang ambisyon. Kaya dapat ang hamon natin ay sa loob ng dekadang ito mananalò tayo sa laban kontra sa kahirapan. Pangalawa, kailangang iangat natin ang sukat ng moralidad sa gobyerno at lipunan upang magkaroon ng malakas na pundasyon para sa mabuting pamamalakad ng pamahalaan. Pangatlo, kailangang palitan natin ang karakter ng ating pulitika upang makagawa ng mabungang bungad para sa tunay na reporma. Ang ating pulitika ng personalidad at pera ay dapat bumigay sa bagong pulitika ng mga programa ng partido at proseso ng pakikipag-uusap sa taongbayan. At panghuli, naniniwala ako sa liderato sa pamamagitan ng halimbawa. Dapat pinaiiral natin ang matatatag na katangian kagaya ng kasipagan, estilo ng buhay ng may dignidad, pinapatunayan ang salita ng gawa, kumikilos kaysa pumapapel.

Itong ginagawa natin ngayon ay bahagi ng aking paniniwala sa proseso ng pakikipag-uusap sa taongbayan, at paniniwala na dapat puksain natin ang kahirapan sa loob ng dekada.

Noong ibinigay sa akin ni Ginoong Marano, iyong mga resolusyon ninyo, tiningnan kong mabilis at nakita ko eto nga iyong parating ipinapaabot sa akin tuwing pumupunta ako sa kung saan mang konsultasyon. Kaya sinumulan naman talaga ito ng ating pamahalaan na bigyan ng sagot at iri-review pa natin kung anu-ano pa ang dapat gawin.

Itong araw na ito ay araw upang pag-usapan nga iyong iba't ibang mga kinakailangan na mga batayang sektor, siguro naman sa nababasa ninyo ay hindi naman nagkukulang ang pamahalaan na humanap ng paraan upang masagot itong mga nasa inyong resolusyon. Kaya lamang nababasa ninyo sa peryodiko o nanonood kayo sa telebisyon ngunit malayo kaya hindi ninyo naririnig sa akin mismo, o hindi ninyo nakikita sa inyong sariling mata at hindi ninyo nasasabi face to face, at iyon ay nagkaroon ng problema, iyon ang kahirapan. Iyon, ang palagay ko, ang ating sinasagot itong araw na ito. Hindi kung ano iyong mga problema ng agrikultura, problema ng mangingisda, problema ng may kapansanan, hindi iyon, eh. Kasi kung babasahin natin iyong mga sinasabi ninyo, nasabi na rin iyon noong ibang konsultasyon. So, ang palagay kong hinaharap ngayon ay hindi iyong nasa loob noong papel na ibinigay ninyo sa akin, kung hindi iyong proseso na mayroon kayong pagkakataon na ihandog iyong papeles sa akin. At iyon ang ating hinaharap itong araw na ito.

Kung dalawang saligang paniniwala ko na dapat may konsultasyon na proseso at dapat talagang sugpuin na natin ang kahirapan sa loob ng isang dekada, ito ang dahilan kung bakit ako ang laging principal author sa Senado ng National Anti-Poverty Act. Iba ang nag-defend, dahil hindi iyon sa loob ng aking komite, pero tignan nyo sa principal author, tignan ninyo kung sino iyong unang pangalan nandoon, iyon ay si Senator Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. Dahil noon pa man, sa aking tatay pa man, kinikilala na ang saligang problema ng ating bansa ay problema ng kahirapan.

At dahil sa aking malaking paniniwala, lalo na sa problema ng kahirapan, maging sa ibang mga problema sa ating bansa – maging negosyo, maging kultura, kailangan dapat may konsultasyon, proseso ng konsultasyon. Iyon din ang dahilan kung bakit isa sa importanteng bunga ng batas ng National Anti-Poverty Law ay iyong National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC). At dahil ako ang author noong batas na iyon, alam ko ang laman noong batas na iyon. Alamko iyong prosesong inilantad ng batas sa pagpili ng mga kasapi ng saligang sektor sa NAPC.

Noong ako ay bise-presidente, iyong trabahong ibinigay ni President Estrada sa akin ay ibinigay ko kay Dinky ngayon at sinuportahan ko iyong prosesong iyon, hindi lamang sa salita, kung hindi na rin pipondohan ng DSWD sa aking liderato iyong proseso. Aba, tingnan ninyo kung ilang department ang nagpondo ng prosesong iyon kung hindi lamang ang DSWD. Kaya iyong social sectors ay kumikilos ang processing, ang iba ay hindi pa, ano ang ginawa ko, ma-ja-justify naman na tayo ang mag-o-organize, sabi ko sa aking mga undersecretaries, tayo ay puwedeng mag-host ng mga meeting para ma-organize iyong iba. Gastusan na rin natin iyong ibang sektor. Kaya halos lahat ng gastos sa proseso ng pagpili ng mga representante sa saligang sektor ay hindi lamang mga alaga ng DSWD kung hindi dahil iba pang mga sektor ang gumastos, ang nag-host on paper man lang para ma-justify iyong paggastos ng DSWD ay ang DSWD. Dahil ako, buong naniniwala ako sa proseso ng konsultasyon sa paglaban sa kahirapan at importansiya ng NAPC.

At dahil pinagkakagastusan ng DSWD at para ma-justify iyon, marami doon host on paper, DSWD, sinusubaybayan ko iyong proseso. At testigo ako kung gaano naging kasalimuot ang proseso. Kaya sana huwag kayong magalitsa akin. Kaya ako very honest ako, eh, more than diplomatic. Kaya kailangan masabi ko sa inyo ang katotohanan na nakita ko.

Nakita ko sa aking mata na ang dating pangulo ay nainip sa kasalimuotan ng proseso. At nagpasiya na siya kung sino ang ia-appoint niya dito sa National Anti-Poverty Commission, kung sino ang magiging kasapi ng NAPC. Ngayon, ako ang pangulo, tungkulin ko bilang pangulo na sundan ang batas, lalo na iyong batas na ako mismo ang author. Kung sabihin natin ang presidente, dating pangulo, baka hindi niya naiintindihan dahil hindi siya ang gumawa. Eh, ako ang gumawa noon, maja-justify ko ba sa aking sarili sa lipunan na hindi ko alam iyong prosesong kailangan. Kaya talagang tungkulin ko ito. Kaya inuulit ko ang proseso na natigil noon. Ngunit gusto kong bigyan-diin na sa prosesong ito, walang estsapuwera. Maging taga EDSA 2 o taga EDSA 3 kayo, kung kayo ay genuine na people's organization, lehitimong people's organization, kasama kayo sa proseso.

Kaya ang aking hinihingi sa inyo, magkaisa tayo. Makiisa kayo sa proseso na binigyan ko ng basbas bilang pangulo. Makiisa kayo sa pamahalaan upang mag-tagumpay tayo sa mga kailangan na mga batayang sektor ng ating lipunan. Ngayon ang paghinto ng alitan ay mas kailangan pa, kaysa kailan pa man.

Noong ako ay nagkaroon ng State of the Nation Address, iyon ang hiningi doon na sa halip ng alitan ay sana isang taon ay huwag tayong mag-away, magtulungan muna.

Ang pangyayari sa Nueva York noong ika-11 ng Setyembre, ay pinalitan na ang global mode. Ang mga kondisyon ng pangmundong negosyo ay hindi na gaanong katiyak. Ngayon higit na kailangang umasa tayo sa ating sariling sikap. Kailangang umasa tayo sa ating sariling ekonomiya.

Kung noong aking State of the Nation Address noong Hulyo, nanawagan ako sa halip na alitan, isang taon tayong magtutungan sa ikabubuti ng ating bayan. Isang taon ang hiningi ko sa mga pulitiko, ngunit kayo ay hindi pulitiko. Kung sa kanila isang taon lang ang hinihingi ko, sa inyo ang hinihingi kong tulong ay tulungan naman ninyo ako sa buong panahon habang ako ay pangulo ng ating bansa. Kaya magkaisa tayo. Magkaisa tayo sa proseso, magkaisa tayo sa basbas na binigay ko sa kasalukuyang in-appoint ko na mag-convene ng prosesong ito. At ako naman, sila naman, sinisigurado, tinitiyak sa inyo na iginagalang naming ang karapatan ng mga saligang sektor, at least makikinig sa lahat. Maging kayo ay nasa kabila, mga kasama, whatever it is, ang importante kayo ay lehitimong people's organization. Lahat ng lehitimong people's organization ay kasama sa proseso, sa pagpili ng kasapi ng National Anti-Poverty Commission na sa wakas ay ihahandog sa Pangulo. Sasabihin, Pangulo, ito iyong mga pangalan na lumitaw sa proseso. Ngayong kayo ang may kapangyarihan, kung tatanggapin itong mga nominees ng ating proseso, iyon po ang ating gawin. At pagkatapos po ay mag-aappoint ako ayon doon sa prosesong iyon. Ngunit huwag na nating hintayin iyong panahong iyon para magkaisa. Ngayon pa man tingnan na natin kung anu-ano ang mga puwede nating gawing magkasama sa paghahanap ng solusyon ng mga problema, suliranin ng ating kahirapan sa buhay.

Alam n'yo kanina sinabi ko na iyong mga negosyong nakabinbin, iyong malalaking infrastructure project, iyong mga malalaking rehabilitation. Rehabilitation ng PNP, National Steel Corporation, iyong housing, iyong Batangas Port, iyong LRT-3, sabi ko kailangan. Ituloy na natin talaga, bilisan na natin iyong pagproseso. Tanggalin natin iyong mga bottleneck, tanggalin natin iyong mga red tape. Ganoon. Kung sa mga malalaking proyekto kagaya noon, kailangan tanggalin ang bottleneck. Kailangang tanggalin ang red tape, eh, di mas lalo nga doon sa direktang paglaban sa kahirapan. Kaya't tanggalin na natin iyong ating mga alitan. Sama-sama na tayo sa prosesong pagpili kung sino dapat ang mangangatawan sa iba't ibang batayang sektor sa NAPC. At kung sino man ang mapili at sino man ang pipirmahan ko ang appointment, mayroon din akong isang sasabihin. Hindi ibig sabihin na porke't may labing-dalawang tao, ay nakaupo doon sa meeting na iyon na sila na lamang ang pakikikingan ko. Ako ay parating biglang pumupunta sa squatter area, biglang pumupunta sa probinsiya, biglang pumupunta sa opisina, kung saan-saan, dahil importante na ako mismo mula sa lupa naririnig ko kung ano ang nangyayari, naririnig ko kung ano ang daing ng taongbayan.

Ngunit mauubos naman ang oras ko kung iyon lamang ang aking paraan, kung papano malaman ang paninindigan at paniniwala at mga damdamin ng taongbayan, kaya mayroon tayong mga institusyon na nilalagay. At iyong pinakikingan ko, iyon ang magandang check and balance doon sa mga lumilitaw at lumulusot at dumadaan doon sa mga proseso na ginaganap sa mga institusyon.

Kaya ako ay nasisiyahan na tayo ay narito. Importante na tayo ay nagtatapat sa isa't isa. Importante na nililitaw natin iyong mga nakatagong damdamin. Kaya hindi pa man nyo sinasabi, sinabi ko na. Kasi mahalaga na alam ko kung ano ang nasa likod ng inyong isip, at alam nyo rin kung ano ang nasa likod ng aking isip. Imbes na sasabihin ninyo sa akin kung ano ang gusto kong marinig. Kung sasabihin ko kung ano ang gustong ninyong marinig. Importante na tayo ay magkaisa, magkalinawan ng paninindigan. At mula doon hanapin natin ang paraan kung papano iyong kanya-kanyang paninindigan ay puwedeng ipagsama.

Siguro may ilang mga bagay na hindi tayo magkakasundo. Eh, kung hindi tayo magkakasundo sa ibang bagay, di itabi natin iyon. Gawin ninyo iyong gagawin ninyo, gagawin ko iyong gagawin ko. Pero hanapin naman natin iyong mga puwedeng pagkasunduan at doon tayo mag-concentrate ng ating gawaing mag-kasama.

Kaya ako ay nagpapasalamat sa pagkakataong nagkita tayo itong araw na ito.

Iyong ibang mga grupo kung minsan sinasabi ko, iyong sinabi ko ngayon. Mayroon tayong hindi pinagkakasunduan, mayroon tayong pinagkakasunduan. Iyong ibang grupo sinasabi ko pa nga, eh, palagay ko, in fact, iyong kung saan tayo hindi nagkakasundo mas marami kaysa kung saan nagkakasundo tayo. Doon na lang tayo sa kung saan tayo nagkakasundo, doon tayo kumilos magkasabay. Pero dito, palagay ko, masasabi ko na mas marami ang pinagkakasunduan nating pag-iisip kaysa doon sa hindi tayo nagkakasundo. Kaya doon na tayo mag-concentrate sa hirap na hinaharap ng mundo, dahil umikot ang mundo mula noong Setyembre 11. Kilalanin natin ang pangangailangan ng mga panahon. Noong araw pa kailangan labanan ang kahirapan. Eh, mas lalo na ngayon, dahil iyong mga hamon, iyong mga sagabal ay mas seryoso. Kaya mas lalong kailangan na tayo ay magkaisa. At sana nga mula itong araw na ito tayo ay hahanap ng paraan kung papano parati na lamang tayong magkakasama sa laban kontra sa kahirapan.

Maraming salamat po sa inyong lahat.

Source: University of the Philippines Diliman Library

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

Speech of President Arroyo during the 40th anniversary celebration of the Philippine Constitution Association

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 40th anniversary celebration of the Philippine Constitution Association

[Delivered at Hotel Intercontinental, Makati City, September 28, 2001]

Thank you for this honor of joining your prestigious association on our 40th anniversary celebration. When Chairman Estrella was president of Philconsa in 1988, he also had my father as the guest speaker in the anniversary celebration. So this is a symbolic thing of entering into a new generation for the Philippines.

But over and above that. I welcome this opportunity to speak before you because you are the appropriate forum through which I can present to the Filipino people our policy regarding the most urgent issue in the world today, terrorism. And to give the people a formal idea of how we intend to carry out our policy.

The directions and parameters of the global war against terrorism are now taking shape. We are aware of the unique and challenging nature of this war. The enemy is often faceless and unseen, without uniform, flag or standing formation.

Its cells and members are loosely organized and affiliated, cruising the urban underground or plying the jungles in the company of criminal syndicates – kidnappers, drug dealers, and money launderers. Sometimes, they surface above ground among legitimate organizations. Some may even appear the paragons of virtue on humanitarianism. They identify with state sponsors developing and using weapons of mass destruction. They're in the internet, spewing hatred and fanaticism. They use the media and propaganda by spreading shock, terror, and fear.

As charter member of the United Nations, and as part of the international coalition against terrorism, the Philippines must actively implement the United Nations Security Council resolution no. 1368 passed last September 12. Let me refer to specific paragraphs of the said resolution:

Paragraph 3 calls on all states to work together urgently to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers, and sponsors of these terrorist attacks and stresses; that those responsible for aiding, supporting, or harboring the perpetrators, organizers, and sponsors of this act will be held accountable.

Paragraph 4 calls also on the international community to redouble their efforts to prevent and suppress terrorist acts.

In the international struggle against terrorism, the Philippine government is prepared to undertake the following specific measures:

First, to join the international counter terrorist coalition and to work with the United Nations.

Second, to work closely with the United States on intelligence and security matters concerning terrorism.

Third, to make available Philippine air space and facilities when the latter are required as transit or staging points.

Fourth, to contribute logistical support in the form of food supply, medicines, and medical personnel.

Fifth, subject to the concurrence of Philippine Congress, to provide combat troops if there is an international call for such troops.

Sixth, to prevent the flow of funds to terrorist groups to the Philippines by passing and implementing legislation against money laundering.

We cannot predict how events will unfold or how fast they will unfold. We must therefore make preparations for both quick response and long-term management. But one thing is sure, we are determined to go all the way if our security and survival demand it.

The impact of our involvement in the war against terrorism will not be measured by our contribution to the international coalition alone. To a greater degree, it will be measured by our own achievements in defeating terrorism within our own territorial boundaries. We must never lose sight of our immediate and overriding objective: identify the terrorists within our country, mop up their networks, stop them, and destroy their cause.

We must continue to preserve this objective unswervingly even as we assist the international coalition in the larger arena of counter action. In this war, as in my modern enterprise, we must think globally but act locally.

I shall flesh out now the directions to which we'll take in the following concrete policies and actions:

First, we must organize the whole enterprise and delineate clear lines of responsibility and accountability.

The Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security which is headed by Secretary Roberto Romulo shall be responsible for overseeing and supervising the implementation of our response to the war against terrorism. All special committees' task forces, and work groups' delineated responsibilities shall be placed within the ambit of the Cabinet Oversight Committee which is authorized to call upon any department, agency, or office of the government to support its functions and responsibilities.

Second, we need to anticipate events more efficiently and effectively. The National Security Adviser shall undertake special intelligence coordinating projects to consolidate all covert or overt, domestic or international kind of information relevant to our response in the war against terrorism. Such consolidated intelligence will be shared within the Cabinet, with Congress, with our allies in the international coalition and with the media as called for by the situation.

Third, we must strengthen our internal focus against terrorism. The Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police shall go all out against the lawless violence engendered by the terrorist threats. Our local government units and institutions down to the barangay level shall be part of the core of this effort. And more often than not, it is the vigilance of ordinary citizens in the streets and in the countryside that makes the difference in this clandestine war.

Fourth, there is also a need to hold accountable all public and private organizations and personalities abetting or aiding terrorism. The DILG and the Securities and Exchange Commission shall conduct an immediate inventory of dubious organizations and agency elements that may be working as fronts for terrorists and criminal activities, expose them and neutralize their operations by legal sanctions.

Fifth, we must synchronize our internal efforts with the global outlook. The Department of Foreign Affairs shall fasttrack a regional consensus in the war against terrorism starting with our neighbors – Indonesia and Malaysia and extending to the larger community of ASEAN nations. By consolidating ourselves into compact blocs sharing common borders, concerns and interests, we can act more expeditiously and effectively to serve the global interests.

Sixth, we must combine a policy of tactical counterforce with a set of strategic legal measures. The Department of Justice must now anticipate all the legal issues and concerns that are expected to arise from the situation. The DOJ shall set up a special team to serve the special requirements of the campaign including the speedy prosecution, deportation, and extradition of suspects. But even as we engage stringent tactical measures, we must demonstrate the ascendancy of the constitutional system and its capacity for swift and impartial justice.

Seventh, we must pursue broader inter-faith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity. Terrorists wish to instigate a religious war. We must take the opportunity to forge religious understanding, ecumenism, and solidarity. This shall be the responsibility of the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process.

Eighth, all law enforcement agencies shall exercise the strictest vigilance against movements of suspected persons, firearms, explosives, raw materials of explosives, toxic materials, and biological materials. The Bureau of Immigration shall guard against the entry of suspected terrorists into the country. Congress has agreed to out a money laundering law in place at the soonest reasonable time so that we can consolidate the financial system to check questionable and dirty money transfers.

Ninth, we must now coordinate preparations and actions in the event of catastrophic terrorist attacks however remote this may be. The National Disaster Coordinating Council shall be on top of this effort. I would like to see our contingency plan in place at the earliest time possible.

Tenth, there must be a comprehensive security plan for critical infrastructure including power plant, power transmission and distribution facilities, oil and gas depots, key public works structures, vital communication installation, and public building as well as private buildings and facilities in the near centers of commerce and industry. The cabinet oversight committee shall generate these plans in coordination with the pertinent departments and agencies of the government and the private sector.

Eleventh, the interest of our overseas Filipino workers are paramount. The government shall support their immediate transfer out of harm's way in the event of tactical contingencies anywhere in the world.

Frontliners against terrorism and banditry get a big boost as the President acknowledges their bravery. A rebel from the MILF turns over his firearm to the Commander-in-Chief (left, below).

Twelfth, the modernization of the Armed Forces and the National Police must now take into consideration the current and emergent needs to contain the global terrorist threat.

The Secretary of Defense on the one hand, and the Secretary of Interior and Local Government on the other hand, shall submit a proposal for fund re-deployment to meet our most pressing objectives. Once I have approved them, I shall submit these proposals to Congress if warranted.

Thirteenth, the mass media assumes a paramount role in the overall strategy to defeat terrorism. I seek the media's support in the implementation of our policies and programs in enlightening the public of the rationale behind their actions in promoting consensus and constructive criticism in depriving terrorists of the benefit of glorified coverage in publicity, and most of all in maintaining calm, sobriety, prudence, and solidarity in our society.

The Office of the Press Secretary shall maintain close constructive contact with the media in the pursuit of our common objectives, and arrange periodic briefings to brief the media into the loop of collective action and information.

Fourteenth and finally, nothing justifies terrorism, but we must take cognizance of its political, social, and economic underpinnings.

The National Anti-Poverty Commission shall undertake an in-depth study of the spawning ground of terrorism in the country and recommend concrete and workable measures to act upon the perceived root of fanaticism and irrational violence.

Upon these 14 pillars of policy in action, we shall work with the community of nations to build a strong and formidable bulwark against terrorism.

In this quest, we shall be guided by the high principles of universality with the free and civilized world gaining our stamina from the unity of all Filipinos wherever they may be, regardless of religion, creed, ethnic origin, or social station. In our own land, we shall defeat terrorism on our own terms, with our own hands and in line with our own national vision.

We shall win this war, again, under the tenet of constitution democracy and the rule of law. We shall continue to draw our economic strength from the market system, the social concept of capital, and the capacity of our people to take command of their livelihood and their future.

Terrorists will try to divide us, to strike fear in us, to immobilize our institutions. But it is up to us whether they can succeed or whether they will fail. They will fail if by our unity and concerted action will not allow them to succeed. I ask every Filipino then to dig deep into the wellsprings of our common vision, our deep sense of patriotism, our abiding sense of national pride, our shared values and belief, grounded on high moral standard. I ask every Filipino to use this wellspring to grind the efforts to win this war for our people today and for our rising generation.

Members of PHILCONSA, lovers of the constitution, lovers of democracy, and all the other ideals and enshrined in the constitution, be with us in leading this effort. Thank you.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 40th anniversary celebration of PHILCONSA

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 40th anniversary celebration of PHILCONSA

[Delivered at the Hotel Intercontinental, September 28, 2001]

Thank you for this honor of joining your prestigious association on your 40th Anniversary celebration. When Chairman Estrella was president of PHILCONSA in 1988, he also had my father as the guest speaker in the anniversary celebration. So this is a symbolic thing of entering into a new generation for the Philippines.

But over and above that, I welcome this opportunity to speak before you because you are the appropriate forum through which I can present to the Filipino people our policy regarding the most urgent issue in the world today, terrorism. And to give the people a formal idea of how we intend to carry out our policy.

The directions and parameters of the global war against terrorism are now taking shape. We are aware of the unique and challenging nature of this war. The enemy is often faceless and unseen, without uniform, flag or standing formation.

It cells and members are loosely organized and affiliated, cruising the urban underground or plying the jungles in the company of criminal syndicates – kidnappers, drug dealers and money launderers. Sometimes, they surface above ground among legitimate organizations. Some may even appear the paragons of virtue or humanitarianism. They identify with state sponsors developing and using weapons of mass destruction they're in the internet, spewing hatred and fanaticism. They use the media and propaganda by spreading shock, terror and fear.

As charter member of the United Nations, and as part of the international coalition against terrorism, the Philippines must actively implement the United Nations Security Council resolution no. 1368 passed last September 12. Let me to refer specific paragraphs of the said resolution:

Paragraph 3 calls on all states to work together urgently to bring to justice the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of these terrorist attacks and stresses that those responsible for aiding, supporting or harboring the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of this act will be held accountable.

Paragraph 4 calls also on the international community to redouble their efforts to prevent and suppress terrorist acts.

In the international struggle against terrorism, the Philippine government is prepared to undertake the following specific measures:

One, to join the international counter terrorist coalition and to work with the United Nations.

Two, to work closely with the United States on intelligence and security matters concerning terrorism.

Three, to make available Philippine air space and facilities in when latter are required as transit or staging point.

Four, to contribute logistical support in the form of food supply, medicines and medical personnel.

Fifth, subject to the concurrence of Philippine Congress, to provide combat troops if there is an international call for such troops.

Sixth, to prevent the flow of funds to terrorist groups to the Philippines by passing and implementing legislation against money laundering.

We cannot predict how events will unfold or how fast they will unfold. We must therefore make preparations for both quick response and long term management. But one thing is sure; we are determined to go all the way if our security and survival demand it.

The impact of our involvement in the war against terrorism will not be measured by our contribution to the intentional coalition alone. To a greater degree, it will be measured by our own achievements in defeating terrorism within our own territorial boundaries. We must never lose sight of our immediate and overriding objective: identify the terrorists within our country, mop up their networks, stop them and destroy their cause.

We must continue to preserve this objective unswervingly even as we assist the international coalition in the larger arena of counter action. In this war, as in any modern enterprise, we must think globally but act locally.

I shall flesh out now the directions to which we'll take in the following concrete policies and actions: first, we must organize the whole enterprise and delineate clear lines of responsibility and accountability.

The Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security which is headed by Secretary Romulo shall be responsible for overseeing and supervising the implementation of our response to the war against terrorism. All special committees', task forces' and work groups' delineated responsibilities shall be placed within the ambit of the cabinet oversight committee which is authorized to call upon any department, agency or office of the government to support its functions and responsibilities.

Second, we need to anticipate events more efficiently and effectively. The National Security Advisers shall undertake special intelligence coordinating projects to consolidate all covert or overt, domestic or international kind of information relevant to our response in the war against terrorism. Such consolidated intelligence will be shared within the cabinet, with congress, with our allies in the international coalition and with the media as called for by the situation.

Third, we must strengthen our internal focus against terrorism. The Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police shall go all out against the lawless violence engendered by the terrorist threats. Our local government units and institutions down to the barangay level shall be part of the core of this effort. And more often than not, it is the vigilance of ordinary citizens in the streets and in the countryside that makes the difference in this clandestine war.

Four, there is also a need to hold accountable all public and private organizations and personalities abetting or aiding terrorism. The DILG and the Securities and Exchange Commission shall conduct an immediate inventory of dubious organizations and agency elements that may be working as fronts for terrorists and criminal activities, expose them and neutralize their operations by legal sanctions.

Fifth, we must synchronize our internal efforts with the global outlook. The Department of Foreign Affairs shall fast track a regional consensus in the war against terrorism starting with our neighbors – Indonesia and Malaysia and extending to the larger community of ASEAN nations. By consolidating ourselves into compact blocs sharing common borders, concerns and interests, we can act more expeditiously and effectively to serve the global interests.

Sixth, we must combine a policy of tactical counter force with a set of strategic legal measures. The Department of Justice must now anticipate all the legal issues and concerns that are expected to arise from the situation. The DOJ shall set up a special team to serve the special requirements of the campaign including the speedy prosecution, deportation and extradition of suspects. But even as we engage intrigent tactical measures, we must demonstrate the ascendancy of the constitutional system and its capacity for swift and impartial justice.

Seventh, we must pursue broader inter faith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity. Terrorist wish to instigate a religious war. We must — opportunity to forge religious understanding, ecumenism and solidarity. This shall be the responsibility of the presidential adviser on the peace process.

Eight, all law enforcement agencies shall exercise the strictest vigilance against movements of suspected persons, firearms, explosives, raw materials of explosives, toxic materials and biological materials. The Bureau of Immigration shall guard against the entry of suspected terrorists into the country. Congress has agreed to put a money laundering law in place at the soonest reasonable time so that we can consolidate the financial system to check questionable and dirty money transfers.

Nine, we must now coordinate preparations and actions in the event of catastrophic terrorist attacks however remote this may be. The National Disaster Coordinating Council shall be on top on this effort. And I would like to see our contingency plan in place at the earliest time possible.

Tenth, there must be a comprehensive security plan for critical infrastructure including power plant, power transmission and distribution facilities, oil and gas depots, key public works structures, vital communication installation, public building as well as private building and facilities in the near centers of commerce and industry. The cabinet oversight committee shall generate these plants in coordination with the pertinent departments and agencies of the government and the private sector.

Eleventh, the interest of our overseas Filipino workers are paramount. The government shall support their immediate transfer out of harm's way in the event of tactical contingencies anywhere in the world.

Twelve, the modernization of the Armed Forces and the National Police must now take into consideration the current and emergent needs to contain the global terrorist threat.

The Secretary of Defense on the one hand, and the secretary of interior and local government on the other hand, shall submit a proposal for fund redeployment to meet our most pressing objectives. Once I have approved them, I shall submit these proposals to congress if warranted.

Thirteen , the Mass Media assumes a paramount role in the overall strategy to defeat terrorism. I seek the media's support in the implementation of our policies and programs in enlightening the public of the rationale behind their actions in promoting consensus and constructive criticism in depriving terrorists of the benefit of glorified coverage in publicity, and most of all in maintaining calm, sobriety, prudence, and solidarity in our society.

The Office of the Press Secretary shall maintain close constructive contact with the media in the pursuit of our common objectives, and arrange periodic briefings to brief the media into the loop of collective action and information.

Fourteenth and finally, nothing justifies terrorism. But we must take cognizance of its political, social and economic underpinnings.

The National Anti-poverty Commission shall undertake an in-depth study of the spawning ground of terrorism in the country, and recommend concrete and workable measures to act upon the perceived root of fanaticism and irrational violence.

Upon these fourteen pillars of policy in action, we shall work with the community of nations to build a strong and formidable bulwark against terrorism.

In this quest, we shall be guided by the high principles of universality with the free and civilized world gaining our stamina from the unity of all Filipinos wherever they may be, regardless of religion, creed, ethnic origin or social station. In our own land, we shall defeat terrorism on our own terms, with our own hands and in line with our own national vision.

We shall win this war, again, under the tenet of constitutional democracy and the rule of law. We shall continue to draw our economic strength from the market system, the social concept of capital and the capacity of our people to take command of their livelihood and their future.

Terrorists will try to divide us, to strike fear in us , to immobilize our institutions. But it is up to us whether they can succeed or whether they will fail. They will fail if by our unity and concerted action we'll not allow them to succeed. I ask every Filipino then to dig deep into the wellsprings of our common vision, our deep sense of patriotism , our abiding sense of national pride, our shared values and belief, grounded on high moral standard. I ask every Filipino to use this wellspring to grind the efforts to win this war for our people today and for our rising generation. And members of PHILCONSA, lovers of the constitution, lovers of democracy, and all the other ideals and enshrined in the constitution , be with us in leading this effort. Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 40th anniversary celebration of PHILCONSA. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212750/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8711&Itemid=38

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Annual Membership Meeting of the Financial Executives Institutes of Philippines (FINEX)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Annual Membership Meeting of the Financial Executives Institutes of Philippines (FINEX)

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Intercontinental Hotel, Makati, October 2, 2001]

Thank you very much Secretary Camacho.

I'd also like to greet Secretary Lina who's in the table together with the other 23 paragons of corporate ethics; Rupert, Dennis, Lita, other members of FINEX and the FINEX Foundation; ladies and gentlemen:

Its very good to be with you once again. As Rupert said earlier, this is the second time this year, the last time you made me your guest was January 17th, if you remember that was the start of the final push that has now become known as EDSA Dos.

Many of you who attended that FINEX luncheon meeting had come straight from the EDSA Shrine where we started a midnight vigil the night before, and many of you went back to EDSA right after the meeting; and three days after, I took my oath as President of the Philippines. Thank you for FINEX's contribution to EDSA Dos.

During my State of the Nation Address last July, I called for a moratorium on politicking.

Today that moratorium is more urgent than ever.

The New York incident of September 11 has changed the global mood. World business conditions are more uncertain now.

Even before September 11, in the words of EIU's corporate update, the U.S., The biggest risk factor, was experiencing a hard landing. Concerns about a U.S. Recession had increased. The attacks on the World Trade Center and The Pentagon made matters worse. The likely scenario for the U.S. is a slower recovery.

Japan is in a worse shape. Other global risks include a decline in world tourism, lower foreign investment flows, debt woes of major emerging markets, and a potential cut in foreign aid. For Asia this means a prolonged slump in exports, a rising trade deficit, a decline in revenues from tourism, ambivalent direct foreign investments, less official development assistance and concessional loans, and increasing difficulty for Asian emerging markets to issue global bonds. In addition to this harsh external environment, most of Asia will be facing domestic challenges as well.

The good news is that based on macroeconomic indicators it seems that the Philippines is among the very few resilient countries in Asia in 2001. And therefore, we can and must rely now more than ever on our own efforts, our own domestic economy. We must avoid lapsing into a sense of drift and losing momentum.

The advancement of our national interest was the guiding framework of my visits to Kuala Lumpur, Brunei, Singapore, and Tokyo.

In the course of my state visit to Kuala Lumpur, the Moro National Liberation Front and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front signed an Agreement for Unification, placing them firmly behind our common aspirations of peace, justice, equality, progress — in sum, the advancement of human security among Filipino Muslims under these lofty and shared standards.

While in Kuala Lumpur, our government and the MILF also signed an agreement containing the detailed guidelines for a durable ceasefire. The agreement advanced to a higher level the determination of both sides to stop the fighting on the ground, and enables the substantive issues of rehabilitation and development to take precedence on the negotiating table and, as far as I am concerned, on the ground. I think that that agreement came not a moment too soon because after September 11 we are very happy when we hear the milf distancing itself from Osama Bin Laden.

Our initiative to re-energize the Brunei-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines-East ASEAN Growth Area initiative received the warmest reception from the Sultan of Brunei and the Prime Minister of Malaysia.

With Singapore, we reached agreements on almost P2 billion in investments in Information and Communications Technology as well as agreements with Sun Microsystems for certification programs for programmers, which are vital to our human resource development climate for promoting ICT.

The officials of Japan, our biggest source of Official Development Assistance, were gratified that my administration has maximized our capacity to utilize Japanese Oda. They congratulated us for bringing up the rate of disbursements on yen loan projects during the first three months of my administration, to 94 percent of target, the highest ratio in the history of our Oda from Japan, and probably the highest among today among recipients of Japanese Oda.

And we are encouraged by the response of Japan to our efforts because even if Japan is reducing its worldwide Oda by 10 percent in yen terms and 20 percent in dollar terms as a result of its economic difficulties, it seems that the level of its assistance to the Philippines will not be included in that global cut.

Beyond the usual glitter of welcome and departure ceremonies and state banquets, therefore, the results of our official trips reinforced our vision of winning the war against poverty within the decade. We must maintain our focus on that war on realizing that vision despite the uncertainty that besets all humanity. We must maintain and even sharpen that focus precisely because times are uncertain.

Thus, there is a need to renew the call for moratorium on politicking. There is a need to regroup and focus on actually accomplishing things, not distracted by bickering and sensationalizing.

Let us buckle down to work.

There are 16 bills in our legislative agenda to comply with global commitments or to achieve the goals of my State of the Nation Address. Let me take this opportunity to extend my deepest thanks and profound congratulations once again to both houses of congress for a job well done in passing a well-crafted anti-money laundering law in record time.

Last August a newspaper editorial said: “it will be a miracle if Congress can pass such a vital controversial bill in just one month.” Well Congress made that miracle happen just as three months ago. Congress made another miracle happen, it passed the Power Sector Reform Law when we needed it after many administration and many congresses. And I would like to point out that the U.S. Department of Treasury and the head of the task force on money laundering in Japan congratulated the Philippines for the law that we have passed.

So I wish we would not have Filipinos keep pointing out the defects that they see if they see any in the Money Laundering Law because those in other countries the authority think it’s a good law. But if they keep hearing our own Filipinos saying it’s wrong because of this, it’s lacking because of that, they might come to believe us and put the sanctions once again. So I think this is one occasion where once again others see our accomplishments better than we do ourselves. I think at a time like this we should be united and not flagellating our country.

Congress has also agreed to work on the following seven other priority bills in this present session: the General Appropriations Act, the Revised Investment Company Act, farm land as collateral, Absentee Voting, creation of a Department of Housing and Urban Development, Government Procurement Act, amendments to the Dangerous Drugs Act; and aside from this we have set up a computerized monitoring system to track our actual accomplishments against our goals as highlighted in the state of the nation address. We will periodically report on these accomplishments.

I understand that FINEX is pushing for the Securitization Act. Speaker de Venecia has already filed this bill in the House of Representatives. I support this bill, because it is one of the 16 measures that I endorsed during my State of the Nation Address.

As for the computerized monitoring system to track our actual accomplishments against our goals that were highlighted in the SONA, because we intend to periodically report on these accomplishments let me share some updates right now:

For agricultural modernization, we committed to channel 20 billion pesos a year. As of August 31st, the Department of Budget and Management has released about P9 billion and the Land Bank more than P6 billion. So that's already 15 billion all-in-all.

I committed to work for one million new jobs in agriculture within the next three years. Between August and mid-September, agriculture generated over 120,000 jobs.

I committed to distribute 100,000 of private land for agricultural land reform within the next 12 months. And as of August 31st, after one month, the Department of Agrarian Reform had distributed over 12,000 hectares.

I committed to ensure that every barangay will have a school building. Survey and construction planning work is now ongoing for 1,590 barangays identified by the Department of Education as not being served by any school building. I instructed the Metro Manila Chairman during the SONA to address traffic problems. He is adopting a comprehensive approach to accelerate vehicle flow in key thoroughfares to 15 kilometers per hour. And as of September 14, average speed has increased slightly to 13.6 kilometers per hour.

I threatened to assign the Malitubog-Maridagao or Malmar project to the Armed Forces engineers if the contractor would not be able to start its operations by September. And last September 22, after 12 years, many lives, many slippages, and eight ceasefires, we finally inaugurated the project.

I committed to simplify and clarify the system of incentives. The task force on incentive rationalization has prepared a draft of the new Incentives Bill.

I committed to implement e-procurement. Three hundred forty-eight agencies in the government are now participating in the e-procurement service program. Government agencies and suppliers are both using the public tender board, the suppliers' registry and the electronic catalogue.

I committed to contain the budget deficit to 145 billion pesos this year. The deficit was below ceiling for January to July and exceeded the ceiling by 2.9 percent in August due to increased government spending for countrywide development, a one-time internal revenue catching up with previous obligations to the previous government, and priority projects such as the Agricultural and Fisheries Modernization Program. Advanced estimates for September indicate, that we are back to the programmed ceiling.

We will get major domestic business projects going such as those involving the National Steel Corporation, the rehabilitation of the Philippine National Bank, and the housing sector. We will reduce red tape and bottlenecks.

In our one-on-one talks in Kuala Lumpur, I discussed with Prime Minister Mahathir our need to re-open the National Steel Corporation Iligan Plant as soon as possible. Apart from this one-on-one discussion, Secretary

Manuel Roxas also met with the Chairman and Managing Director of Danaharta which is their apt, the Malaysian Government entity holding the ownership shares in the NSC. Danaharta shares our objective of finding both near- and long-term solutions to NSC. Accordingly they have agreed to enter and participate in a joint government-Philippine creditor banks-Malaysian owners process to receive proposals for the interim operation of NSC pending a more permanent solution.

The process led by DTI invited prospective investors or operators of NSC to submit their proposals and evaluate, negotiate, and award the best such proposal for an interim operation of National Steel Corporation while the final liquidation or whatever court cases are being settled.

The deadline for the submission of proposals was last September 21. However, Hottick, the Malaysian investor in NSC, who had signed a lease contract with a firm called Allengoal after the SEC had taken control of NSC, surprised everyone by pulling out of the process. Thus some prospective bidders also backed out.

But Danaharta has written us officially conveying their support for the process agreed upon during our meeting with them. Secretary Roxas will now take the following steps: convene a meeting with the Philippine banks creditors to inform them that there is once again stability in the process, that they should not back out; advise the Securities and Exchange Commission liquidator to again solicit any and all offers from interested parties, including Allengoal and those who backed out because of the uncertainty arising from Hotticks' earlier pullout; invite Danaharta to come and observe and participate in the decision-making; and, develop a timetable with all of the participants, mindful that our goal is the reopening of the plant at the soonest possible time.

On the formal housing sector, the program consists of the following schemes: end user financing; developmental loans; and the guarantee given out by the Home Guarantee Corporation.

I committed to provide funds for 100,000 economic mass housing and 50,000 socialized mass housing during the Sona. Pag-ibig has allocated 10 billion pesos per year. The DBP, Land Bank, and GSIS committed six billion pesos. While SSS, before Cora dela Paz got in — I hope she'll continue the commitment — committed nine billion pesos.

The General Appropriations Bill for 2002 provides another 3.7 billion pesos. All these amounts should be enough to build the committed number of units.

The problem is utilization. At present of the 10 billion pesos allocated by Pag-IBIG, it has spent 2.6 billion with another 1.3 billion to be released upon compliance with documentary requirements. — that's not so bad. But monitoring reports reveal minimal participation of the GSIS. From January last year to august this year DBP released 1.81 billion, GSIS 128 million, Land Bank 189 million and SSS 129 million — a very far cry from the billions that were committed. The GSIS blame the low figure on the conservativeness of the conduit banks. Thus, I appeal to the banking sector and the financial executives who are here to be more aggressive in the housing sector.

A large part of the blame also goes to the 188 signatures and two years required for housing permits. We are now finalizing an Executive Order proposed by HUDCC which provides for one-stop centers in each department to act on all applications for housing-related permits. This will cut the processing time from 12 months to three months.

The longest bottleneck here seems to lie in the environmental clearance certificate. Secretary of Environment Sonny Alvarez, who was supposed to be here, is reducing the number of signatures and aiming to cut down the ECC time to 30 days, but the housing sector tells me that the geological study alone takes 60 days. This is because of the Cherry Hills syndrome. So I am authorizing Sonny Alvarez to hire more Geodetic engineers to speed up this part of the paper chase.

Recently we have revived the Pag-IBIG city program which is basically a turnkey program compared to the take out mechanism we have done in the past. Last week in the Pag-IBIG board meeting in Cebu the board approved the medium rise housing program which is a more liberal program than Pag-IBIG city having a turnkey payment of 90 percent while Pag-IBIG city is only 70 percent upon completion.

I have also instructed the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes to allocate 100 million pesos out of the almost 200 million pesos which it still owes the comprehensive and integrated shelter financing act so that HUDCC can build an additional 1,000 houses for indigent families.

The passage of the Securitization Act will enable the setting up of an efficient secondary housing mortgage market. It will generate potential additional liquidity of between 10 to 20 pesos billion annually, which would redound to more funds for housing. So I hope that all of the financial executives involved in housing will welcome this. But on the other hand why wait for that when you have all those billions already waiting for you to conduit for our people who need their houses?

We will get specific big ticket infrastructure projects going, such as the Batangas port and the LRT-3 extension. Again, we will eliminate bottlenecks.

The primary scope of the work for the Batangas project consists of dredging and reclamation, construction of two container cargo berths, reconstruction of the general cargo berth at the earlier area, and other port amenities and support. It consists of three packages: package 1 worth three billion pesos covers civil and marine works; package 2 worth 126 million covers the supply and installation of passenger boarding bridges; package 3 worth 145 million covers the construction of the port access road and flyover.

Package 1 was bidded out as early as early last year, however, the final award and implementation of the project was delayed due to a right of way issue and a contract issue. The right of way issue has finally been settled in the court and upon my instructions, even as we speak right now the Philippine Ports Authority is expropriating the land needed for the right of way. Tomorrow the PPA board will meet to take up the award issue, and construction should commence not later than October 15.

Not a moment too soon this project was started when I was still Undersecretary of Trade and Industry. Since then I've become Senator twice, Vice President and President — it's about time the project starts. Well, it's the same case with Malmar it also started when I was in DTI, finally the water is flowing.

Package 2 is scheduled to be completed and turned over to PPA this week.

And the construction of package 3 — the access road and flyover — has not yet started even it's been awarded a long time ago pending the resolution of the right-of-way issue. So I have instructed DPWH to complete payment for the right-of-way this week so that construction can begin next week.

On the MRT line 3 extension, which will complete the MRT loop by connecting North Avenue to Monumento, the MRT Corporation has been given up to October 15th to exercise its pre-emptive option by submitting an acceptable proposal. Otherwise the Department of Transportation and Communications will implement the project with Official Development Assistance.

So you see we have collected the major bottlenecks in the major projects because we've got to get them going that is the way that we can show the world that even in the midst of uncertainty we can move forward.

And of course, we will not fail to address graft and corruption in key agencies and sectors, and I'm glad that your book Crip Yuson's book is being launched today because it's good that we are celebrating corporate governance as we are trying to do good governance also in the bureaucracy. And as I said in my State of the Nation Address: our models are the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs to be showcases in the fight against graft; and I am adding the National Food Authority imports, we indeed have to conserve our fiscal resources.

I'd like to congratulate Crip, by the way, for this book. And I was telling Rupert, "how long did it take Crip to do this work?" He said, two years in the making, and in between Crip was doing our P.R. Work when we were in the opposition during the impeachment trial. So congratulations Crip for doing work for the country and doing work for the business sector as well. In the BIR, aside from a high profile revamp, it is intensifying tax collection by introducing the following reforms: computerized selection of audit candidates; non-filer detection program; printing of water-marked invoices and official receipts with uniform format; documentary stamp tax on-line; expansion of creditable withholding tax; computer linkages with the top 20 excise taxpayers; and finally, issuance of implementing rules and regulations for the 1997 tax code; reduced number of signatories under the documentation decentralization program; pilot testing the electronic filing system and e-payment through banks; e-bidding of services; public service awareness seminars and programs to enhance voluntary tax payments.

For its part, Customs has started implementation of over-the-counter transaction, ridding the transaction area of non-organic personnel, and strict implementation of I.D. and uniforms. It is intensifying its collections by: monitoring of frequently imported goods; resolution of cases within 15 days from reporting of findings; narrower ranges for import valuation tables; provision of updated reference values; strict collection of warehousing charges; post-entry audit system; auction sales are 122 percent higher than last year; installation of x-ray machines in the ports.

As far as the National Food Authority is concerned, imports can no longer be done through private warehouses. Moreover, these imports are subject to the scrutiny of the new anti-smuggling task force headed by former Commissioner Luciano Millan, Jr. who was recommended by former Commissioner Guillermo Parayno.

These are the things that we are doing: specific high profile in the sense that they were not moving for a very long time making the move once again because we need to show the world that the Philippines can move forward.

I am grateful that during the slow-down of the first part of the year, the Philippines still grew at 3.4 percent in GNP. I'm grateful that our peso has stabilized, I'm grateful that our employment figures have increased. The 70,000 decrease that they headlined in one newspaper, first of all, was inflated and doesn't cover what the employment that was increased. And so we've done well in the first semester of the year and I hope that whatever we did right in the first semester of the year. Whatever we did together in the first semester of the year we should do even with greater vigor and greater aggressiveness in the second part of the year.

If we were united in EDSA — FINEX, myself and many of those in the platform — we can be even more united now because the danger is not just danger coming from a lack or a loss of moral ascendancy within our country, the danger is coming from real threats to our way of life in the whole world. And therefore I urge the financial executives to make the priorities I mentioned as your own priorities as individuals and collectively as FINEX.

As aptly described in the timely and lofty theme of your conference you are catalysts for responsible leadership. I need you in the difficult task of national survival. I need you to promote unity. I need you to promote making things happen even the things that were not happening for a long time.

Thank you for this opportunity and let's move our country forward in the midst of the global uncertainty.

Thank you.

*Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Annual Membership Meeting of the Financial Executives Institutes of Philippines (FINEX). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212737/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8754&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the ADB International Conference on poverty growth and the Role of Institutions

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the ADB International Conference on poverty growth and the Role of Institutions

[Delivered at Asian Development Bank Auditorium, Pasig City, October 10, 2001]

A very pleasant morning to all of you and welcome to all international participants in this conference. As you address the important relationships among poverty, growth, and the role of institutions, I hope you will also gain an insight into our vision of the Filipino future and a firm idea of what our people power administration is seeking to achieve in the Philippines and what it has sought to achieve in the last eight months.

Nine months ago, we faced a very different situation. Any honest discussion of Philippine situation would have had to acknowledge severe and almost hopeless prospects of dealing with poverty or achieving growth.

Today our political troubles are largely over. Our unemployment level improved somewhat. But the challenges of fighting poverty and achieving robust growth remain.

On the day I became President, I declared that we must be bold in our national ambitions, so that our challenge must be that within this decade, our country will win the fight against poverty.

To succeed, I said in my State of the Nation Address last July, our national agenda must revolve around four components.

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. Not a pitiless free-for-all free enterprise but a free enterprise with a social conscience.

The second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity.

The third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan.

And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

Poverty can be defined as an outcome of a person's entitlements on command over output, income assets, and material goods.

On the other hand, poverty can also be defined as a process or situation of social exclusion, where individuals are constrained against full participation in social life due to barriers in ethnicity and race, gender, age, physical handicaps, and of course, economic and physical resources.

For instance, undoubtedly, economic exclusion is at the root of our nation security problems in Mindanao. The traditional view of Muslims and indigenous peoples as inferior to lowland Filipinos has been a hurdle for them to contribute to Filipino social and political life, and hinders their ability to gain access to economic opportunities.

The high level of income and asset inequality and the slow reduction in poverty incidence in the Philippines are due to the lack of entitlements and social exclusion. A large number of Filipinos face limited opportunities to improve their quality of life and face barriers to fully achieve their social and economic potentials.

We notice the following characteristics of Philippine poverty:

Poverty continues to be mainly a rural phenomenon and is agriculture-based. More than two-thirds of poor households in the Philippines live in the rural areas.

And while agriculture-dependent households consist now of only 40 percent of the total population, this sector accounts for over two-thirds of the poor. Thus, one of the four main components of our anti-poverty agenda as I mentioned earlier is the modernization of agriculture founded on social equity.

Inter-regional differences in poverty incidence are high. Among 16 regional areas of the Philippines, the National Capital Region has only a 9.7 percent poverty incidence. But three regions, Bicol, Central Mindanao, and the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, have a poverty incidence of greater than 50 percent.

I have said that one of the four main components in my administration's battle against poverty is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan.

This social bias is anchored on the redistribution of economic opportunities and enhancing the capabilities of the poor to participate in decision-making.

Redistributive reform is the primary framework in improving the level of human development and in articulating the direction of economic growth of the country over the next several years.

Thus, priority emphasis is given to several core strategies of this framework – the redistribution of economic resources and political opportunities and they include the following:

One, priority is being given to asset reform programs or the redistribute of physical and resource assets to the poor, especially land and credit. This entails funding the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program; implementing the Urban Development and Housing Act, especially the provisions on social housing for urban poor groups; quicker distribution of ancestral domain claims to indigenous people under the Indigenous People's Right Act; and ensuring equal ownership rights for women in all laws and executive orders.

Two, this government is working to provide fuller financial and institutional requirements of human development services, which strengthen the human capital base of the poor. It has set specific, concrete, and quantified targets in making available basic education, health, shelter, water, and electricity for the poor and marginalized sectors. It is working to distribute public spending progressively towards these areas.

Three, we are working to increase employment and livelihood opportunities for the poor over and above what the market would provide and to strengthen the capacities of marginalized groups to engage in productive activities. In this regard, the government is funding the requirements of the Agricultural and Fisheries Modernization Act in the hope of providing one million jobs in agriculture. It is creating employment opportunities for out-of-school, out-of-work youth; it is providing micro-finance services for 300,000 new borrowers per year and following the classical Grameen Bank formula. Most of these borrowers will be women.

Four, the participation of the poor in governance and institution-building and civil society groups are included in policy-making in the national and local levels. We are working to strengthen the Party List Law and the legislation of sectoral representation in local governments. Our government is addressing the requirements of our women in Nation Building Law, the Accessibility Law, and the Senior Citizens' Act.

Five, this administration is working to provide social protection and security from violence for the basic sectors in order for them to fully exercise their political, social and economic rights and to be mainstreamed in society.

Social protection includes three components: social welfare assistance that are regular government programs that maintain a minimum standard of living among the poor and that reduce risks from such incidents as violence, illness, disability, old age, unemployment, resettlement, and harvest failure; safety nets or bridging mechanisms that mitigate the adverse impact of economic dislocations and shocks, disasters and calamities, and structural adjustments on specific disadvantaged and vulnerable groups; and, social security to diversify and mitigate the risks among the poor arising from retirement, unemployment, illness, and stability.

Security from violence means strengthening the implementation of the Anti-Sexual Harassment and Anti-Rape Laws; legislation against domestic violence; stricter enforcement of the law against illegal demolitions and strengthening the participation of urban poor groups in cases involving relocation; and prohibition of labor-only contracting. Through existing government structures, we recognize indigenous culture and practices, including communal-based management of resources and existing health and education practices. Security also means protecting the environment to ensure its long-term sustainability.

In order to implement these thrusts, I have asked Congress to pass a law that will recognize the property rights of the poor so that they can use them as collateral and I have asked my cabinet members to reduce the number of signatures required to transfer lands for redistribution.

In the governance chapter of the Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan. I have instituted several governance reforms including the following:

Strengthening private sector participation in infrastructure development:

Developing greater partnerships among governance actors, government business and civil society in infrastructure and market development;

Improving the enforcement of anti-corruption laws; and

Government accounting and auditing reforms.

And finally, as I pledged during my inaugural address, I renew my commitment to lead by example to improve moral standards in government. This is my personal commitment in order to improve institutional standards in the country.

The creation and transformation of institutions to fight poverty is more urgent than ever today. Weak and ineffective institutions such as problematic laws and systems of property rights, fraudulent court, biased markets and entangled requirements for setting up business, more often hurt the poor and disadvantaged rather than the rich. As you can hopefully glean from my sharing the poverty reduction thrusts of my administration seek to transform and create new institutions in order to effectively respond to the marginalized groups in the country.

I am very grateful that we witnessed this morning the signing of a partnership between the ADB and the Philippine government in fighting poverty. This partnership has been going on for a long time now. As I entered the building, I am very happy I was made to stop by a picture of my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, during the groundbreaking ceremonies of the first ADB building in Roxas Boulevard. When I was a young teenager, my father used to tell us and that he wanted the Development Bank for Asia to be established in the Philippines and for that purpose they were enthusiastically offering land in Roxas Boulevard. Now ADB is in the Philippines. We have had a long partnership in fighting poverty and today, we renew that partnership. I hope that this will hew closely in its characteristics to the elements of the social bias for the poor that I have enumerated in my statement today.

To the delegates and participants of this conference, I hope that your discussions will help in understanding the relationships of poverty and growth, and the social, political, and economic institutions that underlie them.

In this new millennium where there is great hope because of information and communications technology and rapid advances in capital flows, but where there is also great uncertainty because of the new battle against terrorism in the world, I hope that with the new insights learned in this conference ADB will continue to be relevant and will increase its relevance in strengthening institutions, promoting growth, and eradicating poverty in the 21st century.

Thank you.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 1st Philippine Local Governance Congress of the Department of Interior and Local Government (DILG)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 1st Philippine Local Governance Congress of the Department of Interior and Local Government
(DILG)

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Manila Midtown Hotel, Ermita, Manila, October 10, 2001]

Maraming salamat Kalihim Joey Lina.

Pangulo ng ULAP, si Governor Dolfo del Rosario; Chairman ng League of Provinces, si Governor Louie Villafuerte; Pangulo ng League of Vice Governors, Vice Governor Herrera; Presidente ng League of Municipalities, Mayor Guico; Presidente ng League of Cities, Mayor Tolentino; Your Excellencies of the Diplomatic Corps; James Marty Lim, Presidente ng Liga ng mga Barangay; mga local executives; participants of the First Philippine Local Governance Congress; other guests; ladies and gentlemen; mahal kong mga kababayan:

Happy 10-10-10.

This is 10-10-10: October 10th 2001, the 10th anniversary of the local government code and on this day we begin by thanking and honoring the leaders who championed the passage of this the local government code 10 years ago — we start with President Cory Aquino who signed the bill into law 10 years ago today. We also thank Senate President Jovy Salonga and the late Speaker Ramon Mitra who exercised political leadership in shepherding the code through their respective chambers. We thank Senator Nene Pimentel and then Congressman Larry de Pedro who sponsored the bill in their respective chambers. And we acknowledge the Chairman of the League of Governors, Louie Villafuerte, who was a prime mover in forming the league of leagues which actively lobbied for the passage of this code.

These visionary leaders and their successors crafted a law that peacefully transformed our political system from a centralized government to a decentralized one.

Unlike many other nations like America, China, Germany, Japan, and Malaysia, where local governments existed before they banded together to create a central government, the Philippines' history is one of central colonial government antedating local governments. The Local Government Code of 1991, therefore, was a move against the tide and it started us towards devolution. Today, 10 years later, the local governments face unprecedented fiscal, political, economic and technological challenges even after all the gains that Joey Lina spelled out because of the Local Government Code dahil alam ko na kahit sa ilalim ng nakaraang sampung taon ang dami nang ginansiyang ginawa ng local governments sa ilalim ng local government codes marami pa ring naiiwan ng hamon.

Kaya naman, sa unang araw ng aking pagkaupo bilang Presidente, pinili ko para maging alter ego ko sa DILG ang isa sa inyo, ang dati niyong Pangulo ng ULAP, si Secretary Joey Lina. Alam ko na si Joey, bilang isa sa mga sumulat ng Local Government Code sa Senado ay nanguna sa inyo noon upang siguraduhin na maprotektahan ang local autonomy at matanggap ninyo ang inyong IRA shares. Hanggang ngayon nga eh kinukulit pa rin ni Joey si Emy Boncodin at ako tungkol sa IRA ninyo.

At noong una kong weekend bilang Pangulo, andami kong naabutang pending na permiso ng mga Barangay Captain para makabiyaha. Sabi ko, “ano ako pa ang nagbibigay ng permiso para magbiyahe ang Barangay Captains?” Kaya nagdesisyon ako na mula noon idi-delegate ko ang permiso ng mga local government executives para magbiyahe sa Secretary ng Interior at Local Government.

At sang-ayon sa payo ni Joey, isa sa unang ginawa ko nung ako'y naging Presidente ay pinawalang bisa yung tatlong executive order ng dating administrasyon na nagbabawas ng inyong kapangyarihan. I am referring to: the E.O. of the previous administration which required you first to submit your annual investment plan to DBM before you could get your 20 percent development fund. Upon the advise of Joey I also repealed the E.O. which authorized DBM to withhold part of your IRA intended for your contributions to the GSIS, Philhealth and other government financial institutions. And Joey also recommended to me that I should abolish the E.O. which required you to set aside five percent of your 20 percent development fund for anti-drug abuse programs — not that we are against anti-drug abuse programs, but we trust you, the local governments, to make your decisions by yourselves.

The law of course requires that you still submit your annual investment plans to DILG and DBM, but this time it is for monitoring and oversight purposes and not as a prerequisite for the release of your money.

Kamakailan, ako ay nakipag-ugnayan sa mga pinuno ninyo sa ULAP sa pamumuno ni Governor Dolfo del Rosario. Pinag-aralan nga namin tungkol sa IRA at alam ko na ito ang hinihintay ninyo sa akin. Alam niyo marami tayo magkakilala ng matagal eh, alam niyo naman ang aking style — direktso sa punto, wala masyadong motherhood statements — kaya ito ang aming mga kasunduan:

Una, beginning the year 2002 — in other words the budget we submitted now for next year — the President's budget that we submitted to Congress automatically appropriates the IRA. Kung ginagawa yon sa debt service, ba't hindi sa debts to local governments?

Pangalawa, we abolished the LGSEF in the proposed 2002 Budget. Alam niyo yung LGSEF tinanggal sa inyo, nilagay sa Malacañang, tapos kung gusto niyo ng project dahil kulang yung inyong IRA tatakbo kayo sa Malacañang, luluhod magmamakaawa para humingi ng sarili ninyong pera. Kaya ngayon 'pag may mga Mayors lumalapit sa akin para humingi ng projects sabi ko, "hindi na kayo kailangang pumunta rito, importante buo ang ira niyong natatanggap kasi yung LGSEF pera naman ninyo."

Number three, last year in the previous administration and this year — because our 2001 budget is only the reenacted 2000 budget — your IRA allocation was P106 billion. Of the P106 billion allocated last year, the year 2000, the previous administration released P103 billion, so kulang ang ni-release. This year, 106 billion pa rin ang allocation dahil reenacted lamang, but even if the IRA budget for this year as allocated is only P106 billion, we are releasing P121 billion. What does this consist in? Yung P106 billion, yon lalabas yon, now on top of the 106 billion provided by the previous Congress for this year, the following payments of obligations of the previous administration but which my administration is complying with even if the debt is not my fault, we are paying you the following:

P4.05 billion representing the IRA withheld way back in 1999. We'll be releasing this one billion pesos a month, and before this month ends, we will release the full and last of four tranches of this reserve.

Another release we are making is the P2.5 billion representing the unreleased balance of the LGSEF for last year, the year 2000.

And if you remember that last year you did not get your December IRA, so kahit na hindi ko kasalanan yon huhulugan namin yon, and that is why we will be releasing P2.25 billion representing one-fourth of the IRA for December 2000 because we know that you need money for Christmas bonuses.

And we are releasing five billion pesos representing the LGSEF for this year 2001. I have already instructed Secretary Romulo, the Chair of the Oversight Committee on Devolution, to convene the committee to effect the release of your LGSEF for the year 2001, and as much as possible, we try to base this on the codal formula as recommended by ULAP.

With regard to the unreleased balance of the regular IRA due last year amounting to P6.75 billion, uulitin ko kahit na hindi ko utang ito, utang ng predecessor ko, we stand foursquare and acknowledge this commitment as part of our national obligation. Dahil may malaki akong budget deficit na minana sa predecessor ko, your ULAP leaders and I worked out a scheme to address this debt and at the same time address the financial situation in which we are right now.

We will treat this P6.75 billion as a contingent liability to the LGUs, in other words a guaranteed liability.

I have tasked the DBM, DILG, DOF, and the Executive Secretary, together with ULAP, to securitize this unreleased IRA as bonds for LGUs to enable you to use your uncollected IRA shares now and not wait for when the national government can afford to pay them. The bonds shall be floated by a government financial institution to fund your activities to the extent of your uncollected IRA. These bonds will be guaranteed by the national government.

And if the private banks, the commercial banks, buy these LGU bonds, they will be considered as complying with the Agri-agra law. That way they'll be encouraged to buy your bonds. In turn, I ask that you spend the proceeds of these LGU bonds on activities related to agriculture or agrarian reform para naman talagang sang-ayon sa Agri-Agra Law. And if you do this spend them for agriculture or agrarian reform, including the salaries of your MOUs, and your MAROs and the MOOE — so may things that you can justify as related to agriculture and agrarian reform — this will form part of your answer to the call of the times, as I enunciated in my State of the Nation Address last July.

If you remember in my SONA, I stated my vision and mission: to be bold in our national ambitions so that our country will win the war against poverty within the decade.

And to succeed, our national agenda must revolve around four components — apat na elemento ng pakikibaka sa kahirapan.

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century.

Pagnenegosyo upang dumami ang trabaho.

And the local governments can do so much to promote free enterprise and job creation, and therefore I ask our local governments — as Joey said you are already doing — to streamline your operations and slash red tape in order to promote investments under a free enterprise system. There must be continuity between national and local governments in their efforts to be investor-friendly.

Sabi ng mga negosyante sa ibang bansa 'pag ako'y nakikipag-usap sa kanila ay noon pa ang daming repormang ginawa sa BOI, sa mga national agencies, kaya sanay sila na isa na lang account officer ang kausap nila. Kaya lang pag-abot sa local governments iba na naman ang kausap. Yon ang sinasabi nating seamless efforts. 'Yan ang sana ang BOI at ang local governments ang magkaroon ng isang unit lamang para isa na lamang ang kausap ng ating mga investors.

The second part of our agenda is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. Palalaguin ang kita at ani ng maralitang taga-bukid, at dito sana gastusin niyo ng husto yung proceeds ng LGU bonds na ibibigay, papagamit sa inyo ng mga bangko ngayon kaysa sa maghihintay pa hanggang kaya muli ng national government.

And the third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. Pagkalinga sa mga bahagi ng lipunan na naiiwanan ng kaunlaran. At alam naman natin na sa local government code, yung mga ahensya na-devolve sa inyo yon na nga ang ahensyang mga social bias — yung health, yung social welfare, yung agriculture — kaya talagang nasa inyo na, kayo na ang frontliner dito sa social bias sa ating development plan.

And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society. Moralidad sa gobyerno at lipunan bilang saligan ng tunay na kaunlaran.

And so having talked about these four components of our national agenda, may I take this opportunity to enlist the local governments to stand in the front line of this war against poverty as we take strides in delivering better services to our communities.

During my State of the Nation Address, I called for a moratorium on politicking.

Today that moratorium is more urgent than ever.

The New York incident of September 11 has changed the global mood. World business conditions are more uncertain now. And so more than ever, we must now rely more on our own efforts and our own domestic economy. And more than ever, we must avoid lapsing into a sense of drift and losing momentum.

After the September 11 terrorist attacks, the Philippine government pledged to support the international coalition in the new fight against terrorism. And let me just take this opportunity to thank the local governments of Lanao del Sur, the Mayors League, because they visited me yesterday to tell me that they are foursquare behind the position I have taken on international terrorism.

This shows that the battle is not against Islam. The battle is against terrorism whatever the religion of the terrorists.

After the military action of the United Nations in Afghanistan, I reiterated our commitment.

And so, because we are now in this battle, we must strengthen our internal focus against terrorism. The Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police are going all out against the lawless violence engendered by the terrorist threats. But you, the local government units and institutions down to the barangay level, are the core of this effort.

And so I urge all of you to take an active part and even take the leadership, if you wish, in this battle against terrorism in your own local government areas I urge all LGUs to adopt the Patrol 117 approach initiated by the DILG for the quick response to crimes and violence. I likewise urge you to involve the participation of citizens in crime prevention.

The international situation arising from the terrorist attacks in America and the military action in Afghanistan asks all of us to reenergize and refocus ourselves towards achieving our nation's priorities.

And because we have even added challenges because of these new events in the world today, we all realize that the IRA is inadequate to meet all the demands of devolution and all the demands of the new international situation. Thus, it is important that local governments must be bold in exercising your corporate powers to explore alternative financing options and increase your ability to raise local revenues. In this regard, I am happy to see the active participation of private financial institutions and the donor community in this gathering. They are celebrating with us and they are celebrating the role they have played in promoting devolution over this last 10 years

We and they are celebrating today the adolescence though not yet the full maturity of local government autonomy — well 10 years old is really just entering adolescence after all. As we celebrate a decade of devolution, let us buckle down to work once again and collectively address the challenges in our continuing journey for a meaningful autonomy so that this adolescence will turn into a truly mature autonomy in the next years to come.

Congratulations and Happy Decade Anniversary.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212705/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8751&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the ADB International Conference on Poverty, Growth, and the Role of Institutions

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the ADB International Conference on Poverty, Growth, and the Role of Institutions

[Delivered at the ADB Headquarters Auditorium, Manila, October 10, 2001]

Thank you very much Secretary Romulo.

Mr. Chino and other officials of the Asian Development Bank, ADB Director and Chief Economist Mr. Alvin Panagarian; Secretary Teresita Quintos-Deles; ADB officers and employees; members of the Philippine government; civil society leaders; friends; ladies and gentlemen:

A very pleasant morning to all of you and welcome to all international participants in this conference. As you address the important relationships among poverty, growth, and the role of institutions, I hope you will also gain an insight into our vision of the Filipino future and a firm idea of what our people power administration is seeking to achieve in the Philippines and what it has sought to achieve in the last eight months.

Nine months ago, we faced a very different situation. Any honest discussion of Philippine situation would have had to acknowledge severe and almost hopeless prospects of dealing with poverty or achieving growth.

Today our political troubles are largely over. Our unemployment level improved somewhat. But the challenges of fighting poverty and achieving robust growth remain.

Last January, as mentioned earlier, on the day I became president, I declared that we must be bold in our national ambitions, so that our challenge must be that within this decade, our country will win the fight against poverty.

To succeed, I said in my State of the Nation Address last July, our national agenda must revolve around four components.

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. Not a pitiless free-for-all free enterprise but free enterprise with a social conscience.

The second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity.

The third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan.

And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

Poverty can be defined as an outcome of a person's entitlements, or command over output, income assets and material goods.

On the other hand, poverty can also be defined as a process or situation of social exclusion, where individuals are constrained against full participation in social life due to barriers in ethnicity and race, gender, age, physical handicaps, and of course, economic and physical resources.

For instance, undoubtedly, economic exclusion is at the root of our national security problems in Mindanao. The traditional view of Muslims and indigenous peoples as inferior to lowland Filipinos has been a hurdle for them to contribute to Filipino social and political life, and hinders their ability to gain access to economic opportunities.

The high level of income and asset inequality and the slow reduction in poverty incidence in the Philippines are due to the lack of entitlements and social exclusion. A large number of Filipinos face limited opportunities to improve their quality of life and face barriers to fully achieve their social and economic potentials.

We notice the following characteristics of Philippine poverty:

Poverty continues to be mainly a rural phenomenon and is agriculture-based. More than two thirds of poor households in the Philippines live in the rural areas.

And while agriculture-dependent households consist now of only 40 percent of the total population, this sector accounts for over two thirds of the poor. Thus, our anti-poverty agenda has as I mentioned earlier, one of its four main components the modernization of agriculture founded on social equity.

Inter-regional differences in poverty incidence are high. Among 16 regional areas of the Philippines, the National Capital Region has only a 9.7 percent poverty incidence. But three regions – Bicol, Central Mindanao and the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao have a poverty incidence of greater than 50 percent.

I have said that one of the four main components in my administration's battle against poverty is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan.

This social bias is anchored on the redistribution of economic opportunities and enhancing the capabilities of the poor to participate in decision-making.

Redistributive reform is the primary framework in improving the level of human development and in articulating the direction of economic growth of the country over the next several years.

Thus, priority emphasis is given to several core strategies of this framework – the redistribution of economic resources and political opportunities and they include the following:

One, priority is being given to asset reform programs or the redistribution of physical and resource assets to the poor, especially land and credit. This entails funding the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program; implementing the Urban Development and Housing Act, especially the provisions on social housing for urban poor groups; quicker distribution of ancestral domain claims to indigenous peoples under the Indigenous People's Rights Act; and ensuring equal ownership rights for women in all laws and executive orders.

Two, this government is working to provide fuller financial and institutional requirements of human development services, which strengthen the human capital base of the poor. It has set specific, concrete and quantified targets in making available basic education, health, shelter, water and electricity for the poor and marginalized sectors. It is working to distribute public spending progressively towards these areas.

Three, we are working to increase employment and livelihood opportunities for the poor over and above what the market would provide and to strengthen the capacities of marginalized groups to engage in productive activities. In this regard, the government is funding the requirements of the Agricultural and Fisheries Modernization Act in the hope of providing one million jobs in agriculture. It is creating employment opportunities for out-of-school, out-of-work youth, it is providing micro-finance services for 300,000 new borrowers per year, and following the Classical Grameen Bank formula most of these borrowers will be women.

Four, the participation of the poor in governance and institution-Building, and civil society groups are included in policy-making in the national and local levels. We are working to strengthen the Party List Law and the legislation of Sectoral Representation in local governments. Our government is addressing the requirements of our women in Nation Building Law, the Accessibility Law, and the Senior Citizens' Act.

Five, this administration is working to provide social protection and security from violence for the basic sectors, in order for them to fully exercise their political, social and economic rights and to be mainstreamed in society.

Social protection includes three components: social welfare assistance that are regular government programs that maintain a minimum standard of living among the poor and that reduce risks from such incidents as violence, illness, disability, old age, unemployment, resettlement and harvest failure; safety nets or bridging mechanisms that mitigate the adverse impact of economic dislocations and shocks, disasters and calamities, and finally, structural adjustments on specific disadvantaged and vulnerable groups; and social security to diversify and mitigate the risks among the poor arising from retirement, unemployment, illness and stability.

Security from violence means strengthening the implementation of the Anti-Sexual Harassment and Anti-Rape Laws; legislation against domestic violence; stricter enforcement of the law against illegal demolitions and strengthening the participation of urban poor groups in cases involving relocation, and prohibition of labor-only contracting. Through existing government structures, we recognize indigenous culture and practices, including communal-based management of resources and existing health and education practices. Security also means protecting the environment to ensure its long-term sustainability.

In order to implement these thrusts, I have asked Congress to pass a law that will recognize the property rights of the poor so that they can use them as collateral, and I have asked my cabinet members to reduce the number of signatures required to transfer lands for redistribution.

In the governance chapter of the Medium Term Philippine Development Plan, I have instituted several governance reforms including the following:

Strengthening private sector participation in infrastructure development;

Developing greater partnerships among governance actors, government, business and civil society in infrastructure and market development;

Improving the enforcement of anti-corruption laws; and

Government accounting and auditing reforms.

And finally, as I pledged during my inaugural address, I renew my commitment to lead by example to improve moral standards in government. This is my personal commitment in order to improve institutional standards in the country.

The creation and transformation of institutions to fight poverty is more urgent than ever today. Weak and ineffective institutions such as problematic laws and systems of property rights, fraudulent courts, biased markets and entangled requirements for setting up business, more often hurt the poor and disadvantaged rather than the rich. As you can hopefully glean from my sharing, the poverty reduction thrusts of my administration seek to transform and create new institutions in order to effectively respond to the marginalized groups in the country.

I am very grateful that this morning we witnessed the signing of a partnership, a new partnership between the ADB and the Philippine government in fighting poverty. This partnership has been going on for a long time now ever since ADB was established. And I was very happy that when I came here, when I entered the building I was made to stop by a picture of my father the late president Diosdado Macapagal in the groundbreaking ceremonies of the first ADB building in Roxas Boulevard. I remember as a young teenager that my father was telling us and his family that he wanted so much the forthcoming Development Bank for Asia to be established in the Philippines and for that purpose they were enthusiastically offering land in Roxas Boulevard. And it came to pass and now ADB is in the Philippines. We have had a long partnership in fighting poverty today we renew the partnership and I hope that that partnership will hue closely in its characteristics to the elements of the social bias for the poor that I have enumerated in my statement today.

To the delegates and participants of this conference, I hope that your discussions will help in understanding the relationships of poverty and growth and the social, political, and economic institutions that underlie them.

And in achieving greater understanding I hope that in this world of the new millennium where there is great hope because of Information and Communications Technology and rapid advances in capital flows but where there is also great uncertainty because of the new battle against terrorism in the world I hope that with the new insights that will be learned in this conference and with the old insight that will be renewed and given a new meaning for the 21st century, ADB will continue to be relevant and will increase its relevance in strengthening institutions, promoting growth and eradicating poverty in the 21st century.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the ADB International Conference on Poverty, Growth, and the Role of Institutions. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212654/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8752&Itemid=38

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Ceremonial Switch-on of the Malampaya Deep Water Gas-to-Power Project, October 16, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Ceremonial Switch-on of the Malampaya Deep Water Gas-to-Power Project

[Delivered at Malampaya On-shore Gas Plant, Brgy. Tabangao, Batangas City, October 16, 2001]

MALAMPAYA: USHERING IN THE ERA OF NATURAL GAS

This is a great moment in our country's history. At a project cost of almost $5 billion, the Malampaya Deep Water Gas-to-Power Project is the largest and most important investment of its kind in the history of the Philippines.

Today, we are witnessing not only the start of the flow of gas from point a to b. This flow represents the beginning of a whole new industry – a natural gas industry that will give us clean and environment-friendly fuel while making us now 52 percent self-sufficient in energy.

Previous to this, we were consuming up to three billion dollars of imported fuel every year. Malampaya will reduce that burden by almost $700 million a year. Over the 20-year period of operation of the project, we also expect to earn at least $13 billion in royalties. These enormous sums should go a very long way towards financing our plans and programs for the conquest of mass poverty and for our country's modernization.

The Malampaya Project is a contribution to Philippine development of historic proportions. Its impact will be long and widely felt, far beyond the power and energy sector itself, in the daily lives of millions of Filipinos. Many of those Filipinos may have never heard of Malampaya, and maybe never will, because they are far in the hinterlands. But they will be reached and touched by the benefits of natural gas.

Let me therefore congratulate the officers, staff members, engineers, and of course the world-class workers of Shell Philippines Exploration, or SPEX, for the excellent first-class job they have done on this project. Let me also congratulate their partners — Texaco Philippines and the Philippine National Oil Company Exploration Corporation — Thelmo Cunanan is here representing the partners in the Philippines for sharing SPEX's optimism. The Department of Energy, the National Power Corporation, and the Manila Electric Company, or Meralco, also played key roles in ensuring the commercial viability of this project.

This project was completed before schedule and under budget — that is the way we want to do it in the Philippines. I am proudest, of course, of the fact that the Filipino workers were centrally involved in the construction of the project's upstream and downstream facilities.

Their core participation in this project is a testament to our world-class skills and our ability to produce first-rate work under the most demanding circumstances. Our friends from the United Kingdom have all been profuse with praise that our engineers and our workers, in fact, are better than many that they have encountered in their long decades of experience all over the world. Let us be proud of them. Sa mga manggagawang Pilipino na tumulong sa matagumpay na pagtatapos ng proyektong ito, maraming salamat at mabuhay kayong lahat!

And let me congratulate that Shell took great care to ensure that the environment is not compromised by such a massive undertaking. The 500-kilometer pipeline runs across some of the Philippines most environmentally-sensitive areas.

And I am glad to be assured by Shell officials that every precaution was taken to preclude damage to the environment. And in the process, they also undertook a number of significant sustainable development and social action projects around the country. And for this, Shell has received global acclaim for this initiative.

The Malampaya Project, which will span decades in its entirety, reminds us of the need to take a long-term view of our prospects and capabilities.

Long-term indeed, I still remember the time during the administration of President Corazon C. Aquino in 1989, I was at a meeting in the Central Bank and we got the great news that natural gas had been discovered off Palawan. And we were so excited and we said when do we inaugurate the completion of the pipeline. They said, 15 years from now, long-term indeed, but what was planted during the time of the Philippines' first female president, the product of EDSA 1, was inaugurated during the time of the Philippines' second female president. The product of EDSA, long-term indeed.

And it indeed shows us that we must remember to think long-term and plan long-term even as we seek to approach with a sense of urgency the immediate problems of our times.

And now therefore, speaking of the long-term, let me take this opportunity to set forth the directions and concrete actions that my administration will take to promote the natural gas industry.

First, to achieve the goal of enhancing natural gas utilization, it shall be the policy of our administration to promote activities in the downstream sector by opening the access for all land-based gas pipeline networks to ensure the inflow of investments in this area. I know that several Japanese, Philippine, European and Malaysian companies have already signified their interest of investing in a land-based gas pipeline network from Batangas to Manila and eventually to Bataan. And so therefore, to promote access to all, the Secretary of Energy will encourage these interested parties to organize a consortium for a land gas pipeline project.

Second, as part of the privatization plan for National Power Corporation assets, the government is willing to require the conversion of certain existing National Power Corporation plants into gas-fired power plants, in exchange, of course, for the Malampaya Consortium to consider reducing the gas price lower than their existing gas sales contract. This will provide a direct impact to the consumers through lower electricity rates and reduce future stranded cost under a competitive generation market. Anyway, we would like to point out to our friends from Shell that any drop in revenues from lower gas prices would be more than offset by higher gas sales volume for additional gas-power generation.

Third, in order to win the battle against air pollution and accelerate the benefits of cleaner air, the use of compressed natural gas, or CNG, for all public transport will be given top priority by this administration. We will start first with Batangas in the next two years, and ultimately for the whole of Calabarzon, including Metro Manila, by the year 2004 with the private sector taking the lead. I am calling on the DOE, DOTC and DENR to coordinate their actions to give this impetus by the private sector a boost and support the use of CNG for public transportation vehicles, but again for as long as the price of gas is significantly lower than the price of diesel to effect the conversion the government hopes to achieve.

Fourth, the development and use of small gas fields which have already been discovered and proven will be promoted for non-power applications. Initially, use of the Libertad Field in Cebu and the Sultan Sabarongis Field in Maguindanao shall be considered for use as bottled natural gas much like LPG for non-power applications by 2002.

There are substantial gas potentials from discovered and prospective fields in different parts of the country and the development of these resources shall be at the forefront of our agenda. To sustain the growth of the natural gas industry in this country in the long-term, however, we may need to explore the importation of LPG in the future to improve our energy base if no new gas fields are developed.

Malampaya's success, however, makes us hopeful that many things are still under our waters. This success elevates government and private sector partnership to a higher level of expectations and results. The natural gas industry in the Philippines is still in its initial stage. We should therefore continue with this formula for a better tomorrow and quality of life for the Filipino people.

Once again, to everyone involved — from the time of President Aquino when the gas was discovered, through the time of President Ramos when the contracts for sales and purchase of gas were signed, and up to the last ones whom we saw on the screen, those who are going to run this plant — to all of you congratulations; and congratulations to Shell and its partners; and congratulations to the people of the Philippines.

Thank you.

Source: University of the Philippines Diliman Library

Speech of President Arroyo during the e-APEC Module of the CEO Summit Speech
of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the e-APEC Module of the CEO Summit

[Delivered at the 2nd floor, Dalian Hall, Shanri-la Hotel, Shanghai, China, October 20, 2001]

Thank you very much Ambassador Romulo. Honorable Mujie Chuan; Mr. Levin; Honorable Ernesto Derves; Mr. Williams; members of the Philippine delegation; all of the friends from all over the APEC countries:

Good afternoon.

It is an honor to be with you today to discuss the challenges that we all face in adjusting to the fast-evolving new economy. All APEC economies are asking themselves: how can we position ourselves to most effectively participate in this new electronic era? It is an era where, increasingly, the economic dividends we reap are sown in the ground of the emerging global digital economy. It is an era where knowledge is supplanting commodities as the measure of wealth. It is an era where to pause or to prevaricate risks being left behind.

We in the ASEAN region recognize that information and communication technology or ICT — particularly the internet and electronic commerce — hold the key to economic prosperity and development across the board. Their critical role in adding value to traditional industries cannot be ignored. And it is especially critical at this time as we face significant economic security challenges.

Our longstanding companies and our small and medium enterprises must be online to compete in the global marketplace. Our rural entrepreneurs and our urban businesses must be online. We cannot leave any sector out. From agriculture to energy, from health to financial services, we need to integrate e-commerce and e-business technologies to streamline operations, access the global marketplace, and increase productivity and efficiency. The web of cross-sectoral networks that is the foundation of the new economy reaches everywhere, affects everything and will only become more extensive as this decade progresses.

Another important component of the new economy is our ability to deliver public services more efficiently: education, health care, agricultural extension services, environmental management, and knowledge about government. Access is the key to development. Through improving access we can empower our people and make them part of the governance process.

Developing economies have a long way to go before internet technologies become a truly integral part of our economic activity. The reasons are obvious. There is a lack of basic infrastructure in some places, there is a major skills deficit in other places, there is a lack of confidence in the regulatory framework that only a clear set of enforceable rules will improve. The challenge is getting widespread acceptance too by business and consumers of this new method of doing business.

ASEAN leaders have created an e-ASEAN initiative, which culminated in the signing of a framework agreement on e-commerce development. The strategy calls for a focus on three core cross-cutting areas:

One, enhancing our information infrastructure; two, creating a policy and regulatory environment that is supportive of the new economy; and, three, developing our human capital — all key objectives of e-APEC. The goal is to create, for ICT goods and services, a seamless market — now numbering half a billion people and with a combined GDP equal to china's. The hope is that this will spur our own entrepreneurs, together with international investors, to expand their stakes in the region and make us a very significant player in the new economy.

What we are doing in ASEAN is similar to what is happening under the e-APEC umbrella where the key tenets are: strengthening markets and creating the right policy environment for e-technologies to flourish; and, developing the human capacity to harness the technologies and turn them to productive use.

The Philippines has been prominent in the regional ICT policy debate for some time. We jointly spearheaded e-ASEAN and our private sector took the role of co-chair of the ABAC Technology Task Force. This level of regional engagement will continue. And my goal is that, in the future, the Philippines will be prominent in global ICT policy debates as well.

My administration understands that it must act realistically and strategically. In the past our nation lagged behind some of our neighbors in harnessing the potential of ICT to drive development and growth. To rectify this, and to foster a digital culture that maximizes the benefits of ICT, we initially concentrate our efforts in three areas that are not coincidentally in line with the e-ASEAN goals.

The first area is the building of physical infrastructure. We are working to speed up building the telecommunications and network infrastructure. Interconnectivity is a must at no cost and I will be supporting wider public access to a minimum set of communications and information services through the establishment of operational telecenters and through the provision of broadband services in cities and identified growth hub areas.

The second area is ensuring an appropriate policy and legal environment. It is not the role of government to determine technological outcomes — that is the role of the market. Our role indeed will be to provide the environment to create the growth of ICT.

The new economy requires a paradigm shift in the way governments and private sectors operate and interact. To that end, I created a cabinet level group, the Information Technology and e-Commerce Council, to lead our ICT policy formulation and implementation. It also harmonizes and coordinates all public ICT initiatives and attends to cross-cutting issues that cannot be handled by a specific government agency. I served as the Chairman and Bobby Romulo and Mar Roxas serve as my Co-chairs — one for the private sector and one for the government sector. Following the council's recommendation, I asked our Congress to enact laws to address internet privacy and security, allow for multimedia convergence, and create a Department of Communications and Information Technology. To be successful, the ICT sector must be driven by the private sector with minimal government intervention and regulation.

Finally, the third area development is the development of human capital to close the digital divide. The Asian computer directory notes that the Philippines is the second highest among Asian countries in the number of training facilities for computer programming and other computer-related courses.

A range of strategies is being employed to build on this advantage. We are working diligently to increase the training of ICT professionals and ICT-enable workers. We have an excellent basis on which to develop these skills. Sometime ago, way back last November 1998 President Fidel Ramos signed a Memorandum of Understanding with Oracle to launch Oracle's academic initiative in the Philippines as the first overseas extension of this hitherto American-based I.T. Professional initiative.

We are already seeing returns. High-tech companies have made significant investments in the Clark economic area — for instance, A.O.L. has a major call center there, bringing high wage jobs into the community.

Yesterday Bill Gates and I witnessed the signing of Memoranda of Understanding between Microsoft and Philippine entities on the Philippine government portal, the Microsoft-Clark Development Center, and to explore the development of e-learning in the Philippines.

I would like to share with you three ideas regarding ways in which we can start to close the digital divide especially through the work of the private sector. My thoughts stem from the belief that the technologies that have created the digital divide are also the tools for bridging it. That far from being charities, they present real opportunities for business.

First, the business sector can help provide cheaper access to basic internet applications like e-mail and web browsing. Investments in computers tend to be burdensome to lower income groups and even to governments. Access to communications networks is also a big handicap. The business sector can help by developing new and lower cost products that provide these basic applications and that use alternative means of connecting to the net — for example, television and radio or simple internet appliances. Wireless communication is also becoming more affordable and easily deployed. This is what I plan to do to bring learning to the distant Barangays in our country.

Second, the business sector can help develop local content. Providing relevant content will motivate individuals or local government units to invest in access to the internet and it will increase the value of the benefits that they would derive from it. Businesses will profit because they will be able to tap a significant portion of the population who may not be engaged otherwise.

Third, business can assist small enterprises to get online and participate in global e-commerce. Here the problem is less of affordability but more of ability. We need to lower the cost of procurement as well as the servicing of orders from retailers. Let us not lose the sight of the fact that some of these small enterprises may well be potential customers in the future.

We share the same goal of making the dividends from ICT applications and e-commerce in particular, available to all. Now we must recognize that our individual and collective new economy policy challenges can only be overcome if our public and private sectors work together at the domestic, regional and global level. As we do so, let us make this new era of unprecedented technological development one of unprecedented international cooperation.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the e-APEC Module of the CEO Summit. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212642/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8750&Itemid=38

Arrival Address of President Arroyo

Arrival Address of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines

[Delivered on October 22, 2001]

Vice President Guingona and the other cabinet members who stayed up so late just to wait for me; Secretary Romulo welcome back, the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces and the major commanders, and the Chief of the PNP, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen, mga minamahal kong kababayan:

Just before I took off from Shanghai a few hours ago, I had a meeting with our gracious host President Jiang Zemin. I was not scheduled to meet with him bilaterally because I am making a state visit next week. But he asked for a meeting and he expressed his warm felicitations to our country and people. Our meeting was congenial and constructive and he thanked me that the hostage crisis involving the Chinese national Zhonyi has finally ended. I assured him that in the future we will try our best to ensure the safety of Chinese nationals working on important projects in the Philippines.

My trip to Shanghai to attend the APEC summit is a forerunner of my state visit to China which will start next week. In the next four weeks in fact, I will travel from one end of the Pacific rim to the other. From China, I shall return home for All Saints Day, then pack up for Brunei for the ASEAN summit. Soon after I will go on another state visit to Indonesia, then to a visit to the United States and Mexico. All these trips are tied together by the common thread of our national interest for I consider it an urgent responsibility to consolidate our foreign relations during this period of conflict, crisis and uncertainty as the global economy continues to take retarded course in the face of an escalating war against terrorism. At this moment, the world faces the dual imperative of heightened vigilance on one hand and of economic revitalization on the other. The APEC meeting in Shanghai defined the paths we now have to take in the face of these challenges, greater security in the face of the terrorist threat, promoting sustainable growth, sharing the benefits of globalization in the new economy, and supporting the multilateral trading system. These paths are amplified in two historic documents that came out of the meeting: the APEC Leaders' declaration, entitled 'meeting new challenges in the new century', and the APEC Economic Leaders' statement on counter terrorism which is considered to be the first political statement made by this world body since its inception. These statements signal the urgency of the moment which has been captured by the APEC summit. In our meetings with 20 leaders, we discussed terrorism in the light of the future of the open market, the macro economic horizon and the human capacity building that has to be collectively mustered, both in defense of the global economy from current instabilities and in propelling it in the course of the new century. In behalf of our people, I carried the message to APEC that while we stand foursquare behind the United Nations and the international coalition against terrorism, we must now take active security measures to secure the ramparts of economic cooperation from further degradation. Most of these measures are obvious: those designed to combat money laundering and terrorist funds' movement, as well as to improve aviation and port security, cyber security, energy security, and customs' enforcement, among others. The less obvious yet equally vital measures relate to the security of our communities where the majority of our small and medium businesses, family farms and family life operations are based. We will further enable these operations, bring them into the regional and global economy and shore up their capacity to cope with economic shocks and to harness new technologies. The summit was also an occasion for me to make a strong pitch for a regional initiative to bolster the international coalition against terrorism. In this light our government will continue discussions within our immediate neighborhood, with Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand on closer exchanges of information and intelligence. The focus is on tightening security cooperation, an initiative that could move to a higher level during the ASEAN summit next month. I took the opportunity to call for meaningful steps to ensure that the continuing penetration of cultures in the global milieu is rendered impervious to the influences of political and religious extremism. I explained to our APEC neighbors that our country has institutionalized the tools of autonomy, consensus and inter-faith dialogue to serve this end. I told them that our anti-poverty program is also closely focused on the communities vulnerable to fanaticism and irrational violence.

Traversing the multilateral meetings of the summit, I drove home the message that while our economy is prepared for a full and fair engagement with the world, we shall continue to support several key imperative.

First the next round of negotiations of the World Trade Organization or WTO must push through launching a new round of negotiations important to install global business confidence and momentum in the wake of the September 11 attacks. It is also a way to ensure that the WTO maintains its stature and credibility at this crucial time.

Second to ensure the itself does not lose credibility at this crucial time, our top priority is to ensure that the new round is truly a development round. The trade regime as a whole must accord developing countries sufficient flexibility to pursue vital development goals such as poverty alleviation, reinforce by human capacity building and technical assistance from the WTO.

Third our small and medium industries must be empowered by information and communication technology. Our rural entrepreneurs and urban business must be placed on-line. We cannot leave any sector out from agriculture to energy, from health to financial services, we need to integrate e-business and e-commerce technologies to streamline operations, access the global marketplace and increase productivity and efficiency.

Fourth we have to develop an integrated regional market in ASEAN plus-three to create economies of scale because the market demand in the US, Japan and Europe is suffering from steady decline.

In the sidelines of the summit, i had the opportunity to preside over the signing of an agreement, among others between the government and Microsoft corporation towards strengthening our electronic monitoring system in relation to the commitments contained in my first state of the nation address before congress. Microsoft and bill gates visited me at a hotel just to demonstrate this, is coming to the Philippines to provide e-learning, especially certification programs for programmers and bringing xml into our country. We also had the opportunity to discuss matters of mutual interest during our bilateral meeting with president Kin Dae-Jung of Korea, President Richard Lagos of Chile and Prime Minister Jean Chretien. On separate occasions, I met the leaders of ASEAN, addressed the APEC advisory council and the APEC CEO summit and presided over the inauguration of metro bank Shanghai, the First Philippine bank in China. Before I left home, I also met with the Filipino community in shanghai and I am glad to bring home their message of affection and concern for our people. A long road to consolidation lies ahead and I thank our people for their unremitting support for and faith in the presidency, Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's Arrival Address. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212636/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8749&Itemid=38

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the National Summit on Housing and Urban Development

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the National Summit on Housing and Urban Development

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, October 24, 2001]

Thank you very much, Secretary Romulo.

Senator Francis Pangilinan; Congressman Prospero Nograles; Secretary Defensor; Mr. Ric Domingo from the Luzon CMP-PO Network; Ms. De Leon-Yuson, the National Coordinator of the Urban Poor Colloquium; Mr. Fernando Zobel de Ayala; Mr. Thaddeus Liamzon; Mr. Terence Jones; Mr. Jan Meeuwissen; members of the Cabinet; Local Government officials, several of whom I see today; officials; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I wish to thank each one of you for participating in this first housing summit under my administration.

This summit is the culmination of a series of regional housing workshops which were conducted in Metro Manila and in the cities of Cebu, Baguio and Davao from September 20th to October 17th this year in preparation for the mapping out of an action agenda for housing for the years 2001 to 2004.

I would like to acknowledge the efforts of the HUDCC — the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council — and its attached agencies; the different departments of government such as the Department of Finance, Department of Budget and Management and the National Economic and Development Authority; the housing developers; the business and private sector groups such as the Shelter and Housing Advisory Group of the Makati Business Club; SHDA and CREBA — whom I understand from Mike have already united. That is a very big development in the housing industry, congratulations! — The urban poor colloquium and other representatives of civil society for making this summit possible.

I listened to all of the output of the summit — it sounds like a very long laundry list — and I think what we should do is to vet this some more, put timetables, put judgments and doabilities, so that this will be part of the inputs of the National Economic Summit that was proposed by Senator Ople that we will be doing. Where the summit will be on November 26th but prior to that, there will be activities leading up to that summit.

In that summit there were supposed to be 10 areas, and housing and infrastructure were in one area. I said, I don't want housing just part of infrastructure. Housing must be its own area because it is a major sector of the government, so therefore, we're 11 — 11th workshop in the housing.

Well, why do I say this? When I became President, I realized that I was entering the administration in a period of a world economic slowdown. In fact, I was telling the Lord, why did you make me President in a time like this when things are going down, looking bad? And in my prayer time he said, well that's why I put you there. You are an economist, you have extensive experience in the bureaucracy, you have experience in the legislature so this is the time to put all your experience together to help the country survive this slowdown.

And so, I started to discuss with the Cabinet Members and my fellow economists and the business sector — how do we survive this world slowdown? For sure our exports will plunge as they're already plunging. Therefore, we have to develop the domestic market; we have to build up domestic demand; and we have to do this while still maintaining a 145-billion peso budget deficit. So it is not unlimited pump-priming, it is pump-priming within our means.

And so we decided, first and foremost, Small and Medium Enterprises — and that's why we have Mel Alonzo here, who's going to do the miracles for the small and medium enterprises. Because when I was discussing with Mar, what's the most important thing that the SMEs need? And he said, what they need is a guarantee for their financing.

And so we removed the executive order that prohibits government guarantees because the purpose of that executive order on government guarantees was to avoid all the surprises that we got when the administration came in. We thought we had this amount of obligations but it turned out that the previous administration had so many government guarantees and B-O-T projects — continued liabilities that were becoming actual liabilities — so we said, let's put a stop to all of these. It was never meant to prevent SMEs from having access to guarantees so therefore we corrected the E.O.

And then the other matter, my fellow economists said I did right in saying that even if as a whole we must stay under deficit ceiling — which means keeping with the budget — for agriculture, I said, while we sacrifice and scrimp and save on the others, for agriculture, we must overspend. We must put that 20 billion pesos a year in agricultural modernization that had been promised by the law but for the budget only provided for what 14, 16 billion. So we did that and we put money in the countryside for agricultural modernization. And the business sector, I remember very well, a meeting with the Makati Business Club where they said another very important... They reminded of another very important source of domestic demand is the housing sector because the housing sector is very well known for the very big multiplier effect.

And so I said, yes that's very good. Problem is that Mike Defensor is complaining that while there's money available, the banks are not using the money for financing housing. So I asked Fernando, maybe you could help Mike Defensor work out a program on how the banks can use the financing that's available so that the money available lying in the vaults of SSS, GSIS, Landbank and DBP can be transformed into our housing targets. And he said, not only, not only in financing, we'll help mike work out a holistic program in order to make the housing industry viable. And I believe that the private housing sector has indeed been assisting Mike Defensor and the government housing sector in this regard.

I will not dwell specifically on the problems of the housing sector, I'm sure that in the consultations prior to the summit you already had enough dose of those housing problems, proof is the very long laundry list that mike read out. But let me summarize what I think... What I would like to do with the housing sector, and I have already told you earlier what I wanted to do and how the housing sector fitted into our program:

First, when I made my State of the Nation Address I was very clear, concrete and quantified in my targets, and I talked about four things the administration wants to do:

Number one, use the free enterprise system to create jobs. That means a good investment climate;

Number two, agricultural modernization founded on social equity, which is why we spent a lot of money on agriculture during this past several months;

And incidentally, indeed, I believe that our focus on building up domestic demand worked because when the statistics were out for the first semester, many other countries around the world, among our neighbors, among our major markets were entering recession or having their first quarter of negative growth or were having barely zero growth or flat growth, we grew at 3.4 percent. So therefore, we were an island together with China and, I believe, Indonesia — who was coming from way below — in having a good positive growth rate. So when I went to APEC it was really a source of pride. When they go around the table, how are you doing? And Hong Kong says, negative. Singapore says, negative. All these big economic giants say, negative. They go the Philippines, how are you doing?

So, but then, we can't rest on our laurels because September 11 happened, and September 11 has brought on more uncertainty. But not to go beyond that — first, the third item that I said in the State of the Nation Address was, that we must have a social bias in our development plan;

And the fourth being improvement of moral standards in government and in society.

When I talk about the social bias, this is where I talked about the rural poor and the urban poor. And the urban poor, of course, in all of my consultations — Senators, Vice President, President — everytime I go to a squatter area, to an urban poor area — alone or with others — whenever I ask them, what do you need first and foremost? And the first thing they always say is shelter security. So therefore, that's my number one goal for the urban poor — shelter security. And after looking at the finances available — because I don't want to set targets beyond our means — then that's where Mike Defensor's 300,000 shelter units came in. And these are divided into a 150,000 families who will have access to the land that they occupy or some other land in exchange for the land they occupy basically using the de Soto method. And I'm very glad that Hernando de Soto, who has heard about what we're doing, will be coming on November 13th and 14th at his own expense just to give us some of his expert advice on how to proceed. Then a 100,000 units a year for economic housing and 50,000 units a year for socialized housing.

This is the way I would want our 300,000 to be divided. And I hope that if we have a common goal and common quantitative targets, each one in the housing sector can figure out how he or she can contribute to these common goals.

Now, as I said, September 11 happened — and while housing... We looked at it, it's good for a multiplier, good and number one for having a social bias as far as the urban poor are concerned in our development plan — when September 11 happened, I said it is very important, even more important now to be focused. We survived the first half of the year, we dodged the bullet of the economic slowdown, but there's another bigger bullet coming our way, and this is the uncertainty that stems from the September 11 attacks and so we must be even more focused. And if we've already spent money on agriculture and is still being spent, and if we've already worked on unlocking the bottlenecks for the SMEs with regard to their guarantee funding, what we must do now — where do we get our additional new domestic demand to get into the economy and yet still maintain our 145-billion peso deficit ceiling? And I said, that what we must do is to unlock major infrastructure projects, major investment projects that have been tied up with bottlenecks in some way or another. And if you unlock those bottlenecks then these projects will move and then they will be the new spur to our economy. Among the major infrastructure bottlenecks that I would point out would be the Batangas port that's been there for so long. And one of the bottlenecks was that the landowners in the right of way wanted 6,000 pesos per hectare and the government's budget to make it viable was 600 pesos per hectare. Finally, we got a court ruling which we used as a basis to expropriate. And therefore now that Batangas port has already been awarded and it is now in Japan JBIC just for their confirmation. This is one major project that has been unlocked.

And what can I say about this? Expropriation is the key to many bottlenecks. So if there are going to be major infrastructure projects and we have greedy landowners — I cannot have 15 greedy landowners stop development for millions of people — then we will very, very quickly and decisively use the state tool of expropriation to make sure that we have good investment projects coming along. The other one is the MRT. Imagine how urban life will be much better if we had a whole mass transit loop that went around the Philippines. Right now we have only that last item, that last loop between — what is it? — SM North and Monumento, that's the last route. And the problem there was that the builders of the first MRT had a preemptive right to the extension. But I said, we can't wait for them to use their preemptive right forever. So, we gave them until October 15 to be able to give an acceptable proposal, otherwise, then we open it up for bidding. October 15 came and they had not gotten together on the technical proposal, so I told Bebot Alvarez, then advertise it for bidding.

And under the new bidding rules that we have — where the B-O-T Law that I authored is now being followed more strictly with regard to the new bidding rules — I couldn't understand why it would take so long because precisely I made the bidding rule so simple that they should take no more than two-and-a-half months. So I told Bebot Alvarez, make sure that the bidding rules that I put up in the B-O-T Law that I authored are going to be followed so that we can have that loop soon. And so I hope that soon we can really, in a couple of months from now, early next year, then we can start construction of that last loop and certainly life will be much better here in our urban area. Because when more people can go anywhere in Metro Manila using that MRT loop, then we will have much, much less traffic in our neighborhoods.

Another very big bottleneck is the PNB rehabilitation. But I hope that soon it will be resolved. The different parties are down to the last remaining issues.

And another big bottleneck that I want to be resolved is the matter of the National Steel Corporation. And because there had been a long drawn out, long, long drawn out court case where the creditors and SEC already took possession of National Steel because of its failure to pay its debts but National Steel even as the SEC had taken over, gave a lease contract to an operator so therefore it's been under litigation. Now the owner of NSC is Malaysian, and I brought this whole matter all the way up to Prime Minister Mahathir. And so therefore, I'm very glad that as a result of his intervention — through the Danaharta, which is the apt of Malaysia — then the Hotick, the owner, agreed to participate in the evaluation process for an interim operator — somebody who can operate the plant and give jobs while the final ownership is still being worked out. Now, the lease of question says that they will throw a monkey wrench into this agreement to have an interim operator because they want to be the interim and final operator. And all I can tell the people of Iligan City is Allen Gold is an Iliganon and if Allen Gold puts a monkey wrench in this, it is an Iliganon who is stopping jobs from being given to Iliganons. So they better work it out themselves there in Iligan.

Outside of that I think we will proceed, we will proceed unless the court stops us. But it's really very important to be decisive and not to be afraid of a court lawsuit. We shouldn't be afraid of testing the law so that at least we know what the law means when it is tested in the end. Because of we are afraid of lawsuits all the time, we'll always be afraid of acting.

The worst that the court can tell us is, stop, don't do it, and we will obey. Like Nani Perez says, you cannot commute a death sentence. You cannot put back a death sentence that has been commuted. Okay, I'll follow the law. He says, of course, unless there were infirmities in the commutation. Well, okay, look for infirmities in the commutation if there are some infirmities, then we will see. And I'm enumerating here the major projects that have bottlenecks that if you unlock them then they will move — Batangas port, the MRT loop completion, National Steel, PNB, and the housing sector. So five major projects that I have identified where it is crucial to remove the bottlenecks if we want to survive the second semester of this year.

That's why the housing sector is so important not only because of the multiplier, not only because of the social bias for the poor which is an end in itself, but because at a time like this when we need to unlock bottlenecks there is such a big potential for the housing sector because there are so many bottlenecks in the housing sector, so it's a question of unlocking them.

The bottlenecks in financing had been pointed out. Imagine when I give a target of 100,000 economic housing and 50,000 socialized housing, that was supposed to cost 25 billion pesos. So... No, no, not 25... Yeah, 25 billion pesos. But in the banking sector alone, in the GFIs alone there's already 25 billion pesos, not to mention the 3.7 billion that will be put in the GAA for the year 2002.

So the money is not the problem, the problem is that bottleneck — how to translate that money into the actual housing. And yesterday in the Cabinet meeting we had a rundown — that's what Mike was pointing out earlier, the percentages — and Cora dela Paz wasn't there yet when I had a meeting with the GFIs, so I said, how come you're not using your money? And SSS said, because the conduit and the private banks are very prudent — prudent is a mild term. Or very conservative — maybe that's even a mild term. But so I guess, we have to ask the banking sector to be more aggressive. But, on the other hand, I guess we had to look for other conduits, that's what I said. And if Pag-IBIG itself could be a conduit, Cora, then maybe we should use Pag-IBIG as a conduit so that you have more options. And then GSIS, what was the complaint? Mike gave a complaint yesterday. And I just came from Laguna today, where Laguna has plenty of money for land, plenty of money for its own counterpart but they're complaining about GSIS. And without my asking them or giving details, they confirmed what Mike was saying — theirs is limited to 12 designs. And Laguna, they'd like to put medium-rise housing, they can put their own money to make up for the difference, why can't they use their imagination and creativity? And really that's wrong. So yesterday we told... Lito Camacho was there and he said, it's wrong. And tomorrow he's going to have a meeting on the GFIs to sort out the bottlenecks within the GFIs with regard to the housing sector. For instance, I think GFIs should give free rein to designs as long as these designs are within the range of economic housing. Now, that Lito Camacho has finished working out the Power Sector Bill — thanks to our senators and congressmen — now that he's finished working out the Money Laundering Bill — again, thanks to our senators and congressmen especially Kiko who was a sponsor — now he can attend to housing financing.

So I think if we work out those bottlenecks and of course the other reason why the banks, I understand, are very conservative is that why wait two-and-a-half years because you know the red tape, the housing permits alone take two-and-a-half years to do — 188 signatures — and that's why during the State of the Nation Address I said, government agencies must reduce their signatures to one-half except housing which was reduced from 188 to 45. Today, Mike Defensor was talking about a surprise. And the surprise is an Executive Order that reduces the signatures not yet by 143 but by 20. But by removing these 20 signatures for CMP, it is cutting down the processing time of CMP from two years to — oh, excuse me — because you see this is after the cabinet meeting yesterday when it was inconclusive with regard to the E.O. And I said, well you've got between today and the housing summit tomorrow to work out. What you cannot do — because there's a law that constraints it — leave it out and put it in the E.O. That we will try to work for the law or something like that. But whatever can be done administratively must be done between now and tomorrow, I said. And so what Mike is giving me to sign today is an executive order that reduces any of whatever it is, it reduces it by 20 signatures and it reduces the processing time from two years to 90 days.

So I extemporized my speech because I saw the draft and it was full of highfalutin words and I figure that you've already had all your highfalutin' words all morning and during all the many workshops. So I decided that we'll just go down to the brass tacks and in the end we must remove bottlenecks and move all that housing money so that we can survive the second half of the year and move on to fighting poverty successfully in the years to come.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the National Summit on Housing and Urban Development. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212625/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8748&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo at the East Asia Economic Summit, October 29, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the East Asia Economic Summit

[Delivered at the Hong Kong Convention Center, October 29, 2001]

LIFTING THE GLOBAL ECONOMY OUT OF LETHARGY

I have the honor to have the chance once again to address the East Asia Economic Summit held under the auspices of the World Economic Forum. This forum is the foremost global community of business, political, intellectual and civil society leaders.

We are now traversing challenging and uncertain times. The events of September 11, coming as they were in the face of a slowdown, have pushed the global economy to the brink of full-blown recession.

If the world does go over the edge, this could lead to further loss of lives over and above the result of terrorist bombs or the reaction to terrorism, aggravated by the inability of governments to provide for their people if the global economy contracts. The World Bank estimates that as much as 100,000 human lives will be lost as a result of starvation and diseases should there be a full-blown recession.

But even as September 11 brought new levels of uncertainty, it has also brought countries closer together and injected urgency to the collective effort to combat terrorism.

A coalition is being built to eradicate terrorism. A coalition can also be formed to lift the global economy out of its lethargy.

After September 11, we realize just how closely global political and economic security have become intertwined, and how we must address both political and economic security. This renewed sense of global community could be the key to early recovery.

Dealing with terrorism is our most urgent priority. Given the impact of terrorism on the global economy, our first challenge is to deal with it and make this a safe and secure world. Directly after the attacks on New York and Washington, I assured President Bush that the Philippines stands behind American efforts to eradicate terrorism. Our decision to join the American fight against terrorism was not an emotional one because it was a strategic decision. The fight against terrorism is a global fight, it touches each and every one of our nations and indeed, we in the Philippines have first-hand experience.

The principles of the United Nations under recent APEC Economic Leaders Meeting, declaration against terrorism in Shanghai stands out as our most urgent priority. And, as I said, soon after the attacks in the U.S., we in the Philippines took steps to carry out measures to join the U.S. War. We took steps regarding six specific measures in support of the U.N. Security Council Resolution No. 1368 to combat terrorism. And these are the following:

To join the international counter terrorist coalition and to work for the United Nations;

To work closely with the United States on intelligence and security matters concerning terrorism;

To make available our air space and facilities when required as transit or staging points;

To contribute logistical support in the form of food supply, medicines, and medical personnel;

To provide with the consent of Congress, combat troops if there is an international call for such troops; and

To step up our offensive against the terrorist groups in the Philippines and prevent the flow of funds to them by passing and implementing legislation against money laundering.

The APEC Leaders Meeting ordained many economic security measures, including measures designed to curve money laundering, measures to develop a collective respond to aviation and port safety and security, and measures to combat cyber crime.

In another horizon, I believe that global efforts to stamp out terrorism can best be served by promoting cohesion and cooperation at the regional level.

In this regard, the Philippines initiated the establishment of a tri-nation anti-terrorist coalition between the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia. Through this coalition, we intend to share intelligence on terrorist activities, tighten border patrols, and when necessary partake in joint peacekeeping operations. We are looking to do more at the ASEAN Summit in Brunei.

One pillar of dealing with terrorism is socio-cultural solidarity and harmony. East Asia is a conglomerate of myriad culture and creeds. The global war against terrorism have tended to bring these differences in close focus. In Shanghai, I took the opportunity to call for meaningful steps to ensure that the continuing inter-penetration of cultures in the global milieu is rendered in impervious to the influences of political and religious extremism.

Our country has institutionalized the tools of autonomy, consensus and interface dialogue to serve this end. Our anti-poverty programs are also closely focused on the hunting grounds for recruitment, the fanaticism and irrational violence.

These unprecedented cooperation and coalition-building at a national, regional and global level to ensure security and safety could work equally well to ensure economic security which globalization has both provided and, at the same time, threatened.

The challenge we face today is the same challenge that generations earlier have faced — to bring about stability, prosperity and progress in the world. However, we do so now under vastly deferred circumstances brought about by the increasing pace of globalization and the rapid advances in information and communications technology. And the September 11 tragedies add an additional and dangerous side to globalization. But in a sense, they reinforced the message that events outside one's border — be they economic or political — cannot now be treated as something that affects all them, not us.

The rapid export-led recovery from the 1997 financial crisis lulled us into a false sense of security that we have already mastered the challenge of adapting to globalization. Then, in just a short period of time, export markets collapsed again and exposed fundamental weaknesses in many economies. Many of the antidotes to a repeat of the 1997 financial crisis have not yet been administered. It is time that they do before it becomes too late.

It is time that the appropriate reform and strengthening of the institutions and regulatory systems that are supposed to handle international flows, particularly capital flows should be brought about. It is time to reform financial sectors.

Given the fact that global business conditions are uncertain, we have also to rely on our own respective domestic efforts to stimulate economic growth and provide social safety nets.

In the Philippines, we have also taken steps to make the Philippines as safe and desirable location for foreign investments and trade.

Many lessons have been learned by both governments and international organizations, which could prove to be valuable in dealing with the current crisis. One of them is the importance of cooperation and concerted action.

The efforts of the major economies — U.S., Japan, Europe — stimulate their domestic economies will have far-reaching consequences for the global economy. The current situation provides the right political conditions to take the proverbial bitter pills of oft-postponed reforms. In our region, hundreds of millions look to Japan to resume its traditional role as the engine for growth and stability.

Moreover, we in ASEAN also have a collective responsibility to contribute to global economic security. In this light, we have to make AFTA a reality not in some distant future but in the next few years.

We have a rare opportunity to build stronger, yet more equitable multilateral trading system as Doha.

Launching a new round of negotiations in the WTO has gained importance as a way to restore business confidence and momentum in the face of the current lethargic situation. This may also be a defining moment on how we face the issue of globalization.

We have seen more and more mass actions against globalization and free trade. However, globalization is not driven by people meeting in Seattle, in Geneva, or even in Shanghai, but by developments and technology and markets. But it is in these meetings that we can address the concerns of those affected by globalization and find ways to make sure that the policies we put in place will lead to sustainable development and the alleviation of poverty.

Some quarters have dubbed the new round as a development round. And I hope that this does not turn out to be a marketing gimmick to get developing countries to sign on. I think we should have a new round but we must make sure that we have a balanced agenda that benefits all participants.

As the financial crisis has demonstrated, we can maximize the benefits for globalization and minimize its adverse effects, if we have greater coherence in how we respond to its many dimensions — trade, investments, capital and labor.

It is therefore imperative that there is greater coordination and convergence of policies among international development institutions such as the WTO, World Bank, IMF and regional development banks. Such that trade is a mainstream in the development agenda and therefore capacity-building can be focused and targeted.

The event of September 11 were both shocking and horrifying for observers around the world. These events put us all on an uncharted course, both in terms of political and economic security and personal safety, and increased our sense of vulnerability and uncertainty.

Coming as we were, in the face of a slowdown, the event of September 11 could push the global economy over the edge towards a full-blown recession. This could lead to further loss of lives, not only as a result of conflict itself but also as a result of the inability of government to provide for their people as the global economy contracts.

The World Bank estimates that as much as 100,000 human lives will be lost as a result of starvation and disease should there be a full-blown recession. But September 11 has also brought countries closer together and injected urgency to the collective efforts. This meeting is no exception.

Just as we build an East Asia Coalition to eradicate terrorism, so too can we close rank to lift the global economy. We must address both political and economic security. This renewed sense of global community could be the key to early recovery.

It is one more manifestation of globalization and presents us with an added challenge. But these events also presented us with an opportunity to work together and come out stronger on a variety of fronts.

The coalition that has been built and the relationships that have been fortified in our collective response to terrorism can and must extend the global, regional and bilateral economic relations.

We face a rocky road ahead. That is certain. But the global economy can, and will, pull through if we approach our economic uncertainties with the same cooperative and integrated approach that we have applied to anti-terrorism.

The Philippines stands ready to work with its friends and neighbors to meet this challenge.

Thank you.

Source: University of the Philippines Diliman Library

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Keynote Address of President Arroyo at the 16th East Asia Economic Summit

Keynote Address
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the 16th East Asia Economic Summit

[Delivered at the Hong Kong, October 29, 2001]

It is my honor to have the chance once again to address the East Asia Economic Summit held under the auspices of the World Economic Forum. The forum is the foremost global community of business, political, intellectual and civil society leaders.

We are now traversing challenging and uncertain times.

The events of September 11, coming as they were in the face of a slowdown, have pushed the global economy to the brink of full-blown recession.

If the world does go over the edge, this could to further loss of lives over and above the result of terrorist bombs or the reaction to terrorism, aggravated by the inability of governments to provide for their people if the global economy contracts. The World Bank estimates that as much as 100,000 human lives will be lost as a result of starvation and diseases should there be a full-blown recession.

A coalition is being built to eradicate terrorism. A coalition can also be formed to lift the global economy out of its lethargy.

After September 11, we realized just how closely global political and economic security have become intertwined, and how we must address both political and economic security. This renewed sense of global community could be the key to early recovery.

Dealing with terrorism is our most urgent priority.

Given the impact of terrorism on the global economy, our first challenge is to deal with it and make this a safe and secure world.

Directly after the attacks on New York and Washington, I assured President Bush that the Philippines stands behind American efforts to eradicate terrorism. Our decision to join the American fight against terrorism was not an emotional one – it was a strategic decision. The fight against terrorism is a global fight – it touches each and every one of our nations and indeed we in the Philippines have first hand experience.

Soon after the attacks in the U.S., we in the Philippines took steps to carry out six specific measures, in support of U.N. Security Council resolution no. 1368, to combat terrorism:

- To join the international counter terrorist coalition and to work with the United Nations;
- To work closely with the United States on intelligence and security matters concerning terrorism;

- To make available our air space and facilities when required as transit or staging points;
- To contribute logistical support in the form of food supply, medicines and medical personnel;
- To provide, with Congress's consent, combat troops if there is an international call for such troops; and
- To step up our offensive against and prevent the flow of funds to terrorist groups in the Philippines by more aggressive military action and passing and implementing legislation against money laundering.

Coupled with our participation in global efforts to stamp out terrorism, we are also working to promote cohesion and cooperation at the regional level. For example, we initiated an effort to create a tri-nation anti-terrorist coalition between the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia. Through this coalition, we will work to share intelligence on terrorist activities, tighten border patrols and when necessary partake in joint peacekeeping operations. We are looking to do more at the ASEAN Summit meeting in Brunei.

We are pursuing broader inter-faith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity. Terrorists wish to instigate a religious war. We must make this an opportunity to for religious understanding, ecumenism and solidarity.

At the recent concluded APEC Leaders' meeting in Shanghai, we agreed to take a strong stance against terrorism and discussed ways of prioritizing APEC's work to meet these challenges including money laundering, aviation and port safety and security, and cyber crime.

These unprecedented cooperation and coalition building at the national, regional and global level to ensure security and safety could work equally well to ensure economic security which globalization has both provided and at the same time threatened.

The challenge we face today is the same challenge that generations earlier have faced – to bring about stability, prosperity and progress in the world. However, we do so now under vastly different circumstances brought about by the increasing pace of globalization and the rapid advances in the information and communications technology. The September 11 tragedies add an additional and dangerous side to globalization but in a sense reinforce the message that events outside one's border – be they economic or political- cannot now be treated as something that only affects them, not us.

The rapid export-led recovery from the 1997 financial crisis lulled us into a false sense of security that we have already mastered the challenge of adapting to globalization. Then, in just a short period of time, export markets collapsed and exposed fundamental weaknesses in many economies. Many of the antidotes to a repeat of the 1997 financial crisis have not yet been administered. It is time that they do before it becomes too late.

It is time that internal systems, structures and institutions required to manage and ensure maximum benefits from global economic integration are in place.

It is time that the appropriate reform and strengthening of the institutions and regulatory systems that are supposed to handle international flows, particularly capital flows, it is time to reform financial sectors.

It is time to recapitalize crisis-affected banks, quickly resolve problem accounts as well as insolvent institutions and otherwise strengthen the financial system.

Given the fact that global business conditions are uncertain, we have to rely on our respective domestic efforts to stimulate economic growth and provide social safety nets. In the Philippines we have also taken steps to make the Philippines a safe and desirable location for foreign investment and trade.

Many lessons have been learned by both governments and international organizations which could prove to be valuable in dealing with the current crisis. One of them is the importance of cooperation and concerned action.

The efforts of the major economies—U.S., Japan, Europe—to stimulate their domestic economies will have far reaching consequences for the global economy. The current situation provides the right conditions to take the bitter pills of oft-postponed reforms. In our region, hundreds of millions look to Japan to resume its traditional role as the engine for growth in the Asian region.

We in ASEAN also have responsibility to contribute to global economic security. We have to make a reality not in some distant future but in the next few years.

We have a rare opportunity to discuss the current global trading environment at the W.T.O. Ministerial meeting in Doha. It may well be the defining moment on how we face the issue of globalization. We have seen more and more mass actions against globalization is not driven by people meeting in Seattle, Genoa, or even Shanghai, but by developments in technology and markets. But it is in these meeting that we can address the concerns of those affected by globalizations and find ways to make sure that the policies we put in place will lead to sustainable development and the alleviation of poverty. Some quarters have dubbed the rounds as a development round, and I hope that this does not turn out to be a marketing gimmick to get developing countries to sign on. I think we should have a new round but we must make sure that we have a balanced agenda that benefits all participants.

The following can make the Doha round truly a development round:

1. Greater coherence and convergence of policies among international development institutions such as the World Bank, I.M.F., W.T.O., and Regional Development Banks so that trade is mainstreamed in the development agenda and therefore capacity building can be focused and targeted; and
2. A review of special and differential treatment beyond just the phasing of commitments but also capacity building flexibility to pursue domestic development goals.

As the financial crisis has demonstrated, we can maximize the benefits of globalization and minimize its adverse effects, if we have greater coherence in how we respond to its many dimensions—trade, investment, capital, and labor.

The events of September 11 were both shocking and horrifying for observers around the world. These events put us all on an uncharted course, both in terms of political and economic security and personal safety, and increased our sense of vulnerability and uncertainty.

This is one more manifestation of globalization and presents us with an added challenge. But these events also presented us with an opportunity to work together and come out stronger on a variety of fronts.

The coalition that has been built and the relationships that have been fortified in our collective response to terrorism can and must extend to global, regional and bilateral economic relations.

We face a rocky road ahead, that is certain, but the global economy can, and will, pull through if we approach our economic uncertainties with the same cooperative and integrated approach that we have applied to anti-terrorism.

The Philippines stands ready to work with its friends and neighbors to meet this challenge.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Keynote Address at the 16th East Asia Economic Summit. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212609/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8746&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Philippines-China Business Forum

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Philippines-China Business Forum

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Kerry Center Hotel, Beijing, PROC, October 30, 2001]

Secretary Roxas and the other members of the Cabinet; members of the Philippine Delegation: Senators and Congressmen, Mr. Varela, Mr. Yu, Mr. Chua, Mr. Ng; members of the Chinese and Filipino business community; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

First of all, I would like to thank the organizers of this business forum for this mutually constructive effort.

I last visited Beijing in March 2000, as the guest of Vice President Hu Jin Tao — I was Vice President of the Philippines then — and now I thank the people of China once again for the honors extended to me. Even at that time when I was Vice President, I had the opportunity to meet with China's highest leaders, President Jiang and (Premier) Zhu Rongji.

Ten days ago I was in Shanghai for the APEC Leaders' Summit. And let me congratulate once again the people of China for the spectacular hosting of that historic event.

Now it is my honor to be back in China again, for a State Visit. And I thank President Jiang for his gracious invitation and for the superb arrangements he has provided for my delegation. The APEC economic leaders last week, issued a declaration in the course of the summit, which reads in part, and I quote:

“We are determined to reverse the current economic downturn and maintain public confidence at a time of uncertainty by fighting protectionism and committing to the launch of a new round of the World Trade Organization ...”

China's bid for WTO membership created the impetus for the restructuring of China's state-owned enterprises, and has spurred the drive towards international competitiveness.

Thus, China's corporations make business decisions not based on what the political leaders of China say but on your own calculations of where it is profitable to go. And that is why we are here to speak not only to the officialdom of China but also to the business community of China.

I congratulate China for your accession to the WTO two weeks from now. Every nation, including the Philippines, is poised for the opportunities offered by this event.

China's accession to the WTO is both a welcome and a challenging development. On the one hand, some Philippine products face stiffer competition from China both in the world market and the domestic front. On the other hand, we also welcome the prospect of greater access and participation in China's highly promising domestic market.

I come to China once again after many, many other visits in the past to bring the message that the Philippines desires a healthy, comprehensive, long-term relationship with China.

There are limitless possibilities inherent in the relationship between our respective nations and peoples.

The historical basis of our ties is deep and abiding. Neighbors by geography, we have had regular and active trade relations dating back to the Sung dynasty.

This relationship, rooted in commerce, is reflected in the important role currently played by many Filipino-Chinese in business and industry — and many of them are in this hall today.

At no other time have our relations with China been more important than today. The rapid pace of events has placed China at the center of world attention, not only as the fastest growing economy, but also as a leading partner in the globalized regime.

The Philippine's proximity to China, our long trade relationship, and the active presence of Filipinos of Chinese descent in our own business arena are some factors that would certainly work to our advantage, we hope. On the other side of the horizon, the projective tariff rate reductions and improvements of channels of distribution in China, will definitely spur the volume of trade transactions between our two countries.

One of our traditional exports to China that will benefit most from these developments is tropical fruits. Philippine fruits are expected to become more affordable and accessible to a wider span of Chinese consumers. I was told earlier this year that when China enters WTO, all the rest of the world will collapse and that there's nothing we can sell to China because China can produce everything we can sell. Not so, because China is above 20 degrees latitude from the equator and there are tropical fruits that we produce below the 20 degrees latitude that we can sell to China. So therefore, unlike many other countries who think that their economy will die because China is entering WTO, we the Filipinos congratulate China and hope that we can do more business with each other because you're entering WTO.

Similarly, we can also expect an uptrend in exports of other traditional products such as minerals — and we signed an agreement today regarding that — marine-based products, and other resource-based commodities.

Aside from aggressively marketing its traditional exports, the Philippines is also looking forward to the introduction of non-traditional exports to the Chinese market, such as natural fiber, coco coir and professional services relative to education and marketing.

China is going to be the host of the Olympics in the year 2008 and there are many ways by which the Philippines can participate in your preparations including providing you — whether here in China or in our Philippine language schools — with teachers who will teach the Chinese people the English language.

On the investment side, the Philippine government will continue to adopt and implement policies along the line of enlightened liberalization, deregulation and privatization. It will also work towards further enhancing the business environment for both existing and would-be investors. This would include, among others, lowering the cost of doing business in the Philippines, improving the country's physical infrastructure, and affirming good governance.

Telecommunications is a primary area of reform and development, especially for purposes of improving interconnectivity. E-commerce will be broadened and deepened to meet rapid market paces attendant to the new economy.

The passage of our Power Industry Reform Act of 2001 is a government initiative towards restructuring the country's power sector, with the goal of reducing electric costs and consequently, the overall cost of doing business in the Philippines. The law provides for the division of the power industry into four sectors, namely generation, transmission, distribution and supply.

This law is expected to help spur economic activity, as it aims to accelerate the total electrification of the country; to ensure the quality, reliability, security and affordability of the supply of electric power; and to guarantee transparent and reasonable pricing of electricity. This will all be done in a regime of free and fair competition and full public accountability.

The Power Reform Act encourages private sector, and business and corporate sector participation to enhance the inflow of corporate capital and to broaden the ownership base of the power generation, transmission and distribution sectors. To date, a total of eight foreign and three local companies have signified interest to take part in the privatization of the assets of our National Power Corporation.

We are also geared towards boosting Philippine competitiveness in electricity and we hope indeed that the Chinese business community will look at the opportunities for investments in the newly revitalized power sector of the Philippines. I am glad that we had our power sector officials on the stage this afternoon presenting memoranda of understanding with their Chinese counterparts.

The Philippines also seeks to be competitive in e-business. Our Electronic Commerce Act provides the legal framework to simplify domestic and international exchange of information, transactions, arrangements, and agreements through the use of electronic and optical media. Just earlier there was a signing between the Philippine Chamber and the China Chamber, and this is partly with respect to a website that will connect the two chambers with each other. The law also penalizes computer hacking and guarantees greater online security.

This law is expected to improve the e-business environment and hopefully bolster commercial traffic and the development of a critical mass of users.

We hope that the Chinese business sector will also take advantage of our Build-Operate-and-Transfer laws to invest in telecommunications infrastructure to support high-speed connectivity at low costs, or perhaps explore the use of satellites for our internet backbone, especially since our country is made up of more than 7,000 islands. I was glad to see earlier also in the Memoranda of Agreement presentation our leaders in the satellite industry in the Philippines doing a memorandum with their counterparts here in China. Investing in what is called the internet's "pipes and plumbing" is highly lucrative and imperative in the development of information and communications technology in the country.

The implementation of our ICT plans is overseen by the Information Technology and e-Commerce Council (ITECC), of which I am the Chairman.

We have liberalized the ICT sector in terms of various tax breaks and credits for foreign investors, the employment of foreign nationals and the development of ICT friendly regional centers. ICT is a leading component of the Philippines 2001 investment priority plan, thereby giving investors access to incentives offered under this plan.

At present, we have five ICT parks offering competitive financial and tax incentives for ICT businesses, and we hope to see our Chinese corporations locating there.

When I became President in January 2001, I told the people about my vision of winning the war against poverty within the decade. To succeed in this, indeed, one of them is to promote a good investment climate to promote the growth sectors of the future, and that includes ICT; and the investment climate includes also providing for better and less costly power infrastructure.

Another one of the components I listed in our national agenda is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity.

The Philippines is still, like China, predominantly an agricultural country. Approximately 50 percent of our population depends on agriculture for their livelihood and income. Our primary aim is to uplift the living standards of our farmers, through increased productivity. This will impact substantially upon the economic development of our country.

To further modernize our agriculture sector, we need to build many things: we need to build more water impounding structures and lower the cost of farm machineries and post harvest facilities. Likewise, we need to build additional farm to market roads to minimize post harvest losses. I was very happy that earlier this afternoon, I also witnessed the presentation of Memoranda of Agreement with regard to the supply of Chinese agricultural machinery for our Philippine agriculture. Agricultural modernization is one area where broader cooperation with China would redound to our basic national interest.

Indeed I am very proud that we are now already piloting the hi-breeds coming from China, and we hope this will indeed increase the productivity of our agricultural sector.

In the overall scenario of this forum, I understand that our business delegates and their counterparts have extensively discussed possible ventures — not only the ones we signed today, but other ventures in agriculture and food; electronics and manufacturing services; ICT enabled and other professional business services; and tourism.

I hope that the tourists, especially from Shanghai and Beijing will be coming to visit the Philippines. We now have Philippine Airlines going to Shanghai and I have told the Department of Foreign Affairs officials — and I'm telling the Secretary of Justice — that in order to make it more convenient for Chinese tourists to go to the Philippines on package tours — and many of the tour groups organize package tours coming from Beijing and Shanghai — we will relax visa restrictions: you will not need to get your visas right here in Beijing or in Shanghai, you need to get them at the port of entry only when you get to the Philippines.

Incidentally, of course you still have to apply for your visa here, you get it there, but to make it also more convenient for the people of China, people of Shanghai to visit the Philippines, tour there and do business there, I am very grateful to the Chinese government that this afternoon, part of the exchange of notes will be on the establishment of a Philippine Consulate General in the City of Shanghai. I hope that my visit and this Business Luncheon will assure China's business leaders that as you join the WTO the Philippines is a good choice in which to do business.

With your support, and with our current crop of dynamic economic and business leaders in my country supporting good, clean and effective governance, we will be able to achieve and sustain a business climate attractive for doing business for the long term.

Earlier, you saw my Secretary of Energy speak Chinese, and as you can see from his face he's not even Filipino-Chinese and yet this is how much we value China. I am very proud that my Secretary of Energy speaks Chinese. I am very proud that I have Cabinet Secretaries who know the international financial system and business community — I have seven Cabinet members from Harvard, I have two Cabinet members from Wharton, I have three Cabinet members from Wall Street. And I hope indeed that as you, China, enter the world economy, you will find that these credentials will make life good for you as you do business in the Philippines.

I believe there are two priorities to regain stability and growth in east today.

The first and most urgent priority is dealing with terrorism.

The other priority is global and regional cooperation to lift the global economy from the brink of recession. The unprecedented cooperation and coalition building that was cemented at the APEC Leaders' Summit in Shanghai under the leadership of President Jiang Zemin to ensure security and safety could work equally well to ensure economic security which globalization has both provided and at the same time threatened.

We must seize this opportunity to turn the tide so that the world economy can be put back on track.

And just as China led the world leaders in forging a coalition against terrorism, when we were in Shanghai China is also now poised to lead the world economy into the 21st century out of recession because of its giant role that it will play in the World Trade Organization.

Congratulations, good luck in your new role and thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Philippines-China Business Forum. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212559/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8745&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 27th Philippine Business Conference

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 27th Philippine Business Conference

[Delivered at the Isla Ballroom, EDSA, Shangri-La, November 14, 2001]

Thank you very much Secretary Roco.

President Varela, Chairman Tan, President Chua, Vice-Chairman Bacani, Ambassador del Rosario, ladies and gentlemen:

I thank the organizers of this important annual event for the opportunity to address the captains of industry and business leaders of the country.

You know I was supposed to go straight from Indonesia to the United States but I came back for this one day because Jimmy Tan asked me to make sure I attend the Philippine Business Council.

Your theme is managing transitions: perspectives and strategies for the emerging economy, that when you sent it to me, I've seen the back between the e and the merging, so I was talking about the emerging economy. But I think however, there are many people who will talk about E-commerce in this conference. And from your President I think that I would rather remove the dot for the moment although I am very well-known to be pushing for I.C.T. As the number on growth sector for the future, I will dispense it that advocacy for today because you have heard me talked very much about that in the past and my chairmanship of the I-Tec council speaks for itself with regard to my personal attention to the development of e-commerce or the e-economy. I think to remove the dot and we talked about the emerging economy. What is the economy that is emerging now. And this must be interpreted in the light of the September 11 tragedy in New York and Washington which has changed the global mood.

Had I spoken before September 11, yes, I would have talked about I.C.T. I would have talked about the other sector similar to ICT In that they are human resource intensive, skills intensive service sectors because that is where our competitive advantage lies. But today in this annual meeting and when you look at the world around us now, it is important that we recognize and stress that world business conditions are more uncertain now. And our priorities have changed since early September. We have not removed the priority of e-commerce but we are adding another priority and that is economic security.

On December 10th, we are convening the National Socio-Economic Summit of 2001 to forge a multi-partisan and multi-sectoral two-year action agenda to counter the effects of global recession and terrorism. And I expect to see you there again.

I can only find comfort in the fact that the Philippine economy has proven remarkably resilient given the state of the regional and global economy. GNP growth is at 3.4%, better than most of our neighbors and trading partners. Inflation is down. It is the lowest in the last 12 months and our fiscal situation is stable. The IMF said that they were already lost their bet three times. They bet I could not pass the power sector reform law, they lost that bet. They bet that we could not pass the Money Laundering Law, they lost that bet. They have made a bet but we will not be able to keep our budget deficits ceiling and they're afraid they're going to lose the third bet as well. But they will be happy to lose that bet.

That said, the global uncertainty that has resulted from the tragic events of September 11 makes economic planning for any country very difficult. It has also impacted an essential element of global economic growth — confidence. Until businesses and consumers regain confidence in the economic system all countries remain affected by September 11. No country is truly insulated from the global economic slowdown, but fortunately our country with its heavy agricultural and service composition has fared better than most.

And so, if you look at the indicators— GNP, inflation, employment which is rising, net employment, — our economy is strong, our democracy is stable, our role in the world becoming clearer. And I am focused on what needs to be done to address two wars: the war on crime, of which terrorism is only a part; and the war against poverty in the country. These two priorities are very linked as poverty fuels the willingness of those, of some to support criminal activities. Let me tell you what we are doing in these important areas:

In the battle against crime:

As a matter of policy, first, there can be no tolerance for kidnapping, no negotiations for ransom, and no back room deals. This is often a painful choice where innocent lives are at stake. Second, there must be swift justice to those who engage in this kind of sub-human behavior. Third, we must become well-organized in the government in order to respond to this threat-including cleaning house in our police, military and intelligence agencies as necessary.

As you know, this is a challenge with many causes. From bandits who hide behind religion — like the Abu Sayyaf, to those who prey on their own people — like the Chinese gangs many of whom had been arrested very recently, through to hard-core criminals. In all cases, we are putting the full force of our security forces against this challenge. We have recently arrested a large number involved in kidnap-for-ransom crimes. As a matter of fact, the solution rate to criminality is higher now. And of about 305 identified kidnappers, more than half have already been arrested.

And I am confident that more will follow as we continue. And because in recent times many of those arrested for kidnapping and drug trafficking turned out to be related to secessionist activities. We have signed ceasefire agreements with groups who have decided to give peace and development a chance. This is a clear sign that the war on crime and terrorism is not just won through the barrel of a gun.

And also because in recent times we have found that many of those arrested for kidnapping and drug trafficking were Chinese nationals, I also signed three treaties on crime-fighting with Beijing in my state visit to the People's Republic of China: one on extradition, one on narcotics, and one on transnational crimes. These are but a few examples of our cooperation with neighboring countries to solve our common problems of criminality.

As you very well all know in a much covert announcement, I lifted the moratorium on the death penalty to convicted kidnappers to strike fear on kidnap-for-ransom syndicates and show the government's resolve to deal with the kidnapping menace which is our number one menace in the country today.

I instructed Secretary Joey Lina to rid the police of scalawags. He has already initiated proceedings and he is willing report the results directly to the business community.

We are resurrecting also the community-oriented police system which used to work well in the past.

In the past, one of the reasons why earlier kidnapping spates were arrested was that the special action force of the police and the marines were brought into the fight. But now the special action force and the marines are there in Basilan. And because of this to replace them, what we are doing is recruitment. Recruitment of new policemen. We are encouraging the policemen who have no college degree to retire. And we are recruiting new policemen and we want as the very basic minimum that they must have a college degree. This is in accordance with our desire to professionalize the police force.

So far from the last time I talked to the Chinese community about the kidnapping problem, we've been able to hire 400 new policemen with the college degree and therefore professionally-oriented. But we truly effective Secretary Lina says, he needs 1,700 policemen to replace the special action force and the marines who are fighting another battle somewhere else.

This morning we had a meeting and after discussing the budgetary requirements, within the next two days the PNP is ready to hire the balance of the 1,300 that they need to have greater police visibility in the areas where you feel you need them.

I convened the national anti-crime commission this morning and instructed all the component agencies to work double time to solve the pending crime cases and to prevent more kidnappings from occurring. I am providing the NACC with the necessary equipment, including helicopters and surveillance facilities, and giving it the budget to enable it to function effectively.

As far as the surveillance equipment is concerned, for instance, the national anti-kidnapping task force headed by General Ebdane inherited surveillance equipment from the defunct PAOCTF. And he is making this available to the PNP mainstream including the task force at the PNP that's created within the PNP itself on fighting kidnapping.

And I think you have seen the headlines, there is a re-organization of the police, aside from their modernization and their professionalization. Emy Boncodin is also releasing additional money for surveillance. And as I said earlier, we are improving the screening process for policemen applicants, only college graduates can now be admitted to the police force.

Part of the re-organization is that we are putting back General Edgardo Aglipay from the National Capital Region because reviewing the records during the time when he was the head of the NCR the kidnapping was quite low. And he reported to me some of the things that he did during his time including a general term that would call hardening of targets. And what he did before which was effective he will do again now as the head of the NCR PNP.

Because the kidnapping problem is much more serious than many of other crimes that have been committed the usual crimes. I am asking him to leave the attention of the other crimes to the police districts, for it also very good. And as far as kidnapping is concerned that is where the renewed or the returning NCR Police Director will concentrate his efforts. We have also asked former DILG Secretary and former Mayor of Manila, Mayor Lim to be a full time consultant to the National Anti-Crime Commission.

When I was in Hong Kong, I asked the Hong Kong police experts to train our police force. To train our police force especially on anti-kidnapping activities. And this will also be done with Israel, Scotland Yard, and the U.S. In fact, part of what I will be discussing when I go to the United States tomorrow is how to enlist the FBI to beef-up their personnel right here so that they can help and have joint operations with the Philippines on anti-kidnapping. Kidnapping in the Philippines is not a local domestic industry. It is a transnational crime. We have the evidence of that because we have arrested other nationals. And that's why we are justifying in getting the not just the support but the participation of this various law enforcement and intelligence agencies from the other countries.

We have already set up an emergency response center to assist victims and their relatives. General Ebdane who is the head of the NACC Anti-kidnapping Task Force has already put up a nerve center right in Binondo. And this is very useful because they received the information from the Chinese community about what they think should be done. For instance, because of the 1,700 new policemen professional policemen, college graduate that we need to hire, they were only initially able to hire 400, they do their strategic placements. And because Valenzuela has lately been an area where the kidnappings occur, the police visibility will be concentrated in Valenzuela. But that's two days, it will be next two days, because two days from now there will be the massive recruiting. Why do I say two days from now? Because the payroll will be available on November 30th. So therefore, they can be hired starting November 16th because they will have their pay on November 30th.

And just as I set up a reward system for Abu Sayyaf leaders, which has resulted in many captures, I also have made a total of P100 million available as a reward pool for the capture of kidnappers for ransom. In fact, just as we have distributed about fifteen million already for those who helped us capture important Abu Sayyaf leaders. Joey Lina showed me earlier a lists that showed me already all five million pesos to those who have helped us capture in recent weeks some of the important kidnap for ransom personalities. And we will continue this.

We are mobilizing the peace and order councils more actively. I understand that the federation of the Filipino-Chinese Chamber of Commerce has its own committee that acts together with the peace and order councils in Chinatown and the other places where the people are concerned with the problem of kidnapping. In places like Chinatown, I have authorized the organization of Bantay-Bayan self-defense units which are authorized to carry firearms and effect citizens' arrest. I asked Joey Lina also, have you already deputized people in Chinatown? He said, he's still waiting for the list of the people that he should deputized. So please give us that list. I don't think you want us to deputize every Barangay Tanod. So you've got to give a list of those you recommend — responsible enough to be able to carry firearms because if they do any monkey business at least I know the Chinese community will answer for them as well.

Let us all asked media once again not to report news about especially about live kidnapping cases. And I believed that there has already been a stoppage of the leaks from the PNP and who had on live kidnapping cases. It is important that when you have live kidnapping case, no leak comes out so as not to jeopardize the safety of victims still in the hands of kidnappers.

Using the National Anti-Crime Commission as the center, we are establishing closer coordination among all intelligence agencies so that we can maximize all mechanisms of the state to identify and locate kidnap for ransom groups. The intelligence coordinator is Col. Victor Corpus.

We are I think very close to resolving the problem of the Abu Sayyaf. In fact Admiral Blair of the CINCPAC is quite impressed with our commanders who're very aggressive, quite impressed with our men who are flying and our men on the grounds even they have a lot of their very, very experienced. And the men who came here earlier to the Philippines identified some of the hardware shortcomings and system shortcomings. And I think with that or even before that the problem of Abu Sayyaf will be solved. And when that happens, oh I can hardly wait for the Special Action Force of the police and the Marines to be available in Metro Manila again.

In the meantime, I am very pleased that we were recently able to pass the Anti-Money Laundering Bill. And I think the bill was keeping in accordance with the fears of the Chinese business community. In other words, it is not going to be a tool for harassment. The provisions you were afraid of are not there. On the other hand, there are enough provisions to make the fatf feel that we really have done forward which is not what they say about all the other anti-money laundering bills that were passed before the deadline. And this bill gives the government the tools it needs to track financial transactions that may have links to criminal groups. This is not a short-term initiative. This is now a permanent part of the process that we are taking to ensure the security of the people of the Philippines.

Mga minamahal kong kababayan, malaking pagsubok ang hinaharap ng sangkatutak sa pandaigdigang seguridad at ekonomiya.

Upang masugpo ang salot ng kidnapping, terorismo at iba pang krimen, kailangan natin ng pangkalahatang pagkakaisa.

And finally, we are working to address the root cause of crime — which is rampant poverty.

On the battle against poverty: our economic fundamentals as I said earlier remain stable despite an uncertain global environment and although immediate challenges remain, we have near-term fiscal and monetary measures to ensure stable prices, adequate liquidity and funding for our development initiatives. I would not dare say this if the statistics did not back me up. And you have already seen them in the business page.

Immediate contingency measures that we have put in place stand us in good stead to meet immediate needs for macro-economic stability. We are working hard so that our GDP and our deficit ceiling targets for this year will be met and so that we will have the funding options in place to meet next year's budget requirements.

We are committed to the long-term structural reforms that will ensure continued strength in domestic demand, continued diversification of our GDP and strengthening of the Philippines environment for investment.

I am committed to making the Philippines a safe and desirable place for business and investment.

Our administration is committed to good governance at all levels. We do not hesitate to investigate any serious allegation and we hold anyone accountable if corruption has been found to take place in his area. This is an important part of our efforts to identify and prosecute those who are corrupt and to change the mindset of those who support this practice by making payments that feed corruption. Corruption is not a soft crime, it impacts our ability to meet our economic targets and it impacts our ability to attract investment.

We are addressing this at all levels as I said. Our administration is working hard to promote good governance at all levels and we are working diligently to ensure that the people of the Philippines are getting the professional and clean government they expect and deserve. This includes the following:

To reduce corruption in the Executive branch, Cabinet Secretaries will have to deliver tangible results within 12 months from my SONA which is within eight months, from now in fighting graft. Our new e-procurement program, well, at last I'm talking about the e-merging economy is now saving billions and minimizing anomalies. And now we have now a working Presidential Anti-Graft Commission with an Executive Director with the board existing and they are investigating moto proprio corruption cases in high places all those that I passed on to them.

And we are making the Bureau of Internal Revenue and Customs showcases in our fight against graft and corruption. All the rice that has been seized, all the rice that has, the smuggled rice that has been seized — in the past they were auctioned off, and when they auctioned off. And in the past reports say that those who smuggled them in the first place were those who bought them. So I told Titus Villanueva, we will not auctioned off the rice that has been seized. We will hold them as part of our social welfare activities as part of the rice allowance as provided by law for the soldiers in hardship posts like Mindanao.

And at first they said, but the law requires that the office should ... No, look at the law. And the law talks about you auctioned off goods that are not contraband. But if the importation of rice is prohibited except when there is a shortage. When there is no shortage rice is contraband. Therefore, it does not have to be auctioned off. And there is a portion that says there: if the contraband goods have commercial value, they may be sold. That's what I pointed out to call you, see the word is — they may be sold it does not say they must be sold because I want to teach a lesson to those who are smuggling rice who think they can get the rice and sell it again in the open market by buying it in auctions. They will not be able to buy that at auction because it will not be auctioned off. So stop investing your money in rice smuggling.

To reduce corruption among elective officials, we are still committed to help honest people get elected by financing the full computerization of elections. We released two billion pesos of the needed 3.4 for computerization. And I believed Congress will add another half a billion in the 2002 budget, so that the funding release will be in time for computerization.

And to reduce red tape in the National government, within eight months, all government agencies will have implement measures to cut in half the number of signatures required for their service. And where legislation is required to effect this efficiency, the agencies concerned are drafting appropriate bills for my endorsement to Congress.

This morning, I had breakfast, Vicky Garchitorena and I have breakfast with Hernando de Soto who is the author of the Mystery of Capital. I thought all the he would teach me would be how to make the squatters become landowners by buying the government land that they occupy. But he showed me of his experience in many countries where in fact his work was how to cut down on red tape in housing, and in business. And therefore, this is what he is going to be doing for the Philippine government. And this is going to be a full time job to do the studies. It cannot be anymore that the head of the agency will work on his agency's problems. Yes, they have that, they will have to do that but some body must look at it from the outside going in, because it's very hard sometimes to see it when you are so subjective. And so this is what Vicky Garchitorena will be doing starting January next year. She will work with Hernando de Soto on cutting down on red tape or using subrosa documents bringing them out in the open and making them eligible for legal transactions. It is a revolutionary concept that has already worked very well in many parts of Latin America and weaving very Latin. I think our culture is very, very suited to the reforms that de Soto told me he was able to achieve in many other Latin American countries.

I have also asked our local governments likewise to streamline their operations and slash red tape in order to have seamless efforts between national and local governments to be investor-friendly.

And I am glad that we gave an award today to one of those local governments that are investor-friendly and have seamless efforts with the national government. And I would like to congratulate Mayor Jimmy Fresnedi for making Muntinlupa an investor-friendly city. Jimmy Fresnedi is not only friendly to business, he is friendly to the poor because in our anti-poverty programs for housing, for de Soto empowerment, the City of Muntinlupa never fails to give a substantial counterpart. That's why it is so easy to do social reform as well in the City of Muntinlupa.

When we talk about the e-merging economy, the e-merging economy is characterized by two things before September 11 anyway, one is the emergence of e-commerce or information and communication technology as the main mode of doing things. And the other one is the inevitable emergence of globalization.

We support the launching of a new round of multilateral negotiations in the WTO, but Secretary Mar Roxas is there in Doha with very clear instructions to work hard and exercise leadership if necessary so that there will be a balanced agenda that addresses all concerns. I would like to see this round, I told Mar to be truly a development round where capacity building goes in step with liberalization and facilitation.

Mar Roxas gave me some documents, they worked in progress on the draft declaration. And I have instructed that, this time to Secretary Joe Concepcion so that he can bet it in behalf of the business community on whether it is contributing to the bringing about of a truly development round in WTO.

Even if I assure our people that the economy's fundamentals remain strong and that we are taking steps to stimulate domestic demand, I ask you to prepare for hard times ahead. We will do what we can do to make the economy grow by exerting influence on factors that we can control. But there are factors that are not within the governments control, there are factors that are outside of our country, there are factors inside of our country that is in the hands of the businessmen to control not the government itself.

The government is doing all that I have described and more to improve the business environment, create jobs, and improve the lot of the Filipino people. But I need the continued support of the business sector. We need to work in tandem. The business of government is governance and the business of business is business. We will attend to governance. Please take care of business.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the 27th Philippine Business Conference. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212530/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8762&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo at the 56th Session of the United Nations General Assembly

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the 56th Session of the United Nations General Assembly

[Delivered in New York, November 16, 2001]

Let me begin by congratulating Your Excellency Han Seung Soo on your election as President of this Assembly. I am especially gratified to be addressing this Assembly when a distinguished Asian is again at its helm.

I congratulate as well Your Excellency Kofi Annan for the Nobel Prize you have received together with the United Nations. It is the international community's recognition of the indispensable role and the necessary work done by the U.N. under your watch towards peace and justice in the world.

At the most elemental level, we feel most deeply the sad and tragic impact of those inhuman acts of terrorism – the lives lost, the orphaned children, the widowed spouses, the parents struck with the unimaginable grief of outliving their children. Worse yet, of watching them die.

As we watched the horror unfold, we felt as though it was happening to us – as indeed it was, for this United Nations are in a sense one family. But the blow that was struck at this international city was felt as directly by the rest of the world.

As people the world over stopped to watch in horror as the twin towers came down, the world's economies ground to a virtual halt – business activity stopped, investments withdrew, markets shrank, tourism dried up, and jobs were further lost. Living standards dropped even further, destitution spread – the very conditions that favor terrorism spread and deepened.

Our misgivings about a world slowing down deepened into the certainty of a recession that will be felt most deeply by those least able to endure it. Not just by classes but by whole countries. The average GDP growth rate of developing countries could fall from last year's 5.5 to 2.9 percent. For most poor countries, that will translate to sub-zero growth.

Mr. President, the face of terrorism that this city saw over a month ago is a familiar one to Asians. It has taken a terrible toll in the lives of our people and in the economies of the region. It has destroyed our credit and deterred investments. It has caused Asian governments profound embarrassment at being caught flatfooted and unable to offer their citizens the most basic security. In the southwestern part of the Philippines, it has taxed our resources and our patience to the limit, for terrorism is the argument of those who are not really interested in reasoning but only in getting whatever they want, on their terms alone.

We know terrorism. We are fighting it in southwestern Philippines. The perpetrators of the first attack on the World Trade Center were apprehended by our police.

Short of dismembering our country and dispossessing our people of their homes, we have been negotiating with secessionist groups.

But we have thrown the full weight of the law, including the use of force, at those who have resorted to terrorism.

We know the enemy and we know that these are not people you talk to; these are people you fight. As the Secretary-General has pointed out, "there are those who will hate and who will kill even if every injustice is ended."

You must fight them in the field, when they take to the field, and hunt them in cities when they hide inside.

It was in the light of this experience in southwestern Philippines that we immediately condemned the terrorist attacks on the United States, for we recognized them immediately as the desperate and despicable act of that violent minority which seeks to enslave the world with fear. And indeed they have given the world good reason to be afraid. The attack on the World Trade Center which aimed to take the lives of the 50,000 people who worked inside it shows us an enemy without pity, without compunction, prepared to use any means to achieve the greatest destruction.

The Philippines did not need to join the war on terrorism, it was in that war already, in the southwestern part of our islands. The Philippines could not have done otherwise than renew her commitment to fight terrorism in a wider field, in the wake of September 11. We know that this is an enemy that must be fought everywhere so that it cannot strike at will anywhere it pleases again.

This is a fight between tolerance and bigotry, between reason and fanaticism, between law and anarchy, between justice and murder pretending to be just. In that fight, there is no other side to choose but the one where the civilized nations of the world — long-time allies and former enemies — have chosen to stand united, not least here in this plenary hall.

The Secretary-General has declared that the September 11 attacks “struck at everything our organization stands for: peace, freedom, tolerance, human rights, and the very idea of a united human family.”

I don't know if the future belongs to our side, but I am convinced that there will be no future if our side does not prevail in this fight — at least no future that any of us will care to live in. In fact, it will not be a future in which most of us will be allowed to live. It is a future where happiness is suspect, delight is blasphemy, beauty is a cause for shame, and independent thought a capital crime.

But while terrorism cannot be placated, and no terrorist should not be appeased, there is no doubt in our minds either that we must address the concerns that they pretend are the inspiration of their terrible deeds.

If the world can show that it will carry on, that it will persevere in creating a stronger, more just, more benevolent, and more genuine international community across all lines of religion and race, then terrorism will have failed.

No, terrorism will not stop but will have failed. To stop terrorism, the terrorists themselves will have to be stopped.

What we can do however is to strip them of their moral pretensions and take upon ourselves the causes that they have perverted.

No nation will indefinitely endure the yawning gap between rich and poor – a gap that is only growing bigger not just within but across the countries of the world. It is this growing disparity between the ever fewer richer and ever more poor that has given terrorism the freedom of movement and impunity from accountability that it has enjoyed.

Poverty can be reduced partly by national economic growth. But societies have to adopt deliberate policies to ensure that the income levels of the poor rise faster than those of the rich.

Recent developments in the global economy have displayed the perils of over-dependence on external markets. We must expand domestic demand and increase the purchasing power of the masses of our people.

This is largely the responsibility of each nation. We in the Philippines are addressing the affront of mass poverty through housing, education, lower medical costs, more efficient power, transportation and communications, infrastructure in the countryside, credit to small farmers and micro-industries, productivity, protection of the environment, and developing the areas farthest from our center of political power and economic activity.

The international community also has a responsibility for the elimination of poverty. The commitments to devote a certain percentage of GDP to official development assistance have a place. But the most effective and least costly anti-poverty measure on a global scale is for developed countries to open their markets wider to the products of the developing countries, including particularly those products turned out by the poor people in the poor countries – agricultural commodities, textiles, clothing and footwear, as well as electrical and electronic appliances, and components.

The global trading system cannot allow developed countries to subsidize heavily their agricultural exports while the developing countries are without the means to help their own farmers.

The recent ministerial meeting of the World Trade Organization decided to launch a new round of multilateral trade negotiations. To ensure that the WTO does not lose credibility at this crucial time, our top priority is to ensure that the Doha Round is truly a development round.

The effort to conquer poverty must embrace all cultures, all ethnic groups, and all religious communities. The nation must allow all to preserve their own cultures.

We must make political autonomy accessible to regions that want it. At the same time, no one must be allowed to resort to terrorism to further their political aims.

Respect for culture and religion, resources for development, openness to political autonomy within the sovereignty of the nation, and rejection of terrorism are the foundations of the Philippine approach to our ethnic diversity and the uplifting of our Muslim and tribal minorities.

The vision of nations where poverty is rapidly reduced cannot be attained in places where women and girls are mistreated and their rights trampled upon. As the woman head of state, woman head of government, and woman commander-in-chief of the world's 14th largest nation, I say: We cannot conquer poverty without liberating women and girls where they are oppressed. The gender gap is a part of the development gap and must be addressed with equal vigor.

The fight against terrorism, the struggle to eliminate poverty, the work on behalf of social and international justice, the strengthening of the rule of law, the promotion of tolerance and mutual respect, the practice of humanitarian compassion, the liberation of women, the never-ending toil for peace – these have long been on the UN agenda. We have been doing these in cooperation with our neighbors in our region.

The heightened virulence of terrorism, the renewed sense of insecurity among the world's people, and the alarming slowdown in the global economy have intensified the urgency and importance of our work. Together, let us get on with the job. It is serious. It is essential. It is urgent.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

Speech of President Arroyo at the 56th Session of the United Nations General Assembly Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the 56th Session of the United Nations General Assembly

[Delivered in New York, November 16, 2001]

LET me begin by congratulating Your Excellency Han Seung Soo on your election as President of this Assembly. I am especially gratified to be addressing this Assembly when a distinguished Asian is again at its helm.

I congratulate as well Your Excellency Kofi Annan for the Nobel Prize you have received together with the United Nations. It is the international community's recognition of the indispensable role and the necessary work done by the U.N. under your watch towards peace and justice in the world.

At the most elemental level, we feel most deeply the sad and tragic impact of those inhuman acts of terrorism-the lives lost, the orphaned children, the widowed spouses, the parents struck with the unimaginable grief of outliving their children. Worse yet, of watching them die.

As we watched the horror unfold, we felt as though it was happening to us-as indeed it was, for these United Nations are in a sense one family. But the blow that was struck at this international city was felt as directly by the rest of the world.

As people the world over stopped to watch in horror as the twin towers came down, the world's economies ground to a virtual halt.

Business activity stopped, investments withdrew, markets shrank, tourism dried up-and jobs were further lost, living standards dropped even further, destitution spread, the very conditions that favor terrorism spread and deepened. Our misgivings about a world slowing deepened into the certainty of a recession that will be felt most deeply by those least able to endure it. Not just classes but whole countries. The average G.D.P. growth rate of developing countries could fall from last year's 5.5% to 2.9%. For most poor countries that will translate to sub-zero growth.

Mr. President, the face of terrorism that this city saw over a month ago is a familiar one to Asians. It has taken a terrible toll in the lives of our people and in the economies of the region. It has destroyed our credit and deterred investments. It has caused Asian Governments profound embarrassment at being caught flat-footed and unable to offer their citizens the most basic security. In the southwestern part of the Philippines, it has taxed our resources and our patience to the limit. For terrorism is the argument of those who are not really interested in reasoning but only in getting whatever they want, on their terms alone.

We know terrorism. We are fighting it in southwestern Philippines. The perpetrators of the first attack on the World Trade Center were apprehended by our police.

Short of dismembering our country and dispossessing our people of their homes, we have been negotiating with secessionist groups.

But we have thrown the full weight of the law, including the use of force, at those who have resorted to terrorism.

We know the enemy and we know that these are not people you talk to; these are people you fight. As the Secretary-General has pointed out, "there are those who will hate and who will kill even if every injustice is ended."

You must fight them in the field, when they take to the field, and hunt them in cities when they hide inside.

It was in the light of this experience in southwestern Philippines that we immediately condemned the terrorist attacks on the United States, for we recognized them immediately as the desperate and despicable act of that violent minority which seeks to enslave the world with fear. And indeed they have given the world good reason to be afraid. The attack on the World Trade Center which aimed to take the lives of the 50,000 people who worked inside it shows us an enemy without pity, without compunction, prepared to use any means to achieve the greatest destruction.

The Philippines did not need to join the war on terrorism, it was in that war already, in the southwestern part of our islands. The Philippines could not have done otherwise than renew her commitment to fight terrorism in a wider field, in the wake of September 11. We know that this is an enemy that must be fought everywhere so that it cannot strike at will anywhere it pleases again.

This is a fight between tolerance and bigotry, between reason and fanaticism, between law and anarchy, between justice and murder pretending to be just. In that fight, there is no other side to choose but the one where the civilized nations of the world – long-time allies and former enemies – have chosen to stand united, not least here in this plenary hall.

The Secretary-General has declared that the September 11 attacks “struck at everything our organization stands for: peace, freedom, tolerance, human rights, and the very idea of a united human family.”

I don't know if the future belongs to our side, but I am convinced that there will be no future if our side does not prevail in this fight – at least no future that any of us will care to live in. In fact, it will not be a future in which most of us will be allowed to live. It is a future where happiness is suspect, delight is blasphemy, beauty is a cause for shame, and independent thought a capital crime.

But while terrorism cannot be placated, and no terrorist should not be appeased, there is no doubt in our minds either that we must address the concerns that they pretend are the inspiration of their terrible deeds.

“If the world can show that it will carry on, that it will persevere in creating a stronger, more just, more benevolent and more genuine international community across all lines of religion and race, then terrorism will have failed.”

No, terrorism will not stop but will have failed. To stop terrorism, the terrorists themselves will have to be stopped.

What we can do however is to strip them of their moral pretensions and take upon ourselves the causes that they have perverted.

No nation will indefinitely endure the yawning gap between rich and poor – a gap that is only growing bigger not just within but across the countries of the world. It is this growing disparity between the ever fewer richer and ever more poor that has given terrorism the freedom of movement and impunity from accountability that it has enjoyed.

Poverty can be reduced partly by national economic growth. But societies have to adopt deliberate policies to ensure that the income levels of the poor rise faster than those of the rich.

Recent developments in the global economy have displayed the perils of over-dependence on external markets. We must expand domestic demand and increase the purchasing power of the masses of our people.

This is largely the responsibility of each nation. We in the Philippines are addressing the affront of mass poverty through housing, education, lower medical costs, more efficient power, transportation and communications, infrastructure in the countryside, credit to small farmers and micro-industries, productivity, protection of the environment, and developing the areas farthest from our center of political power and economic activity.

The international community also has a responsibility for the elimination of poverty. The commitments to devote a certain percentage of GDP to official development assistance have a place. But the most effective and least costly anti-poverty measure on a global scale is for developed countries to open their markets wider to the products of the developing countries, including particularly those products turned out by the poor people in the poor countries – agricultural commodities, textiles, clothing, and footwear, as well as electrical and electronic appliances and components.

The global trading system cannot allow developed countries to subsidize heavily their agricultural exports while the developing countries are without the means to help their own farmers.

The recent ministerial meeting of the world trade organization decided to launch a new round of multilateral trade negotiations. To ensure that the WTO does not lose credibility at this crucial time, our top priority is to ensure that the Doha round is truly a development round.

The effort to conquer poverty must embrace all cultures, all ethnic groups, and all religious communities. The nation must allow all to preserve their own cultures.

We must make political autonomy accessible to regions that want it. At the same time, no one must be allowed to resort to terrorism to further their political aims.

Respect for culture and religion, resources for development, openness to political autonomy within the sovereignty of the nation, and rejection of terrorism are the foundations of the Philippine approach to our ethnic diversity and the uplifting of our Muslim and tribal minorities.

The vision of nations where poverty is rapidly reduced cannot be attained in places where women and girls are mistreated and their rights trampled upon. As the woman, Head of State, woman Head of Government and woman Commander-in-Chief of the world's 14th largest nation, I say: we cannot conquer poverty without liberating women and girls where they are oppressed. The gender gap is a part of the development gap and must be addressed with equal vigor.

The fight against terrorism, the struggle to eliminate poverty, the work on behalf of social and international justice, the strengthening of the rule of law, the promotion of tolerance and mutual respect, the practice of humanitarian compassion, the liberation of women, the never-ending toil for peace-these have long been on the UN agenda. We have been doing these in cooperation with our neighbors, in our region.

The heightened virulence of terrorism, the renewed sense of insecurity among the world's people, and the alarming slowdown in the global economy have intensified the urgency and importance of our work. Together, let us get on with the job. It is serious. It is essential. It is urgent.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech at the 56th Session of the United Nations General Assembly. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212519/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8758&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo at the 3rd National Congress of the Caucus of Development NGO Networks
(Code-NGO) Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the 3rd National Congress of the Caucus of Development NGO Networks (Code-NGO)

[Delivered at the UP Diliman, Quezon City, November 30, 2001]

I am glad to be with you today in solidarity. It's such a good day to have this Code-NGO Affair. Because today is a day of heroism, the day of Andres Bonifacio.

Andres Bonifacio started the revolution of 1896. The revolution started was not just a revolution against the Spanish colonizer, it was also a revolution against poverty. And that is what you're doing, continuing the revolution against poverty so you are the heroes of the new millennium, the Andres Bonifacio of the new millennium.

We learned from the awards today — we didn't know it before — that Code-NGO was founded in the early days after EDSA-2. And for these past many years, Code-NGO has been a vanguard of civil society. Code-NGO has fought for democracy and good government. Code-NGO helped restore dignity to our nation in EDSA. Code-NGO has led the way in EDSA-1 individually and in EDSA-2 as a group together with other group that led to People Power-2.

You led the way and we, the politicians, followed.

Code-NGO played a crucial role as the secretariat of Kompil II, which was the spearhead of our struggle. That was the time when the NGOs and the political opposition got together. So in our unity, we gained strength and after several months, EDSA-2 occurred.

I want to extend my apologies if you feel that I stole your chairperson Dinky Soliman from you when I appointed her as Secretary of Social Welfare and Development, only to realize now that even your founding Chairperson has been taken away from you, she is now Chairperson of the Civil Service Commission, that's Karina David. And even your current chairperson is not very far away from government.

This is perhaps the price we have to pay, and the price of Dinky and Karina have to pay for being leaders for change. And as you can see, Dinky and Karina are doing an excellent job in government.

Not to forget other leaders of Code-NGO like Danny himself and Ging Deles. I remember about this time last year, I had a dialogue with basic sector organizations in the University of the Philippines. And it was organized by Code-NGO. That was not the first time that I had such a dialogue, I had been having that as Senator and Vice President in my own venues. But that particular time was a special moment because it led to a coalition, a grand coalition, that led to where we are all today.

Indeed, it is important that in our work, you and I, even prior to your and my getting together that time last year, we had been consulting and listening to the concerns of people and groups that felt aggrieved and unheard.

Political leaders must have their ears close to the ground. Good governance is often a matter of listening well and responding with a clear mind, a stout heart, and a steady hand.

My dialogue with basic sector organizations at the U.P. together with you, organized by you, by Code-NGO, was truly a comprehensive orientation on your work. It contributed in a substantive way to the shaping of this administration national agenda. Because I remember that I found out from there, that the social reform agenda of President Ramos was indeed contributed by the leaders of code-NGO. And all we really had to do was to look at the work that had been done and the work still left undone; and the work left undone is now our anti-poverty agenda.

These agenda straddle the full range of nation-building. Stretching across the affairs of the state and the affairs of the private sector. It is the agenda of civil society. It was the incident of May 1. Though well into our administration, that opened our eyes to a much larger segment of the poor, the unorganized poor, but are there in the underbelly of the metropolis.

We had a sense presence of this group. But May 1 showed us that we had not reached it as effectively as the others. Unlike organized people's organizations the concerns of this group are more basic. It does not bask in sophisticated policy pronouncement or reform. Its constituents do not ask for direct participation in government programs and decision-making processes. What they want are jobs, education, homes, and food on the table.

May 1 was a call for attention and action, I think not just government but for NGOs. The urgency was explicitly stated. There was a spate of violence, but beneath that anger, we saw, frustration and extreme desperation.

During my State of the Nation Address, my mind keeps leaping back to that event in May. And I asked myself, what were the roots of such explosive anger and indignation. I called for a moratorium on politicking to clear the landscape for reforms. But we do not only have to clear the landscape of excessive partisan politics; we also have to plant the seeds, more seeds of solidarity and social participation.

It is in this spirit that I commend Code-NGO for spearheading this very successful celebration of Social Development Week and for spearheading what so far has been a very successful launching of the peace bonds.

It is only fitting that your sector undertakes this celebration every so often. And it is only fitting that your sector undertakes the bonds to empower our constituents — yours and mine — in doing what they would have long ago been doing had they been so empowered.

Each one of the Code-GNO leaders and members are the prime movers of equity based development in our country. We need to reenergize — and we focus our concerns occasionally; and this is one good day to do it. We need to reinvigorate the spirit of volunteerism and active citizenship as our country goes through one of the most difficult periods in the history of the world — at least the recent history of the world. Because right now the global economy is in grave uncertainty. The most powerful economy of the world is in recession. There is an attrition in investments, consumption and jobs. The war against terrorism is unabated and citizens are challenged to look not upon the government but upon the collective resources of the community to sustain the path of positive change, reform and transformation.

In the past months that you and I have been in government — or at least many of you and I have been in government, what we have done together is unrelentingly to address poverty and uphold good governance. I have committed to work, with your support, for one million new jobs in agriculture within the next three years.

As of October 15, agriculture had generated over 136,000 jobs since the day of that commitment. We committed to distribute two hundred thousand hectares of private and public land for Agricultural Land Reform within the next 12 months. As of October 15, the Department of Agrarian Reform has been struggling with the distribution of over 17,000 hectares.

The problem is our budget deficit that we have keep down to P145 billion so that Lito Camacho will not have to suffer high inflation rates, high interest rates, a lower credit risk rating. And because of this, therefore, DAR is struggling to look for the funds to pay for the lands that they want to distribute over these next few months.

Yesterday, Ging Deles told me about a DPWH project whose social acceptance seems to be very low. And so I asked the DBM, Ging, if it's still possible to cancel that project and realign the funds to land reform instead? So this is what we are trying to do.

She said it depends on how far gone the contractors have started working on the project. I likewise committed to ensure that every barangay will have a school building. Survey and construction planning is now ongoing for 1,590 that do not have a school building.

We committed to provide funds for a hundred thousand affordable mass housing units. Pag-ibig has allocated P10 billion per year. The other GFLs committed a total of P15 billion but they're having a great difficulty of coming up with their commitments. And, first of all, because GSIS is sticking to individual financing for pre-designed housing. But yesterday I asked Secretary Lito Camacho to tell GSIS that they can't do this like this. They have to open up to all kinds of designs as long as the price is right. And therefore, they have to tie up with other agencies, LGUs, maybe even POs or NGOs so that we can have truly mass housing and not funding individual low cost housing.

The General Appropriations Bill for 2002 provides for another P3.7 billion for socialized housing. But if we are going to look at CISFA, the law that provided for socialized housing, even that is not enough; it should really be P5 billion. So this is the work that we have to do, that Lito Camacho has to do — look for the money to make up for these deficiencies.

In the meantime, I issued Executive Order 45 last October 25 prescribing the issuance of housing related certifications, clearances and permits. This aims to drastically reduce red tape in securing housing permits, so that now housing permits can be gotten in a period of three months rather than two and a half years.

Two weeks ago, together with Vicky Gatchitorena, another Code-NGO alumnae, I met with Hernando de Soto. We discussed how to spur our land to the landless programs and our small enterprise programs.

Starting January next year, Vicky will reduce her load in government, she will relinquish her PMS to another technocrat in government. And she will take on a number of special projects that are directly related to the work that she had been doing in Code-NGO. And one of them will be working with de Soto, not only to cut red tape and providing land to the landless, but also how to use Sub Rosa documents to bring the disadvantaged sectors out in the open and make them eligible for legal transactions.

This is a revolutionary concept that has been working in Latin America. And given that our country, our social structure is very Latin American, and with Vicky incharge, I am confident that this will also click in the Philippines.

We must set our mind in winning the war against poverty within this decade, and not some nebulous period in the far future. This has also something to do with the war against terrorism now. Because extreme poverty fuels the willingness of people to support terrorist activities.

We will accomplish the goal of fighting poverty and fighting terrorism while governing without fear or favor. I know that Code-NGO feels partly responsible for making me President of the Philippines. But I know that you will agree with me when I say that in my heart of hearts and in my conscience, I feel that I am beholden to no one except to god and to the people as a whole.

Even my husband, the favorite whipping boy of my political opponents, is not above the law. Any charge they hurl against him no matter how personally I think it's ridiculous, I still pass on to another body that is not within my constitutional control even if I consider the issues against him as an occupational hazard of politics.

We have agreed between him and me to have any issues against him investigated by, as I said, a constitutionally independent body were the evidence, if any, can be examined with objectivity and transparency. Perhaps because in the course of examination, the charges against him are turning out to be made up after all, now the target is no longer my husband, it is now me, myself. But I can tell you with a clear conscience that what I was before when you knew me, and that's why you decided that I'm just as good as anybody that you can work for to try to lead the country in a new era, that's still the way I am. I am still as honest and a person of integrity as my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal was, and raised me to be.

I became President on the shoulders of People Power. And so, as I said, my loyalty is not to any one group, but to the entire citizenry. I am not making decisions to gain votes in the year 2004. I believe that the presidency is a matter of destiny. How can I not believe that? Was it not destiny that made me President in January 20th? And so therefore my agenda is to ensure that we will end this administration with major accomplishments of fundamental and historic value in terms of nation building, in terms of the welfare of the people.

All I wish, as I said, on my first working day in Malacañang, is to be a good public servant and a good President. I know you will continue to help me be a good President. Civil society is the conscience of society. And I know that you will continue to point out what is wrong, and call attention to unfulfilled promises. We are counting on you to perform these tasks because we can never truly achieve good governance without being partners in quest of truth and right. However, government needs responsible fiscalizers. Without objective and accurate data, and solid alternatives to policy, advocacy at times becomes cheap sloganeering and fault finding. But that is what's good about Code-NGO. You go beyond that. In fact, you don't indulge in that. Instead of demagoguery, partisan sales talk, or trumped up charges, what you work on are facts, proposals, programs, new ideas forged in the crucible of enlightened debate. We do not need wild accusations that serve to demoralize the civil service rather than clean up the bureaucracy. In fact, now with the peace bonds, as father Vasquez said, the controversial peace bonds, now the shoe is on the other foot. You know what it's like to be at the receiving end of wild accusations.

I therefore ask you to lead in raising the standard of advocacy once again to the point that we can make government intently listen and become engaged in constructive policy discourse. I also ask you, as the largest network of NGOs in the country, to continue to help forge greater unity within civil society.

You've survived more than a decade of maintaining a diverse coalition of Non-Government Organizations. You have served as a model of coalition building in our country. I ask you to use this experience to continue and expand building bridges among civil society groups whose differences have once again become more and more pronounced. While I understand that the power of civil society lies in diversity, we know that too much diversity can result in a din of incoherence, in a Tower of Babel. Our country does not need that. Our country needs unity. And Code NGO, as it has led in the past, as it leads in the present, can now lead the way in bringing about unity once again in civil society. We must enhance our social capital as a nation. The foundation of our democracy is strong. Ultimately, it is our collective sense of values — courage, honesty, perseverance — that will fuel our productivity and bring us to prosperity.

You have helped bring this government to power. You have helped achieve this goal. Our administration shares your fight. So many of you are in the administration, to begin with. So we share a common vision. We share a common aspiration for the poor. Because this vision and the aspiration have, in fact, been shaped, in large degree, by Code-NGO.

Your colleagues who have joined us in government, your rich experience in development work, helped us to craft policies that will heighten the impact and spread the value of your work to other parts of the nation. Help us transfer land to the tiller, respect the ancestral domain of indigenous peoples, protect the fishing ground of our fisherfolk. Share with us your experiences in giving dignity to persons with disabilities and fighting for equal opportunities that women deserve.

But most of all help create more jobs, build homes and make food available at the table of our most depressed brethren.

In the end, our success will be measured by the number of people whose lives we have uplifted to whom we have brought back the power to determine their future and destiny.

I am confident that as you have done in the past, rising to all your challenges, you will rise to the new challenge of having the opportunity to share power with an administration. Let us all shape a sustainable future for all.

Congratulations to NGO. And on this day of heroes for the poor, may Code-NGO continued to be a hero for all, a hero of civil society in the Philippines.

Congratulations and thank you

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech at the 3rd National Congress of the Caucus of Development NGO Networks (Code-NGO). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212449/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8756&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo at the Urban Poor and Labor Sector Assembly [Filipino]

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the Urban Poor and Labor Sector Assembly [Filipino]

[Delivered at the Folk Arts Theater, November 30, 2001]

Binabati ko kayong lahat na nakikiisa ngayon sa ating paggunita ng 138th birthday ng ating bayaning si Gat Andres Bonifacio. Siguro naalaala natin, hindi natin makalimutan, na si Bonifacio ang nagsimula ng pakikibaka ng mga anak pawis para sa kalayaan ng mga mamamayang Pilipino mula sa pananakop ng mga dayuhan.

Ang pakikibakang inilunsad niya at ng mga Katipunero ay siya ring ugat ng pagsilang ng ating Bayan Pilipinas. Siya ang nagsimula ng ating himagsikan noong 1896, si Andres Bonifacio. Ang kasaysayan ng ating pambansang himagsikan ay nagsimula sa puso ng bayaning ating binibigyan ng parangal itong araw na ito. Si Bonifacio at ang kanyang mga kasamang katipunero ay nagbuwis ng kanilang buhay sa pagtatanggol sa mga dukha at pagtataguyod ng bansang kalayaan.

Ang mithiin sa kalayaan ay kakambal ng paglaban sa kahirapan. Iyan ang leksiyon natin kay Andres Bonifacio kasi nga si Andres Bonifacio ang nagsimula ng himagsikan ng 1896 kontra sa mga dayuhan. Ngunit dahil siyasa mga maralita, alam natin hindi lamang dayuhan ang kanyang nilalabanan sa kanyang himagsikan. Nilalabanan din niya ang kanyang hangarin na masugpo ang kahirapan ng ating bansa.

Kaya dalawang bahagi ang kanyang rebolusyon. Iyong revolution of the masses niya, rebolusyon kontra sa mga Kastila, at rebolusyon kontra sa kahirapan. At noon at hanggang ngayon, patuloy ang ating pakikibaka laban sa kahirapan upang mapabuti ang kabuhayan ng sambayanang Pilipino at patibayin ang pundasyon ng ating kalayaan.

Noong 1898, nagkaroon ng tagumpay iyong himagsik na sinimula ni Andres Bonifacio dahil napalaya tayo mula sa mga Kastila. Ngunit iyong isang bahagi ng kanyang rebolusyon ay hindi pa rin natatapos, iyong ating kalayaan kontra sa kahirapan.

Ang ating pagka-bansa at pangarap ng isang magandang kinabukasan para sa lahat ng Pilipino ay sinimulang bigyan buhay ni Andres Bonifacio. Iyon ngang kanyang himagsikan, ang tawag Revolt of the Masses. Dahil siya, kinatawan niya ang mga anak pawis at siya ay tinagurian the Great Plebian. Doon kasi sa Roma noong panahong Roman Empire may dalawang uri: iyong mga Patrician — iyon ang mga aristokrata; at iyong mga Plebian — iyong karaniwang mamamayan. Kaya si Bonifacio ang tinatawag nating the Great Plebian.

Iyong himagsikan ni Bonifacio na natapos iyong himagsikan kontra sa dayuhan pero hindi pa natapos iyong himagsikan kontra sa kahirapan. Iyon ang naging inspirasyon ng aking ama, si Diosdado Macapagal. Dahil si Diosdado Macapagal ang tanging Pangulo na nagmula sa hanay ng mga maralita.

Iyon ang kanyang sinasabi, naalala ko iyong tatay ko. Noong siya ay naging Pangulo, iyan ang sinabi niya. Ang rebolusyon ni Bonifacio ay hindi natapos. Nakamit ang kalayaan mula sa Kastila ngunit hindi ang kalayaan mula sa kahirapan. Kaya ang tatay ko, iyon ang ginusto niyang ituloy, iyong himagsikan kontra sa kahirapan.

Kaya si Bonifacio ay nanggaling sa hanay ng mga Plebian. Ang tatay ko naman ay nanggaling sa hanay ng mga maralitang taga-bukid, anak ng isang magsasakang kasama. Kaya ang tatay ko, ang pangunahing hangarin niya sa konketrong mga prinsipiyo ay ipaglaban ang Land Reform Law upang bigyang laya ang mga magsasaka sa pagkakagapos sa lupa. At upang ipagpatuloy sa mapayapang paraan ang rebolusyon ni Bonifacio.

At ako naman, anak ako ng aking ama. Kaya minana ko rin ang hangarin ng aking ama. Kaya naman noong ako ay maupo bilang Pangulo, sinabi ko na ang bibigyang prioridad natin ay ang paglaban kontra sa kahirapan. Para marinig ng mga taga ILO, the elimination of poverty is our unfinished business from the past dating back from the creation of our Republic whose seeds were sown in the revolution launched in 1896 by the Plebian Andres Bonifacio. It was an unfinished business for up to today poverty remain our national problem.

Ang mga sakripisyo at paghihirap nila Bonifacio, ng kanyang mga kasamang katipunero, at ng iba pa nating mga bayani ang dapat maging gabay natin para mapabuti ang kalagayan ng ating mga kababayan. Matatag nating harapin ang mga hamon ng kasalukuyang panahon at magkapit-bisig tayo at magtulungan. Magtulungan tayo para wakasan na ang kahirapan sa ating bayan.

Sa panahong ito ng ilang kaguluhan na dulot ng pag-atake ng mga terorista noong September 11, higit na kailangan ang pagkakaisa at pagtutulungan. Ngayon, ang mga kondisyon ng pangdaigdig na ekonomiya ay walang katiyakan. Kaya lalo tayong dapat umasa sa ating sariling sikap, sa ating sariling talino, sa ating sariling ekonomiya.

Kaya ang aking panawagan sa lahat ay huwag na nating dagdagan pa ang ating mga problema. Manatili tayo sa hangganan ng demokratikong espasyo at bigyan natin ng pagkakataon ang demokratikong proseso sa ating paglaban sa kahirapan at paglutas ng mga suliranin at hidwaan.

Sa bahagi ng pamahalaan, patuloy nating bubuksan ang iba't ibang paraan ng konsultasyon at diyalogo sa iba't ibang sektor ng ating lipunan. Kailangang itugon natin ang character ng ating pulitika, iyong bagong pulitika ng mga programa at proseso ng pakikipagkonsultasyon sa taongbayan.

Maging masigasig tayong lahat sa pagbantay para alagaan ang ating mga demokratikong institusyon at paraan na siyang gabay ko sa pagpapatakbo ng ating pamahalaan.

Inumpishan natin ang paglaban sa kahirapan sa pamamagitan ng serye ng mga konsultasyon at diyalogo sa mga manggagawa at maralitang taga lungsod, matiyak ang tunay na hinaing at pangangailangan. At itong araw na ito ay mahalaga sa layunin nating iyan dahil itong araw na ito nagsama-sama tayong muli sa okasyong ito, nagsama-sama ang iba't ibang uri ng mga manggagawa – mula sa mga employed workers sa industriya, mula sa mga agrikultura at serbisyo. Iyong mga self-employed, pati iyong mga manggagawang may sariling hanapbuhay, at pati iyong mga manggagawang walang hanapbuhay, magkasama tayo itong araw na ito.

Ang iba't ibang sektor na ito ang bumubuo ng karamihan rin ng mga maralitang taga lungsod.

Sa inyong harapan ngayon mga kinatawan ng mga ahensiya ng ating pamahalaan na may kinalaman sa paghatid ng batayang serbisyo sa mga mamamayan sa larangan ng kabuhayan, kalusugan, paninirahan. Nandito sila para maalaala sa araw ng Great Plebian na tungkulin nilang magkonsulta sa sektor ng manggagawa at maralitang taga-lungsod sa antas na national at regional.

Mula sa mga konsultasyon ito ay mabibigyan ng konkretong anyo ang konsepto ng saligang benepisyo para sa mga formal at informal workers.

At sa aking panig, lahat ang aking kilos kahit iyong pagbiyahe ko sa Amerika, sa Malaysia, sa Hapon, sa Singapore, sa Brunei, ang nilalayan ay lumawak ang trabaho para sa mga mamamayang Pilipino.

Salamat sa inyo pang mga panukala at rekomendasyon. Ayon sa inyong rekomendasyon, idedeklara ko ang taong 2002 bilang Sentenaryo ng Kilusang Paggawa sa Pilipinas bilang pagkilala sa mahalagang papel ng labor movement sa ating ekonomiya, pulitika at seguridad ng bansa.

Dahil gaya ng ating naalala ngayon, unang tinatag ang unyon sa Pilipinas noong 1902 sa pangunguna ng magiting na misyonistang si Isabelo Delos Reyes.

Ang Department of Labor ay bumuo ng isang komite na mangangasiwa sa preparasyon ng nasabing selebrasyon. At inaatasan ko ang Office ng Presidential Adviser for Social Concern na makipag-ugnayan sa DOLE para maging mas lalong matagumpay ang naturang pagdiriwang.

Sa atin paglingon sa nakaraang sandaang taon na mayroon tayong labor movemet, makikita natin ang mga sakripisyong ginawa ng ating mga labor leaders. Inialay nila ang kanilang kabataan at habang buhay na commitment para sa manggagawang Pilipino. Yung mga pangalan na Johnny Tan at Democrito Mendoza, nang doon na iyon sa kasaysayan ng labor movement at ekonomiya ng ating bansa. Ang kanilang pagsisikap hindi dapat masayang; pagsikap ng ating labor movement leaders, pagsikap ng ating mga bayani yung nakaraang isang daan na mayroon tayong labor movement. Kailangan ding makilala ang ating mga manggagawa hindi lamang bilang pagtanggol ng inyong mga karapatan, kung hindi bilang epektibong kabalikat sa paghangad sa kasaganaan para sa lahat.

Kaugnay dito, irerekomenda ko na tingnan ninyo ang mga sumusunod na isyu bilang basehan ng mag pag-uusap. Una, nararapat nating suriin ang ating mga patakaran kung papano mapalawak ang trabaho na nagbibigay ng tunay na living wage. Ano ba itong mga trabahong ito? Ano ba itong mga industriyang ito? Yun ang ating ipairal sa Siglo Beinte-Uno.

Isa na nga dito ang Information and Communications Technology. At kailangan suriin natin kung papaanong makakadagdag ng non-wage benefits para umangat ang kaginhawaan ng ating mga manggagawa. Pangalawa, dapat din natin pag-aralan mabuti ang kakayahan Manggagawa na makasanay sa mga bagong trabahong na binibigyan ng pagkakataon sa mabilis na pagpapalit ng dalawang teknolohiya ng Siglo Beinte-Uno. Sa ganoon, maiiwasan natin yung manggagawang na-entrap siya doon sa kakayahang niyang gawin; at kung ang industriya niya ay hindi na kailangan sa ating mundo, wala na siyang magagawa. Dapat iwasan natin ang situwasyon na iyan. Iyan ang tinatawag na alienation of labor. At pangatlo, dapat nating makita ang kaibhan ng tahanan at lugar na puwedeng tigilan na malapit sa trabaho. Alam kong marami ang umaayaw na mailipat sa ibang lugar dahil napapalayo sa trabaho. Habang dumarami ang mga tao sa mga urban center, kahit lumalaki itong mga urban center na ito ay kailangan palawakin nga natin itong mga urban center na ito. Maglagay tayo ng mga imprastraktura upang lumawak talaga ang ginhawa sa urban center.

Halimbawa, dahil masyadong masikip ang Metro Manila, nakikita ko na hindi magtatagal na ang Metro Manila ay magiging Mega Manila. Itong Metro Manila magiging Mega Manila ay aabot hanggang sa Clark at Subic sa hilaga, at sa Calabarzon at Batangas Port sa katimugan. Iyon ay magiging isang Mega Manila lamang. At bilang preparasyon dito, minamadali na rin natin ang proyekto ng mass transit para mapabilis ang pagtungo sa trabaho at pag-uwi ng mga manggagawa saan man kayo nakatira dito sa Mega Manila. Sa ganitong paraan, saan man sa Mega Manila ang inyong lugar ng hanapbuhay ay mabilis pa rin kayong makakarating sa inyong lugar mula sa inyong tinitirahan.

Marami pa tayong kailangang gawin para sa kapakanan ng ating mga manggagawa. Pasiglahin din natin ang pagpapatayo ng mga tripartite bodies, iyon ang binanggit kanina nang mga nagsasagawa ng performance audit, at may rekomendasyon sa programa at personnel ng DOLE at National Labor Relations Commission.

Palakas din natin ang programa para sa employment generation, human resource development at job preservation, maging pampubliko man o pribado.

Kanina ang lakas-lakas ng palakpak noong sinabing maghanap ng pandagdag na hanapbuhay. Ang gusto kong ipaalala sa inyo ay mayroon tayong micro-finance, dalawang bilyon yata iyong kapital ng micro-finance. Sana magkaroon ng paraan kung papaano iyong mga grupo dito, mga organisasyon dito ay makaabot kayo doon sa programa ng micro-finance na iyon. Ito ay para sa mga kababaihan. Kaya palagay ko iyon ang isang malaking trabahong kailangan gawin ni Percy na ma-organize kayo — organized naman kayo — pero ma-organize para maka-access itong micro-finance na ito.

Ang ginagawa nating pagtulong sa ating mga kapatid na maralitang taga lungsod sa pamamagitan ng presidential proclamation and community mortgage program ay tumutugon din sa pangangailangan ng ating mga manggagawa na karamihan ay nasa mga maralitang komunidad.

Sa madaling panahon, may mga maralitang komunidad tayong pinuproklama bilang tirahan ng mga informal settlers. Sabi nyo, sana maglagay ng isang malaking community sa Rizal na mayroong amenities. Mayroon ng isang malaking community sa Rizal, iyong Montalban. Ang kulang ay iyong mga amenities. Kaya noong isa muli nagkaroon ng konsultasyon sa mga maralitang taga-lungsod ay binigyan ng inyong lingkod mula sa President's Social Fund, ang National Anti-Poverty Commission, si Ging Deles, ng P40 million para maglagay ng amenities doon sa Montalban.

At ngayon sabi ni Mike Defensor, ay mayroon ng elementary school, tinatayo na iyong mga.... At iba pang pangangailangan sa ganoon iyon na nga ang maging pinakamalaking community for resettlement ng ating urban poor.

Pero dito sa loob ng Metro Manila mismo — kasi iyong Montalban Mega Manila na iyan, Rizal na iyan. Pero dito sa loob ng Metro Manila, mayroon pa rin kinukumpleto na staff work para sa mga maralitang komunidad para maproklama bilang puwede ninyong bilhin ang lupang tinitirahan ninyo. Kabilang dito ang pag-aaring lupa ng GSIS sa D. Ampil Street, sa P. Burgos Extension, sa Quintin Extension, at Pureza Interior, na pawang nasa Sta. Mesa, Manila; ang lupang pag-aari ng BCDA — sixth and seventh sa Libis, Quezon City; at lupang pag-aari ng Napocor sa PVA, Bagong Silang, Sucat, Paranaque City. Ito ang bahagi ng mga halimbawa na sinasabi nating pag-abot sa saligang benepisyo na kailangan ng mga manggagawa. At maaaring ang pag-package na tulong ng gobyerno ay sa pamamagitan din ng mga benepisong makakabawas sa gastusin ng mga manggagawa.

Inuulit ko rin ang utos ko tungkol sa moratorium sa mga demolisyon sa mga lupang pag-aari ng gobyerno na walang kagyat na paggagamitan. Dapat ang lupa ay pag-aari ng gobyerno ay walang demolisyon kung walang maayos na relokalasyon.

Kaya kung sinong public work ang lumabag doon isumbong nyo kay Percy Chavez para mapag-usapan sa Cabinet. Iyong clinic day na hiningi ninyo, magkakaroon din tayo ng clinic day sa mga bawat maralitang komunidad para sa libreng konsultasyon sa doktor at libreng gamot sa araw na iyon.

Iyong Kadiwa Store, ang gagawin natin ay magpapasada ng mga rolling store sa mga maralitang komunidad para sa mga basic commodities lalo na ang bigas na kailangan ng isang pamilya na mabibili sa murang halaga. Hinahabol din natin ang may koriyente at malinis na tubig na dumadaloy mula sa mga gripo sa ating mga depressed communities.

Sa katunayan, noong ako ay nagbisita sa Rawis, di ba? Ano, nabayaran na iyong koriyente ninyo? Nabalik na ba iyong koriyente? Pero hindi na nakaputol. Kasi nga ang problema, collection, dahil iyong metro isa lamang. Kaya pinutulan matagal na, so binayaran na lang ng Malakanyang iyong nakaraang utang. Pero puwede ba, pagbalik ng mga metro, kayo na ang babayad ng mga susunod na bill, ha? Sa kabila, pina-iimbistiga ko ang mga sindikatong nagnanakaw ng mga lupain at gumagawa ng mga pekeng titulo, ang pangloloko sa ating mga kababayang mahihirap. Ito ay sa pamamagitan ng Land Registration Authority. Kaya hinihingi ko rin kay Percy na paalala kay Justicena pinuno ng LRA na dapat magtayo ng investigating body sa mga fake titles, lalo na iyong mga tinitirahan ng maralitang taga-lungsod.

Ang lahat ng ito ay ginagawa natin bilang bahagi ng kampanya laban sa kahirapan. Ngunit magtatagumpay lamang ang lahat ng ito at iba pang kailangan gawin kung tayo ay patuloy na magtutulungan. Kaya humihingi ako ng inyong tulong. Hinihiling ko na ako ay inyong tulungan sa buong panahon na ako ay pangulo ng ating bansa dahil ito naman ay para inyong ikabubuti. At dahil naman ito ay para sa magandang kinabukasan ng inyong mga anak.

Inuulit ko ang aking panawagan para sa moratorium sa politicking. Dahil ang moratorium na ito ay mas kinakailangan ngayon lalo na ang pangamba ng terorismo ay nagpapahina ng ekonomiya ng ating mundo. Bagamat hindi kayo pulitiko, alam kong naniniwala kayo na mas magiging madali ang ating paglaban sa terorismo at kahirapan kung ititigil ang mga banggaan at lahat ay nagkakaisa.

Kapag tayong mga Pilipino ay nagkaisa, doon lamang natin mawawakasan ang dinadanas nating kahirapan. Marami pang mga pagsubok ang naghihintay sa atin. Sa ating pagkakaisa at pagtutulungan, doon lamang malalampasan natin ang lahat ng ito at doon lamang natin magagawang maunlad at masagana ang ating bayan.

Si Andres Bonifacio at ang mga Katipunero ay sinakripisyo ang kanilang buhay upang tayo ay maging malaya. Nararapat lamang na ipakita nating lahat na tayo rin ay may pagmamahal at nagmamalasakit sa... hindi hinihingi ng kasalukuyang panahon na tayo ay magbuwis ng buhay tulad nila Bonifacio. Ang kailangan ay maging masipag tayo at makipagtulungan upang makamit ang tunay na tagumpay ng mga programang ito.

Ang tagumpay sa pamahalaan sa paglaban sa terorismo at kahirapan, sa pagkakaroon ng katahimikan at kapayapaan sa ating bansa, sa pagsugpo sa katiwalian at anomalya, ay tagumpay din noong lahat at ng sambayanang Pilipino. Tiyakin natin na ang tagumpay ng sambayanang pilipino at para na rin nating tinupad ang pangarap ni Andres Bonifacio.

Kaya itong araw na ito, Happy Birthday kay Andres Bonifacio, ipagpatuloy natin ang kanyang laban para sa kalayaan kontra ng kahirapan.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech at the Urban Poor and Labor Sector Assembly. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212503/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8759&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo at the 3rd National Congress of the Caucus of Development-NGO Networks (CODE-NGO), November 30, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the 3rd National Congress of the Caucus of Development-NGO Networks (CODE-NGO)

[Delivered in U.P. Diliman, Quezon City, November 30, 2001]

CIVIL SOCIETY AND GOVERNMENT: PARTNERS IN NATION-BUILDING

I am glad to be with you today in solidarity, it's such a good day to have this CODE-NGO affair. Because today is a day of heroism, the day of Andres Bonifacio.

Andres Bonifacio started the Revolution of 1896. The revolution started was not just a revolution against the Spanish colonizer, it was also a revolution against poverty. And that is what you're doing, continuing the revolution against poverty so you are the heroes of the new millennium, the Andres Bonifacio of the new millennium.

We learned from the awards today — we didn't know it before — that CODE-NGO was founded in the early days after EDSA 2. And for these past many years, CODE-NGO has been a vanguard of civil society. CODE-NGO has fought for democracy and good government. CODE-NGO helped restore dignity to our nation in EDSA. CODE-NGO has led the way in EDSA 1 individually and in EDSA 2 as a group together with other groups that led to People Power 2. You led the way and we, the politicians, followed.

CODE-NGO played a crucial role as the Secretariat of KOMPIL II, which was the spearhead of our struggle. That was the time when the NGOs and the political opposition got together. So in our unity, we gained strength and after several months, EDSA 2 occurred.

I want to extend my apologies if you feel that I stole your Chairperson Dinky Soliman from you when I appointed her as Secretary of Social Welfare and Development; only to realize now that even your founding chairperson has been taken away from you, she is now Chairperson of the Civil Service Commission, that's Karina David. And even your current chairperson is not very far away from government.

This is perhaps the price we have to pay, and the price of Dinky and Karina have to pay for being leaders for change. And as you can see, Dinky and Karina are doing excellent jobs in government.

Not to forget other leaders of CODE-NGO like Danny himself and Ging Deles. I remember about this time last year, I had a dialogue with basic sector organizations in the University of the Philippines. And it was organized by CODE-NGO. That was not the first time that I had such a dialogue, I had been having that as senator and vice-president in my own venues. But that particular time was a special moment because it led to a coalition, a grand coalition, that led to where we are all today.

Indeed, it is important that in our work, you and I, even prior to your and my getting together that time last year, we had been consulting and listening to the concerns of people and groups that felt aggrieved and unheard.

Political leaders must have their ears close to the ground. Good governance is often a matter of listening well and responding with a clear mind, a stout heart, and a steady hand.

My dialogue with basic sector organizations at the U.P. together with you, organized by you, by CODE-NGO, was truly a comprehensive orientation on your work. It contributed in a substantive way to the shaping of this administration's national agenda. Because I remember that I found out from there that the Social Reform Agenda of President Ramos was indeed contributed by the leaders of CODE-NGO. And all we really had to do was to look at the work that had been done and the work still left undone. And the work left undone is now our Anti-Poverty Agenda.

These agenda straddle the full range of nation-building. Stretching across the affairs of the state and the affairs of the private sector. It is the agenda of civil society. It was the incident of May 1. Though well into our administration, that opened our eyes to a much larger segment of the poor, the unorganized poor, but are there in the underbelly of the metropolis.

We had a sense presence of this group. But May 1 showed us that we had not reached it as effectively as the others. Unlike organized people's organizations, the concerns of this group are more basic. It does not bask in sophisticated policy pronouncement or reform. Its constituents do not ask for direct participation in government programs and decision-making processes. What they want are jobs, education, homes, and food on the table.

May 1 was a call for attention and action, I think not just from the government but also from NGOs. The urgency was explicitly stated. There was a spate of violence, but beneath that anger, we saw frustration and extreme desperation.

During my State of the Nation Address, my mind kept leaping back to that event in May. And I asked myself, what were the roots of such explosive anger and indignation. I called for a moratorium on politicking to clear the landscape for reforms. But we do not only have to clear the landscape of excessive partisan politics; we also have to plant the seeds, more seeds of solidarity and social participation.

It is in this spirit that I commend CODE-NGO for spearheading this very successful celebration of Social Development Week and for spearheading what so far has been a very successful launching of the peace bonds.

It is only fitting that your sector undertakes this celebration every so often. And it is only fitting that your sector undertakes the bonds to empower our constituents — yours and mine — in doing what they would have long ago been doing had they been so empowered.

Each one of the CODE-NGO leaders and members are the prime movers of equity-based development in our country. We need to reenergize and we focus our concerns occasionally and this is one good day to do it. We need to reinvigorate the spirit of volunteerism and active citizenship as our country goes through one of the most difficult periods in the history of the world at least the recent history of the world. Because right now the global economy is in grave uncertainty. The most powerful economy in the world is in recession. There is an attrition in investments, consumption and jobs. The war against terrorism is unabated and citizens are challenged to look not upon the government but upon the collective resources of the community to sustain the path of positive change, reform and transformation.

In the past months that you and I have been in government or at least many of you and I have been in government, what we have done together is unrelentingly to address poverty and uphold good governance. I have committed to work, with your support, for one million new jobs in agriculture within the next three years.

As of October 15, agriculture had generated over 136,000 jobs since the day of that commitment. We committed to distribute 200,000 hectares of private and public land for agricultural land reform within the next 12 months. As of October 15, the Department of Agrarian Reform has been struggling with the distribution of over 17,000 hectares.

The problem is our budget deficit that we have kept down to Php145 billion so that Lito Camacho will not have to suffer high inflation rates, high interest rates, and a lower credit risk rating. And because of this, therefore, DAR is struggling to look for the funds to pay for the lands that they want to distribute over these next few months.

Yesterday, Ging Deles told me about a DPWH project whose social acceptance seems to be very low. And so I asked the DBM if it's still possible to cancel that project and realign the funds to land reform instead. So this is what we are trying to do.

She said it depends on how far the contractors have started working on the project. I likewise committed to ensure that every barangay will have a school building. Survey and construction planning is now ongoing for 1,590 that do not have a school building.

We committed to provide funds for a hundred thousand affordable mass housing units. PAG-IBIG has allocated Php10 billion per year. The other GFIs committed a total of Php15 billion but they're having a great difficulty of coming up with their commitments. And, first of all, because GSIS is sticking to individual financing for pre-designed housing. But yesterday I asked Secretary Lito Camacho to tell GSIS that they can't do it like this. They have to open up to all kinds of designs as long as the price is right. And therefore, they have to tie up with other agencies, LGUs, maybe even POs or NGOs so that we can have truly mass housing and not funding individual low-cost housing.

The General Appropriations Bill for 2002 provides for another Php3.7 billion for socialized housing. But if we are going to look at CISFA, the law that provided for socialized housing, even that is not enough. It should really be Php5 billion. So this is the work that we have to do, that Lito Camacho has to do – look for the money to make up for these deficiencies.

In the meantime, I issued Executive Order No. 45 last October 25 prescribing the issuance of housing-related certifications, clearances and permits. This aims to drastically reduce red tape in securing housing permits, so that now housing permits can be gotten in a period of three months rather than two and a half years.

Two weeks ago, together with Vicky Garchitorena, another CODE-NGO alumnae, I met with Hernando de Soto. We discussed how to spur our land to the landless programs and our small enterprise programs.

Starting January next year, Vicky will reduce her load in government, she will relinquish her PMS to another technocrat in government. And she will take on a number of special projects that are directly related to the work that she had been doing in CODE-NGO. And one of them will be working with de Soto, not only to cut red tape and providing land to the landless, but also how to use sub rosa documents to bring the disadvantaged sectors out in the open and make them eligible for legal transactions.

This is a revolutionary concept that has been working in Latin America. And given that our country, our social structure is very Latin American, and with Vicky as in-charge, I am confident that this will also click in the Philippines.

We must set our mind in winning the war against poverty within this decade, and not some nebulous period in the far future. This has also something to do with the war against terrorism now because extreme poverty fuels the willingness of people to support terrorist activities.

We will accomplish the goal of fighting poverty and fighting terrorism while governing without fear or favor. I know that CODE-NGO feels partly responsible for making me President of the Philippines. But I know that you will agree with me when I say that in my heart of hearts and in my conscience, I feel that I am beholden to no one except to God and to the people as a whole.

Even my husband, the favorite whipping boy of my political opponents, is not above the law. Any charge they hurl against him no matter how personally I think is ridiculous, I still pass on to another body that is not within my constitutional control even if I consider the issues against him as an occupational hazard of politics.

We have agreed, between him and me, to have any issues against him investigated by, as I said, a constitutionally independent body where the evidence, if any, can be examined with objectivity and transparency. Perhaps because in the course of examination, the charges against him are turning out to be made-up after all, now the target is no longer my husband, it is now me, myself. But I can tell you with a clear conscience that what I was before when you knew me, and that's why you decided that I'm just as good as anybody that you can work for to try to lead the country in a new era, that's still the way I am. I am still as honest and a person of integrity as my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal was, and raised me to be.

I became President on the shoulders of People Power. And so, as I said, my loyalty is not to any one group, but to the entire citizenry. I am not making decisions to gain votes in the year 2004. I believe that the presidency is a matter of destiny. How can I not believe that? Was it not destiny that made me president on January 20. And so therefore my agenda is to ensure that we will end this administration with major accomplishments of fundamental and historic value in terms of nation-building, in terms of the welfare of the people.

All I wish, as I said, on my first working day in Malacañang, is to be a good public servant and a good president. I know you will continue to help me be a good president. Civil society is the conscience of society. And I know that you will continue to point out what is wrong, and call attention to unfulfilled promises. We are counting on you to perform these tasks because we can never truly achieve good governance without being partners in quest of truth and right. However, government needs responsible fiscalizers. Without objective and accurate data, and solid alternatives to policy, advocacy at times becomes cheap sloganeering and faultfinding. But that is what's good about CODE-NGO. You go beyond that. In fact, you don't indulge in that. Instead of demagoguery, partisan sales talk, or trumped up charges, what you work on are facts, proposals, programs, new ideas forged in the crucible of enlightened debate. We do not need wild accusations that serve to demoralize the civil service rather than clean up the bureaucracy. In fact, now with the peace bonds, as Father Vasquez said, the controversial peace bonds, now the shoe is on the other foot. You know what it's like to be at the receiving end of wild accusations.

I therefore ask you to lead in raising the standard of advocacy once again to the point that we can make government intently listen and become engaged in constructive policy discourse. I also ask you, as the largest network of NGOs in the country, to continue to help forge greater unity within civil society.

You've survived more than a decade of maintaining a diverse coalition of non-government organizations. You have served as a model of coalition-building in our country. I ask you to use this experience to continue and expand building bridges among civil society groups whose differences have once again become more and more pronounced. While I understand that the power of civil society lies in diversity, we know that too much diversity can result in a din of incoherence, in a Tower of Babel. Our country does not need that. Our country needs unity. And CODE-NGO, as it has led in the past, as it leads in the present, can now lead the way in bringing about unity once again in civil society. We must enhance our social capital as a nation. The foundation of our democracy is strong. Ultimately, it is our collective sense of values — courage, honesty, perseverance — that will fuel our productivity and bring us to prosperity.

You have helped bring this government to power. You have helped achieve this goal. Our administration shares your fight. So many of you are in the administration to begin with. So we share a common vision. We share a common aspiration for the poor. Because this vision and aspiration have, in fact, been shaped, in large degree, by CODE-NGO.

Your colleagues who have joined us in government, your rich experience in development work, helped us to craft policies that will heighten the impact and spread the value of your work to other parts of the nation. Help us transfer lands to the tiller, respect the ancestral domain of indigenous peoples, protect the fishing ground of our fisherfolk. Share with us your experiences in giving dignity to persons with disabilities and fighting for equal opportunities that women deserve.

But most of all, help create more jobs, build homes, and make food available at the table of our most depressed brethren.

In the end, our success will be measured by the number of people whose lives we have uplifted to whom we have brought back the power to determine their future and destiny.

I am confident that as you have done in the past, rising to all your challenges, you will rise to the new challenge of having the opportunity to share power with an administration. Let us all shape a sustainable future for all.

Congratulations to CODE-NGO. And on this day of heroes for the poor, may CODE-NGO continue to be a hero for all, a hero of civil society in the Philippines.

Congratulations and thank you.

Source: University of the Philippines Main Library

Speech of President Arroyo during the National Socio-Economic Summit Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the National Socio-Economic Summit

[Delivered at the Manila Hotel, December 10, 2001]

I thank you all for the many weeks of hard thinking and earnest dialogue that you put into this summit. A good summit such as what we are having today is not a one day affair. It starts with many weeks of consultation, preparation, iteration, vetting. Finally, when we get together in the summit itself, it is a day when we affirm the agreements that we have arrived.

I thank especially the members of Congress starting with Senator Blas Ople for this idea. It was his idea to convene this gathering to address the challenges thrust upon the nation by the global economic crisis, particularly in the wake of the September 11 attack.

Allow me to start with candor and straightforwardness, for urgent matters are afoot and I do not wish to tarry. Some people have begun to criticize our meeting as just another exercise in hot air and propaganda. They say it is just a media event from which nothing substantive will ensure. They ask, will this bring more food to the table? Will this bring more shelter for the poor? Will this bring more schools for the children, and more jobs for their parents? And so on and so forth.

We can always dismiss these charges as the work of subversives or doomsayers. But today we will not do so. Today we will consider it not our job to answer our detractors with counter labeling or stereotyping. We shall determine what is most needed to fight poverty, provide focus and direction to all institutions involved, and get the job done.

Nevertheless, the air of public skepticism is real and foreboding. We cannot dismiss the hardships of the people from day to day, from hour to hour. Their problems are real, concrete and rending physically and psychologically.

The list of worries is long and arduous. Where will I get the money for the next meal? How can I pay for my son's next tuition installment on Monday? How can I fill up this prescription for my baby? For any leader who has a genuine heart for the poor, it is sad and frustrating to contemplate these questions being asked by the poor everyday.

But these questions precisely point to the perspective that has been captured by this summit. This perspective is based on action, concreteness, political will, and national solidarity to fight poverty and to beat it.

In proclaiming our agenda today, we place it in the fountain of the masses, in the hearts and minds of the poorest people and communities in our country. This is no ordinary political exercise. We are going to do what we say. We are going to back up our priorities with resources.

They said that summits turn up with nothing good. It depends. If a summit is a one day thing, and everybody does the brainstorming just on that one day, then nothing will really come out of it. Then, it's just an exercise for the media. But if the summit was prepared the way it's been prepared today, it can work. And I would like to remind everyone about such a summit that was prepared this way and that has worked — and that was the social reform summit that was called by President Ramos during his administration.

I attended the final day. But prior to that final day, there were also weeks of vetting interaction, consultation, debate, until finally what was considered doable by everyone, the common denominator, the things that united rather than divided were agreed on on that day; the things that united and were united in the idea that they could be done.

Thus, came out the social reform agenda. And when we were fighting for what eventually became Edsa 2 in civil society, in politics, the politicians and civil society, when we engaged with one another, we examined that social reform agenda that came from that social reform summit. We examined what have been accomplished, and what had not yet been accomplished. And we said, that if we ever became the administration, we would begin to accomplish the parts that had not been accomplished.

And so today, our social reform agenda, a big bulk of the socio-economic part of our socio-economic program, the socio part of it still comes from that social reform summit that was put together many, many years ago. So summits can work. Let us make this summit work.

Let me highlight the essential tracts in the pact that we have signed. Recessions usually hit the poor hardest, by throwing them out of jobs and homes, wiping out their meager savings, and eroding state revenues needed for redistributing land and providing basic social services. As far as we can, we mustn't let this happen.

Hence, I am very grateful that Congress agreed that they shall strive to index excise taxes to inflation. And the national government shall use its share of the increase in revenues coming from this indexation specifically for housing subsidies. By being able to earmark the additional proceeds of indexation of excise taxes, we will be able to devise the rent-to-own schemes to put homes within the reach of the working classes in these times of uncertainty. That is one concrete agreement that we have come to. And the question is: will it build more homes for the masses? The answer is, yes, this summit will if we can carry this out.

The distribution of land to the tillers and to the indigenous peoples, what we call asset reform, must also continue, for the great majority of the poor live in the countryside. Hence, the land bank shall return to its main mandate. The mandate of the law gave it when my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, established the Land Bank. Its main purpose and its purpose today must be once again to finance programs for land reform. Will the summit give more land to the farmers? Yes, it will, if we will carry out what we have agreed on regarding the Land Bank.

The tariffs collected from the minimum access imports must return and shall return to the rightful allocation, the agricultural competitiveness enhancement fund. And so we ask, will this summit make the farmers able to produce more? Yes, it will, if we carry out this resolution to earmark the proceeds from the minimum access volume to the fund to make farmers more competitive.

Mass housing, land reform, human development services are essential to our battle against poverty as well as the war against economic uncertainty. Providing homes and land for the poor creates jobs, raises productivity and augments long-term savings. Education, micro-finance, health and other similar services empower people to contribute to economic growth and live a life of dignity.

In this light, the leaders who joined the summit committed themselves, ourselves, to work together, to bring more of the poor under the umbrella of the national health insurance program, to address legal and social impediments to the availability of waste disposal systems, to provide sites for school buildings in the barangays where there are none, to promote micro-finance institutions in every province.

For our part, the administration is delivering on my SONA commitments with focus. We shall cut in half the prices of medicines commonly used by the poor. We shall expand the outlets for low cost remedies and reorganize the bureau of food and drugs to bring more of these low-cost medicines to poor Filipinos.

The question then, will this summit help? Juan dela Cruz, answer the question. Mabibili ko yata itong prescription para sa aking baby? Yes, it will answer that question if we carry out these reforms in the price of medicines that we have agreed on in this summit.

Retraining, on the other hand, will enhance the capability of our work force to continue to be relevant to the dynamic demands of a global economy. In this task, it is paramount to e-enable our workers and our small entrepreneurs. Where will I get my next job because I've been thrown out of work? Will the jobless worker find an answer from this summit? Yes, if we carry out the massive retraining program that we agreed on we should carry out in this summit.

We cannot prescribe autarchy, our closing our doors to the world economy. Instead, we have no choice in the world today but be guided by the signals of the market because we cannot legislate the law of supply and demand. But what we can do is to explore further reforms to lower cost and improve services. One priority identified by Senate President Franklin Drilon is modernizing our cargo transport system. This is a must if enterprises across the archipelago, including farms and fishing communities, are to compete and grow vigorously.

Will we have cheaper food on the table? Will the Mañileno have cheaper food on the table coming from a product produced in Mindanao? Yes, if we carry out our commitment to do the reforms in cargo shipping and air transport as Senate President Franklin Drilon said in this summit that we must do.

Our present day cargo system is plagued by inadequate infrastructure which turns off investors. Another big turn off is inadequate peace and order. Hence, we are grateful for the initiative of House Speaker Jose de Venecia occasioned by this summit, to earmark funds in the 2002 budget to enhance the reward system for information on terrorists, kidnappers, drug traffickers, coup plotters and other perpetrators of major crimes. Mindanao will continue to be a special focus for peace and development and the battle against poverty. And I am grateful to the summit for the affirming this.

On the first working day of the new year, I shall install the newly elected officials of the ARMM. This will be the beginning of a strong rally against terrorism, banditry and corruption. We shall pour in more resources into the region to support good governance and to uplift the lives of the people.

Just last night, I happened to call Paul Dominguez to talk about something in preparation for today's summit. And just then, 11 o'clock at night, he was having coffee with a new ARMM governor Parouk Hussin to inform the new ARMM governor that as soon as the new government of the autonomous region is off and running, the usaid is ready with the initial $20 million of the $55 million that we were able to get during my official visit in Washington.

We shall resolve ideologically based secessionist movements, isolate terrorists and uproot crime syndicates embedded in the isolated communities of Mindanao, in addition to what we be will doing, of course, in the rest of the Philippines. In addition, we will redouble efforts to implement two other measures in the Eleven Point Anti-Crime Program that I announced last month. One is the close integration and coordination of intelligence activities and resources for which an intelligence summit will soon be held. The other is the training and deputization of community groups to fight crime. These community groups will be allowed to bear arms and make citizens' arrests, even as we will be stricter with the illegal possession of firearms.

This action agenda, of course, will count for nothing less unless all join hands to implement it fully. Hence, I am gratified that business and civil society have put forward major steps that they will take as well, including in the case of business, the promise and the commitment that they will use one and only one set of financial statements, both for their banks and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Narrow partisan, sectoral and personal interest must yield to the common good. Let me repeat my call for a one-year moratorium on politicking. And I thank business, labor and civil society for now echoing this call. And I noticed that in all the speeches and messages prior to mine, the most applauded passages were all the times that our speakers asked for unity and the moratorium on politicking. Perhaps, indeed, one way to achieve this is the political summit proposed to be held within six months, although this socio-economic summit itself already signals a major step forward in legislative-executive coordination, as well as in cooperation between the administration and the opposition for the greater good of our nation. The poorest of our people gain the most from these strides in the political maturity of our institutions. Every initiative, every new measure or program to which we have committed ourselves, is a building block for the broader pillars of a national strategic consensus. These pillars, as I have many times articulated, are the following:

First, a competitive economy capable of building wealth for our people in a more interactive global setting;

Second, a caring society ensuring the building of wealth is interlinked with equity for our people;

Third, a robust agricultural sector matching the global benchmarks of efficiency.

Fourth, modern institutions of public and corporate governance maintaining globally accepted standards of accountability and transparency in a secure, rules-based society, free from fear and confident in the effective enforcement of laws. We are now looking to clear the hundreds of bottlenecks that get in the way of enterprise and effective governance in all sectors. Many inadequate policies need to be revamped, many procedures and ways of doing things need to be changed. Dead capital and unrealized potential must be reincarnated by new thinking, as Hernando de Soto tells us, and as many Latin American countries have already begun to listen. These are immediate challenges.

The process that culminated in this summit is a triumph of intense cooperation and great patriotism. It is only in being together that we can build an economy that is robust, competitive, capable of providing for our people's needs. It is only in being together that we can build an economy that sustains growth rates that can dramatically reduce poverty. It is only in being together that we can build the society of peace and national community capable of applying forward looking solutions to our manifold problems.

I appreciate your sincere enthusiasm in this gathering. You not only made your voices heard. You sincerely listened to and learned from other voices. The global economy was slowing down even before the September 11 tragedy. The terrorist attacks piled even more uncertainty upon the already unpredictable trends we were seeing. Now we witness the deepest downturn in the world economy in over two decades.

I can only find comfort in the fact that the Philippine economy has proven remarkably resilient given the state of the regional and global economy. While our exports have declined sharply, our domestic demand has increased even more sharply so that the GNP economic growth rate is at 3.7 percent, better than most of our neighbors and trading partners. We were able to defend our peso against a speculative attack last July and stabilized it without asking for IMF support. Inflation is at 4.4 percent, the lowest rate in 16 months.

And last night, I called up Governor Buena Ventura late into the night, long after my call to Paul Dominguez, to ask him what is our interest rate right now. And he said, our overnight interest rate has gone down to 8 percent, the lowest in six years while even the most industrialized countries suffered an increase in their unemployment rate. I called up Pat Sto. Tomas last night and said, what's our comparative unemployment rate between last year and this year? Last year, our employment rate was 11.2 percent, this year is 10.1 percent. And we are spending well within our budget deficit ceiling. And this allows the government to give a modest extra Christmas bonus for our government employees. That said. The global uncertainty that has resulted from the tragic events of September 11 makes economic planning for any country very difficult. That is why we must use the momentum of whatever resiliency we have shown so far and chase the light at the end of the tunnel. The more optimistic projects our global recovery to be in the second or third quarter of next year.

The upturn could well be enhanced by what analysts expect to be a synchronized recovery. They attribute the synchronized recovery to the unprecedented policy coordination of governments and central banks world wide. In concert, the world's nations have stimulated their economies through interest rate cuts, increased public spending, and other policies designed to encourage investments and consumer demand in the major markets of the world. As we among ourselves in the Philippines today are synchronizing what we must do for economic recovery, or rather continuing our economic resiliency, the Philippines shall also be part, an integral part of the synchronized recovery with the rest of the world.

We draw strength in our synchronization with the rest of the world from the emerging global consensus to fight terrorism, spur economic growth and eradicate poverty. We are gratified in having contributed to this emerging consensus by initiating a sub-regional path among five founding members of Asean with, I understand, Australia expressing an interest in joining in having a sub regional grouping to battle terrorism together.

We are gratified too that our reaffirmed strong strategic ties with the United States have yielded gains on both the security and economic fronts. To improve the climate for business, part of synchronized recovery is greater economic integration and cooperation within Asean, and within Asean and the giant economies of Northeast Asia. Thus, we can, and must, exploit our proximity and affinities for the e-expansion of trade and investment. China's entry into the WTO is a challenge to retool, drive economically and capture a chunk of the mammoth Chinese market.

Our administration has, likewise, addressed a whole rate of issues at APEC and the WTO with a view to ending the scourge of poverty. Even as we ended a new round of negotiations in the multilateral trading system, Secretary Mar Roxas represented the Philippines, and spoke for the Philippines in deepening the discussion and lead in the call to enhance the development dimensions of trade. And as we traverse the economic capitals of the world, as to the cabinet to MOA out our policies and directions , as we work with our local governments to bring action to the grassroots, and as we stand with the legislature, the judiciary, the private sector in this summit, we have maintained our clear focus and our solidarity.

The pre-summit consultations drew forth the brightest ideas, the best practices , and the most workable proposals from all sectors. I am hopeful that this will further revive our enterprises, expand employment opportunities for our people, and attract investments to our economy. Our action agenda touches on the crucial aspects of our national life — not on all aspects — or the crucial aspects. We all recognize that the quality of governance, the stability of institutions and the credibility of leaders are all indispensable to our robust economic performance. And therefore, let me say once again, to you, to our people, to the world, I commit to maintaining the integrity of leadership. Because the integrity of our leadership has won international recognition of the seriousness with which we are trying to put our house in order. I am therefore, hopeful that this meeting of the best minds and most patriotic hearts will combine and multiply our efforts to liberate our people from poverty and violence and build a better future for our children.

I listened to the remarks of the honorable Mendoza representing the labor sector. We are gratified by the coming together of all sectors whose concerns we have all worked hard to address — even the difficult ones.

On the always contentious wage issue, we have strived to maintain the balance between giving workers a fair and decent recompense for their sweat, and ensuring the survival of employers in the face of the economic slump. And I thank mainstream and moderate labor for helping us in this regard. This process is necessarily subject to periodic review to fine tune the balance and reserve the social harmony necessary for the economic advancement of all. And I hope that organized labor, especially the mainstream organized labor, the moderate organized labor, the organized labor that seeks to have better terms for the workers rather than seeking the overthrow of our society, will always be with us in this endeavor.

We have also accommodated the broad spectrum of group subsumed under the rubric of civil society. While some of the basic sectors may have been inadvertently excluded — and I acknowledge the observations of Ms. Esmao in a number of sub panels. — their views have certainly shaped the key documents of this summit. We acknowledge the key role that boosting the domestic economy has played in our continued economic expansion. We pledge to continue the debate on development strategies and paradigms. And most important, I hope, to the basic sectors, the central goal of this summit and its action agenda is to protect our people, especially the poor, from the adverse impact in the face of the global economic crisis.

Ang mahihirap, ang puno't dulo ng kapulungang ito. Magsama-sama tayong lahat dahil gusto natin na sa loob ng isang dekada, iyong mahihirap ay hindi na sana mahihirap. Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the National Socio-Economic Summit. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212025/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8769&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Human Rights Day Celebration

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Human Rights Day Celebration

[Delivered at the Heroes hall, Malacañang, December 10, 2001]

General Villanueva, the Chief of Staff Armed Forces of the Philippines, and the other officers of the Armed Forces, other officers of the PNP, ating mga panauhin, mga minamahal kong mga kababayan.

Fifty three years ago in 1948, the nations of the world gathered together and declared their commitment to human rights, this year we celebrate human rights day and human rights week with the theme “Ang Karapatang Pantao ay Buhay, Ipaglaban Natin.” May this day remind that us that life is worthless without the protective embrace of human rights, but of course those who are here, our public servants, need not be reminded of our duty, it is our duty to guarantee human rights not simply because it is a constitutional mandate but because it is part of our historical struggle for dignity and freedom. Long before the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights more than a hundred years ago, our national heroes and martyrs were already laying down their lives and treasures for our cherished freedoms. One of our beacons today is the Commission on Human Rights. This is the national institution mandated to uphold and respect the dignity of every human being, and to advance his well being, the community welfare, peace and national development. But human rights is a cause not only of the CHR but of everyone in our democratic society. And we who are here are here to renew our commitment to that cause.

His eminence Jaime Cardinal Sin once said and I quote, “All of us have an important role to perform. We are called to be guardians of human rights in society. That is what the world needs now.” I have faith in the institutions represented here that they will keep the cause alive. It is fitting and special that our soldiers and policemen are here with us on this occasion. Their presence here reminds me of a great moment of Philippine contemporary history — EDSA one — when human rights was the rallying cry, and the military and the police were on the side of the people. And so therefore, with them on the side of our people, today our human rights are secure. Today the system of accountability in the military and police is firm. We have no room for human rights violators in this system. Our soldiers fight and our policemen enforce, conscious of the ethic that human rights violators will be booted out, prosecuted, and jailed. I will be candid and say, and as they count, that at the time we decided to crack down on the Abu Sayyaf and their followers at the time when there was a big advocacy in Zamboanga and in western Mindanao for martial law to be declared, we discussed it with our soldiers and policemen, and they said we have enough constitutional tools, short of martial law, to be able to increase the enforcement of the law ok go ahead, crack down on them. The soldiers on the ground said, they reminded me that we have to be very careful about protecting human rights. It was not I who reminded them, but they reminded me. And that is why I am glad that they are here today. I want the world to know that our soldiers and policemen have internalized that devotion to the protection of human rights.

Indeed, there is no inherent conflict between national security and democracy there is no inherent conflicting between enforcing national stability. On the one hand, and protecting human rights, on the other. We, in this administration have the will, and together with you, the resources and the solidarity to protect human rights. A memorandum of agreement signed today forges the resolve of the Human Rights Commission and the various groups that are here today — Armed Forces, Police, DECS, CHED, DOJ and Civil Society — to carry on the vigilance for human rights. This instrument of solidarity which is important, especially now when there are forces that try to undermine our efforts. These forces pretend to be champions of human rights when they are violators. They pretend to be paragons of freedom and liberty while they engage with force, deception and violence to attain their ends. They use the guarantees of democracy to try to destroy democracy. We who are protectors of democracy must show the world that we are respectful of human rights; and that under us. Human rights are secure in a way that they cannot be secure in a dictatorship, whether a rightist or leftist dictatorship. Wherever it is in the spectrum of ideologies, in a dictatorship, violations of human rights are a function of ... And habit.

Our human rights today are secure in a way they can never be secure in a government run by fanatic extremism, like the a government that has just collapsed in Afghanistan. Today, our human rights are secure in a way they would never be secure in a world lorded over by terrorists, indeed today, the more formidable threat to our liberties is the threat of terrorism. The Secretary General of the UN declared that the September 11 attack struck at everything that the United Nations organization stands for – peace, freedom, tolerance, human rights. By now we all understand the terrorist message. If you don't obey us, you will die, if you do not surrender your belief in favor of our own, you will die. If you do not renounce democracy you will die. You cannot be free until you capitulate. Terrorism aims to take away the core of our existence, our right to live with our dignity and liberty. Thus, the war against terrorism is a war we must win. For the consequences of losing it are a return to the dark ages when barbarians and wolves were at the gate and human rights were unheard of. I don't know if the future belongs to our side. But I know there will be no future if our side does not prevail in this fight against terrorism. At least no future that any of us will care to live. In fact, it will not be a future in which most of us will be allowed to live in. It will be a future where happiness is suspect, delight is blasphemy, beauty is a cause for shame, and independent thought is a capital crime. We can only succeed in beating terrorism if we refuse to succumb to our fears, if we refuse to surrender the belief we hold in society today, if we keep faith in democracy and humanity.

These days I am focused on what needs to be done to address the war against terrorism. And in winning the battle against poverty in the Philippines. The 2 priorities are very linked, as human rights and development are very linked. Development facilitates enjoyment of human rights including freedom from want and deprivation. Democracy empowers people to defend their rights. The Philippines today is a fully functioning democracy with a free and untrammelled media. And it is almost impossible for any infraction of human rights to go unnoticed for an extended period. We are fortunate too that our people as a whole are more enlightened, that we have a broadened middle class, and that the global revolution and the dissemination of information and knowledge has provided a fertile ground for the development of a national concern that we have to be more protective of human rights to keep pace with the universal standards of democracy.

Good public information, as mentioned earlier, is one of the major keys to promote and protect the rights of every individual. And I hope that the programs and projects of the commission, the subject of the agreement today, will serve this purpose. The CHR has developed an extended information campaign for all students in the secondary and colleges levels called human rights schools, college and universities linkages, or hr schools, where they will become information desks where all students willing to participate in the dissemination of human rights information.

The second program is called Huriguide, which stands for human rights government unified information dissemination system. This program will cater to Filipino citizens through the respective government agencies and local government units. The DILG is included in our agreement. With these projects, the information, education and communication fund per agency may be used for our human rights desk and other related projects.

The masses are entitled to be deeply aware of their rights and liberties as well as their responsibilities as citizens. In this awareness, they will be adequately equipped to...tyranny and repression of yes, terrorism. The people should never again live under the cloak of dictatorship here in the Philippines. The beauty of democracy is that the liberty you have in your hands is the same liberty that I have in mine, .no more no less because human rights is a birthright. And as long as these are people like you who are in this hall today who believe in and work hard for the cause of human rights, our democratic way of life will be secure.

Finally, on the occasion of human rights day, I hereby declare a Unilateral Cease-fire with regard to the New Peoples Army starting today until the 6th of January.

Thank you and let us all continue to protect the human rights of our people.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Human Rights Day Celebration. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212016/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8772&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during her Visit at Payatas Quezon City

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During her Visit at Payatas Quezon City

[Delivered in Payatas, Quezon City, December 10, 2001]

Una sa lahat sa aking pagpunta dito, parang hindi kapani-paniwala na ito ang lugar sa Payatas na pinakamalapit sa dumpsite. Ang ganda ganda na ng kapaligiran. Congratulation sa inyong lahat. Sabi nga ni Mayor Sonny Belmonte, itong mga inhinyerong pumunta rito at gulat na gulat sila dahil nga iyong buhay dito ay hindi kagaya ng nalalarawan nila noong araw kung ano ba iyong Payatas. Iyon ang ating bundok. Pero kung pupunta ka rito ay hindi na masyadong pangit ang pagkakabuhay dito. Lalo na ngayon at mayroon na kayong tubig, lalong ginhawa ang buhay. At ang sabi nga ni Mayor Sonny Belmonte, dahilan kung bakit iyong mga inhinyerong dayuhan ay nagbisita doon ay sa ilalim para sa ganoon hindi na masyadong poisonous iyong hangin dito. At sa ganoon, iyong kalusugan ninyo ay magiging mas mabuti, mas konti ang magkakasakit. Gayun din ang isang magiging resulta ng mayroon na kayong mga patubig galing sa mga mabubuti at malinis na tubo. Kasi kinukuwento ni Congressman Mathay, noong araw, umiigib pala kayo at bumibili kayo ng tubig. At naalala ko tuloy ang mga ibang bansa na nagkakaroon ng giyera dahil sa tubig. Dito pa ang nakikipag-away pa kayo sa mga iba't ibang tao pag kumukuha kayo ng tubig, sa konti ng tubig at sa layo. Buong araw, imbes na magtatrabaho kayo ay pumupunta para umigib ng tubig. Ngayon nandito na ang tubig pumupunta sa inyong tahanan, may panahon kayo na maghanapbuhay at di hamak mas mura pa ang binabayad ninyo sa tubig.

Pinag-uusapan nga namin kanina at tinatanong ko ang isang pamilya dito, magkano ang binabayad niya noong araw sa tubig na binibili niya? Magkano ang babayaran niya ngayon sa tubig na dumadarating sa kanyang tahanan. Noong araw may mga pamilyang P750.00 per month ang binabayad, ngayon P40.00 per month na lamang.

Alam ninyo, iyan ay isang kabutihan na ang may ari ng Maynilad ay hindi gobyerno. Kasi nung gobyerno ang may-ari nung MWSS, ang gumagawa ng patubig ang gobyerno. Hindi marunong sa negosyo. Ang gobyerno marunong magpatakbo ng bayan, ng siyudad, ng barangay, pero hindi marunong magpatakbong negosyo. Kaya lugi parati ang MWSS, walang pera para ilagay sa mga lugar kagaya ninyo nung binenta sa private sector nung pa kayo nagkaroon ng patubig. Iyan ang ikinabubuti ng ating sistema ng private and free enterprise. Kaya pagka may pupunta rito, maririnig kayo sa telebisyon na nagra-rally na sinasabi privatization is bad for the country. Kayo siguro ang makakasagot na privatization has been good for your community. Kaya tumulong kayo na magtanggol dito sa patakaran ng ating pamahalaan.

Kaya ako ay nasisiyahan dahil ito ay isang patunay na iyong ating mga patakaran tungkol sa ekonomiya ay tunay na nakakatulong sa mga mahihirap. Kaya kayo na testigo o pag may bumabatikos sa ating ekonomiya, na kayo nakakuha ng ginhawa dito sa ating mga patakaran na ito. Kaya magtulongan tayo. Tulungan ninyong ipagtanggol ang mga patakaran ng pamahalaan. Tulungan ninyong ipaliwanag na ang inyong buhay ay maging mas maginhawa dahil sa mga patakaran na tinutupad natin. Tulungan ninyong ipatupad at tulungan ninyong ipaliwanag na lahat ng ito ay tumutulong para sa mahihirap. Kagaya ng mahihirap dito sa lupang pangako, mahihirap sa Payatas, mahihirap sa Quezon City, mahihirap sa buong Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat at congratulation sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech During her Visit at Payatas Quezon City. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409212035/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8766&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo at the National Socio-Economic Summit, December 10, 2001
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the National Socio-Economic Summit

[Delivered at the Manila Hotel, December 10, 2001]

PUTTING OUR HOUSE IN ORDER

I thank you all for the many weeks of hard thinking and earnest dialogue that you put into this Summit. A good summit such as what we are having today is not a one-day affair. It starts with many weeks of consultation, preparation, iteration and vetting. Finally, when we get together in the summit itself, it is a day when we affirm the agreements that we have arrived at.

I thank especially the members of Congress starting with Senator Blas Ople for this idea. It was his idea to convene this gathering to address the challenges thrust upon the nation by the global economic crisis, particularly in the wake of the September 11 attack.

Allow me to start with candor and straightforwardness, for urgent matters are afoot and I do not wish to tarry. Some people have begun to criticize our meeting as just another exercise in hot air and propaganda. They say it is just a media event from which nothing substantive will ensue. They ask, will this bring more food to the table? Will this bring more shelter for the poor? Will this bring more schools for the children, and more jobs for their parents? And so on and so forth.

We can always dismiss these charges as the work of subversives or doomsayers. But today we will not do so. Today we will consider it not our job to answer our detractors with counterlabeling or stereotyping. We shall determine what is most needed to fight poverty, provide focus and direction to all institutions involved, and get the job done.

Nevertheless, the air of public skepticism is real and foreboding. We cannot dismiss the hardships of the people from day to day, from hour to hour. Their problems are real and concrete, ending physically and psychologically. The list of worries is long and arduous. Where will I get the money for the next meal? How can I pay for my son's next tuition installment on Monday? How can I pay up this prescription for my baby? For any leader who has a genuine heart for the poor, it is sad and frustrating to contemplate these questions being asked by the poor everyday.

But these questions precisely point to the perspective that has been captured by this summit. This perspective is based on action, concreteness, political will, and national solidarity to fight poverty and to beat it.

In proclaiming our agenda today, we place it in the fountain of the masses, in the hearts and minds of the poorest people and communities in our country. This is no ordinary political exercise. We are going to do what we say. We are going to back up our priorities with resources.

They said that summits turn up with nothing good. It depends. If a summit is a one-day thing, and everybody does the brainstorming just on that one day, then nothing will really come out of it. Then it's just an exercise for the media. But if the summit was prepared the way it's been prepared today, it can work. And I would like to remind everyone about such a summit that was prepared this way and that has worked, and that was the social reform summit that was called by President Ramos during his administration.

I attended the final day. But prior to that final day, there were also weeks of vetting, interaction, consultation, debate, until finally what was considered doable by everyone, the common denominator, the things that united rather than divided were agreed on that day.

Thus, came out the Social Reform Agenda. And when we were fighting for what eventually became EDSA 2 in civil society, in politics, the politicians and civil society, when we engaged with one another, we examined that Social Reform Agenda that came from that Social Reform Summit. We examined what have been accomplished, and what had not yet been accomplished. And we said, that if we ever became the administration, we would begin to accomplish the parts that had not been accomplished.

And so today, our social reform agenda, a big bulk of the socio-economic part of our socio-economic program, the social part of it still comes from that social reform summit that was put together many, many years ago. So summits can work. Let us make this summit work.

Let me highlight the essential tracts in the pact that we have signed. Recessions usually hit the poor hardest, by throwing them out of jobs and homes, wiping out their meager savings, and eroding state revenues needed for redistributing land and providing basic social services. As far as we can, we mustn't let this happen.

Hence, I am very grateful that Congress agreed that they shall strive to index excise taxes to inflation. And the national government shall use its share of the increase in revenues coming from this indexation specifically for housing subsidies. By being able to earmark the additional proceeds of indexation of excise taxes, we will be able to devise the rent-to-own schemes to put homes within the reach of the working classes in these times of uncertainty. That is one concrete agreement that we have come to. And the question is: will it build more homes for the masses? The answer is, yes, this summit will if we can carry this out.

The distribution of land to the tillers and to the indigenous peoples, what we call asset reform, must also continue, for the great majority of the poor live in the countryside. Hence, the Land Bank shall return to its main mandate. The mandate of the law gave it when my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, established the Land Bank. Its main purpose and its purpose today must be once again to finance programs for land reform. Will the summit give more land to the farmers? Yes, it will, if we will carry out what we have agreed on regarding the land bank.

The tariffs collected from the minimum access imports must return and shall return to the rightful allocation, the Agricultural Competitiveness Enhancement Fund. And so we ask, will this summit make the farmers able to produce more? Yes, it will, if we carry out this resolution to earmark the proceeds from the minimum access volume to the fund to make farmers more competitive.

Mass housing, land reform, human development services are essential to our battle against poverty as well as the war against economic uncertainty. Providing homes and land for the poor creates jobs, raises productivity and augments long-term savings. Education, micro-finance, health and other similar services empower people to contribute to economic growth and live a life of dignity.

In this light, the leaders who joined the summit committed themselves, ourselves, to work together, to bring more of the poor under the umbrella of the National Health Insurance Program, to address the legal and social impediments to the availability of waste disposal systems, to provide sites for school buildings in the barangays where there are none, to promote micro-finance institutions in every province.

For our part, the administration is delivering on my SONA commitments with focus. We shall cut in half the prices of medicines commonly used by the poor. We shall expand the outlets for low-cost remedies and reorganize the Bureau of Food and Drugs to bring more of these low-cost medicines to poor Filipinos.

The question then, will this summit help? Juan dela Cruz, answer the question. Mabibili ko ba itong prescription para sa aking baby? Yes, it will answer that question if we carry out these reforms in the price of medicines that we have agreed on in this summit.

Retraining, on the other hand, will enhance the capability of our work force to continue to be relevant to the dynamic demands of a global economy. In this task, it is paramount to enable our workers and our small entrepreneurs. Where will I get my next job because I've been thrown out of work? Will the jobless worker find an answer from this summit? Yes, if we carry out the massive retraining program that we agreed on we should carry out in this summit.

We cannot prescribe autarchy, our closing our doors x to the world economy. Instead, we have no choice in the world today but be guided by the signals of the market because we cannot legislate the law of supply and demand. But what we can do is to explore further reforms to lower cost and improve services. One priority identified by Senate President Franklin Drilon is modernizing our cargo transport system. This is a must if enterprises across the archipelago, including farms and fishing communities, are to compete and grow vigorously.

Will we have cheaper food on the table? Will the Manileño have cheaper food on the table coming from a product produced in Mindanao? Yes, if we carry out our commitment to do the reforms in cargo shipping and air transport as Senate President Franklin Drilon said in this summit that we must do.

Our present-day cargo system is plagued by inadequate infrastructure which turns out investors. Another big turnoff is inadequate peace and order. Hence, we are grateful for the initiative of House Speaker Jose de Venecia occasioned by this summit,, to earmark funds in the 2002 budget to enhance the reward system for information on terrorists, kidnappers, drug traffickers, coup plotters and other perpetrators of major crimes. Mindanao will continue to be a special focus for peace and development and the battle against poverty. And I am grateful to the summit for the affirming this.

On the first working day of the New Year, I shall install the newly-elected officials of the ARMM. This will be the beginning of a strong rally against terrorism, bandity and corruption. We shall pour in more resources into the region to support good governance and to uplift the lives of the people.

Just last night, I happened to call Paul Dominguez to talk about something in preparation for today's summit. And just then, 11 o'clock at night, he was having coffee with a new ARMM Governor Parouk Hussin to inform the new ARMM governor that as soon as the new government of the Autonomous Region is off and running, the USAID is ready with the initial $20 million of the $55 million that we were able to get during my official visit in Washington.

We shall resolve ideologically-based secessionist movements, isolate terrorists and uproot crime syndicates embedded in the isolated communities of Mindanao, in addition to what we be will doing, of course, in the rest of the Philippines. In addition, we will redouble efforts to implement two other measures in the Eleven-point Anti-Crime Program that I announced last month. One is the close integration and coordination of intelligence activities and resources for which an intelligence summit will soon be held. The other is the training and deputization of community groups to fight crime. These community groups will be allowed to bear arms and make citizens' arrests, even as we will be stricter with the illegal possession of firearms.

This action agenda, of course, will count for nothing less unless all join hands to implement it fully. Hence, I am gratified that business and civil society have put forward major steps that they will take as well, including in the case of business, the promise and the commitment that they will use one and only one set of financial statements, both for their banks and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Narrow partisan, sectoral and personal interest must yield to the common good. Let me repeat my call for a one-year moratorium on politicking. And I thank business, labor and civil society for now echoing this call. And I noticed that in all the speeches and messages prior to mine, the most-applauded passages were all the times that our speakers asked for unity and the moratorium on politicking. Perhaps, indeed, one way to achieve this is the political summit proposed to be held within six months, although this socio-economic summit itself already signals a major step forward in legislative-executive coordination, as well as in cooperation between the administration and the opposition for the greater good of our nation. The poorest of our people gain the most from these strides in the political maturity of our institutions. Every initiative, every new measure or program to which we have committed ourselves, is a building block for the broader pillars of a national strategic consensus. These pillars, as I have many times articulated, are the following:

First, a competitive economy capable of building wealth for our people in a more interactive global setting.

Second, a caring society ensuring the building of wealth is interlinked with equity for our people;

Third, a robust agricultural sector matching the global benchmarks of efficiency.

Fourth, modern institutions of public and corporate governance maintaining globally-accepted standards of accountability and transparency in a secure, rules-based society, free from fear and confident in the effective enforcement of laws. We are now looking to clear the hundreds of bottlenecks that get in the way of enterprise and effective governance in all sectors. Many inadequate policies need to be revamped, many procedures and ways of doing things need to be changed. Dead capital and unrealized potential must be reincarnated by new thinking, as Hernando de Soto tells us, and as many Latin American countries have already begun to listen. These are immediate challenges.

The process that culminated in this summit is a triumph of intense cooperation and great patriotism. It is only in being together that we can build an economy that is robust, competitive, capable of providing for our people's needs. It is only in being together that we can build an economy that sustains growth rates that can dramatically reduce poverty. It is only in being together that we can build the society of peace and national community capable of applying forward looking solutions to our manifold problems.

I appreciate your sincere enthusiasm in this gathering. You not only made your voices heard. You sincerely listened to and learned from other voices. The global economy was slowing down even before the September 11 tragedy. The terrorist attacks piled even more uncertainty upon the already unpredictable trends we were seeing. Now we witness the deepest downturn in the world economy in over two decades.

I can only find comfort in the fact that the Philippine economy has proven remarkably resilient given the state of the regional and global economy. While our exports have declined sharply, our domestic demand has increased even more sharply so that the GNP economic growth rate is at 3.7 percent, better than most of our neighbors and trading partners. We were able to defend our peso against a speculative attack last July and stabilized it without asking for IMF support. Inflation is at 4.4 percent, the lowest rate in 16 months.

And last night, I called up Governor Buena Ventura late into the night, long after my call to Paul Dominguez, to ask him what is our interest rate right now. And he said, our overnight interest rate has gone down to 8 percent, the lowest in six years while even the most industrialized countries suffered an increase in their unemployment rate. I called up Pat Sto. Tomas last night and said, what's our comparative unemployment rate between last year and this year? Last year, our unemployment rate was 11.2 percent, this year is 10.1 percent. And we are spending well within our budget deficit ceiling. And this allows the government to give a modest extra Christmas bonus for our government employees. That said global uncertainty that has resulted from the tragic events of September 11 makes economic planning for any country very difficult. That is why we must use the momentum of whatever resiliency we have shown so far and chase the light at the end of the tunnel. The more optimistic projects our global recovery to be in the second or third quarter of next year.

The upturn could well be enhanced by what analysts expect to be a synchronized recovery. They attribute the synchronized recovery to the unprecedented policy coordination of governments and central banks worldwide. In concert, the world's nations have stimulated their economies through interest rate cuts, increased public spending, and other policies designed to encourage investments and consumer demand in the major markets of the world. As we among ourselves in the Philippines today are synchronizing what we must do for economic recovery, or rather continuing our economic resiliency, the Philippines shall also be part, an integral part of the synchronized recovery with the rest of the world.

We draw strength in our synchronization with the rest of the world from the emerging global consensus to fight terrorism, spur economic growth and eradicate poverty. We are gratified in having contributed to this emerging consensus by initiating a sub-regional path among five founding members of ASEAN with, I understand, Australia expressing an interest in joining in having a sub-regional grouping to battle terrorism together.

We are gratified too that our reaffirmed strong strategic ties with the United States have yielded gains on both the security and economic fronts. To improve the climate for business, part of synchronized recovery is greater economic integration and cooperation within ASEAN, and within ASEAN and the giant economies of Northeast Asia. Thus, we can, and must, exploit our proximity and affinities for the expansion of trade and investment. China's entry into the WTO is a challenge to retool, drive economically and capture a chunk of the mammoth Chinese market.

Our administration has, likewise, addressed a whole range of issues at APEC and the WTO with a view to ending the scourge of poverty. Even as we ended a new round of negotiations in the multilateral trading system, Secretary Mar Roxas represented the Philippines, and spoke for the Philippines in deepening the discussion. The lead in the call to enhance the development dimensions of trade. And as we traverse the economic capitals of the world, as we work with our local governments to bring action to the grassroots, and as we stand with the legislature, the judiciary, the private sector in this summit, we have maintained our clear focus and our solidarity.

The presummit consultations drew forth the brightest ideas, the best practices, and the most workable proposals from all sectors. I am hopeful that this will further revive our enterprises, expand employment opportunities for our people, and attract investments to our economy. Our action agenda touches on the crucial aspects of our national life, not on all aspects or the crucial aspects. We all recognize that the quality of governance, the stability of institutions and the credibility of leaders are all indispensable to our robust economic performance. And therefore, let me say once again, to you, to our people, to the world, I commit to maintaining the integrity of leadership. Because the integrity of our leadership has won international recognition of the seriousness with which we are trying to put our house in order. I am therefore, hopeful that this meeting of the best minds and most patriotic hearts will combine and multiply our efforts to liberate our people from poverty and violence and build a better future for our children.

I listened to the remarks of the Honorable Mendoza representing the labor sector. We are gratified by the coming together of all sectors whose concerns we have all worked hard to address, even the difficult ones.

On the always contentious wage issue, we have strived to maintain the balance between giving workers a fair and decent recompense for their sweat, and ensuring the survival of employers in the face of the economic slump. And I thank mainstream and moderate labor for helping us in this regard. This process is necessarily subject to periodic review to fine-tune the balance and reserve the social harmony necessary for the economic advancement of all. And I hope that organized labor, especially the mainstream organized labor, the moderate organized labor, the organized labor that seeks to have better terms for the workers rather than seeking the overthrow of our society, will always be with us in this endeavor.

We have also accommodated the broad spectrum of group subsumed under the rubric of civil society. While some of the basic sectors may have been inadvertently excluded and I acknowledged the observations of Ms. Esmao in a number of subpanels. Their views have certainly shaped the key documents of this summit. We acknowledge the key role that boosting the domestic economy has played in our continued economic expansion. We pledge to continue the debate on development strategies and paradigms. And most important, I hope, to the basic sectors, the central goal of this summit and its action agenda is to protect our people, especially the poor, from the adverse impact in the face of the global economic crisis.

Ang mahihirap, ang puno't dulo ng kapulungang ito. Magsama-sama tayong lahat dahil gusto natin na sa loob ng isang dekada, iyong mahihirap ay hindi na sana mahihirap.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: University of the Philippines Diliman Library

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo at the Year-end Media Economic Briefing, December 20, 2001

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the Year-end Media Economic Briefing

[Delivered at the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, December 20, 2001]

RESTORING THE COUNTRY'S FORTUNES THROUGH THE ENGINE OF FREE ENTERPRISE

The resilience that our economy showed this year is remarkable given the global economic slowdown. I therefore congratulate the economic team for doing a superb job. I congratulate them too, because the U.S. business communities tell me that I have the dream economic team.

It has been almost a year since I took up the challenge to restore our country's fortunes. It was a daunting challenge. We had inherited a fiscal deficit, that as Secretary Camacho said, had threatened to balloon to Php225 billion. Government revenues had fallen well below targets, thanks to massive leakages especially smuggling and uncut expenditures that truly just went out of control, borrowings that nearly tripled. And the loss of moral ascendancy of the government had destabilized the exchange rate. Investment confidence had plummeted. Thank God that these concerns have eased. We have a stable economy.

My economic plan for the Philippines starts with the goal of winning the battle against poverty within the decade. The plan, as you all probably know by now, revolves around four components. The first is the economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. The second is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. The third is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

Our discussion here today is of the first component of the plan, the economic philosophy of free enterprise. Because this component is premised on stable macroeconomic fundamentals. The macroeconomic plan that we have integrates a well coordinated set of fiscal and monetary policies that support a sound fiscal and debt position, stable prices, healthy balance of payments levels and steady flow of investments for job creation and further economic stimulation.

In implementing our plans, we have stood by our fiscal deficit ceiling. We held down the inflation and interest rates. We stamped out speculation against the peso. And we achieved a respectable economic growth in the midst of the global economy still reeling from the implosion of the information technology sector followed by the attack of September 11 on a key symbol and center of international finance. This event gravely increased the volatility of financial markets. And the attacks would have toppled our economy had we not so firmly anchored it to some fundamentals.

Leading international credit rating agencies and multilateral bodies recognize our efforts. Institutions such as NECSY, JBIC, the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank have endorsed our creditworthiness. J.B. Morgan and Chase reports that the prevailing decline in risk aversion has allowed the continuous improvement in economic fundamentals in the Philippines to finally shine through.

The market environment is ripe for repricing of Philippine asset prices based on improving fundamentals. President Macapagal-Arroyo is leading economic policy on a fundamentally better path. The Philippines has kept the budget deficit reined in. Economic growth has exceeded expectations. All these from J.P. Morgan.

But whatever is subjectively said by these different institutions, the most objective measure is the spreads that we have in the international capital market. And they are growing narrower and narrower by the day.

We had the audacity to make significant deficit reduction a cornerstone of our economic development plan. Audacity, indeed, in a global atmosphere of slower capital infusions, smaller appetite for emerging market issues and more insistent demands for budgetary support. But, we stuck by our plan and are now pleased to report that the combination of revenue enhancement measures and a disciplined expenditure program has positioned us to stay within our deficit ceiling of Php145 billion for the year 2001.

This is a major step towards what Lito Camacho said he wants to achieve by 2006, a balanced budget, an objective that is key to our goal of reducing poverty and promoting economic development.

Another factor in this equation is our success in exceeding our revenue targets. BIR exceeded its targets from January to November by 400 million. And now the latest figures, 4.4 billion, is the headroom we have overall as far as our budget deficit ceiling is concerned.

How did the BIR exceed its target? As a result of its anti-corruption reforms. Our efforts to achieve a balanced budget also includes new approaches to revenue collection such as the documentary stamp tax metering and tax audit acceleration.

Prudent management of the government's debt portfolio, which you have seen, also helped to achieve our deficit target. Resourceful credit initiative markets stood open to Philippine sovereign risk. These initiatives reduced our borrowing costs and maintained a manageable debt mix in terms of both maturity and creditor base.

For example, as part of our commitment to prudent debt management, we helped NAPOCOR source funds to carry out its privatization program with a recent Euro 500 million bond issue, an issue that is being praised in the international capital markets. And it should be, because it follows the act of the bill that was mentioned by Lito Camacho earlier, the $220 million debt bill of Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation which was cited by Finance Asia as the most innovative sovereign debt bill of 2001. This bill also got special mention in the best domestic currency bond bill category as the first-ever derivative transaction for the Philippines. And, as I said, the Euro bond for NAPOCOR is reaping laurels as well.

Our economic managers have also gone ahead and prefunded some of next year requirements again through innovative measures. They have sought credit enhancement from financial institutions that support our overall economic program, and have again fetched lower interest rates and longer maturities. You saw this in the charts. This is a well-timed move given the expectation of tighter international credit in the next 12 to 18 months.

In the light of this expected development, we are building our reserves to weather a long downturn in the global economic environment next year even though the optimistic projection say that it's not going to be a very long downturn. It's about another six months to go.

Inflation is insidious, and has a disproportionate impact on the poorer people of our nation. And early in my term, I told my economic managers that we must keep inflation down. And to keep inflation down, we must address both the supply side and the demand side. I see my former professor of macroeconomics in international trade and public finance, Vin Valdepenas nodding his head. Well, you gave me an "A" in class.

On the supply side, I said we must address the cost to the poor of rice, transportation and medicine. And we succeeded to the point that our inflation rate of 4 percent is at its lowest in the last 16 months — or even more.

On the demand side, responsible fiscal and monetary management also helped to reduce inflation, bringing down the cost of money, stamping out speculation against the peso and stabilizing it.

Our strong reserve position combined with projected dollar value should hold up the current value of the peso. A dynamic service sector, a large agricultural base, remittances from overseas Filipinos to their relatives in the Philippines, these are what have kept domestic consumption healthy. These have softened the impact of the plunge in exports and they explain the resilience of our economy.

I am also pleased to report that foreign direct investment levels, as Mar Rojas has pointed out, have exceeded targets despite the global slowdown. As Mar pointed out, investments reached Php132 billion by the end of November against a projection of Php100 billion for the entire year. These investments went mostly in telecommunications and manufacturing.

Given all that, I think we can approach the coming year with a reasonable expectation of achieving reasonable growth, maybe even higher growth.

Times will still be tough, but the stage has been set for them to get better. Given our country's potential, the 4 to 4.5 percent GDP growth projection set by Secretary Canlas would seem modest during normal times. But given the global slowdown, a 9-11, we would rather err on the side of conservatism rather than wild promise. There is good ground to hope for a better year, but equally compelling reason to try even harder in the year to come.

Our reforms will seek to strengthen the banking sector, address corporate governance deficiencies and expand our revenue sources and GDP base. As we improve public service, we call on the private sector to strengthen its role as the engine of the economy. Government will continue to do its part to make the environment more congenial to business as we continue to provide more public infrastructure, more rational power costs, and competitive investment incentive packages.

If we are to achieve our economic development goals, we must not limit our focus to external sources of growth. Domestic demand will continue to play an important role in delivering economic performances.

To encourage strength in the domestic economy, we are looking at bringing new financing vehicles to small- and medium-scale enterprises and the housing sector. Small-and medium-scale enterprises are too small for the attention of many traditional banks. Thus, we recently approved the proposal by the Development Bank of the Philippines to use Japanese ODA funds worth $200 million for credit schemes for SMEs.

As for housing, private asset management initiatives will take on its non-performing loans and unlock its bottlenecks.

Let me mention other sources of domestic growth that we are developing. Agriculture, agricultural modernization especially with the hybrid coming from China and developed for Philippine conditions by Philrice, will hopefully increase the yield in the farms that will adopt the seeds by two and a half times. Then there are the major infrastructure and investment big-ticket items that have experienced bottlenecks in the past several years. And we are now unlocking these bottlenecks so that there will be more demand coming out of investment activity without having to increase budgetary allocations.

Among these major big-ticket items that we are unlocking bottlenecks now are in the Philippine National Bank and I am very happy to note that last night, the term sheet between the PDIC and the PNB was finally signed. So we now see the rehabilitation of the PNB underway.

Another big-ticket item that will increase domestic demand is the operation of the national steel corporation. Secretary Mar Roxas did some innovative ways of seeking to have interim operations. But now, it seems that the solutions will not just be interim but permanent operation as well.

Then we have the housing sector, which I have mentioned. We also have the MRT portion that will close the loop so that we can have an entire loop of MRT around Metro Manila. And I am happy to say that DOTC and the proponent have already come up with the appropriate understanding so that the one who held previous contract can exercise its option and go on.

Another bottleneck has been the Baticang Port. Finally, JBIC, after many years of delay because of disputes among bidders and because of disputes on land valuation, finally, the award has been confirmed by JBIC. And I have already my invitation for the groundbreaking. So that's going to push through.

Another bottleneck is with regard to the garbage. And I am very happy to note — I'm surprised it hasn't leaked out, so I might as well tell you about it — I was hoping that it would leak out. Finally the award has been granted and approved by the NEDA Board to pro-environment groups. So therefore, I said, we would solve the problem come Christmas time. And it has been solved in terms of the long-term solution. But even in terms of the short-term solution, please let me know where you still see piles and piles of garbage in Metro Manila.

And far from Metro Manila, another bottleneck that we have to address. And if we address this too we will add to consumer demand, and solve a long-term problem that we foresee, is the water system of Cebu. So therefore, if we unlock all these bottlenecks, then we will be having an additional source of domestic demand.

To make many of these moves possible, as Governor Buena Ventura said, the Central Bank is now going into inflation targeting. And, indeed, it is right to add inflation targeting to employment targeting as the focus of our strategy.

And for a good economy, you need good government and vice versa. So both in the national and local governments, we have been cutting down the red tape, that according to business, encourages corruption and discourages investments.

For example, we have computerized bidding in public works so as to take out the human element and substitute it with fairly incorruptible artificial intelligence. The result has been not just honest but faster contract awards.

We took an important step in the promotion of good governance by penalizing money laundering, sought to discourage international crimes by the drug trade abroad but also graft and corruption at home.

You have press a release in your kit of what we are supposed to have said in our speeches. But all press releases should be checked against delivery. And so, my apologies to the Central Bank, which I think wrote the first draft of my speech, and therefore wrote the press release based on the first draft. Check against delivery in the last paragraph of the press release.

Looking at 2002, the resiliency that we demonstrated for our economy in the face of a global economic crisis provides the fundamental setting in which we can work out a better life for the poor.

Now that your government has steered the Philippine economy towards calmer waters, allow me to call on all Filipinos to push our economy to greater heights. I call once again for a moratorium of politicking to safeguard the gains we have achieved so far and to translate these gains into blessings that the people can finally feel.

Thank you.

Source: University of the Philippines Diliman Library

Speech of President Arroyo during the Year-End Media Economic Briefing Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Year-End Media Economic Briefing

[Delivered at the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, December 20, 2001]

I am happy to be here with you. The presentations given by Secretary Canlas, Governor Buenaventura, Secretary Camacho, Secretary Boncodin and Secretary Roxas underscore the fact that our country is back on the track of sustainable development.

The resilience that our economy showed this year is remarkable given the global economic slowdown. I therefore congratulate the economic team for doing a superb job. I congratulate them too, because the U.S. business communities tells me that I have the dream economic team.

It has been almost a year since I took up the challenge to restore our country's fortunes. It was a daunting challenge. We had inherited a fiscal deficit, that as secretary Camacho said, had threatened to balloon to P225 billion. Government revenues had fallen well below targets, thanks to massive leakages especially smuggling and uncut expenditures that truly just went out of control.

Borrowings that nearly tripled. And the loss of moral ascendancy of the government had destabilized the exchange rate. Investment confidence had plummeted. Thank god that these concerns have eased. We have a stable economy.

My economic plan for the Philippines starts with the goal of winning the battle against poverty within the decade. The plan, as you all probably know by now, revolves around four components. The first is the economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. The second is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. The third is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

Our discussions here today is of the first component of the plan, the economic philosophy of free enterprise. Because this component is premised on stable macro-economic fundamentals. The macro-economic plan that we have integrates a well coordinated set of fiscal and monetary policies that support a sound fiscal and debt position, stable prices, healthy balance of payments levels and steady flow of investments for job creation and further economic stimulation.

In implementing our plans, we have stood by our fiscal deficit ceiling. We held down the inflation and interest rates. We stamped out speculation against the peso. And we achieved a respectable economic growth in the midst of the global economy still reeling from the implosion of the information technology sector followed by the attack of September 11 on a key symbol and center of international finance. This event gravely increased the volatility of financial markets. And the attacks would have toppled our economy had we not so firmly anchored it to some fundamentals.

Leading international credit rating agencies and multilateral bodies recognize our efforts. Institutions such as Necsy, JBIC, the World Bank and the Asian development bank have endorsed our credit worthiness. J.b. Morgan chase reports that the prevailing decline in risk aversion has allowed the continuous improvement in economic fundamentals in the Philippines to finally shine through.

The market environment is ripe for repricing of Philippine asset prices based on improving fundamentals. President Macapagal-Arroyo is leading economic policy on a fundamentally better path. The Philippines has kept the budget deficit reined in. Economic growth has exceeded expectations. All these from J.P. Morgan.

But whatever is subjectively said by these different institutions, the most objective measure is the spreads that we have in the international capital market. And they are growing narrower and narrower by the day.

We had the audacity to make significant deficit reduction a cornerstone of our economic development plan. Audacity, indeed, in a global atmosphere of slower capital infusions, smaller appetite for emerging market issues and more insistent demands for budgetary support. But, we stuck by our plan, and are now pleased to report that the combination of revenue enhancement measures and a disciplined expenditure program has positioned us to stay within our deficit ceiling of P145 billion for the year 2001.

This is a major step towards what Lito Camacho said he wants to achieve by 2006, a balanced budget, an objective that is key to our goal of reducing poverty and promoting economic development.

Another factor in this equation is our success in exceeding our revenue targets. BIR exceeded its targets from January to November by 400 million. And now the latest figures, 4.4 billion, is the head room we have overall as far as our budget deficit ceiling is concerned.

How did BIR exceed its target? As a result of its anti-corruption reforms. Our efforts to achieve of a balance budget also includes new approaches to revenue collection such as the documentary stamp tax metering and tax audit acceleration.

Prudent management of the government's debt portfolio, which you have seen, also helped to achieve our deficit target. Resourceful credit initiative markets stood open to Philippine sovereign risk. These initiatives reduced our borrowing costs and maintained a manageable debt mix in terms of both maturity and creditor base.

For example, as part of our commitment to prudent debt management, we helped NAPOCOR source funds to carry out its privatization program with a recent euro-500 million bond issue, an issue that is being praised in the international capital markets. And it should be because it follows the act of the bill that was mentioned by Lito Camacho earlier, the $220 million debt bill of Hong Kong and Shanghai banking corporation which was cited by finance Asia as the most innovative sovereign debt bill of 2001., This bill also got special mention in the best domestic currency bond bill category as the first ever derivative transaction for the Philippines. And, as I said, the Euro bond for NAPOCOR is reaping laurels as well.

Our economic managers have also gone ahead and pre funded some of next year requirements, again, through innovative measures. They have sought credit enhancement from financial institutions that support our overall economic program, and have again fetched lower interest rates and longer maturities. You saw this in the charts. This is a well-timed move given the expectation of tighter international credit in the next 12 to 18 months.

In the light of this expected development, we are building our reserves to weather a long downturn in the global economic environment next year even though the optimistic projection say that it's not going to be a very long downturn. It's about another six months to go.

Inflation is insidious, and has a disproportionate impact on the poorer people of our nation. And early in my term, I told my economic managers that we must keep inflation down. And to keep inflation down, we must address both the supply side and the demand side. I see my former professor of macro-economics in international trade and public finance, Vin Valdepenas nodding his head. Well, you gave me an A in class.

On the supply side, I said we must address the cost to the poor of rice, transportation and medicine. And we succeeded to the point that our inflation rate of 4 percent is at its lowest in the last 16 months — or even more.

On the demand side, responsible fiscal and monetary management also helped to reduce inflation, bringing down the cost of money, stamping out speculation against the peso and stabilizing it.

Our strong reserve position combined with projected dollar value should hold up the current value of the peso. A dynamic service sector, a large agricultural base, remittances from overseas Filipinos to their relatives in the Philippines, these are what have kept domestic consumption healthy. These have softened the impact of the plunge in exports and they explain the resilience of our economy.

I am also pleased to report that foreign direct investment levels, as Mar Roxas has pointed out, have exceeded targets despite the global slowdown. As mar pointed out, investments reached P132 billion by the end of November against a projection of 100 billion for the entire year. These investments went mostly in telecommunications and manufacturing.

Given all that, I think we can approach the coming year with a reasonable expectation of achieving reasonable growth, maybe even higher growth.

Times will still be tough, but the stage has been set for them to get better. Given our country's potential, the 4 to 4.5 percent GDP growth projection set by Secretary Canlas would seem modest during normal times. But given the global slowdown, a 9-11, we would rather err on the side of conservatism rather than wild promise. There is good ground to hope for a better year, but equally compelling reason to try even harder in the year to come.

Our reforms will seek to strengthen the banking sector, address corporate governance deficiencies and expand our revenue sources and GDP base. As we improve public service, we call on the private sector to strengthen its role as the engine of the economy. Government will continue to do its part to make the environment more congenial to business as we continue to provide more public infrastructure, more rational power costs and competitive investment incentive packages.

If we are to achieve our economic development goals, we must not limit our focus to external sources of growth. Domestic demand will continue to play an important role in delivering economic performances.

To encourage strength in the domestic economy, we are looking at bringing new financing vehicles to small-and-medium scale enterprises and the housing sector. Small-and-medium scale enterprises are too small for the attention of many traditional banks. Thus, we recently approved the proposal by the development bank of the Philippines to use Japanese ODA funds worth $200 million for credit schemes for SMEs.

As for housing, private asset management initiatives will take on its non-performing loans and unlock its bottlenecks.

Let me mention other sources of domestic growth that we are developing. Agriculture, agricultural modernization especially with the hybrid coming from china and developed for Philippine conditions by Philrice, will hopefully increase the yield in the farms that will adopt the seeds by two and a half times. Then, there is the major infrastructure and investment big ticket items that have experienced bottlenecks in the past several years. And we are now unlocking these bottlenecks so that there will be more demand coming out of investment activity without having to increase budgetary allocations.

Among these major big ticket items that we are unlocking bottlenecks now in are: the PNB, and I am very happy to note that last night, the term sheet between the PDIC and the Philippine National Bank was finally signed. So we now see the rehabilitation of the PNB underway.

Another big ticket item that will increase domestic demand is the operation of the national steel corporation. Mar Roxas did some innovative ways of seeking to have interim operations. But now , it seems that the solutions will not just be interim but permanent operation as well.

Then, we have the housing sector which I have mentioned. We also have the MRT portion that will close the loop so that we can have an entire loop of MRT around Metro Manila. And I am happy to say that DOTC and the proponent have already come up with the appropriate, understanding so that the one who held previous contract can exercise its option and go on.

Another bottleneck has been the Batangas port. Finally, JBIC, after many years of delay because of disputes among bidders, because of disputes on land valuation, finally, the award has been confirmed by JBIC. And I have already my invitation for the groundbreaking. So that's going to push through.

Another bottleneck is with regard to the garbage. And I am very happy to note — I'm surprised it hasn't leaked out, so I might as well tell you about — I was hoping that it would leak out. Finally the award has been granted and approved by the NEDA board to pro-environment. So therefore, I said, we would solve the problem come Christmas time. And it has been solved in terms of the long term solution. But even in terms of the short term solution, please let me know where you still see piles and piles of garbage in metro manila.

And far from Metro Manila, another bottleneck that we have to address. And if we address this too we will add to consumer demand, and solve a long term problem that we foresee, is the water system of Cebu. So therefore, if we unlock all these bottlenecks, then we will be having an additional source of domestic demand.

To make many of these moves possible, as Governor Buenaventura said, the Central Bank is now going into inflation targeting. And, indeed, it is right to add inflation targeting to employment targeting as the focus of our strategy.

And for a good economy, you need good government and vice versa. So both in the national and local governments, we have been cutting down the red tape, that according to business, encourages corruption and discourages investments.

For example, as Emy Boncodin said, we have computerized bidding in public works so as to take out the human element and substitute it with fairly incorruptible artificial intelligence. The result has been not just honest but faster contract awards.

We took an important step in the promotion of good governance by penalizing money laundering, sought to discourage international crimes by the drug trade abroad but also graft and corruption at home.

You have press a release in your kit of what we are supposed to have said in our speeches. But all press releases should be checked against delivery. And so, my apologies to the central bank, who I think wrote the first draft of my speech, and therefore wrote the press release based on the first draft. Check against delivery in the last paragraph of the press release.

Looking at 2002, the resiliency that we demonstrated for our economy in the face of a global economic crisis provides the fundamental setting in which we can work out a better life for the poor.

Now that your government has steered the Philippines economy towards calmer waters, allow me to call on all Filipinos to push our economy to greater heights. I call once again for a moratorium of politicking to safeguard the gains we have achieved so far and to translate these gains into blessings that the people can finally feel.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2001). PGMA's Speech during the Year-End Media Economic Briefing. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100409211952/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8764&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Vin D'Honneur

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Vin D'Honneur

[Delivered in Malacañang Palace, January 5, 2002]

The past year 2001 will be remembered for the high drama of political and economic events. It was a turning point for our country and the world. We had blessings and we had deep tragedy. 2001 saw the restoration of moral authority in our government through the instrument of people power, 2001 brought tragedy to mankind in the 9/11 terrorist attacks. 2001 was a triumph of the spirit as the people of Afghanistan were liberated from bondage.

For the Philippines, 2001 was a year of rebuilding, reinvigorating, and reshaping our democratic institutions, our governance and our economy, and of restoring international confidence in the Philippines and the Filipino people.

Shortly after I assumed the presidency of the Philippines last January 20th, the international community joined me in a vin d'honneur very much like tonight's occasion to express its recognition and support for our new government.

During that occasion, I said that the Philippines faces several realities that characterize its international and regional environment to which we have to respond in order to achieve our goals.

Let me reiterate them and place them in the context of today. The first reality is that China, Japan, and the United States, and their relationships, will be the determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of East Asia.

September 11 redefined the inter-relationship among these three countries into one of solidarity against global terrorism. These countries led the nations of the Pacific realm in Shanghai in forging the APEC declaration against terrorism.

The warmth and camaraderie shown among the leaders of these nations, in particular, during that Shanghai Summit have underlined their role as a constructive force for peace and prosperity in the region.

Second reality: more and more Philippine foreign policy decisions have to be made in the context of ASEAN. Together with our regional partners of the 7th ASEAN Summit in November 2001, we adopted the ASEAN Declaration on Joint Action to Counter Terrorism. And only recently, we completed the draft of a trilateral operational agreement against terrorism with Malaysia and Indonesia to secure and safeguard our common borders.

Third reality: the International Islamic Community will continue to be important for the Philippines. I am proud that our friends from the OIC and other parts of the world were with us this morning when I installed the new regional government in the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao. This augurs well for the peace and development of Southern Philippines. It is a testament to the growing strength and stability of our democratic institutions.

Our relations with the Islamic nations will continue to bear prime importance in our effort to defeat all forms of extremism, and to promote tolerance, interfaith solidarity, understanding and respect among our diverse peoples and ethnic traditions.

As we assisted East Timor, we are likewise committed to take part in the rebuilding of Afghanistan. We shall continue to be an integral part of international peace keeping and humanitarian endeavors.

Fourth reality: the country's economic growth will continue to be heavily dependent on foreign investments. Thus, Europe, a major source of investment in recent years especially with the operation of the Malampaya gas and oil fields, will continue to be an important partner in promoting international prosperity and stability. We have reason to be optimistic that projects like Malampaya will spur our economic growth.

This project is expected to significantly augment our country's power reserves and promises to be an important source of revenue.

I am pleased to declare to the foreign investment community that the Philippines is back on its feet, resolutely and resiliency battling global crisis.

We have gained the much-needed momentum to press on our path to development. We've firmly stabilized the domestic political situation while continuing to mop up residual problems of law and order. Confidence has been restored by good governance and leadership by example. We have infused, to a great degree, common sense, discipline, and accountability in public management and public service.

Leaders from government, the private sector, and civil society have committed to undertake a concerted effort to combat poverty and accelerate economic development. In pursuit of this, we forged a socio-economic pact during the national socio-economic summit last December.

The unity of our people is crucial to safeguarding the gains of 2001 and maximizing the opportunities of the new year.

I am confident that the foreign community will continue to be our partners in this enterprise of consolidation and unity.

In the midst of the recession in many countries of the world, our GNP grew by 3.7 percent in the first three-quarters of 2001, surpassing the predictions of the private sector. This is a significant turnaround considering that less than a year ago, our economy was about to go into a tailspin in the wake of domestic instability.

In 2001, the Philippines revitalized its ties with our global partners, a task I gave to the Department of Foreign Affairs and to the special envoys whom I introduced at the vin d'honneur last year. They have successfully done the job. They have informed the international community of the steady gains we have made, of the stability and viability of our political, social, and economic reforms. They have also secured commitments of bilateral and multilateral support for our domestic efforts.

This brings us to the fifth reality that guides our foreign policy, that the coming years will see the growing importance of multilateral and inter-regional organizations to promote common interest.

Our active participation in regional and international organizations is a concrete demonstration of our commitment to the international community. Aside from attending the APEC Leaders Summit in Shanghai, the ASEAN Summit, and the ASEAN plus 3 Summit in Brunei Darussalam, I also addressed the United Nations General Assembly in New York. On this occasion, I conveyed the message that the Philippines is back in business, a reliable partner in the globalized realm and a committed and responsible vanguard in the most crucial issues of international affairs. We were one of the first to respond to the United Nations Security Council Resolution of 1368 based on a multi-pronged action program to combat terrorism both in the southwestern part of our own land and in the global arena.

Sixth reality: the defense of the nation's sovereignty and the protection of its environment and natural resources lie at the heart of foreign policy. We will continue to move in this direction as we seek consensual arrangements such as the regional code of conduct in the South China Sea.

Seventh reality: a country like the Philippines can benefit most quickly from international tourism. It is often said that human capital is our most valuable resource. The Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker. This statement gives rise to a number of conclusions. One conclusion is that, high growth business sectors that inherently draw on strength in human resources should now become very important. I can identify information and communications technology and tourism as two such sectors.

Another conclusion is our eighth foreign policy reality, that overseas Filipinos will continue to play a critical role in the country's economic and social stability. In the entire amalgam of global affairs, the great Filipino workers stand out as our greatest resource. In every nook and corner of progress and development, our workers are there, turning the wheels of industry, managing the networks of global commerce, healing the sick and teaching the young.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the international community for hosting millions of our workers. They have contributed their share to the strengthened stability of your own nations as they have brought pride and economic benefits to our country.

We celebrate them as the heroes of the new millennium. And I dedicate the year 2002 to the great Filipino workers.

We will continue to face more challenges as the year 2002 moves forward. However, with sufficient political will and the spirit of cooperation, we in the international community should be able to weather such storms. But as we have built a global coalition to eradicate terrorism, so too can we close ranks to lift the global economy. We must address both political and economic security. This renewed sense of global community could be the key to early recovery.

This is one warm manifestation of globalization and present us with an added challenge. But the events of September 11 and following also presented us with an opportunity to work together and come out stronger on a variety of fronts. The coalition that has been built and the relationships that have been fortified in our collective response to terrorism can and must extend to global, regional, and bilateral economic relations.

We face a rocky road ahead, that is certain. But the global economy can and will pull through if we approach our economic uncertainties with the same cooperative and integrated approach that we have applied against terrorism.

The Philippines stands ready to work with its friends and neighbors to meet this challenge. I'm a believer of personal diplomacy which has become a primary instrument of national and collective interest in the modern world. I have met with leaders of several countries and I welcomed some of them in Manila. It has been my pleasure and privilege to represent our people in the close and meaningful interaction with leaders of other nations.

In 2002, I will visit several countries to further strengthen our network of bilateral relations and to assure our partners in Europe and Canada that the Philippines will continue to be an active and constructive force in global affairs.

In the coming year, in this year, the fight against poverty will remain the overarching vision of our agenda. I am hopeful that we will achieve our goals with a sustained confidence given our administration by the Filipino people and the world.

On this note, may I propose a toast to all the nations and peoples of the world, especially those represented in this gathering, that we shall continue to work together for a more peaceful and prosperous world.

Mabuhay.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Grand Centennial Alumni Homecoming of the Ilocos Sur National High School (ISNHS)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Grand Centennial Alumni Homecoming of the Ilocos Sur National High School (ISNHS)

[Delivered in Vigan, Ilocos Sur, January 10, 2002]

Thank you very much Congressman Nib Baterina, outstanding alumnus of Vigan, now Ilocos Sur national high school, donor of the Balay Alumni and one of the outstanding prosecutors in the trial, in the trial that led to my becoming President of the Republic of the Philippines. Apo Engineer Padernal and the other officials of the alumni association of the Ilocos Sur National High School. I will also greet the other members of the community of Ilocos Sur national High School, the principal, the teachers, dagiti estudyante who are the future of Ilocos Sur and the Philippines. And I would like to greet the officials of the province of Ilocos Sur headed by Governor Didi Savellano, who is not an alumnus of Ilocos Sur national high school but his father was an alumnus of Ilocos Sur national high school; Didi Savellano is the father of Ilocos Sur. I will greet also Chavit Singson, who is no longer the father of Ilocos Sur but I consider him the father of EDSA Dos. I would also like to greet Congressman Eric Singson; the chairman of PCSO Honeygirl de Leon; her brother also and Chavit's brother, Jerry Singson, the vice governor of Ilocos Sur; and my partner from the national government Secretary Dinky Soliman; my other partner from the national government, Presidential Assistant Renate Diaz; and my associate in Malacañang, Undersecretary Bobby Capco; outstanding alumni who all spoke tonight; and all of you alumni of Ilocos Sur National High School who I'm sure are all outstanding as well.

I am very happy to be here with you on the occasion of your celebration of the 100th anniversary of the life of Vigan now, Ilocos Sur National High School.

I will also be celebrating an anniversary soon together with Chavit, nib, dinky and all the other major players of EDSA Dos — our first year in this administration.

In this administration, as nib said, we believe in work ethic. We believe in matching rhetoric with action. We believe in performing rather than grandstanding. And we believe in having a clear vision and that vision is to be bold in our national ambitions and win the battle against poverty within the decade.

In order to do this in the 21st century we must look for our competitive advantage in the world of global competition. And that competitive advantage is our human resources. The great Filipino worker and anybody who attends this reunion tonight will have no doubt that indeed the Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker.

And after seeing the roster of our outstanding alumni we can also say that indeed Ilocos Sur national high school is also a home of great Filipino workers no less great than any other Filipino worker from any other high school in the republic of the Philippines.

Let us examine who are some of these great Filipino workers produced by Ilocos Sur national high school.

There is one who is not here with us tonight because he got stranded doing his work — doing his work for our administration, doing his work so that we will have agricultural modernization which is one of our four main components for fighting poverty. I am talking about class 1979, dr. Leocadio Sebastian. He is not here tonight because he is doing work for me, but he sent us his representative presidential adviser on job creation in Agriculture Luisito Lorenzo. Cito and I are very proud of Leo Sebastian because the work he has done in philrice, the Philippine rice search institute, has adopted for the Philippines a very important hybrid rice from china that adopted in the Philippines, can increase the productivity of our rice farmers by two-and-a-half times. We are adopting the work of Leocadio Sebastian in 50 hectares for the year 2002. Ay, 50,000 hectares not 50 hectares, 50,000 hectares. And because of the work that Leocadio Sebastian has been doing not only has he received honors as an outstanding alumnus in the Ilocos Sur national high school he is also one of the ten outstanding young men of the Philippines for the year 2001.

I would like to ... And we look at the others that we have heard tonight truly they are great Filipino workers for Vigan, for Ilocos, for the Philippines for other parts of the world as well.

Tonight our invocation was given to us by father Joe Tacderas. He didn't make a speech about his memories but he is a great Filipino worker of god who has brought God to the people of Bolivia. An outstanding Filipino worker working among the people in Bolivia.

And we have heard of course an outstanding Filipino worker in governance who have shown good governance not only in the Philippines but in Hawaii as one of our two Ilocano state congressmen of Hawaii. And I would like to congratulate congressman Jun Abinsay for making us Filipinos proud of him.

And we talk about the great Filipino worker in other parts of the world, in other parts of the Philippines, tonight we saw an example of a great Ilocano worker who is showing governance not here in Ilocos Sur but as a city mayor of Sorsogon City, sally mandolin. I have had the opportunity of visiting sally many times in Sorsogon where she is not only the City Mayor of Sorsogon city but also the first lady of the province of Sorsogon because her husband is Governor Raul lee. And it was sally who kept nagging me about coming to your 100th anniversary. Thank you Sally for inviting me here.

And of course if we speak about the great Filipino worker I have mentioned father Tacderas, I have mentioned Leo Sebastian, I have mentioned already also if by way of thanking him for his introduction congressman Salecnib Bateria, whose mother is also the oldest living alumna of Ilocos Sur national high school from 99 years ago. We would have wanted her to be here tonight but of course if she graduated 99 years ago, I mean if she's 99 years old then that means that it's very difficult for her to be here. But she not only was a good alumna she produced a good alumnus and therefore that means that there's a good future for Ilocos Sur national high school. And we have greeted congressman Jun Abinsay.

I saved the best maybe for the last? Well, I am very grateful that Ilocos Sur national high school produced a man whom I can rely to defend the republic and that is general Narciso Abaya. General Abaya, I understand, he said who was class 64'. But he was too modest. He was class 64' valedictorian. And we learned he finished engineering but he was too modest he was number one topnotcher in the engineering exam. And he talked about his military career but he was too modest, he failed to tell us that he is a graduate of west point class 1971. A great example of an outstanding Filipino worker in defending the republic.

And so, tonight we see examples of the great Filipino worker, the great Ilocano worker, the great product of Ilocos Sur National High School.

As we celebrate 100 years we look at the next 100 years. What is the future that is the role of Ilocos Sur National High School? As these outstanding alumni have all shown an important work, important role in the life of the Philippines, of other parts of the world. What will be the role of Ilocos Sur National High School in the years to come?

I said earlier that our competitive advantage in the 21st century is our great human resources. And that is why if we are going to compete in the world of the 21st century our growth sectors are those sectors that are in the human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors. And the job of the Ilocos Sur national high school and the entire educational system of the Philippines it would be able to provide a new generation of knowledge workers who by the time they look for jobs and look for their careers they will be as outstanding as the alumni that we are honoring in this platform tonight and they will also make a great contribution as the great Filipino worker Vigan, to Ilocos Sur, to the national government and to other parts of the whole world.

The human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors are exemplified by information and communication technology and tourism. Let us take tourism first. Vigan is a natural attraction for tourism. Vigan was once known as ciudad Fernandina the capital of the entire Ilocos which used to cover Ilocos norte, Ilocos Sur, la union and even Abra the mountain province where I came from today. And being the capital for so long of Ilocos during the 400 years of the spanish period, ciudad Fernandina has been able to retain and maintain and sustain and preserve a culture that the whole world needs to see. And I am very glad that in previous times my friend Mina Gabor especially assisted the province of Ilocos Sur to put together the heritage village that should truly be an important spot for people to visit when they come to the Philippines.

Governor Chavit Singson has also told me that in his 70 hectare property where I am spending the night tonight there will soon be hopefully investments in a hotel and in a golf course so that more people will come to visit Vigan as they land from Laoag international airport.

Speaking of Laoag international airport, we now have regular flights from china — from shanghai to Laoag Philippine airlines three times a week, southern china airlines from canton to Laoag — and therefore we are able to cash in on a large, large new market, the market of china which just this past year has joined the world trade organization. China is a country with one-and-a-half billion people that has been growing at the rate of nine percent GNP for the past 20 years. Imagine what china will be in our future if we know how to make them visit the Philippines especially northern Philippines where there are only one hour or two hours away by plane. And this is what is in the future of tourism for Vigan; and that is why as our speakers were saying when their teachers used to get angry with them or hit them on the shoulder cause they didn't speak english well, it's important for us to continue our world skills in Ilocos Sur National High School so that we will make people come here feel the hospitality and feel at home as we show them the rich culture of ciudad Fernandina. That is one future that Ilocos Sur national high school should provide for.

The other future is information and communication technology. And so, I was asking Didi Savellano is this school computerized? He said yes, there are computers. Is this school wired with internet ? He doesn't know. But I think that if it is not wired with internet, as your special guest of honor that is what I would like to contribute to the future: we will transform your computers into internet sites, into a website so that the children of Vigan national high school or Ilocos Sur national high school as you graduate you will be good enough for the best in the world because it is information technology that will be the key to success in the 21st century.

And even as we prepare our high school students for the world of ICT, for the cyberworld, by helping you with your internet connection it is also important that we produce more and more knowledge workers, I.T. professionals in the years to come and for the children to enjoy going to ICT. To enjoy going to engineering like Engineer Padernal and general Abaya, they should enjoy while they are still very young, science and mathematics.

Right Engineer? That's why you became an engineer because you were good in science and math. And that's why it is important, as a part of the reform of the educational system of the Philippines, that we are strengthening science, math and english in our basic education.

And as Ilocos Sur National High School has produced such outstanding alumni that are here on our platform tonight I am sure that if you continue to devote yourselves to the requirements of the new century — Science, Math, English, Internet and History and all the graces that go with being a hospitable people — I am sure that in the next great homecoming there will be another batch of VIPs in the platform of Vigan National High School being just examples of the many great Filipino workers within our auditorium today and all over the Philippines and all over the world.

Congratulations alumni of Vigan National High School.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Grand Centennial Alumni Homecoming of the Ilocos Sur National High School (ISNHS). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231213/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7605&Itemid=38

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 5th Annual “Prospects for the Philippines’ Conference” of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Mandarin Hotel, Makati City, January 11, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Cabrera.

Bobby Tiglao; Lito Camacho; Cito Lorenzo; Manny Mogato; the other officials of FOCAP; excellencies of the diplomatic corps; other guests; Ladies and Gentlemen:

I appreciate this opportunity to address FOCAP once again. In fact, I had to redo my whole schedule. I was supposed to be in Abra today but I skipped one day in Abra so that I could be with you because you couldn't change your date so I changed my date instead for FOCAP.

I would like to congratulate you for reflecting on global competitiveness, your theme in this event. This is also a fundamental matter of national survival today.

So, how is the Philippines in this, the end of the first year of my administration situated as far as being able to compete is concerned?

First, looking back over the past year, I would say the Philippines has become more competitive in terms of investments that have come in and labor productivity. And the fact that we have survived better than many of our neighbors and trading partners in this harsh external environment.

My administration has maintained and enhanced the determination to pursue the improvement of business conditions by maintaining the bedrock of any country's competitiveness — an adherence to a long-term vision, predictable and stable rules of the game, and most of all, rules and policies that are reform-oriented.

I presented my vision for the nation almost a year ago. On January 20th 2001, after taking my oath of office as president of the Republic of the Philippines at high noon, I said:

First, we must be bold in our national ambitions so that our challenge must be that within this decade we will win the fight against poverty.

Second, we must improve moral standards in government and in society in order to lay the strong foundation for good governance.

Third, we must change the character of our politics in order to create fertile ground for true reforms. Our politics of personality and patronage must give way to a new politics of party programs and process of dialogue with the people.

Finally, I believe in leadership by example. We should promote solid traits such as work ethic and a dignified lifestyle, matching action to rhetoric, performing rather than grandstanding.

I have the confidence and the discipline to make that vision a reality. I am committed to help lead the people of the Philippines to a better life.

Fiscal discipline, good governance, market-oriented reform —these are all linked to real targets and to poverty reduction. Our fiscal discipline — and here we have secretary Camacho who supervised that — allowed the inflation rate to go down to 3.9 percent last December and the interest rates to go down to the lowest levels in seven months. And also as we read in today's papers, our bond flotation is two-and-a-half times oversubscribed with the corresponding reduction in interest rates. Thus, with this fiscal discipline, the prices of basic commodities like rice, transportation and basic medicines were stabilized. Small business especially in trade were set up so that services became the largest domestic source of growth in the past year.

Good governance starts with personal integrity and work ethic of the president herself. It radiates to the presidential family, which is why my first administrative order prohibited government agencies from dealing with my relatives on matters of contracts, supplies and appointments to positions. Which is why, though my detractors tried to pin black propaganda on my husband, my family they couldn't find concrete evidence because my family does not indulge in graft.

I am fighting waste and graft so that our poor will believe in the government and so that our small entrepreneurs will not waste their hard-earned income on pay-offs and corruption. We are taking decisive steps to fight corruption. For instance, anti-money laundering legislation; cracking down and jailing corrupt officials — and that is why I have asked again secretary Camacho, who was in turn instructed his undersecretary Cornelio Bison to investigate those allegedly involved in the smuggling of rice. There is an ongoing investigation right now in charge of finance undersecretary Gison.

Greater transparency in contracts is also another thing that we have done. Now, all contracts have to be bidden rather than negotiated. And because NEDA has gone over many of the past contracts that have come through my desk over the last 11 months. Now we have seen already how contracts should be done and NEDA now will no longer review signed contracts by the department secretaries and the O.D.A. agencies unless there are specific contracts required by law for presidential review which is the only ones that I will be devolving to NEDA.

We also are working as a government on improvements in the judicial system, but this is done under the leadership of Supreme Court Chief Justice Hilario Davide.

In addressing macro concerns, we are focused on long-term structural issues, and as I said earlier, market-oriented reforms. We started with the reform of the power sector. Last June, as you know, congress passed the power sector reform law after almost a decade since the bill was first filed. The law provides a competitive environment in the power sector which in the long run will keep prices down in power for the benefit of the poor.

Our determination to pursue market-oriented reforms is manifested by our continuing adherence to the tariff reform program and the opening up of previously protected industries to fresh investments. This has been the case in telecommunications and oil industries and the financial sector.

After addressing the power sector, we turned to other basics like infrastructure, productivity and the savings rate. On infrastructure, for instance, we finally got to an agreement on completing the metro manila M.R.T. loop. This will ease the commuting life of the poor because they can get on the M.R.T. from anywhere to anywhere else in Metro Manila.

Also, we will finally break ground on the Batangas port during the Batangas fiesta around January 19 after more than a decade of delays. That Batangas port is especially dramatic to me. It started as our project when I was undersecretary of trade and industry, a project that started when I was still undersecretary of trade and industry. And in between I became senator twice, vice president and now president, and now the project can finally be implemented. The Batangas port will be the international port for CALABARZON. It will improve transportation and logistics and reduce costs making Philippine products competitive and creating more and better paying jobs. It will decongest metro manila, and therefore also improve productivity by cutting down on the time wasted in traffic jams. This will also improve competitiveness and the lot of the working class.

As an illustration of productivity — oh! Cito Lorenzo is here. This is not because you are here. It's also already in the speech i wrote last night — we are promoting the use of an award-winning Chinese rice hybrids, one of the fruits of my state visit to china. This hybrid will increase farm productivity by two-and-a-half times. We shall be adopting this in 50,000 hectares of land all over the Philippines. This will increase the income of the farmers, who make up the majority of the poor. And to those doomsayers who say that we will be another Argentina with food riots, not after this hybrid is planted in April and harvested in September, not after all the economic reforms that have been done that have kept prices and the inflation rate down and interest rate down. No, we are very, very far from Argentina.

On promoting savings, we are strengthening the financial sector. The highlight of this — and again I congratulate Lito Camacho — is the agreement we have reached on the rehabilitation of the Philippine national bank, the linchpin of our banking system.

I am dedicated to giving back to my country the honor it bestowed on me last January 20th, and to helping ease the poverty that afflicts so many.

I have a strong team. My cabinet is impressive, honest and very professional. The international business community finds them a dream team. And they get even more impressed when i say, “yes, of course. Why are they not behaving like a dream team, after all i have seven Harvard graduates – three of them are here today — Bobbie, Cito and lit. Ah, oh! No, no. Two, Bobi and Lito. I have three Wharton alumni. One of them is here, that’s Cito. I have four veterans of Wall Street. Two of them are here, Cito and Lito. And i doubt if any other government in the world can boast of a more academically and professionally prepared team. That is why we are back on the radar screen.

Yes, the Philippines is back. When I took office I said I would focus my energy on making the economy grow despite the harsh environment of 2001. I created a plan and have made a substantial downpayment to achieve that result in the first 12 months of our administration.

The plan consists of four components: the first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; the second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity; the third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan; and the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

I have brought political stability and global relevance.

My macroeconomic policies are paying off: peso stability, low inflation, job creation. From an 11.6 percent unemployment rate a year ago, the latest unemployment figure has gone down to 9.8 percent. And from October last year — ah, no — from October 2000 to October in 2001, we have created eight hundred thousand jobs in agriculture.

Though the final accounting has not yet been completed, we will also probably meet our budget deficit goal of some 145 billion pesos instead of the projected 225 billion pesos that we started with a year ago. And we are set to balance the budget by 2006.

Our GNP. growth was 3.7 percent for the first 3 quarters of 2001 despite tough global economic times and the political turmoil I inherited.

We achieved this growth by diversifying our domestic product base. Knowing that we could not count on exports for 2001 because of the world slowdown, we strengthened the domestic market and achieved growth in services, as I said, especially trade, also in transportation and communications, agriculture, and starting last October, the Malampaya gas project which brought also a windfall of oil, and starting this year, the privatization of NAPOCOR.

We have taken terrorism head on in the Philippines, in the region with our alliance with our neighbors — Malaysia and Indonesia, and with the global anti-terrorist alliance.

We have neutralized the rash of kidnappings. This was achieved by carrying out the following recommendations of the Filipino-Chinese community:

First they said, we should implement the death penalty for convicted kidnappers to strike fear in kidnap-for-ransom syndicates and show the government's resolve to deal with the kidnapping;

They also suggested — and we're doing it — that we work with the Chinese government to fight kidnapping syndicates that are composed of Chinese nationals;

They also suggested that we rid the uniformed services of scalawags and reorganize the police. That has been done by secretary Joey Lina and PNP Chief Leonard Mendoza;

They suggested too that we should resurrect the community-oriented police system, which means police presence in the neighborhoods;

And they suggested — which we did — that we should provide the National Anti-Crime Commission with the necessary equipment, including helicopters and surveillance facilities, and give it the budget to enable it to function effectively. This includes the injection of 1 billion pesos for the Philippine national police which largely implements the directives of the NACC against kidnap-for-ransom syndicates;

They suggested — and we did — that we modernize the police organization. Basically we have improved the screening process for policemen applicants. Now, only college graduates can be admitted to the police force. And we have just hired 1,700 new policemen whom we introduced to the public during the Christmas shopping season. 1,700 new policemen, all of them college graduates. We are also expanding the programs with Hong Kong and the U.S.A. To hire foreign experts using the use of ODA. to train the police force;

And we have set up — upon the recommendation again of the Chinese community — emergency response centers to assist victims and their relatives. The anti-kidnapping task force, in fact, has put up a nerve center right in Binondo.

We have also implemented a reward system for people who give information about kidnapping. Just as i set up a reward system for Abu Sayyaf leaders, which has resulted in many captures and killing, so that where the Abu Sayyaf were thousands before they are just hundreds now. I also made a total of a hundred million available as a reward pool for the capture of kidnappers.

And we have mobilized the peace and order councils more actively. And we have organized community-based self defense units, which are authorized to carry firearms and effect citizens' arrest by accrediting them as special police deputies.

We have asked the media — and I would like to ask again. Just for those few who might have not gotten the request earlier — not to report news about live kidnapping cases, because we must ensure that no leak comes out of the PNP or the media so as not to jeopardize the safety of the victims still in the hands of kidnappers.

And finally, using the national anti-crime commission as the center, we have established closer coordination among all intelligence agencies so that we can maximize all mechanisms of the state to identify and locate kidnap-for-ransom groups and other criminal syndicates, which is why the December 30 anniversary of the December 30 bombing of the year 2000 had no anniversary blast because all those intended explosives were discovered by intelligence before D-Day.

I am charting a new course with the results of last year. I believe we are sailing into calmer waters. But much work remains to be done: root out terrorism; work with the international community.

Return the reputation of manila and the Philippines as a welcoming and safe place in which to live and do business.

Increase the benefits from our new global relevance and engagement after years of being isolated and adrift.

We will continue our long-term structural reform.

Preparing our growth sectors of the future enables us to tap the opportunities of the 21st century.

We are promoting fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful because our competitive advantage is our human resources. The Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker. The world knows this. We are proud of it. Thus, we are promoting human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors. One of them is information and communications technology or ICT, ICT. Will be the linchpin for our drive for sustainable long-term growth.

Terrorism is a drain. I will root it out at its source so that we can live in peace and build a safe, productive society.

Under the economic philosophy of free enterprise, the way to fight poverty is to create jobs, not destroy them. To continue to create jobs, we will attract investments. We will continue to attract investments including foreign investments.

We will pursue new initiatives to weed out corruption. Cabinet secretaries will have to deliver tangible results within 12 months after my State of the Nation Address, or 6 months from now in fighting graft.

And so this is what we have done this past eleven months. These are some of what we intend to do in the next 12 months. And i want to thank you for allowing me to put forward my vision, my plan and my thoughts for the New Year.

And now, let us continue our dialogue the way i know you enjoy it best – no holds barred in the open forum.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 5th Annual "Prospects for the Philippines' Conference of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231154/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7604&Itemid=38

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 5th Annual Conference of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 5th Annual Conference of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP)

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Mandarin Hotel, Manila, January 11, 2002]

Which is why though my detractors tried to pin black propaganda on my husband, my family, they couldn't find concrete evidence, because my family does not indulge in graft.

I am fighting waste and graft so that out poor will believe in the government, and so that our small entrepreneurs will not waste their hard earned income on payoffs and corruption.

We are taking decisive steps to fight corruption. For instance, Anti-Money Laundering legislation, cracking down and jailing corrupt officials. And that is why I have asked, again, Secretary Camacho, who, in turn, has instructed his Undersecretary, Cornelio Hizon, to investigate those allegedly involved in the smuggling of rice. There is an ongoing investigation right now in charge of Finance Undersecretary Hizon.

Greater transparency in contracts is also another thing that we have done. Now all contracts have to be bidden rather than negotiated. And because NEDA has gone over many of the past contracts that have come through my desk over the last eleven months, now we have seen already how contracts should be done. And NEDA now will no longer review signed contracts by the department secretaries and the ODA agencies unless there are specific contracts required by law for presidential review, which are the only ones that I will be devolving to NEDA.

We are also working as a government on improvements in the judicial system, so this is done under the leadership of Supreme Court Chief Justice Hilario Davide.

In addressing macro concerns, we are focused on long term structural issues and, as I said earlier, market oriented reform. We started with the reform of the power sector.

Last June, as you know, congress passed the Power Sector Reform Law, after almost a decade since the bill was first filed.

The law provides a competitive environment in the power sector, which in the long run will keep prices down in power for the benefit of the poor.

Our determination to pursue market-oriented reforms is manifested by our continuing adherence to the tariff reform program, and the opening up of previously protected industries to fresh investments. This has been the case in telecommunications and oil industries and the financial sector.

After addressing the power sector, we turned to other basics like infrastructure, productivity and the savings rate.

On infrastructure, for instance, we finally got to an agreement on completing the Metro Manila MRT loop. This will ease the commuting life of the poor, because they can get on the MRT from anywhere, to anywhere else in Metro Manila. Also, we will finally break ground on the Batangas Port during the Batangas Fiesta around January 19, after more than decade of delays. That Batangas Port is especially dramatic to me. It started as our project when I was still Undersecretary of Trade and Industry. And in-between, I became Senator twice, Vice President, and now President. And now the project can finally be implemented.

The Batangas Port will be the international port for CALABARZON. It will improve transportation and logistics, and reduce costs, making Philippine products competitive and creating more and better paying jobs. It will decongest Metro Manila and, therefore, also improve productivity by cutting down on the time wasted in traffic jams. This will also improve competitiveness and the lot of the working class.

As an illustration of productivity, we are promoting the use of an award winning Chinese rice hybrid, one of the fruits of my state visit to China. This hybrid would increase farm productivity by two and half times. We shall be adopting this in 50,000 hectares of land all over the Philippines. This will increase the income of the farmers who make up the majority of the poor. And to those doomsayers who say that we will be another Argentina, with food riots, not after this hybrid is planted in April and harvested in September; not after all the economic reforms that have been done that have kept prices and the inflation rate down, and interest rates down. No, we are very very far from Argentina.

On promoting savings, we are strengthening the financial sector. The highlight of this — and, again, I congratulate Lito Camacho — is the agreement we have reached on the rehabilitation of the Philippine National Bank, the linchpin of our banking system.

I am dedicated to giving back to my country the honor it bestowed on me last January 20th and to helping ease the poverty that afflicts so many. I have a strong team. My cabinet is impressive, honest, and very professional.

The international business community finds them a dream team. And they get even more impressed when I say, yes, of course, why are they not behaving like a dream team? After all, I have seven Harvard graduates. Three of them are here today. Bobbie, Cito and Lito. Oh, no, no. Two. Bobbie and Lito. I have three Wharton alumni. One of them is here, that's Cito. I have four veterans of Wall Street; two of them are here — Cito and Lito. And I doubt if any other government in the world can boast of a more academically and professionally prepared team. That is why we are back on the radar screen. Yes, the Philippines is back.

When I took office, I said I would focus my energy on making the economy grow despite the harsh environment of 2001. I created a plan and have made a substantial downpayment to achieve that result in the first twelve months of our administration.

The plan consists of four components:

The first, is an economic philosophy of Free Enterprise appropriate to the 21st century.

The second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity;

The third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan;

And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

I have brought political stability and global relevance. My microeconomic policies are paying off: peso stability, low inflation, and job creation.

From an 11.6 percent unemployment rate a year ago, the latest unemployment figure has gone down to 9.8 percent.

And from October 2000 to October in 2001, we have created 800,000 jobs in agriculture.

Though the final accounting has not yet been completed, we will also probably meet our budget deficit goal of some hundred forty five billion pesos, instead of the projected two hundred twenty five billion pesos that we started with a year ago. And we are set to balance the budget by 2006.

Our GNP growth of 3.7 percent for the first three-quarters of 2001, despite tough global economic times and the political turmoil I inherited. We achieved this growth by diversifying our domestic product base, knowing that we could not count on exports for 2001 because of the world slowdown. We strengthened the domestic market and achieved growth in services, as I said, especially trade; also in transportation and communications, agriculture. And starting last October, the Malampaya Gas Project, which brought also a windfall of oil; and starting this year, the privatization of NAPOCOR.

We have taken terrorism head on in the Philippines, in the region, with our alliance with our neighbors –Malaysia and Indonesia, and with the global anti terrorist alliance.

We have neutralized the rash of kidnappings. This was achieved by carrying out the following recommendations of the Filipino-Chinese community.

First they said, we should implement the death penalty for convicted kidnappers to strike fear in kidnap-for-ransom syndicates and show the government's resolve to deal with the kidnapping.

They also suggested — and we are doing it — that we work with the Chinese government to fight kidnapping syndicates that are composed of Chinese nationals.

They also suggested that we rid the uniformed services of scalawags and reorganize the police. That has been done by Secretary Joey Lina and PNP Chief Leandro Mendoza.

They suggested too that we should resurrect the community oriented police system, which means police presence in the neighborhoods. And they suggested, which we did, that we should provide the national anti crime commission with the necessary equipment, including helicopters and surveillance facilities, and give it the budget to enable it to function effectively. This includes the injection of P1 billion for the Philippine National Police, which largely implements the directives of the NACC against kidnap-for-ransom syndicates.

They suggested – and we did –that we modernize the police organization. Basically, we have improved the screening process for policemen applicants. Now, only college graduates can be admitted to the police force. And we have just hired 1,700 new policemen, whom we introduced to the public during the Christmas shopping season. One thousand seven hundred new policemen, all of them college graduates.

We are also expanding the programs with Hong Kong and the U.S.A. to hire foreign experts, using the use of ODA to train the police force. And we have set up, upon the recommendation, again, of the Chinese community, emergency response centers to assist victims and the relatives. The anti- kidnapping task force, in fact, has put up a nerve center right in Binondo.

We have also implemented a reward system for people who give information about kidnapping. Just as I set up a reward system for Abu Sayyaf leaders, which has resulted in many captures and killings, so that where the Abu Sayyaf were thousands before, they are just hundreds now. I also made a total of a hundred million pesos available as a reward pool for the capture of kidnappers.

And we have mobilized the peace and order councils more actively, and we have organized community based self defense units, which are authorized to carry firearms and effect citizens arrests by accrediting them as special police deputies. We have asked the media — and I would like to ask again. Just for those few who might not have gotten the request earlier — not to report news about live kidnapping cases, because we must ensure that no lead comes out of the PNP or the media, so as not to jeopardize the safety of the victims still in the hands of kidnappers.

And finally, using the National Anti Crime Commission as the center, we have established closer coordination among all intelligence agencies, so that we can maximize all mechanisms of the state to identify and locate kidnap-for-ransom groups and other criminal syndicates; which is why the December 30 anniversary of the December 30 bombing of the year 2000 had no anniversary blast, because all those intended explosives were discovered by intelligence before the day.

I am charting a new course with the results of last year. I believe we are sailing into calmer waters, but much work remains to be done. Root out terrorism, work with the international community, return the reputation of Manila and the Philippines as a welcoming and safe place in which to live and do business.

Increase the benefits from our new global relevance and engagement after years of being isolated and adrift.

We will continue our long-term structural reforms. Preparing our growth sectors of the future enables us to tap the opportunities of the 21st century. We are promoting fast growing industries where high value jobs are most plentiful, because our competitive advantage is our human resources.

The Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker. The world knows this. We are proud of it. Thus, we are promoting human resource intensive, skills intensive service sectors. One of them is information and communications technology, or ICT. ICT will be the linchpin for our drive for sustainable long-term growth.

Terrorism is a drain. I will root it out at its source so that we can live in peace and build a safe productive society.

Under the economic philosophy of Free Enterprise, the way to fight poverty is to create jobs, not destroy them. To continue to create jobs, we will attract investments. We will continue to attract investments including foreign investments. We will pursue new initiatives to weed out corruption. Cabinet Secretaries will have to deliver tangible results within twelve months, after my State of the Nation Address, or six months from now in fighting graft. And so this is what we have done these past eleven months. These are some of what we intend to do in the next twelve months.

And I want to thank you for allowing me to put forward my vision, my plan and my thoughts for the New Year.

And now let us continue our dialogue the way I know you enjoy it best. No holds barred in the open forum.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 5th Annual Conference of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231204/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7603&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Philippine Forum 2002

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Philippine Forum 2002

[Delivered at the Conservatory, Manila Peninsula Hotel, Makati City, January 12, 2002]

Thank you.

Thank you Mar.

And to all of you. I'm very happy to have this chance to address you because the last time you invited me, the schedule got mixed up. Somewhere along the way the time slot I accepted, overlapped with the time slot that President Estrada accepted. So you had to choose which speaker you wanted to listen to. Anyway, I'm glad that I made it at last this time because since he replaced me as the speaker then it had to take EDSA 2 for me to replace him as the speaker in front of you today.

And indeed I appreciate this opportunity to address you on the eve of the first anniversary of EDSA Dos. This past year we are dedicated to restoring moral authority in our government because we owe this restoration to the Filipino youth, because the Filipino youth was the major instrument of People Power II.

I think if there was one difference between People Power 1 and People Power 2, it was the dominance of the young people in EDSA during EDSA Dos.

But I believe most of you if not all of you were in EDSA Dos. After all you are also young, you are the new generation of leaders. That's why your nickname in fact is better known not as what's this Philippine foundation — whatever it is — but you're known as the successor generation, that's your famous name. Well, I think I'm slightly older than you are because I'm a part of the baby boomer generation. But many of you were Martial Law babies or Martial Law toddlers. And all over the world, we — my generation and yours, the postwar babies, including both the baby boomers and the Martial Law children — continue to have the greatest voice, the best ideas and the most energetic drive for change. This successor generation has started to rule the 21st century.

And I know, as I said, we owe it to you the leaders that came in the aftermath of EDSA Dos. We owe it to the young — to the successor generation — to provide moral authority.

Moral authority starts with the personal integrity and work ethic of the President herself, and it radiates to the Presidential Family. Which is why my first Administrative Order prohibited government agencies from dealing with my relatives on matters of contracts, supplies, and appointments to positions. That is why no matter how hard they try to destroy me by trying to destroy my husband, hard as they try to come up with concrete evidence they can't find any because there is none and my family does not indulge in graft and corruption.

And beyond the Presidential Personal Family, the moral authority also radiates to the official family, especially the cabinet. And you know that I have a strong team because many of you belong to that team. My cabinet is impressive, honest and very professional. It is a blend of youth and experience because youth does not have mean inexperience. In fact many of you are young but many of you have extensive professional experience. And my cabinet consists of men and women of integrity and competence because they were recruited on the basis of track record, reputation, and dedication.

As I said many of them come from you, I was reading your list and I saw the Office of the President, department of this, department of that — we have of course notably, the founder of the Philippine Forum Foundation, Mar Roxas who's Secretary of Trade and Industry. We have Cito Lorenzo, my Presidential Adviser for the Million Jobs. Then there is Cerge Remonde who is the Head of Channel 13. Then there is Alex Magno, Director of the Development Bank of the Philippines. And I'm only looking at the first row. Well, the rest are hiding. And I always like to say that in this group I that there's so many of you in this group who are like that it's probably not as impressive you. But its certainly impressive to the world international community when I say that I have seven Harvard graduates, three Wharton alumni, and two of them are Cito and Mar; and four veterans of Wall Street. That's the two of them again Cito and Mar. And I have always said I doubt if any other government in the world can boast of a more academically and professionally prepared team.

We, my team and I, are fighting waste and graft so that the poor will believe in the government and so that our small entrepreneurs will not waste their hard-earned income, not to mention our large entrepreneurs on pay-offs and corruption. We are taking decisive steps to fight corruption. For instance, we took an important step in the promotion of good governance by passing a law to penalize money laundering, by cracking down on and moving to jail corrupt officials, such as those allegedly involved in the smuggling of rice and the great escape — there is an ongoing investigation in fact of that under the charge of Finance Undersecretary Cornelio Hizon upon the instruction I gave to Secretary Camacho; we are moving for greater transparency in contracts, now contracts have to be bid rather than negotiated; and we work for improvements in the judicial system, for this one is being done under the lead of the Supreme Court with Chief Justice Hilario Davide being in charge of that — that is his area and we'll just support where we can support. Also, we have computerized bidding in public works to substitute the human element with a fairly incorruptible electronic element. The result has been honest and faster contract awards.

Let us review what else we have already done, and where we are.

In 2001, we began a new a war against poverty, which we hope the country will win within the decade.

The Philippines is back. When I took office I said I would focus my energy on making the economy grow despite the harsh economic environment of 2001. My team and I created a plan and we have made a substantial down payment to achieve that result of being back in the radar screen in the first 12 months.

The Philippines resolutely and resiliently battled the global crisis. Our economic survival provided the much-needed momentum to press on now to press on with our battle to win against poverty. We have firmly stabilized the domestic political situation while continuing to mop up residual problems of law and order, and the mopping up that we are donning is by carrying out the following recommendations of the Filipino-Chinese community:

One, implement the death penalty to convicted kidnappers to strike fear to kidnap for ransom syndicates and show the government's resolve to deal with the kidnapping menace.

Two, work with the Chinese government to fight kidnapping syndicates composed of Chinese nationals.

Three, rid the uniformed services of scalawags and reorganize the police.

Four, resurrect the community-oriented police system that used to be there. And we did that by hiring 1,700 new policemen to be able to have a presence in the community. It was kind a commonsensical though I did spend some time studying how formerly crime-ridden cities like New York and Houston were able to turn around their reputation and one very, very simple solution was to increase the number of policemen. Well, simple for them not so simple for us because we have to look for the funds. But because of political will and because I have a great balancer in DBM Secretary Emy Boncodin we found a billion pesos to be able to finance the additional requirements of the Philippine National Police.

Also not just the Philippine national police the National Anti-Crime Commission were providing them with the necessary equipment, including helicopters and surveillance facilities, and giving them the budget to enable them to function effectively. As I said one billion pesos mainly for the Philippine National Police which largely is the implementing agency of the directives of the NACC against criminal syndicates.

Also we have modernized the police organization. Not only did we hire 1,700 policemen but also we have improved the screening process for policemen applicants so that now all those 1,700 had to be college graduates. Now only college graduates can be admitted to the police force. We introduced them to the general public last, I think, it was the first shopping day of Christmas, early December and in fact the launching was in one of the shopping malls so that our people would feel secure when they go shopping for their Christmas gifts. And as far as these policemen are concerned as well as the present crop of policemen, the older crop of policemen, we're expanding the training programs with Hong Kong police and the U.S.A. to hire experts to train the police force.

When I go to the U.K. at the end of this month I will also work out with Prime Minister Tony Blair, the Assistant of Scotland Yard, for additional training for our policemen.

We have set up emergency response centers to assist victims and their relatives especially a nerve center, which the anti-kidnapping task force has put up right in Binondo.

And we have implemented a reward system for people who give information about kidnapping. Just as I set up a reward for Abu Sayyaf leaders, which has resulted in many captures, congress has now made, and I thank congress, Nery, I didn't mention you among my official family because you're constitutionally independent. But I'd like to thank Nery Sacosta and his fellow congressmen because they made now a total of 250 million pesos available as a reward pool for the capture of kidnappers and other major criminals.

We have also mobilized the peace and order councils more actively. Even as we speak Joey Lina right now is presiding over a National Peace and Order Council Conference. And we have organized community-based self-defense units, which are authorized to carry firearms and effect citizens' arrest by accrediting them as Special Police Deputies.

And we have asked media not to report news about live kidnapping cases and to ensure that no leak comes out of the PNP so as not to jeopardize the safety of victims that are still in the hands of kidnappers.

Using the National Anti-Crime Commission as the center, we have established closer coordination among all intelligence agencies so that we can maximize all mechanisms of the state to identify and locate kidnap-for-ransom groups as well as other syndicates. I think it's a tribute to how good our intelligence is that we were able to foil any dreams of anybody to do a remake of the December 30, 2000 terrorist bombing.

And in government in general we have infused, to a great degree, common sense, discipline, and accountability in management and public service. And we are very fortunate that leaders from government, the private sector and civil society have committed to undertake a concerted effort to combat poverty and accelerate economic development. And many of those who have gone together and made the decision together are here in this hall this afternoon. Many of you were there when we forged a socio-economic pact during the National Socio-Economic Summit last December.

We are very grateful — I think we should be very grateful — that our GNP growth rate was 3.7 percent for the first three quarters of 2001 despite tough global economic times and the political turmoil that we inherited, thereby surpassing the predictions of the private sector, maybe some of you here. And this 3.7 percent GNP growth rate, in the setting of our recession in many of our neighbors and trading partners, is indeed a significant turnaround, considering that less than a year ago, our economy was about to go into a tailspin in the wake of political instability.

And today, foreign direct investment levels have also exceeded targets despite the global slowdown. Investments reached a 132 billion by the end of November against a projection of a 100 billion for the entire year. These investments went mostly to telecommunications and manufacturing.

In addition, leading international credit rating agencies and multilateral bodies such as NEXI, JBIC, Fitch, The World Bank, and the Asian Development Bank have endorsed our credit worthiness. J.P. Morgan reports that the prevailing decline in risk aversion has allowed the continuous improvement in economic fundamentals in the Philippines to finally shine through.

And what better seal of good housekeeping can there be than the two-and-a-half-pound oversubscription of our latest bond floatation, bringing down the spurge to almost nothing as international financing goes. And tomorrow you'll probably see a banner headline in one or two newspapers about layman brothers signing an MOU with the Department of Finance to bring in a hundred billion dollars of special purpose funds into the Philippines.

I just read an article today, I think its either in the Wall Street Journal or the Financial Times that said that our strong stand against international terrorism has made many of these international financial institutions line up to help our banking industry. Well, I told some of this bankers, it also helps that we are not in distress like the other countries with their very, very high 40 percent, 50 percent percentage of NPLs — we're certainly not anywhere near that. So we are good risk for these special purposes funds.

Why? Because of fiscal discipline. We have stood by fiscal discipline. Though the final accounting has not yet been completed, we will probably meet our budget deficit goal of some a 145 billion pesos instead of the projected 225 billion that we started with a year ago. And we are set to balance the budget by year 2006 — a balanced budget that is the key to our goal of reducing poverty and promoting economic development.

A factor in this equation, the staining of the budget deficit, is the fact that the Bureau of Internal Revenue exceeded its targets from January to November by 400 million pesos compared to being way below target in the middle of the year. Why? As a result of its anti-corruption reforms. That's how it was able to catch up.

Our efforts to achieve a balanced budget also includes new approaches to revenue collection, such as Documentary Stamp Metering and Tax Audit Acceleration.

And on my part personally, I am dedicated to giving back to our country the honor that it bestowed upon me last January 20, and helping ease the poverty that afflicts so many.

Our macroeconomic policies are paying off: peso stability, low inflation — yes, 3.9 percent last December, the lowest in the last 16 months — and of course job creation — from an 11.6 unemployment rate a year ago, the latest unemployment figure has gone down to 9.8 percent.

And I said I hope that we have million jobs created in agriculture. Well, the NSO statistics show that between October in year 2000 and October last year when we were nine months in the government actually there has already been about 800,000 jobs created in agriculture.

We have revitalized ties with our global partners. We have informed the international community of our steady gains, of the stability and viability of our political, social and economic reforms. We have secured commitments of bilateral and multilateral support for our domestic efforts.

Given all that, I think we can approach the new year with a solid expectation that, as I said yesterday in FOCAP, we are sailing into calmer waters.

Nonetheless, much work remains to be done:

Root out terrorism; work with the international community.

And that is why we have 27 U.S. Officers in Zamboanga today and maybe we'll have another hundred coming in the middle of January.

Return the reputation of Manila and the Philippines as a welcoming and safe place in which to live and do business.

Increase the benefits from our new global relevance and engagement after years of being isolated and adrift.

But the stage has been set for the times to get better.

To continue to create jobs, of course, we will attract investments.

To encourage strength in the domestic economy, we are looking at bringing new financing vehicles to small and medium-scale enterprises and the housing sector.

There are big-ticket items where we are unlocking bottlenecks to spur additional sources of domestic demand: the PNB, the National Steel Corporation — which is Mar's special assignment, in fact he will be leaving for Singapore and then on Kuala Lumpur to talk to the Maharta which is the ATP of Malaysia which owns part of National Steel; and I have instructed him that it is time, either to foreclose or for the various creditors to get together to form a special focus vehicle to take over the assets and manage the assets of the National Steel Corporation. We are also unlocking the bottlenecks in the MRT. Now they will begin to do the construction, not to get the financing, to do the construction to close the loop of the MRT in Metro Manila. And the Batangas port, where on the Fiesta Day of Batangas we will finally be breaking ground on the Batangas port after so many years of waiting. For me it's a special occasion because the project started in my planning office when I was Undersecretary of Trade and Industry. I had to become Senator two times, Vice President and now President to be able to see it start getting off the ground.

And as I mentioned earlier or alluded to earlier, we are unlocking the bottlenecks for the asset management system for the housing sector. Well you are finance men a lot of you so I might as well share you what's the dilemma here. Well, of course when you have an asset management company and you buy non-performing assets you do it with a discount. Question: how much is the discount? Since we have a number of those interested, layman brothers, ... Well, let the market determine the discount. The discount, of course, means that eventually in the books or the pension funds you will finally face the reality of how much the assets have depreciated. And because of that what will happen is that there are statutory limitations and ratios on how much the pension funds can invest related to their assets that reduces their flexibility to do their investments. Well, anyway in any case these special purpose funds will require legislation for many of the incentives. So I'm hoping, anyway Nery's here, that soon congress will pass the Securitization Law; and maybe, why not throw in for good measure, an increase in the flexibility of the pension funds with regard to the ratios and what they can invest so that we can liquefy the assets for housing and at the same time still allow the pension funds to do their investment so that they can assure our workers who are paying their premiums of their pensions and retirement benefits and salary loans for a long time to come.

Another bottleneck that we are trying to work out — I see many Cebuanos here — Cerge and Aboitizes, who else? Tommy is here, oh great, well, he knows about this, the water system of Cebu.

In agriculture, Cito take a bow, the rice hybrid coming from China, and developed for Philippine conditions by Philrice, will, through the leadership of Cito, hopefully increase the yield in farms by two-and-a-half times. That is certainly going to help, that will help feed our people and increase the income of our farmers.

The Philippines is also becoming a hub for Information and Communications Technology, thanks to our millions of educated, English-speaking people, and successor generation types like Cynthia Namon. Our strategy for human capacity building is to transform our labor force into the new economy workforce. Our competitive advantage is our human resources. I like to say that the Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker. The world knows this and we are proud of it.

Every initiative, every new measure or program to which we in the government have committed ourselves, is a building block for the broader pillars of national strategic consensus. These pillars, as I have many times articulated, are the following:

The first is an Economic Philosophy of Free Enterprise appropriate to the 21st century.

The second pillar is a Modernized Agricultural Sector, with that hybrid and other things, founded on social equity.

The third pillar is a Social Bias Toward the Disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. And so I'm so keen on liquefying the funds for housing.

And the fourth pillar is to Raise the Moral Standards of Government and Society.

The problems we confront are many and diverse but, as we showed in EDSA, our greatest strength is our people power. People power to reform government. People power to make the economy move forward. And as we saw in EDSA that people power was powered by the young. And even in the business sector it is powered by you, the successor generation.

As the thinkers, achievers, and leaders who will navigate our country in the new millennium, I call on you, the successor generation, to stay with us in our bold aspiration to win the battle against poverty by tapping the new opportunities of the new economy because that is what you are: you, the successor generation are the new economy.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Philippine Forum 2002. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231147/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7601&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the groundbreaking ceremony of the Batangas Port
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the groundbreaking ceremony of the Batangas Port

[Delivered at the Foreign Berth Area, Batangas Port, Batangas City, January 16, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Bebot Alvarez sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin.

I would like to greet the people of Batangas sa pamumuno ni Governor Dodo Mandanas, Happy Founding Anniversary ng probinsya ng Batangas. Gusto ko ring batiin ang mga taga-Batangas City sa pamumuno ni Mayor Eddie Dimakuha, Happy Fiesta sa Batangas City.

Gusto kong batiin yung iba't-ibang mga Governor na narito ng region 4, nandito si Governor Reyes, Carmencita; nandito si Governor Reyes, Joel; si Governor Ong; si Governor Marasigan; si Governor Madrona; si Governor Enverga; at yung adopted son ng Region 4, si Governor Vic Magsaysay ng Zambales.

Batiin ko rin ang iba't-ibang mga Ccabinet members na narito: nandito si Secretary Leony Montemayor — o umalis na ba siya — ayan pa. At nandito, gusto kong makilala, at nandito rin si Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process, si Eddie Ermita. At gusto kong makilala ninyo yung Presidential Adviser for Southern Tagalog, si Secretary Cesar Sarino. Saan siya? I would also like to greet our friends from Japan: Shimitsu, JBIC, Japan Embassy. And yung ating mga Congress, isa lang yata nanditong Congresswoman, si Vicky lang ang nandito, si Vicky Reyes hindi siya Congresswoman dito; Congresswoman siya doon sa isang lugar ng Batangas na marami ring industriya. Ngunit ang Batangas port ay hindi nasa loob ni Congresswoman Vicky Reyes sa kanyang distrito, yung mga industriya sa kanyang distrito ay makikinabang sa Batangas International Port. Wala rito si congressman Frank Perez dahil nasa Hawaii, wala rito yung tatay niya dahil may hearing sa Commission on Appointments.

Ngayon gusto ko ring batiin si President FF Cruz ng FF Cruz and company, sila ang magpapatayo nitong ating port na ito.

At gusto kong batiin happy birthday BOI Governor Tony Leviste na malaki ang ipinaglaban niya para yung mga bottlenecks ng Batangas port ay mawala.

I would like to greet our friends from Asian terminal; yung mga punong lunsod ng bawat bayan sa probinsya ng Batangas; yung ating Southern Luzon Commander, si Major General Ernesto Carolina; yung ating regional director ng PNP, si General Reyes — yan ang caretaker ni Nur Misuari dito; at saka ating mga guro na nandito, susi ng kinabukasan dahil sila ang magpo-produce ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Binati ko na kayo lahat happy Batangas Foundation Day. Happy Fiesta ng Batangas City. Happy Birthday kay Tony Leviste.

Para sa akin itong araw na ito napaka-importante. So long have I waited for Batangas International Port to begin dahil yung mga pag-aaral na ito nagsimula pa sa Department of Trade and Industry nung ako ay Secretary pa... Ay city mayor Arnan Panaligan, batiin ko rin dahil yung mga constituents niya yon ang karamihan na nakatanggap nitong ating proyekto dahil sa proyektong ito, ito ay nanggagaling, sabi ni Al Cusi na binabati ko rin, doon sa aking instructions sa Philippine Ports Authority na porsiyento ng kanilang kita ay dapat pumupunta sa direct pro-poor programs hindi yung trickle down. Kaya itong mga push cart na ito ay nanggaling sa programa nating yon, at maraming nakikinabang ay yung mga nagtatrabaho doon sa kabila naman, sa pantalan sa Calapan port yung mga constituents si Al Cusi.

At meron diyan mga nandiyan na mga may tatak, mga teachers dito, sabi ko Al sigurado mo makikinabang sila dito ha. Baka akala mo humahawak lang sila doon. Kaya sabi ko lahat ng humahawak kailangan iuwi yon so make sure na talagang yon ang beneficiaries.

So anyway, so long have I waited. At dahil nung ako ay Undersecretary for Policy and Planning ng Department of Trade and Industry, noon pa noon 1989 ginawa yung programa para magkaroon ng Batangas International Port at yung aking Kagawaran — yung Office of Policy and Planning — yon ang gumawa nitong proposal para dito sa Batangas Port na ito. Linakad na namin sa JBIC, linakad ko sa maraming mga sakit ng ulo at sakit ng loob at sakit ng puso — unang-una yung mga nakatira sa port area na kinailangan na lilipat sila sa ibang lugar para magkaroon ng lugar dito sa pantalan. At sa wakas, pagkatapos ng matagal, ay nalipat din dahil meron mga pangako na inasahan na matutulungan sila.

Kanina nung nanggaling ako sa helicopter sakay sa kotse tinanong ko kay Governor Mandanas, kumusta na yung mga kinailangan lumipat dahil nga yung tinitirahan, tinitirikan ang mga barung-barung maliliit na bahay ay gagamitin sa pantalan. Nakalipat nga sabi ni Governor Mandanas pero meron pang ilang utang ang Philippine Ports Authority na livelihood na hinihintay pa nila. Eh sabi ni Governor Mandanas bilang tulong naman niya sa national government dahil siya ay buong-buong sumusuporta, siya na raw ang sasagot at tutulong sa livelihood na hinihintay nitong mga inilipat. Anyway, sa dami ng mga, yon ang unang-una lamang at para sa akin pinaka legitimo. Kasi lahat nito ay para sa kinabubuti ng mahihirap. Kayong mga mahihirap dapat hindi nila akalain na sila ay sinasakripisyo para sa kaunlaran, dapat nararamdaman nila ang pakinabang.

Pero maraming-maraming mga naabutang bureaucratic controversies, red tape, right of way, problema sa bidding, problema sa interpretation bidding rules, problema sa ... Hanggang sa ako ay pangulo, sabi ko hindi ba nasisisimulan yung Batangas International Port? 2001 na ngayon, 1989? 12 years.

So nung nangyari yung world economic slow down nung first half of 2001 at nakita ko hihina ang exports natin, sabi ko sa aking mga economic managers, papaano natin mapapanatili ang angat ng ating ekonomiya kung bagsak ang ating exports? Hanapan natin ng paraan na yung domestic demand ay aangat. Kaya yung unang panahon, yung unang half year o yung unang seven months inasikaso ang small and medium enterprises, agriculture at yung mga squatters na pwedeng bilhin yung lupang tinitirikan nila. Nagtagumpay yon kasi nung unang lumabas yung mga ating growth rate, yung ibang mga bansa nagsimula na ng recession angat pa rin tayo. Nagulat ang buong mundo. Tapos nangyari yung September 11. Sabi ko sa cabinet members tama yung ating strategy noon: nag-focus tayo sa domestic demand pero hindi natin pwedeng taasan ang gaston ng gobyerno dahil hindi tayo pwedeng taasan ng deficit natin dahil hihirapan ang ating bansa. Ngayon September 11 mas lalung hindi nakakasiguro ang ating bansa. Eh anong gagawin pa natin para lumabas yong domestic demand pero hindi dadagdag ang gastos ng gobyerno? Ano yung mga naka budget nakabinbin sa red tape na ilalabas natin? Big ticket items ng investment, o big ticket items ng infrastructure. At binilang yon, may mga kalahating dosena na sabi ko bibigyan natin ng espesyal na pansin para yung bottleneck ay maa-unclog para magsimula yung proyekto para magbigay ng domestic demand sa kabila pa ng long term fruits ng kaunlaran.

So nakatukoy, Philippine National Bank rehabilitation. Salamat sa panginoon naayos na, nagkasundo na sa Philippine National Bank rehabilitation.

National Steel Corporation doon sa Iligan, si Secretary Mar Roxas ay nandoon ngayon sa Malaysia upang pag-usapan kung papaano gumawa ng either foreclosure o kaya yung asset management company na hahawak ng assets ng National Steel para mapatakbo.

Yung MRT loop doon sa Metro Manila, may maliit na bahagi doon hindi nakakasarado tuloy yung loop ng MRT. Sa wakas, hindi ba Secretary Bebot Alvarez, nagkasundo na doon sa gagawa — pagkatapos ng mahabang kontrobersya magsisimula na sa ilang buwan yung pagtatayo at pagbubuo nung MRT.

At yung housing, yung housing na napakalaki ang multiplier effect — at ang dami-dami natin mga small workers na naghahanap ng housing pero sa daming taon na yung housing at mahina ang bayad marami na ang perang naipit — kailangan ng asset management company na bibili ng papeles para umikot muli yung pera para sa housing.

Nandiyan yung Layman Brothers nung isang araw at yon ang kanilang gagawin; pati Sir Bruce one billion dollars na investments para sa housing para umikot uli.

At binanggit ko National steel, Philippine National Bank, closing the MRT loop, housing, at yung Batangas port. Kaya talagang tinukoy yung mga bottleneck ng Batangas port. Kung kinailangan gamitin ang political will para mag-expropriate gagamitin ang political will dahil ang kapakanan ng buong CALABARZON, buong Pilipinas ang ating hinahanap at hindi yung kapakanan ng ilang may-ari ng lupa.

Kaya kanina kasama ko si governor Enverga galing doon sa Quezon doon sa tagkawayan liblib na lugar kung saan tinutulungan pa natin yung magsasaka ng niyog kung papaano magkaroon ng secondary income. Sabi ko Willy kung 1989 or a few years after that natayo na sana yung Batangas International port di sana ang dami-dami ng industriya at factory dito sa Quezon. Pero ngayon dahil sa tagal ng hinintay natin hanggang ngayon livelihood pa rin, micro-finance pa rin, self-employment pa rin ang binibigay natin sa magsasaka ng Quezon. Kaya anyway better late than never. Siguro dahil ako ay naging pangulo ngayon ito na nga siguro ang isang dahilan kung bakit one year ago on EDSA Dos ginawa ako ng Panginoon na isang maging isang pangulo dahil naalala ng Panginoon na ipinaglalaman ko yung Batangas port mula pa nung ako ay Usec. Biro n'yo Usec. Tapos naging Senador dalawang beses, tapos naging Vice president, tapos naging President — biro mo kung all that time hindi pa natin masisimula itong Batangas International port. Kaya itong araw na ito, gaya ng sabi ko, so long have I waited.

Kahit na itong araw na ito dapat nandoon ako sa EDSA dahil ito nga ang first day ng EDSA, sabi ko hindi, fiesta ng Batangas ito ang araw kung saan gusto ko ipagdiriwang natin yung isang napakalaking kaganapan hindi lamang sa Batangas city, hindi lamang sa batangas province, hindi lamang sa buhay ni Tony Leviste kung hindi sa buhay ng ating buong Pilipinas dahil ang Batangas port, ang Batangas port ang siyang magpapaangat sa buhay ng CALABARZON, sa buhay ng Pilipinas; ang Batangas port ang magbibigay ng mas maraming trabaho sa dakilang manggagawang Pilipino dahil hindi na dadaan ang traffic papunta doon sa Maynila para sa international trading dito na pag natapos na ito.

Kaya mga guro, turuan niyong mabuti yung mga estudyante n'yo, yung mga estudyante n'yong magagaling — sila ay magagaling na manggagawang Pilipino, maging sa blue collar o sa white collar dahil pagtamang-tama pag nag-graduate yung mga anak ninyo, mga tinuturuan ninyo, tayo na rin yung Batangas port sa ating asal at tamang-tama darating ang marami pang mga industriya na gagamit ng kagalingan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino sa Batangas, sa buong CALABARZON, sa buong Pilipinas na itong araw na ito bilang first day ng celebration ng EDSA Dos anniversary malaking karangalan para sa inyong lingkod na kasama ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino ng CALABARZON para sa ganoon ipagdiriwang natin ang kinabukasan ng Batangas port, ng CALABARZON at ang sambayanang Pilipino.

Maraming salamat at congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Groundbreaking Ceremony of the Batangas Port. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231140/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7600&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 12th Supreme National Congress of the Associated Labor Unions
(ALU)
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 12th Supreme National Congress of the Associated Labor Unions (ALU)

[Delivered at the Cebu Plaza Hotel, Cebu City, January 19, 2002]

Ngayon ay bisperas ng pagdiriwang ng Unang Anibersaryo ng People Power 2, na madalas tinatawagan din ng EDSA 2.

Noong ako ay nagtayo ng aking Senatorial line up, sabi nila, ano kaya ang ticket natin, EDSA 2 Coalition. Sabi ko, hindi, kasi iyong EDSA 2 parang taga EDSA lang ang mga bayani ng Pilipinas. Kaya dapat People Power dahil ang EDSA 2 ay hindi lamang ginanap sa EDSA. Ito ay ginanap sa Cebu, sa iba't ibang lugar ng Luzon, Visayas at Mindanao at ng mga ginanap ng mga taga Maynila, taga Visayas, taga Mindanao, taga Luzon.

Kaya importante na sa ating pagdiriwang dito sa apat na araw ng People Power 2 – January 16 hanggang January 20, hindi lamang sa Manila ang selebrasyon kung hindi sa buong Pilipinas. Lalo na sa iba't ibang lugar na kung saan nagkaroon ng People Power. Kaya sa gitna ng pagdiriwang ng People Power 2, ako ay pumunta rito sa Cebu upang ipagdiwang ang kasing-halagang papel ng People Power 2 sa labas ng Maynila.

At pinili kong ipagdiwang ito kasama ng TUCP. Dahil gusto kong bigyang diin na ang People Power ay hindi mga personalidad kasama ko, kagaya ko, kung hindi ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino. At kung ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino ang People Power, dapat ang makinabang sa mga patakaran ng People Power Administration ay ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Nahahanap natin ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino sa iba't ibang sektor ng ekonomiya at ng bansa. Halimbawa, sakop sa dakilang manggagawang Pilipino ang dakilang Pilipinong mambabaka, ang dakilang Pilipinong magniniyog, ang dakilang Pilipinong mangingisda, ang dakilang katutubo, ang dakilang manggagawang turismo, ang dakilang magsasaka, ang dakilang manggagawa sa industriya, ang dakilang manggagawa sa kamaynilaan, ang dakilang manggagawa sa probinsiya.

Kaya sinimulan ko ang pagdiwang ng People Power 2 pagpasok ng bagong taon, sa pagpunta sa iba't ibang lugar para ipagdiwang itong aking anibersaryo bilang Pangulo. Nagpunta ako sa Masbate, kung saan naroon ang maraming mambabaka, at doon alang-alang sa dakilang mambabakang Pilipino, inanunsyo ko na sa halip P200 per hectare na sinisingil ng nakaraang administrasyon sa kanila, binaba ko ito, binaba ito ng People Power Administration sa P40, from P200 to P40.

Pumunta rin ako sa malayong bayan ng Milagros, Masbate, isang bayan ng mangingisda at nag-inaugurate ako ng isang processing plant sa malayong lugar na iyon para sa alimango, dahil ito ay paraan upang iangat ang kita mula sa pangangisda. Gusto nating umangat ang kita sa pangangisda, dapat magdagdag ng value added sa pamamagitan ng processing.

Pumunta rin ako sa mangingisda doon sa malayung-malayong lugar ng Macunacon at Binalucan sa Isabela, walang processing plant doon. Wala naman silang kalsada na darating sa mga processing plant ng Cauayan, ng Isabela, kaya doon magtatayo ng kooperatiba doon mismo para may mga deep seaboard at cold storage, iyong mga maliliit na mangingisda sa dulo ng Pilipinas sa Binalucan at Macunacon.

Nagpunta ako sa Cordillera upang makipagdiwang sa mga katutubo na sa pamamagitan ng bagong organisadong National Commission on Indigenous Peoples ay bibigyan ng mas masinsinang pansin at maglalaan tayo ng P20 million para pabilisin ang pagbigay ng 100 titles ng ancestral domain. Kasi ito iyong isa sa target na sinabi ko sa aking State of the Nation Address para sa dakilang katutubong Pilipino. Doon sa Isabela, pumunta rin ako upang magtanim ng bagong hybrid rice na mag-aangat ng ani by two and a half times at sa ganoon, mag-aangat rin ng kita ng dakilang magsasaka sa inaasahan nating pagtataniman ng China hybrid sa 50,000 hectares na tataniman simula itong Abril.

Itong Linggo naman pagkatapos ng aking provincial two weeks, doon ako sa Metro Manila. Pumunta ako sa iba't ibang lugar ng urban poor sa Metro Manila at Mega Manila, kasama na doon iyong sa Rosario, Cavite, upang tuparin ang iba't ibang mga inilunsad na karapatan na ang mga dating eskuwater ay may karapatang bilhin ang lupang tinitirikan nila. At ngayon, ako ay narito kasama ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino sa industriya sa dakilang lungsod ng Cebu.

Nagalak ako na ang inyong tema ngayon ay job creation and protection in the globalizing world. Sapagkat ito ay pagpapatuloy ng temang pang-anibersaryo ng TUCP, "Strengthening Solidarity for Nationalism, Development and Progress." At itong lahat ay nangangailangan ng matapat at mahusay na pamamahala.

Tulad ng nasabi ko sa inyo noong Disyembre noong tayo ay magkasama, hindi ba, kinuwento ni Tatang Tito noong magkasama tayo noong November 2000, pero ang dalas-dalas nating magkasama dahil mataas na mataas ang tingin ko sa TUCP. Magkasama tayo noong Disyembre at sabi natin pinakamalaking problema ng ating bansa ay kahirapan. Noong ako ay pumasok bilang pangulo, 40 percent ng ating mga kababayan ay namumuhay na mas mababa sa ating poverty line. Kaya ang giyera laban sa kahirapan, ang pangunahing hinaharap ng ating administrasyon. Sa labang ito, inaasahan ko ang tulong ninyo. At nagpapasalamat ako sa tulong na ibinibigay ninyo, ng TUCP, upang magtagumpay na maahon sa kahirapan ang ating bansa sa loob ng isang dekada. Lalaban natin ang kahirapan sa pamamagitan ng ating pinagkaisang plano, iyong Medium Term Philippine Development Plan kung saan nagbigay ako ng aking synthesis o summary doon sa State of the Nation Address. At itong planong ito ay isinusulong natin pagkatapos ng masusing konsultasyon sa lahat ng basic sectors kasama na ang sektor ng mga manggagawa.

Sa unang pagkakataon, may isang chapter ng medium term plan tungkol sa pagpaparami at pagpapabuti ng trabaho. Layunin ng plano: una, paglikha ng trabaho o mga bagong oportunidad para sa labor market. Pangalawa, pagpapabilis ng pagbigay ng trabaho maging sa loob o sa labas ng bansa. Pangatlo, pagpapabuti ng mga kondisyon sa trabaho kasama na ang pagpahusay ng mga kakayahan ng mga manggagawa at pagpapaganda ng mga benepisyo at working conditions ng manggagawa. At pang-apat, employment preservation o pagbigay ng seguridad, proteksiyon, gaya ng sabi nyo, sa trabaho para sa mayroon ng trabaho.

Noong disyembre kasama rin kayo doon sa Socio-Economic Summit. In fact, one of the leading convenors ay iyong TUCP. Doon sa National Socio-economic summit naggawa tayo ng National Socio-Economic pact of 2001, ay patuloy ng ating tapat na hangaring labanan ang kahirapan at gawing mahusay ang klima ng pangangalakal. Sa Socio-Economic fact, ang human resources ay critical na elemento sa pagpapaunlad ng ating ekonomiya at pagpapabuti ng ating lipunan.

Ang tanging landas upang makaahon sa kahirapan ay ang pagkaroon ng disenteng trabaho ng sinumang nais magtrabaho, trabahong nakakabigay sa manggagawa at sa pamilyang ito ng dignidad at seguridad, sapat ng pagkain, damit, bahay, edukasyon at marangal na uri ng pamumuhay.

Ito ang nais ng mga unyon na manggagawa. Ito rin ang nais ng administrasyon para sa lahat. Kailangang pag-iibayuhin pa natin ang ating pagkilos upang makamit ang mga ito. At ngayon nga sa bisperas ng anibersaryo ng EDSA 2 na siyang nagluklok sa akin bilang pangulo, repasuhin natin kung anu-ano na ang ating nagawa upang mapabuti ang kondisyon ng trabaho dito.

Cebuano- bisan pa duna'y 1.3 million nipuno sa atong job market. Nakiihiwas ang kita ug hapit 2 million na bag-ong trabaho. Niadto nga aging tuig 2000, 27.4 million ang dunay trabaho, apas sa tuig 2001, 29.15 million ng may trabaho. Dinaghan pa ang trabaho gikan sa agrikultura, tuig 2000, 9.9 million ang agriculture based workers. Apas sa tuig 2001, 11 million.... Nagtubo sab ang sektor sa industriya ug ang service sector.

Totoong may agam-agam tungkol sa pagsasara ng mga negosyo at permanenteng pagkakawala ng trabaho ng ilang trabaho. Ngunit ayon sa monitor ng dole, kung may nawalaan na 65,000 ng trabaho, doon sa dole mismo lamang, ang job placement na ginawa ng dole sa loob ng panahong iyon ay 300,000, hindi pa kasama iyong mga sariling or of the market ang nagbigay ng trabaho.

Kaya mas mabilis ang paglikha ng mga trabaho kaysa sa pagkawala ng trabaho. Mas marami ngayon ang nagkaroon ng tiwala na sila ay makakahanap ng trabaho. Nakagawa tayo ng 1.7 million na bagong trabaho kahit na humina ang pang-mundong ekonomiya at nagkaroon pa ng kaguluhan sa mundo. Kanina ang saya-saya ko dahil nabasa ko sa peryodiko kanina't kahapon, the Asian financial market, the World Financial Market, ang darling ngayon ay ang Pilipinas.

Napakahalaga sa atin naman ang tiwasay na relasyon ng manggagawa at iba pang sektor upang maging matiwasay and klima para sa investment at pangangalakal. Bagamat higit na mapag-alaga sa kapakanan ng mga manggagawa ang ating mga batas kaysa sa batas ng ibang mga bansa sa Asya. In fact, mayroon din lumabas na article na front page pa sa Manila Standard, na dito sa region natin ang pinakamalaking naangat na mga suweldo ng manggagawa ay dito sa Pilipinas for the year 2001.

Ngunit ganoon pa man, marami pa rin ang dapat gawin upang magkaroon ng tunay na katiwasayan sa lugar ng paggawa.

Tatlong punto ang binibigyang diin natin. Una, ay ang wastong paggamit ng mga mekanismo sa lugar ng trabaho or work place mechanism, maging ito man ay cooperative mechanism or corrective mechanism. Iyan ay parating ini-improve natin. Pangalawa, dapat igalang ang karapatang ng dalawang panig. At iyan ang isang talagang ina-admire ko ang TUCP, kasi very realistic kayo, ginagalang nyo ang dalawang panig.

Sabi nga ni ka Tito Mendoza, mayroon diyang iba salita, salita, salita, para sa kanila salita ng salita kahit na sa pagkasalimuot magsasara tuloy iyong kompanyang nagkakaroon ng pagsasalita. Tinanong ko kay Pat, tinanong kay President Mendoza, at sabi kong mag-congratulate sa TUCP, kasi alam namin ni Pat wala pang company kung saan TUCP ang union ang nagsara dahil sa labor dispute. Pangatlo, ang palagiang pagtutunggali ay maaaring lumala pa kung ipahahantong sa hukuman sapagkat napaka-legalistic ang ating dispute settlement system. Kaya ibayong pagsisikap din ang ginagawa ng DOLE upang mapahusay pa ang ating Dispute Settlement System. Inaasahan kong tutulong din ang mga unyon para mapabuti at mapalawak ang paggamit ng sistemang ito.

Maayos ang situwasyon ng labor relation sa bansa ngayon. At ito, gaya ng sabi ko, malaking utang na loob ng gobyerno sa TUCP.

Sabi nga ni Pat Sto. Tomas, in the last year, ang daming magiging strike na na-avert dahil sa magandang pag-uusap. Mayroong sa mga iba na na-avert pero nagsara ang kumpanya. Pero dito sa inyong union – kaya sabi ni ka Tito Mendoza, you have been called many things raw – moderate, conservative, and you are all but you are none. Masasabi ko dahil sa napakagaling ninyo sa pagproteksyon ng trabaho at mag-angat ng kondisyon ng mga kasaping manggagawa, I would say one important word to describe your union is, it is a mainstream labor union, na talaga ang kaisipan ay gumanda ang situwasyon ng manggagawa.

Kaya ako ay narito, sabi ko nga, for the first two weeks of January, ako ay nag-celebrate ng People Power 2 sa malalayong probinsiya at malalayong bayan. For this week, Metro Manila, iyong mga urban poor. Pero ginawa kong exception itong araw na ito, itong umagang ito dito sa Cebu para kasama ang TUCP.

By this time, last year, almost 11, nandoon ako kasama ni Bert Romulo at saka ni Rene de Villa sa Linden Suites, nagdedebate kami kung iyong EDSA crowd ay pupunta ba dapat sa Mendiola o hindi. By this time last year, 11 hours ago, may kasunduan na kami ni General Reyes. Hindi ko naman masabi kay Bert at kay Rene dahil hanggang maganap iyon hindi ko puwedeng sabihin baka masabotahe. Ang usapan kasi, tinanong ni General Reyes, tinatanong through Leo Alvez, the night before, about one o'clock in the morning this day last year, pinuntahan ako ni Leo Alvez sa aking apartment at sabi, I have a message from the Chief of Staff, give the time and the mechanism. Well, I said, mechanism hindi naman ako sundalo, kayo ang may alam. Pero the time, now. Ang sabi ko, now. Sabi naman ni Leo hindi puwedeng now, one o'clock in the morning. Because, first of all, we have to fix the other side. Meaning, Crame, mag-uusap pa sa mga pulis. And second, so what's the time? Sabi niya, when does it peak at EDSA. Kasama ko si Nani Braganza. Sabi ni Nani, three o'clock in the afternoon. In that case, therefore, we meet two o'clock in the afternoon, General Reyes and you, and then you will go to EDSA. Tapos, so you have to meet in a nearby place. What is a place where you meet but you can be sure it's safe. I said, we meet at Linden Suites, pero I don't know if it is safe. Everybody knows we're meeting at Linden Suites, I think. We could meet in my brother's house at Valle Verde. But I've had a few meetings there also, I don't know if it's totally safe. Sabi ni Leo, kung mararapatin ako na lang ang pipili ng bahay doon sa kaibigan ko. And that the house of Eddie Jose where I will go now after this, to have our reunion of the safehouse where the top brass came to discuss the withdrawal of support.

So anyway, ang usapan 2 o'clock in the afternoon. So at noon, I was supposed to have lunch with Cardinal Sin and President Aquino. But at 11 o'clock, iyon na nga, at this time last year, urgent, kung puwede raw dumaan ako sa Linden Suites with Rene de Villa and Bert Romulo dahil nga sa debate. Gusto nila that I will exercise my leadership to convince the people to March to Mendiola, kasi hindi naman daw puwedeng limang araw o apat na araw na tayong ay nandoon na lang sa EDSA, and something's got to give otherwise people, the crowd will just get tired, go home na kung wala ng misyon, go to the next stage raw to make the military come out. I knew the military is coming out already. But I could not reveal a secret. So they kept forcing and forcing me to agree to ask the people to move to Mendiola. And in the meantime, Nani Braganza slipped a note to me in —you've got to go now because Secretary Reyes is already waiting for you. So I remember Rene de Villa making a sentence, you've got to exercise your leadership. But before he finished that sentence because I got the note, I stood up. Well, I'm exercising my leadership, I'm meeting General Reyes now. So I went to that house where I am going to now after this, and General Reyes was there, and it had to be much earlier, it couldn't be 2 o'clock because by that time he was already being called to Malacañang. In other words, there was already the intelligence report about what's being planned. So we were there. And I guess you have read the rest already in the various accounts. We had a very long discussion. And I remember General Reyes said that it was very painful for him. But he said, I'm not asking for anything except good governance. And I think nobody in EDSA 2, nobody here in Plaza Fuente Osmena asked for anything except good governance. And I hope that is what I'm giving the people of the Philippines.

And so today, I am very happy. Nalipay ko nakauban ang atong mga kaiguunang diri sa Cebu apela sa selebrasyon sa komemorasyon sa People Power. At ako ay nasisiyahan na kasama ang manggagawang Pilipino. Kasi gaya ng sinabi ko noong new year's message ko, itong taong ito 2002, this is a year that we will dedicate to the great Filipino worker.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 12th Supreme National Congress of the Associated Labor Unions (ALU). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231134/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7598&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the opening ceremonies of the 2nd National Convention of the Chinese-Filipino Business Club, Inc. (CFBCI)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the opening ceremonies of the 2nd National Convention of the Chinese-Filipino Business Club, Inc.
(CFBCI)

[Delivered in Manila, January 24, 2002]

First, let me greet the Filipino-Chinese Business Club on the occasion of your National Convention.

The Filipino-Chinese are a cherished part of our multi-ethnic society. It is fitting to celebrate things that our Filipino-Chinese culture enjoys and cherishes. Just today on the occasion of the opening of your convention, I would like to announce that I have just signed a proclamation declaring June 9 of every year as Filipino-Chinese friendship day. June 9 coincides with the establishment of formal diplomatic relations between your home, the Philippines and your ancestral motherland, China.

I also wish to greet you a Happy Anniversary on the occasion of our 40-day celebration of People Power 1 and People Power 2. Many of you were there at EDSA, some were not. But today, whether you were there or not, you are all part of people power today. So this celebration is yours as well as mine.

Indeed, it is a year since I became president. I took the presidency as a gift from god. I accepted these challenges as my duty. On the day I became president, I said that it was time to bind the nations' wounds, heal its deep divisions and bring all the people together in a new shared hope for a better future in a moral society.

This is the first year that we are celebrating EDSA 1 and EDSA 2 together, combining the restoration of freedom with the vindication of truth and the triumph of justice.

EDSA 1 brought down tyranny, EDSA 2 took out plunder. What we need now is EDSA 3. A real EDSA 3, not the fake and unsuccessful one that occurred last April may. A real EDSA 3 to complete the circle of the Filipinos' unparalleled political achievement by putting an end to underdevelopment and poverty, and giving it a fresh start to progress and social justice.

I know how we owe the two events — EDSA one and EDSA two — to God, and also to the sense of justice that god planted in each one of us. We owe god thanks for making Filipinos intolerant of wrong and courageous enough to protect it.

EDSA two was a miracle as EDSA one was, but god works his miracles through men, bringing justice through the just, honesty through the upright and always ever a change for the better through men and women of faith and courage. He picked a woman to lead our country out of bondage into freedom, and he picked another woman to lead our country out of poverty back on the road to progress.

In 1986, the people would not take the manipulation of the polls to perpetuate tyranny. In 2001, the people would not take the disregard of proof of corruption to keep immorality in high office.

I see the hand of God in the acts of men. His Eminence Jaime Cardinal Sin said, in this event, we must celebrate the kindness of God and the greatness of the Filipino. During these 40 days, we celebrate the faith and courage of the hundreds of thousands of Filipinos who kept vigil at the EDSA shrine and rallied to bring back honesty and honor to government.

We pay special tribute to the youth who outdid even their elders in a clamoring for national renewal. I rededicate myself during these forty days to the great project begun on EDSA 2, to make our country new, to make government honest, to lead our people out of poverty and realize the greatness that lies within the noble race that invented peaceful people power revolution.

I must insist on the truth. We have made significant progress. Where bigger and rigid economies failed, ours moved forward. Where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours held firm. Say what they will, the only evidence of corruption in my government are the baseless charges of our enemies. Admittedly the country is still in a less than ideal state, but no one except the extreme reactionaries can deny that it would have collapsed if the government had not changed. Today, our economy is back on the road, back on track to the main battle, the battle against poverty.

We stopped the rampant speculation against the peso, now it's stable. We stopped much of the massive smuggling that is undermining local industry and stealing revenues while they enriched the former president's friends. Have we not forgotten? I hope we have not forgotten.

We slowed down the massive borrowing of the past and replaced it with willing investments in our country's future. Our bond offerings are readily taken up — 2 1/2 times oversubscribed the last round, because here and abroad, people believe in our country again.

Our stock market is at its five-month high. It is back to the levels before September 11. I was telling Dante Go that I was reading "The Analyst" today. And they said, it went up another 39 point. Yesterday because the Americans are here. But Dante Go said, no. It's not because the Americans are here, but because confidence is back.

I think I read the message right. Government is too serious to be handled like showbusiness. Some say I have no charisma, I have no "it". No I.T. I have I.T., information technology; but no I.T, "it". Only, you businessmen I would like to ask, would you rather have I.T. or I.Q.? My predecessor, on the other hand, may have had so much charisma, too much charisma. But i am not here to make people laugh; I am here to make peoples' lives better. What would you want? Someone who knows the job or someone who just pretends? Someone who works hard or someone who just drinks hard? The fate of the nation will not unfold on the silver screen, but in the unforgiving light of reality where only hardwork pays. Integrity is credit and intelligence saves the day. Now as ever, the main fight is against poverty. And the principle objective is to give the forty percent of the people who have little or nothing a material stake in their country so that it becomes, in their eyes, worth working for, so that they will realize and maximize the potential of the great Filipino worker, that they are. This fight against poverty is part and parcel of a new and unparalleled present.

Our mission is rooted in the new world, which is your theme today, — a new age, a new and global economy. There is now more wealth and yet, more poverty; more education and yet, more ignorance; more knowledge and, yet, less wisdom; more dialogue and communication at lightning speed; yet, less understanding and more wars. With those planes crushing into the world trade center, the technology of life that defines the modern age is now the symbol of the new terror. The fight against poverty does not merely call for daring. The fight demands intelligence and care. These qualities may not stir up the blood, but they will steer the country more surely to safety and progress.

I have said that we need a 3rd EDSA, but it cannot be in the sacred place of EDA shrine. Because we must restore the sacred places to their original purpose, which is prayer and not political action. And besides, we need more room.

EDSA was where we made desperate political changes. But it is in the rest of the country — in Binondo, in other places where wealth is created, in places where wealth can be distributed — that will make a difference in the way our economy works and our people live. Yes, we need another EDSA, this time for economic progress; and it must be bigger than the two EDSAs before. It must encompass the entire nation: rich and poor; Christians, Muslims and Buddhists; Chinese and brown Filipinos; winners and losers in the last political contest, because if this last EDSA does not succeed, we shall all be losers in the end.

I therefore reach out to all our people once again, whichever side of the divide the past two EDSAs left them and you. Join me now in the third, but probably, it must be the greatest peaceful revolution of all: people power against poverty, people power for progress.

It is time to set aside revenge so that the work of true justice can begin. The work of justice does not stop in the nation's courts. We must bring it as well to those who have renounced their country and held themselves above the law. We can disagree on how to govern our country; we can even disagree on which part of our country we want to call our own. But on one thing we cannot quarrel – and that is to respect our differences by respecting always the rule of law and the sanctity of human life.

There is no question that we cannot debate in peace; there is no issue that cannot be resolved constitutionally, yes, even the redistribution of political authority in our country. But there is no way we can hear each other above the sound of artillery. There is no way this government will listen at the point of the gun. And I am very happy that our allies and our enemies heard this. And I was telling the police last night, “thank you for doing such a good job of peacekeeping and averting mayhem.” The crowd control was so good, it was bigger than the crowd that they controlled.

Last year at the opening of the 12th congress, I asked the politicians for a moratorium on politicking. To some extent, they did. They gave that moratorium. And in fact, to a large extent, they gave us cooperation as well in essential reforms. Yes, even the opposition. Now I would like to ask for a moratorium on blame from some sectors of the public, and a measure of patience, as I lead the country in overcoming the greatest global economic crisis since the great depression of the 1930s.

I am not campaigning for myself this early for the 2004 election. It is my critics who are campaigning this early against me. Are they afraid if I succeed in helping our country? This is the only way they can succeed – by hurting our people? Let us stop it now. It is, indeed, too early. There is more than enough time before the 2004 election. On the other hand, there is no time to lose for a Philippine economic recovery this year. We have made so many strides in survival in the past year. We have the momentum for this year. Let us not lose it by blame tossing. Let us not lose it by campaigning against each other. We can quarrel over who the leader of this country should be after the next election, but we must work together to make this country worth quarreling about. We owe this to the people we all say we wish only to serve.

And from our people, from the business community, the Chinese community, the whole community, I ask for your patience and understanding. You have done your part in putting back morality and intelligence in government. It is now the government's turn to put faith in the future back in your hearts. Kaya kayo, mga Filipino-Chinese community, mga namumuno sa Chinese-Filipino Business Club, maraming salamat.

Mula pa noong unang araw ng aking pagka presidente, tumutulong na kayo, at kinikilala ko iyon. Kaya tuloy tuloy tayong magkasama para sa ganoon, sa pangunguna ng ating magagaling na negosyante na marami ay chinese-filipino, tuloy tuloy na sana ang ating pagabalik sa magandang kinabukasan ng ating bansa.

Kaya sa inyong lahat, congratulations sa inyong convention. Maraming salamat at mabuhay tayong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA'S Speech during the Opening Ceremonies of the 2nd National Convention of the Chinese-Filipino Business Club, Inc. (CFBCI). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231127/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7597&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 20th anniversary of the Makati Business Club

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 20th anniversary of the Makati Business Club

[Delivered at the Hotel Inter-Continental Ballroom, Makati City, January 25, 2002]

Let me greet the Makati Business Club on a Happy 20th Anniversary and also on the occasion of our 40-day celebration of People Power 1 and People Power 2. Because as Vic said, and as we all know, you were a very important part of those two great events.

And I also thank you for the kind words that you have been saying about my administration the last five days, about my one year old administration which, for instance, came out in several feature articles as part of the celebration of my first Anniversary.

Indeed, last week end, our nation marked the 3rd anniversary of EDSA 2. On the eve of this occasion, the Inquirer wrote an editorial that said the following; “thanks to the proclivity of the Filipinos to shoot themselves in the foot, they are the worst enemies of their country’s recovery and economic slowdown and political turbulence.

And I am glad that the Makati Business Club seems to agree because we have adopted applying this principle as the principle for moving our country forward.

Indeed, it’s very sad that we have a spectacle such that indeed, at the time when we as a nation should be pulling together aside from the occasional recognition of merit such as what we have been saying, hearing the last five days, we are instead pushing each other apart. What a sharp contrast to just 12 months ago, a unity and a sense of purpose brought us together.

I believe this is merely a result of attending interest and ambition above that of a country. Disunity, discordant voices and a sense of every man for himself whenever we don’t get what we want, these pose our biggest challenges for the country.

As a result of economic and social development, and as a result of its normal past two and a half or so, we have become a nation deeply divided and fractured. This is a lesson that we should have learned from May 1, but have we forgotten? Just a year ago, deeply mired in a hole, investment confidence had dropped, rampant corruption had taken over the institutions of the government and the very seat of power, political instability was all over the place, and the world had written us off.

Today, we have made significant strides to avert the deterioration and to even turn around. And as i did yesterday before the Chinese business community, i must insist on the truth. We have made progress. Where bigger and richer economies failed, ours moved forward. Where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours held firm. We have gone a long way to bring our country back on the radar screens of the world.

Our new Cabinet, picked as much for their integrity as for their competence and qualifications, has brought professionalism and public service to new heights.

Much of what the world investment community has asked of us, we have thus far delivered: the power bill, the money laundering act, long considered litmus tests of our political will.... Into law, Overcoming years of delay. Our budget deficit has been placed under control. Interest rates and inflation rates have declined. Our economy continues to grow despite faltering economies all around us. Even recent unemployment rates have shown periods of decline despite widespread perception of increased lay-offs.

This paradox of macro-economic level statistics that don't jibe with ground level perceptions serves to highlight the importance of target driven efforts by government to achieve perceptible results at the ground level.

In my State of the Nation Address last year, i outlined numerous programs to address the issue of poverty reduction and development. I deliberately placed emphasis on target driven initiatives at the ground level as opposed to the macro-level.

You noticed I talked about how many jobs in agriculture? How many hectares of land to be distributed? I didn't talk about inflation rate, I didn't talk about GNP growth rates, I really talked about unemployment rate as my target in my State of the Nation Address. Because it is at the progress, it is progress at the ground level that directly impacts on the lives of the less fortunate in our society.

Perhaps because of this emphasis on ground level results, i have sometimes been criticized for lack in focus, or having no clear economic agenda. But i have always considered sound macro-economics to be an ever present precondition to achieving, and sustained ground results. And my year-end report, in fact showed that we did achieve those sound macro-economic fundamentals.

Our society is composed of different sectors. Some more fortunate in life than others. In this context, I don't think I would be exaggerating if I were to characterize this gathering today as the crème de la crème of our business sectors, and therefore, the elite of our society. As such, more than any other sector, one would expect that with your collective advantage of education, knowledge, experience and mature economic prospective. It is you, the country's business elite, who would realize the seriousness of the challenges our country faces today. It is you, more than any other sector, which should know that there are no quick fixes to our national problems.

As early as the day I became President, I said, that it is time to bind the nation's wounds, heal its deep divisions and bring all the people together in a new shared hope for a better future in a moral society. Which means that our national leadership will have to undergo a tedious period of balancing the needs and aspirations of most if not all, of our major sectors, otherwise, if our approach is exclusional, the resulting agitation of the major sectors left behind will intend to create instability which, in turn, hampers economic activity.

Unfortunately, the resulting process of reaching out to diverse sectors is also misunderstood to be politicking, or worse, a betrayal of principles. When I reach out to urban poor communities who still associate their aspirations with the fate and treatment of former President Estrada. I am not doing so with a moist eye towards the 2004 elections, rather I look to have stabilized social conditions today so that our country can forge ahead.

When I reach out to opposition personalities, it is not in order to create political For the 2004 elections, rather, i am seeking political stakes here and now, within which the opposition may contribute to efforts to get our economy moving.

There are purists who may not like it. But the fact is, my duty is to be President to all Filipinos whether like you, they were in EDSA 2, or whether they were in EDSA 3.

I am not campaigning for myself this early for the 2004 elections. It is my critics who are campaigning this early against me. Are you afraid if I succeed in helping our country? Is this the only way you can succeed by hurting our people? Let us stop it now. It is, indeed, too early. There is more than enough time before the 2004 elections. On the other hand, there is no time to lose on a Philippine economic recovery this year. We can quarrel as to who should lead this country up to the next election, but we must work together to make this country worth quarreling about.

We owe this to the people we are saying we wish to serve. We're in business. We can disagree on how to run our country; we can even disagree on which part of our country we want to call our own, as long as we respect our differences by respecting always the rule of law and the sanctity of human life.

There is no question that we cannot debate in peace, and no issue that cannot be resolved constitutionally, yes even the distribution of political authority in our country. And it is time, indeed, to set aside revenge so that the work of true justice can begin.

Thus I am challenging you to roll up your sleeves and renew the partnership for progress at the ground level. There are numerous areas that you could be involved in – if you're not yet involved right now. For example, one of our lingering problems is that of rural electrification. Of the 42,000 barangays nationwide, over 4,000 still do not have electric power. Access to electricity will dramatically change the lives of people within those 4,000 barangays, enabling them to do things we take for granted like eating, reading, doing house work comfortably at night. It will enable them to irrigate, make ice, refrigerate agricultural and marine products, process food. Indeed, it will enable them to enter the 21st century.

I hope that some of you will be able to join the effort to make electricity available to all barangays within the next few years. For example, I understand that migrant Philippines through its project beacon has made a billion peso commitment to electrify over a thousand barangays in the coming year.

Another challenge is to modernize and strengthen our public education system. With 4,000 public high schools and over 10,000 elementary schools nationwide, with school buildings in over 40,000 barangays. But there are 1,600 barangays that don't have a school building.

And for those that do have school buildings, many are in need of equipment and teacher training. Most of the companies represented here still draw the majority of your workers from the public school system. Our public school still account for the primary and secondary education of the vast majority of your students, your future workers. And therefore, it also serves you well to make our public schools enter the 21st century.

Last November, former Senator Ting Paterno invited me to launch the connected .ph project of PBSP, legal corporate foundations, Makati Business Club and a large network of companies. The project had succeeded in equipping wiring and training. A hundred public high schools with personal computer labs hooked up to the internet.

I urge you to continue this project and to expand it by having more companies support it. And for our part, the government has begun to roll out as a program which seeks to equip 1,000 more high schools with PC labs before the start of the next school year.

The Office of the President is also trying to work out distance learning for the most far away barangays where teachers don't want to go, but need the hardware for the distance learning, and even the software for doing the word content, the content for the curriculum.

With government providing the computers through a Japanese grant and the private sector providing connectivity, training and educational content our present roll out is an ideal project to demonstrate the partnership for progress that I am espousing.

A third area of need is housing for the poor. In the State-of-the-Nation Address, where I said I concentrated on ground level targets rather than macro targets. I've set a target of 100,000 low cost housing units and 50,000 socialized units by the end of July. These are ambitious targets. And so far, compared to many of our targets, I find these targets the most problematic. But you can contribute toward the achievement of these targets through such programs as housing for humanity. It provides housing for relocated squatters. You could donate to build a house, or even volunteer to build one. The habitat house costs P85,000. But we have DSWD models that cost P25,000. Therefore, your money could go a longer way, in fact, by adopting the more modest model.

A fourth challenge is job creation. Chito Lorenzo, one of your trustees, has signed up as Presidential Job Adviser for agricultural job generation. And he has helped develop a plan for generating one million jobs in agriculture. Kaibigan ninyo siya, you should help him out there. For example, Johnny Santos and Nestle are providing the technology and ready market for coffee growers in Mindanao. Our farmers are always in need of technology, credit and markets. Regardless of whatever business you're engaged in, you'll be able to contribute, you can probably contribute to be a part of the solution.

A fifth challenge is electoral modernization. Our archaic system of voting and manual counting of ballots cannot be allowed to persist in the elections of 2004. It is in your interest to get involved to support groups such as NAMFREL that are working to modernize our electoral system. Because the COMELEC is a Constitutional body, both the Executive and Congress have limited ability to involve ourselves in COMELEC's decisions and efforts regarding modernization. But the private sector can do so. You can play a constructive part of the solution.

Clearly there are a number of many other specific areas where concerned citizens can add value to society, to be among those who engage in the constructing, help generate jobs and create national wealth. Clearly this will be better than just idly uninvolved — though i don't see too many members of Makati Business Club uninvolved – but worse, complaining and complaining.

There is a story about the boxer Muhammad Ali — perhaps legend, perhaps true. Early in his career, he was engaged in a real struggle of a fight. And a man at the ringside just kept heckling him round after round. Finally, Ali turned to the heckler. He said, “you're down there shouting, I'm up here fighting.” And that's the way I feel. Like Ali, I'm up on the ring fighting. And like him, I'll be slugging away for a full fifteen rounds.

To those cheering me on – and many of them are here – I wish to express my deepest appreciation for your understanding and support. Our fight to create economic growth and thereby address the problem of poverty is as tough a struggle as any. And to those who are not cheering me on, I can only say that I am challenged and inspired to work even harder to meet the needs of our people.

I therefore reach out, once again, to the Makati Business Club; and aside from you, to all our people, even those on the other side of the divide, where the past two EDSAs left us and them. Join me now in a third and greatest peaceful revolution of all — people power against poverty, people power for progress.

Last year, at the opening of congress, I asked the politicians for a moratorium on politicking. To some extent, they give us that moratorium. In fact, to a large extent, they gave us cooperation as well in essential reforms. Yes, even the opposition.

Now, I would like to ask for a moratorium on blame from some sectors of the public, especially the business community, and a measure of patience as I lead our country in overcoming the greatest global economic crisis since the greatest depression of the 1930s. From our people, from our middle forces especially, I ask for your patience and understanding. You have done your part in putting back morality and intelligence in government. Now what must be done is for us to work together to put faith in the future back into your heart, back in my heart.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 20th Anniversary of the Makati Business Club. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231117/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7596&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Annual General Membership Meeting of the Philippine Military Academy Alumni Association, Inc. (PMAAAI)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Annual General Membership Meeting of the Philippine Military Academy Alumni Association, Inc. (PMAAAI)

[Delivered at the AFP Theater (Tejeros Hall), Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City, January 26, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Maraming salamat Secretary Angelo Reyes sa iyong nakakatawang pagpapakilala sa akin.

Alam ninyo iyong aking pagiging Gloria labandera at mahilig magsabon, iyon ang subject matter ng aking New Year's resolution, na hindi na ako magsasabon lalo na ang aking cabinet members. Ngayon, tinanong sa akin ni Winnie Monsod kung, "papaano mong gagawin iyon?" eh di sabi ko, kung gusto kong magsabon magbibilang na muna ako one to thirty. Eh kanina, it so happened nandito na kayo tinawagan ko si Secretary Reyes about something else. So sabi niya, "ma'am, with your permission, pwede ba ito ang magiging diskurso ko?" so sinabi ko, pwede na. Kasi sa loob loob ko — nandoon pa ako sa Batangas nung sinabi niya iyon — I could count from 1 to 30,000 bago ako dumating dito. Para pagdating ko dito hindi na ako magagalit. Hindi ko na sasabunin si Angie Reyes. (laughter)

Nagpapasalamat ako rin kay General Monta o dahil inimbata niya ako ngayon at binabati ko siya. Naalala ko nung isang taon, hindi ba siya ang chairman? Pagkatapos alam ko nga na siya ang chairman, dahil noong Vice President ako, early days, siya nga ang chairman. Pagkatapos nung naging guest ako dito sa bulwagang ito, ah hindi na siya ang chairman. Sabi ko, "ano ang nangyari kay General Monta?" nag-resign bilang chairman. At kanina sinabi ko, "general, hindi ba nag-leave kayo?" "hindi," sabi nga niya, "nag-resign nga ako last year." kasi sabi niya, nanawagan ako sa resignation nung kasalukuyang pangulo. Eh siyempre marami sa PM Triple 'A' — sabi niya — ay nasa active service. So mahirap naman na dadalhin ko yung buong association sa aking panawagan alang-alang doon sa mga nasa active service pa. Pero ngayon natupad 'yung kanyang hangarin, nabalik siya bilang chairman. Sana huwag kang mag-resign, general monta,,o bilang chairman. Huwag mong hingiin yung aking resignation. (laughter)

Binabati ko rin si Chris Balaweng ang inyong pangulo at kinakatawan, 'yung incoming jubilarian, hindi ba Chris? At binabati ko rin siya dahil siya ang namumuno sa AFP modernization program. At ako ay nasisiyahan na sa wakas nalagay na natin yung 5 billion pesos sa inyong trust fund, at itong taong ito sa wakas nagkaroon ng budgetary allocation ng another 5 billion pesos, dahil supposed to be 10 billion pesos every year yung trust fund na ito.

Nagpanukala nga ako na 10 billion pesos sana yung ilalagay nila, ng mga congressmen and senator. Pero sabi nila meron pa namang 5 billion so magdadagdag na lang kami ng 5 billion at gagawin nating revolving fund. So as you spend the amount then they will keep adding also and allocating para ganoon 10 billion all the time meron kayong gagastusin sa AFP modernization. Eh pero kung nung araw pa siguro nagkaroon tayo ng AFP modernization, nung unang natupad 'yung batas, hindi sana siguro tayo nagededebate tungkol sa 'balikatan' doon sa western Mindanao. Ganoon pa man tamang-tama na magkasama tayo dito ngayon dahil tamang-tama pag-uusapan natin yung mga bagay kung saan nasa frontpage na naman ang Armed Forces of the Philippines.

Kanina binanggit ni General Monta,,o yung aking unang pakikipagsama dito sa pm triple 'A' nung ako ay naging pangulo na. Kasi bago ako naging pangulo ilang beses na nga ako naging panauhin ng PM Triple 'A' whether the association as a whole o nung mga iba't-ibang mga klase ninyo. At noon pa nga, nung unang pumunta ako sa anniversary ng PM Triple 'A' doon sa baguio at nakipag-martsa ako sa aking class, class '78. Yung tinatanong ni

Angie, “ba’t yon ang klaseng pinili?” eh maraming nagtatanong din. Sa katotohanan, pinili ko yung klase — no, inimbata ako ng class ’78 — dahil marami sa kanila doon nanggagaling sa class ’78 yung aking mga aide d’ camps. At so, naalala ko, kaya siyempre dahil kaugnay ko sila araw-araw ‘di nung nagkaka-reunion sila at gustong humanap kung sino ang i-adopt na classmate, ako nga ang pinili. Naaalala ko nga si General Wycoco —wala siya rito, ano? — class ’68. Sa katotohanan talagang mas matanda ako kaysa doon sa class ’78. Eh kasi sa college class ’68 ako. Kaya sabi ni Wycoco noon, “naku! Kung alam lang namin sana na available ka maging member of the class sana kinuha ka ng class ’68.” “well, sorry na lang wycs mas may foresight itong mga bagong generation.” (laughter) at pinili na nga nila ako hindi pa nga ako pangulo. Pero sa pamamagitan nila ang dami ko namang nakilalang iba’t-ibang mga klase. First, yung mga contingent classes — class ’76, class ’79, ganoon. Pagkatapos parami ng parami ang nakikilala ko. Kaya Angie, kung ako masyado nakiki-alam sa iyo sa mga promotion, sorry na lang, kasi ang dami-dami ko nang mga kilala. At kilala ko kung sino yung mabait, at kilala ko kung sino yung, yung, well, hindi naman masyadong mabait. Pero kilala ko rin ang buong PMA masasabi ko as a whole. At masasabi ko na kung yung pagkabayani ni Angie Reyes na ginawa niya together with the major service commanders nung January 19. Yung pagkabayaning pinakita nila ay yon talaga ang pagkabayani ng buong Philippine Military Academy Alumni. Ayun na nga yung halimbawa ni General Monta,,o. Kaya sabi nga ni general monta,,o nung ako’y naging pangulo, one week after, nandito ako kasama ninyo para magpasalamat.

Indeed, seven days, one week after I was sworn in as president, you made me guest of honor at your General Assembly and meeting, kagaya nito. And it was your way then of endorsing my assumption of the presidency. And since then, I am very grateful you have constantly stood by me. Even at times when rumor mills were used to confuse and intimidate the public, most of you openly supported my initiatives for our Armed Forces and for the Filipino people.

Fellow cavaliers, thank you for the unstinting support.

The nation is indebted deeply to the soldier. The Armed Forces’ support for a new president under the principle of constitutional succession, under the principle of people power, under the principle of the duty of the Armed Forces to be the guardian and protector of the people your act to protect the republic and the presidency not only last January 19 but also last may 1st, the bravery of our soldiers in Basilan and Sulu, and your unequivocal support in the face of another recent round of coup rumors — these are expressions of the professionalism and excellence that characterize the men and women of the command.

The PM Triple ‘A’ has played a central role in uniting our soldiers and keeping them beyond the pale of partisanship despite the tempting offers of political adventurers. This tempering role played by your organization has been indispensable to our national stability and growth.

The Filipino soldier is the complete professional — hardworking, easily trainable, resolute and duty-bound. This is a tribute to the PMA, and that is why I’m so happy to have had a chance to be with you so many times when I was senator, VP and now President.

At tuwing nagkikita tayo sa PMA — whether dito, sa alumni o doon sa kasalukuyang pma — meron akong parating souvenir, yung mga sundalo, yung mga toy soldiers. Sa dalas na ako’y nakikipag-ugnay sa PM Triple ‘A’ at saka sa PMA mismo, yung aking collection ng toy soldiers isang platoon na. (laughter) kaya nakakapag-lecture ako doon sa mga nagtatanong sa ‘balikatan’ kung ano ang platoon, ano ang squad, ano ang company, ano ang battalion, ano ang brigade, ano ang division, ano ang area command. Sabi nga nung aking bagong PSG head, si Colonel Esperon, class ’74. Nagugulat siya kung ako mag-lecture parang sundalo. Sabi ko, I must have been a soldier in my earlier life. Kaya lang I don’t believe in reincarnation. Anyway, whether I was a soldier in my earlier life or not — ‘cause there’s no earlier life, anyway — I am a soldier today because I am the commander-in-chief of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

And being your fellow soldier, and being your commander-in-chief certainly, I have had many moments to be able to observe you as an institution, as individuals, and I can truly say that you internalize and live out the values of courage, integrity and loyalty instilled in the Philippine military academy. Your patriotism shines through even when you have hung up your uniforms. Many of you here are past the age of 56 and still you are there, professional as ever in your second career. Truly, you deserve the accolade of our people.

Today, once more, the Armed Forces is in the frontpage in view of the 'Balikatan Exercises in southern Philippines. And as president and commander-in-chief, I would like to take this opportunity to set the record straight on this matter. And when I was thinking of what I would say today to set the record straight, I decided to organize the record into ten important policy guidelines:

First, 'Balikatan' is purely an exercise in joint military training involving professional troops of the Philippines and the United States. It is primarily designed to strengthen the AFP forces. U.S. forces are not authorized to conduct offensive operations.

Second policy, 'Balikatan' is also a facet of the global coalition against terrorism. It is strategically propelled this year by the pertinent U.N. resolutions calling on all member states to cooperate in and contribute resources to the campaign against a common threat. We have been consistent in our adherence to these resolutions, which are indispensable to our own national survival and stability.

Third, 'Balikatan' is sanctioned by the constitution and the Philippine-U.S. visiting forces agreement.

Fourth, 'Balikatan' is backed up by a consensus in the National Security Council, which includes the leadership of both houses of congress. This is an exercise in strengthening both our national security and the political will behind it.

Fifth, the command structure of 'Balikatan' consists of separate U.S. and Philippine units interfaced with the chain of command of the Armed Forces of the Philippines. At no point in time will U.S. Forces be allowed to operate independently within Philippine territory. At any time the U.S. Forces will have to follow the command of the Philippine commander.

Sixth, the AFP chief of staff has complete control over all forces under 'Balikatan.' this is understood at the political and operational levels of both sides. In this exercise, I have the firm assurance of president bush himself that the American troops will take the cue from the Philippine government.

President Bush called me up about four nights ago, and I told him about these matters. And he said that he will be putting some of these things very clearly in writing in a letter to be forthcoming.

Seventh, the 'Balikatan' is time-bound. It will last for 6 months involving some 600 U.S. troops. The bulk of the U.S. troops will consist mainly of support service personnel — 250 of the troops will be deployed in Mactan, Cebu to train our personnel in maintenance.

Eighth, 160 U.S. trainors will be deployed in Basilan to observe our soldiers. Two American trainors of these 160 will accompany each AFP company. The Americans will not be involved in combat operations. And the terms of reference will include an injunction that they stay at the tactical headquarters when they go out with their troops in the operations of our troops.

Ninth, human rights violations committed in the course of the exercise, if ever — and I hope there will be none — will be severely sanctioned. For this purpose, to ensure this, i am reactivating the presidential commission on human rights headed by the secretary of justice. And I have asked the secretary of justice, in his capacity as chair of the presidential commission on human rights, to organize a western Mindanao committee to closely monitor the situation and to report any violations for proper action by the authorities. Civilian communities are to be protected and given utmost consideration.

Tenth, impact socioeconomic projects will be conducted in the second-half of the six-month cycle. Because, as it is in central Luzon, 'balikatan' has a military aspect and a community development aspect.

I would like the secretary of national defense and the AFP chief of staff — who is not here today, but who is on an unofficial mission — to integrate these guidelines in the detailed terms of reference of the exercise and disseminate them throughout the chain of command.

The more observant of our readers would have noticed that ‘exercise Balikatan’ has lifted the stock market to its highest level in one year. ‘Balikatan’ has notched up the prospects of our national security. And with security comes confidence, investment and a good business climate.

In celebration of this year’s General Assembly, I salute you once again my fellow cavaliers, for your contribution to the security that we are enjoying today for the confidence that has been restored today.

I thank you and congratulate you for your excellent work, and for the courageous lives you have lived very well.

And once more on this day, let me declare my unrelenting faith in the Filipino soldier, who is part of the great Filipino worker, the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the PM Triple ‘A’.

Let me add, that in my gesture of respect and admiration for the great Filipino soldier on several occasions, I have expressed my hope of raising the salaries of our soldiers to the same level as our teachers. And I am glad to note that with the excellent testimony of Secretary Reyes and the chain of command of the Armed Forces, the bill increasing the pay of officers and enlisted personnel of the Armed Forces to align this pay with the pay of our public school teachers has passed the committee level of the House of Representatives. And I hope you will all — especially those of you who are not, no longer in active service — will campaign with our legislators and help me persuade congress to pass this bill into law as soon as possible.

Ipagpatuloy natin itong napakahalagang samahan tungo sa makabuluhang pagbabago ng hukbong sandatahan at ng buong bansa.

At itong araw na ito, sa araw ng ating General Assembly ng PM Triple ‘A’ muli, of the countless times I have told you, i tell you once again, mabuhay kayo mga tunay na kaakibat para sa kaunlaran!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the Annual General Membership Meeting of the Philippine Military Academy Alumni Association, Inc. (PMAAAI). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231105/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7595&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the departure ceremonies for an Official/Working Visit to the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the departure ceremonies for an Official/Working Visit to the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States

[Delivered at the NAIA Terminal 1, Pasay City, January 27, 2002]

Mr. Vice president; Mr. Senate president; Mr. Speaker; executive secretary and all the other cabinet members; Mrs. Collins; Mr. Campbell, the charge d' affaires; General Camiling, acting chief of staff; Lt. Gen. Abaya; Lt. Gen. Defensor; De los Santos; Vice Admiral Hincó; PNP Chief Mendoza; Rear Admiral Lista; ladies and gentlemen:

After the September 11 tragedy last year, I traveled to several countries on a mission for national security and development. In Shanghai, last October, we issued the APEC declaration against terrorism just before I went back to Beijing to forge agreements with China related to the fight against transnational crime.

Thereafter, I went to Brunei to attend the 7th ASEAN Summit, where again, we issued a collective declaration against terrorism whose first draft was crafted by the Philippine delegation; then to Indonesia, where I pursued our trilateral agreement with that country and Malaysia to secure our common borders.

I then crossed the Pacific to the United States to wrap up our mission, with tangible results in terms of development and security assistance, whose fruits can be clearly seen today.

We have seen the fruits of action diplomacy. But continuity is important. That is why today, I leave again to seek confidence and support of the world for our country, as the global scenario rapidly changes from all-out war to all-out consolidation. The prize all nations seek is peace, stability and growth.

The Taliban has fallen, and Afghanistan is in the process of restoring the peace before the big push of nation building. The theater of conflict has shifted elsewhere, and now we are in the map once again, not just because of our resilient economy but because we have support for our fight against terrorism in some isolated parts of southern Philippines. After we shall have won the peace there, we shall also embark in a determined bid for community-building and permanent stability.

The process that started from massive armed action in Afghanistan, which has transformed into peacekeeping, and which will eventually shift to nation building, will be a consistent point of global focus. This transition of strategic policy from interdiction of terrorists, to development as a means to inoculate the global order against terrorism, is necessary to achieve a permanent and comprehensive solution that shall defeat terrorism and its twin, poverty.

Solutions to poverty are indispensable to the resolution of irrational violence. I am a firm believer in this emergent lesson — not because of Afghanistan but because we have seen it in our own history of conflict. That is why I spend most of my time in our own land, with the poor communities or at my desk thinking and working for them. Spending time with the poor was my primary manner of celebrating the first anniversary of EDSA 2. Until this morning, I was with the urban poor in Metro Manila, and I shall be with them again upon my return next week. The masses need constant and continuing care, concern, leadership.

Once again, the twin war against poverty and terrorism marks my journey to the United Kingdom, to Canada, and to the United States.

Prime Minister Blair invited me to London to discuss how to achieve lasting international peace and prosperity, how this can be achieved after winning the war on terrorism. I will share my views on the inter-linkages between the problems of poverty and terrorism in the light of enabling countries and peoples to become full participants in global economic development.

The U.K. is currently our biggest foreign investor. It is one of the largest stakeholders in the Philippines, being heavily immersed in the Malampaya project, which is the single biggest investment in our country.

Britain is now leading the peacekeeping phase in Afghanistan. I intend to get more details from Mr. Blair about the involvement of various countries in this phase.

Peacekeeping is an integral part of the global commitment to the war against terrorism. And so will be our involvement in post-conflict nation-building. In this, we shall continue to rely on the excellence of the great Filipino worker, whose quality and dedication are renowned.

At the same time, my trip to Great Britain has a special angle in terms of the fight against crime. We want Scotland Yard to train our policemen in the fine points of dealing with kidnappers. Scotland yard is known to be one of the best detective organizations in the world. We want our cops to imbibe proven lessons in surveillance and extrication of hostages and kidnap victims. This is essential for our current thrusts in law enforcement.

On top of all these, the Philippines and Britain have many shared values and political convictions ranging across vital global issues. On the people-to-people level, NGO collaboration between our two countries in the fields of environment, conservation, child welfare and micro finance has been active and effective.

This is also true in the case of Canada, which i shall visit upon the invitation Prime Minister Jean Chretien after my one-day sojourn to London.

The Philippines and Canada have forged a long and constructive relationship forged by shared ideals and interests, which include the promotion of human security, human rights, good governance, private enterprise development, and social empowerment.

We have an annual trade with Canada of half-a-billion dollars. In the last 15 years, Canada has provided us more than 300 million dollars in official development assistance or O.D.A.. through the Canadian International Development Agency or CIDA.

CIDA grants have targeted areas of concern that are important for our thrusts in poverty reduction and good governance, especially at the level of local government units. Much has also been coursed to development of small and medium enterprises, and social projects that benefit Mindanao and the ARMM, Western Visayas, and other poverty-stricken areas.

Canada is also the home of more than 300,000 Filipinos, who constitute a visible ethnic group in that country. Filipinos who migrate to Canada belong to the highly skilled categories in the service sector: professionals in information and communications technology, medical workers including doctors and nurses, and care givers among others.

Indeed, Canada is the host to the great Filipino worker.

The world knows our great Filipino workers and we are proud of them. In every nook and corner of progress and development, our workers are there, turning the wheels of industry, managing the networks of global commerce, healing the sick, and teaching the young.

In Canada and elsewhere, our strategy for human capacity building is to transform our labor force into the new economy work force. Internationally, we shall prepare our workers for the most productive, rewarding and fulfilling jobs. At home, we will promote fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful and which can use our most competitive resource — the great Filipino worker.

This will also be the thematic background of my meeting with the members of the Canadian business community as well as the British business community to whom I will present our continuing gains in economic stability in the face of an otherwise sluggish trend around the world. Aside from inviting more investments, I will encourage the growth of trade, which has a large potential for expansion. The Philippines can supply Canada fresh tropical fruits, electronics, garments and other products.

I also hope to be able to raise Philippine-Canadian relations to a new level of cooperation on security matters. In this vein, I will seek the extradition of Filipino fugitives who have sought refuge in that country.

Onward to New York, I shall attend the annual meeting of the World Economic Forum, the world's most prestigious business forum. The thrust of the meeting is "Leadership in Fragile Time: A Vision for a Shared Future."

It has six themes: one, addressing security and addressing vulnerability; two, redefining business challenges; three, reducing poverty and improving equity; four, reevaluating leadership and governance; five, restoring sustained growth; and six, sharing values and respecting differences.

The themes of the summit fall squarely in line with the priorities of my administration. We are reducing our vulnerability to terrorism through joint training with American troops. We are fighting poverty with a wide array of political, economic and social tools. We have restored good governance. We are on our way to sustained growth.

I shall speak of my experiences in stabilizing the economy, deepening the political horizon and strengthening the political will against crisis. In the exchange, I hope I can earn for our nation and our people, the continuing credibility we need to gain more investments and more jobs.

Across my entire journey, I shall speak with our Filipino communities, informing them of our programs to nurture our political and socioeconomic gains through the current crisis, and seek their support for shoring up national stability and growth.

We shall interface the Philippines and the world in a manner that shall demonstrate genuine strategic partnerships, mutual respect and sincere friendship, an abiding vision of a new world of democracy, freedom, human security and equality.

Once more, leaders of the Philippine Congress and local governments will join me in these endeavors. And our business delegation will provide the vanguard of enterprise building.

I therefore look forward to boarding my flight, my commercial flight, bearing in mind the great stake that all Filipinos hold in the pursuit of aggressive, common sensical, and constructive foreign policy.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Departure Ceremonies for an Official/Working Visit to the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231055/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7594&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Philippine Trade and Investment Business Briefing

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Philippine Trade and Investment Business Briefing organized by the Trade Partners UK and the International Financial Services of London (IFSL)

[Delivered in Great George Street, London, U.K., January 28, 2002]

Thank you very much sir Anthony cleaver.

Secretary Vince Perez; Ambassador Bautista; Ambassador Collins; Mr. Potter; Mr. Guest; Ms. Clark; peter; other distinguished participants of this seminar; ladies and gentlemen:

I am pleased to be here with you this afternoon. And I hope that you find this briefing useful in providing a picture of the Philippine economy.

My administration is determined to provide good business conditions by maintaining the bedrock of any country's competitiveness: an adherence to a long-term vision, predictable and stable rules of the game, and most of all, policies that are reform-oriented.

I presented my vision for the nation a year ago. On January 20th 2001, after taking my Oath of Office as President of the Philippines at high noon, I said:

We must be bold in our national ambitions, so that our challenge must be that within the decade, we will win the battle against poverty.

I said I would focus my energy on making the economy grow despite the harsh economic environment of 2001. I created a plan and I have made a substantial down payment to achieve that result in my first 12 months.

The plan consists of four components: the first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. The second is agricultural modernization founded on social equity. The third is a sectoral and social bias toward the disadvantaged in our economic development plan. And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

The presentations here by Secretary Perez underscore the fact, I hope, that in 2001, we were successful in putting the economy back on track.

Where bigger and richer economies failed, ours moved forward.

Where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours held firm. Indeed, we have gone a long way to bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world. A new Cabinet, picked as much for their integrity as for their competence and qualifications, has brought professionalism in public service to new heights. Much of what the world's investment community has asked of us, we have thus far delivered. For instance, the power reform bill and the money laundering act, long considered litmus tests of our political will to legislate reforms, were put into law, firmly overcoming years of delay. Our public deficit has been placed under control.

Interest rates and inflation rates have declined.

Even recent unemployment rates have shown a decline.

Our economic plan recognizes that sound macroeconomics must be an ever-present precondition to achieving sustained ground level results.

And so this is what we have done, and i suppose the best proof that the world applauds our macroeconomics is the good performance we have been having in the international financial market including the London market.

In addition to the credit-enhanced 50 billion yen passed through Shobosai bonds late last year, the latest global bond offering in January of this year raised a total of 750 million dollars, on subscriptions worth 2.5 billion dollars, and issued at a lower rate than guidance price.

Responsible monetary management also contributes to the stabilization of our economic environment. Steps taken by the central bank helped us reduce inflation and support a stable peso. The bank has also effectively stamped out the speculative activity that has hurt so many of the world's economies. Our strong reserve position, combined with projected dollar values, should continue to be supportive of current or even stronger peso valuation levels this year.

In sum, improving fiscal outlook, strong foreign reserves position, price stability, and a supportive monetary policy all point to the fact that we have created, we have achieved a good level of macroeconomic stability.

Leading international credit rating agencies and multilateral bodies such as NEXI, JBIC, the World Bank, and the Asian Development Bank have all responded by endorsing our enhanced credit worthiness.

In its January to February 2002 credit research, Salomon Smith Barney says: "increasing risk appetite in 2002 should favor the Philippines among Asian nations.

"We expect the Philippines' ratings to stay on the balance in 2002."

Salomon characterizes the Philippines as "gaining momentum."

It recognizes that "economic growth has been resilient largely thanks to strong personal consumption and some well-performing agriculture and service sectors ... This could be bolstered," it says, "by the government's growing credibility in the eyes of foreign investors ... Given the government's commendable performance in 2001," it says, "we expect it should stay close to its more difficult targets in 2002."

They further predict that "the biggest source of credit improvement for the sovereign this year will be the success of its power privatization program, part of its efforts to raise foreign direct investment and improve the public sector balance sheet ... The government is set to begin the sale of transmission assets in 2002."

Indeed, not quoting anymore, part of our commitment to prudent debt management is to assist the national power corporation, or NAPOCOR, in sourcing funds to carry out the power sector privatization program. 250 million dollars of our most recent 750 million dollar bond offer, coupled with the Euro 500 million bond issue last November, is being used to refinance the assets of NAPOCOR in preparation for the privatization. These very successful issues were made possible by the passage of the power reform bill that i mentioned earlier, one of the first and significant reform milestones of this administration in last year.

The privatization of NAPOCOR will unlock a major bottleneck to industrial development while providing long-term fiscal benefits, not only from asset sale receipts but also from reduction in the government's associated contingent and direct liabilities. As you have heard from Secretary Perez, we are pleased to say that the sale of transmission assets will begin by June of this year, as planned.

Foreign direct investment levels also exceeded targets during 2001. Investments registered with the board of investments reached a total of 102 billion pesos as of the end of last year, against projections of only 50 billion pesos for the entire year. Those investments were primarily channeled into telecommunications and manufacturing. The success in attracting these new investments also contributed to steady external balance levels.

While historically foreign investments in the Philippines have been dominated by the Americans and the Japanese, British investors have recently been at the forefront as more companies now follow pioneers such as UNILIVER, British gas, Glaxo, United Biscuits, among others. In the year 2000, 47 percent of total foreign investments to the Philippines came from the U.K., as the largest single project investment by shell exploration of 4.5 billion dollars went into the Malampaya gas project.

It is our goal to further strengthen our ties with European investors. It is in this light that late last year, we were heartened by the strong reception to the 500 million worth of Euro bonds, proceeds of which are on loan to NAPOCOR.

Europe as a whole market is a major trading partner, having overtaken Japan, and now ranking the second highest in our list of trading partners next to the U.S. and in Europe, our biggest partner is the U.K.

Total trade between the Philippines and the U.K. has been growing at an impressive rate of 12 percent per annum for the past six years. Philippine goods to the U.K. have increased by 18.31 percent per annum, in line with the increasing competitiveness of our technology products.

We are promoting fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful and which can use our most competitive resource — which is the great Filipino worker.

I understand that from the U.K. perspective, Southeast Asia is an important market totaling 3.8 billion pounds. It is a bigger market than Japan, or Australia and New Zealand combined, and four times bigger than China, although with half of its population. And the Philippines accounts for 10 percent of the region's imports from the U.K.

But of course much work remains to be done. We must work with the international community to root out terrorism. We must return the reputation of Manila and the Philippines as a welcoming and safe place in which to live and do business. We must increase the benefits from our new global relevance and engagement after years of being isolated and adrift.

And we will continue, therefore, our long-term structural reform.

Government will continue to do its part to make the environment more congenial to business as we continue to provide more public infrastructure, more rational power costs, and competitive investment incentive packages.

To encourage strength in the domestic economy — which is what propped us up over the last year — we are looking to bring new financing vehicles to small and medium-scale enterprises and the housing sector.

Small and medium-scale enterprises are too small for the attention of traditional banks. Thus we recently approved a proposal by the development bank of the Philippines to use Japanese O.D.A. funds worth 200 million dollars for credit schemes for small and medium enterprises.

On the part of housing, private asset management initiatives will take on non-performing loans and unlock bottlenecks in the housing sector.

To make many of these moves possible, we are having combined inflation targeting and employment targeting as a focus of our strategy.

Sustained growth will also strengthen our relationship with investors and our ability to provide you with the opportunities worthy of your confidence. Accordingly, I would like to invite you to come to my country as I am sure that you will not be disappointed by the initiatives we have taken. We shall continue to pursue these with consistency and determination.

And because we have had in these past few years great partnerships — Malampaya gas, number one trading partner in Europe, number one current investor — I hope that in the years to come, the U.K. and the Philippines will be closer than brothers.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Philippine Trade and Investment Business Briefing organized by the Trade Partners UK and the International Financial Services of London (IFSL). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231021/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7590&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a Lecture at the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Lecture at the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS)

[Delivered at the IISS, Arundel House, Arundel St., Temple Place, London, U.K., January 28, 2002]

His Excellency Ambassador Bautista; Her Majesty's Ambassador to the Philippines, Ambassador Collins; excellencies, members of the diplomatic corps; officials of her majesty's foreign and commonwealth office; officials of the Philippine delegation; other distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I am delighted to have this opportunity to address the Institute of Strategic Studies during my one day visit to London.

The events of September 11, 2001 are now seared in our mind as the incarnation of horror and tragedy.

As a citizen of the developing world and as president of the Philippines, I can perhaps speak with some intimacy of the challenge and the opportunity before us as a result of September 11.

Long before September 11, the Philippines fought terrorism on its soil and gained the upper hand, isolating terrorism insurgents to a few small islands. We have felt the pain of terrorism first hand and knew it must not spread to the rest of the world. That is why we were the first in Asia to lend our support to the fight against international terrorism.

The Philippines and Britain stand shoulder-to-shoulder in the fight against global terrorism. Prime Minister Blair has been an extraordinary leader. He has brought a strong, decisive voice to the cause and genuine concern and subtlety brokering the many complexities of the coalition.

And as far as the coalition is concerned, instead of being blindsided by the horror of September 11, the international community confronted terrorism directly and took its fight to its citadels. In place of fear and helplessness, there is now confidence that the fight can be won.

Success in the war against terrorism is inevitable. But it is also likely that the coalition nations who got together to fight terrorism can slowly drift away. And unfortunately, poverty — the twin of terrorism — will linger. We must not let that happen. That is why I embrace the fresh thinking of Prime Minister Blair to seize the moment and keep our coalition together to create global prosperity.

In the uplifting sight of Afghan women crying in joy over their liberation from the cruelties of the Taliban, we see the shadows of the struggles to come in making Afghanistan a viable state and working economy.

Multiply Afghanistan's situation to about one-fifth of all humanity, and we can imagine the scale of the challenge. According to the World Bank, "half the developing world — some two billion people — live in countries that have seen little growth in the last two decades. And even in those developing countries that have been doing relatively well, hundreds of millions of people are marginal to the progress of growth. As a result, well over one billion people, around 20 percent of the population of this planet, live on less than one dollar a day."

This 20 percent are the constituency to whom terrorists and extremists sing their siren song — with great success. This is why some of us are anxious that the flush of military victory in Afghanistan will not stop at the edge of this larger struggle against poverty.

Your Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Gordon Brown, describes this phase of the war as the struggle to “win the peace.”

A new kind of war requires a new kind of peace. The hallmarks of any new global alliance to alleviate poverty must be market-driven, solve a real human problem, and demand accountability from those nations that benefit. It cannot be the same old formula of handouts to the have-nots. Rather, it must be a hand-up for the self-reliant.

I can speak only for the Philippines when I say that we pride ourselves on our national self-reliance and our regional Asian unity in addressing our problems. But we also recognize that we have much to learn and gain from our developed brothers and sisters.

We have put a face on terrorists, and now we must put a face on the poor. We will eliminate terrorism and we must eliminate poverty. If we do not, the breeding ground of resentment will begin again to plague another generation. At the dawn of the 21st century, we cannot go another generation in the history of mankind without slaying the dragon of poverty. Leaders of all nations, rich and poor, must harness the power of modern society and technology to advance the quality of life of every global citizen. We cannot do so with stars in our eyes but with determination in our hearts.

As the military effort against terrorism comes to a conclusion in the Philippines, we will be free to turn our sights to another form of terror, as I said, poverty. And again, Prime Minister Blair is leading the way with fresh new thinking on this age old plague.

The Prime Minister knows that terrorism will never completely go away in the Philippines or other poor countries unless we root out the handmaiden of terrorism which is poverty. And I applaud the Prime Minister and his government for seeking to turn the power of the global anti-terror campaign into a force for global prosperity.

The course laid out by the United Kingdom is a positive and commendable step forward. Prime Minister Blair has eloquently spoken of the need to build in the third world “enabling states” for sustained growth in place of “failed states” from which terrorism draws sustenance. And this has been extended by Sir Gordon Brown’s bold, new plan for “a global alliance for prosperity between developing and developed worlds.”

I have come to London to discuss with Prime Minister Blair and other leaders how this vision can be transformed into a practicable international initiative for spreading prosperity. Part of this process is reconciling the concerns of developing countries with the perspective of developed economies.

In my view, this ambitious agenda should at least include the following:

First and foremost, the agenda must address what has been called the silent emergency in the world today — the plight of the poorest of the poor who live on the edge of famine, disease, illiteracy and despair. Developed and developing nations should mount together a concerted effort to turn the situation around. The humanitarian effort now being carried out in Afghanistan must be replicated in many other distressed areas.

Second, the agenda must promote greater trade between developed and developing countries that must be used for poverty reduction and development. Trade liberalization can mean billions of dollars to poor countries, yet developed countries continue to exercise protectionism. We should now seize the new round of multilateral negotiations under the WTO as an opportunity to make trade serve development.

Third, the agenda must encourage the flow of greater private capital from the developed to the developing countries. Foreign direct investment — and the technology transfer it brings — stimulates development in poor countries. For this to happen, developing countries must open their economies to foreign investment. In turn, foreign companies and capital must get more engaged in developing countries that upgrade their policies and standards.

Fourth, the agenda should supplement debt restructuring with an increased level of financial aid. The proposal of Sir Gordon Brown for the creation of an investment fund of 50 billion dollars a year to help boost developing countries sustain development will be a great boost.

Fifth and finally, the agenda must actively support institutional capacity building in the developing countries to improve governance, empower civil society, increase transparency, and increase openness and pluralism. Weak administrative capacity hobbles many poor countries. It is not an accident that terrorism thrives in failed societies — communities where government has failed and citizens are alienated.

I agree that for this new initiative to succeed, developed and developing countries alike must accept new responsibilities to go with the new opportunities. Poor countries must meet the challenge of adopting standards of transparency and accountability and building market economies so as to become real partners in investment and trade. The answer to globalization is to get productively engaged in the world economy, not to withdraw from it.

In turn, developed countries must recognize their duty to open their markets, transfer resources and reform international institutions. It is a fact that how rich countries manage their economies determines stability in the world's financial system and the availability of resources for the development of poor countries.

And the entire agenda will work only if infused with a real spirit of cooperation. We must believe that in freeing the poor from the prison of poverty, all nations will reap the boon of a more tranquil and peaceful world.

In my lifetime, i want to be able to look into the eyes of a young Filipino and see a confident gaze, free from fear — free from the fear of terrorism, free from the fear of poverty. And free to live a life of dignity and prosperity.

Everyone must appreciate that our obligation to our people in the Philippines is to put food on the table for the hungry today and not merely promise a better life tomorrow. Just as we search out and destroy terrorism, we must search out and destroy the terror of poverty. There is evil in being hungry just as there is evil in being a destructive terrorist. We must work together as a family of nations to alleviate both.

To sum up then, we have reason to cheer that the ongoing war against terrorism is making significant progress. But victory in this struggle does not depend only on winning the battles of this war. We must also win the peace.

And winning the peace means in the last analysis winning the battle for development. As Pope John Paul II says, “development is the other name of peace.”

The peace and security we seek impels us to confront the conditions and also the reasons why terrorism can so easily spread.

We know that evil causes terrorism but the evil of terrorism would not be able to spread so much if we did not have so much poverty. And so it is important to realize that terrorism thrives whenever there is poverty and misery.

By extending our present coalition for peace into a coalition for prosperity — and by mounting an earnest program for poverty eradication and economic development — we could ignite hope and dynamism among the poor as they have never known in all our history.

And would it not be a great irony, indeed — but a beautiful irony — if this period which terrorists sought to turn into a time of destruction, becomes instead a time of building and raising all mankind towards progress.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Lecture at the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231032/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7591&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during an Ecumenical Service

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During an Ecumenical Service

[Delivered at the Westminster Cathedral, Victoria Street, U.K., January 28, 2002]

Maraming salamat Ambassador Bautista.

Bishop Roche; Lord Meyers; Ecumenical guests; members of the diplomatic corps; members of parliament; NHS administrators; mga kaibigan sa Philippine community dito sa United Kingdom; other guests; ladies and gentlemen:

Good afternoon to all of you. At sa ating mga kababayan, magandang hapon sa inyong lahat. Nung atin kung kapangpangan a kabalen keti mayap a gatganapun kekungan. No adda kakailayak ti bangir ni mamang ko, naimbag nga malem yo amin, apo. Kun dunay mga nagikan sa mindanao kun asa ako nidako, maayong hapon kaninyong tanan. Kag kun may ara nga nga kasimanwa sa akong bana, maayong hapon sa inyo nga tanan.

Today is like no other: we have all found the time and the reason to gather together under one roof and marshal the power of our faith toward the dream of peace for all.

Maybe there's some of you who came because you were curious about the person of the Philippine president. I hope I have not disappointed any one among the curious.

But I think most of you came with a higher degree of curiosity: wondering whether we, coming from diverse backgrounds and faiths, can come together in common prayer.

In responding to the call to be part of today's service, we have enhanced our faiths by displaying our capability to build lasting channels of friendship, understanding and respect for one another. And I consider myself blessed and honored to be part of this unique celebration and service.

At siyempre isang malaking dahilan kung bakit ako'y dumalo rito sa pagdiriwang na ito, napakagandang pagkakataon na maki-isa sa ating kababayan na bumubuo sa Filipino community ng United Kingdom. Marami sa inyo ay tiga-Londress pero meron ding nanggaling sa Scotland, sa Northern Ireland at sa Wales, at gusto kong sabihin sa inyong lahat na pinagmamalaki ng mga Filipino sa Pilipinas ang mga Pilipino dito sa U.K.

Nung mga apat na taong nakaraan nagkaroon ng census: ang Filipino rito raw ay umaabot ng 50,000 at ang mga Filipino dito ay nasa mga critical na human resources areas ng Britanya, sa health sector, transportasyon, information technology, edukasyon at iba pang sektor na kinilala sa pambihirang husay at talino ng mga Pilipino. At ngayon mas lalo pa ngang kinikilala kayo: ngayon ang Filipino community sa loob ng apat na taon lumaki mula sa 50,000 umabot na ng 90,000.

Kamakailan lamang yung ating Senate pPresident, si Franklin Drilon, at saka yung ating Speaker, si Joe de Venecia, kasama ng ibang mga Senador at Congressmen, ay bumisita dito, inimbata ng British Interparliamentary Union, at sila'y pumunta sa Kingston Hospital at nakilala nila ang mahigit na 120 Filipino nurses at nakita nila, kwinento nila sa akin, kung papano nirerespeto ng hospital administrations ang ating mga kasamahan na Pilipino doon.

Sa Royal Free Hospital naman, sa pagkaintindi ko, may mahigit na 2,000 na Filipino doon at kayo rin ay kinikilala at hinahangaan.

Nalaman ko rin na merong 2,000 Filipinos na nasa Royal Mail, nadaanan ko nga sila kanina naka-uniporme, congratulations sa inyo.

May mga kasama rin tayong Filipino seafarer. Ang mga Filipino seafarer natin ay bahagi ng 200,000 na mga Filipino seafarer sa buong daigdig, in fact, sa pagkaintindi ko, number one yata tayo sa mga seafarers sa buong mundo. Wala yatang barko ngayon sa buong mundo na walang Filipinong crew member.

Kaya masasabi natin itong mga halimbawa wala nang duda kung gaano kahalaga ang papel ng dakilang manggagawang Filipino sa lipunan ng Inglatera.

At ngunit kahit pinili ng karamihan ninyo na mamuhay rito, alam ko na Pilipino pa rin kayo. Kasi ang Pilipino kahit na saan maninirahan ay nananatiling Pilipino sa puso at isipan. Alam ko rin na gusto niyong makabalita tungkol sa mga nangyayari sa Pilipinas lalo na sa mga pagbabagong nadudulot na doon sa ating bansa itong araw na ito.

A number of you have become very successful and have brought pride and honor to your adopted country, but at the same time you also bring pride and honor to our country because wherever the Filipino goes the Filipino worker is known for industry and the ability to do a good job. Wherever the Filipino worker goes, the Filipino worker shows extraordinary skill in the workplace and a resilience that makes the Filipino adopt to the culture of the new country.

Kaya tunay na pinagmamalaki kayo ng Pilipinas at kahit kami na mga government officials, halimbawa, nag-aalok ng investments sa ating bansa, ang sinasabi namin parati pumunta kayo sa Pilipinas dahil magagaling ang labor force, ang human resources ng Pilipinas, at madali silang maniwala dahil ang dami na nilang Pilipinong nakilala sa kanilang mga bansa. At sinasabi namin yung mga dakilang Pilipino na nakikita ninyo sa mga bansa ninyo doon sa Pilipinas sila nanggaling. The Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker. Yon ang ating ginagamit para mag-alok sa ating ibang mga kaibigan.

Kaya nagpupugay ako, kasama ng mga kababayan natin nasa Pilipinas, sa mga Pilipinong nakatira dito sa U.K., sa lahat ng inyong ginagawa para tulungan ang ating inang bayan at para ipaalam dito at sa buong mundo ang kadakilaan ng Pilipino. Talagang pinagmamalaki kayo, napakagaling ninyo at hindi lamang yon, hindi lamang kayo ay ambassador ng Pilipinas sa iba't-ibang bansa kagaya dito sa Inglatera, kung gaano kagaling kayo yun ang larawan na binibigay niyo tungkol sa Pilipinas. Hindi lamang yon, binibigyan na ngayon ninyo ng magandang mukha ang ating bansa sa ibang bansa kagaya rito nagpapadala pa kayo ng tulong sa ating bansa. We have seven million Filipinos all over the world and you send our country seven billion dollars every year, kaya nagpapasalamat ang Pilipinas sa inyo.

Seven billion dollars a year. Alam niyo na yung Shell, yung investment nila sa Malampaya, five billion dollars yun at yun ang tinuturing natin na pinakamalaking investment, single investment — five billion dollars — nung taong 2000 — eh kayo taun-taon seven billion dollars. Kaya taun-taon gumagawa kayo ng Malampaya doon sa ating bansa.

Kaya ang mga Pilipino na nanggagaling sa iba't-ibang bansa, nagtatrabaho sa iba't-ibang bansa, hindi lang natin tinuturing Overseas Filipino Worker dapat bansagan din bilang Overseas Filipino Investors dahil sa seven billion na ini-invest ninyo sa ating bansa taun-taon. At yung investment ninyo kahit saan pumupunta pag pinapadala ninyo sa inyong mga lipunan, sa inyong mga pamayanan, nakakapag-aral ng ilang mga bata doon, nakakapagtayo ng mga eskuwelahan, ng mga health center, nagkakaroon ng puhunan ôyung mga taga sa inyong mga lugar at nagkakaroon ng mga negosyo nila. Kaya talagang puhunan ang pinapadala ninyo — yung perang pinapadala ninyo ay puhunan, perang pinapadala ninyo ay investments sa kinabubuti ng inyong mga community.

Kaya bilang inyong pangulo, bilang pangulo ng mga lugar na tinutulungan ninyo, maraming salamat sa inyong mga investments sa ating bansa. The great Filipino worker, the great Filipino investor.

Kaya pag naghahanap tayo kung papano ngayon tayo aangat sa mundo, ngayon na meron tayong kumpitensya sa 21st century at ngayon na merong mga kahirapan ang buong mundo mula nung September 11, at mula pa dun mas maaga pa mula pa nung nagkaroon ng slow down yung Amerika at saka yung Hapon. Papano tayo aangat, papano natin mapapagpatuloy yung ating katatagan? Ang atin ngang inaasahan ay ang kadakilaan ng manggagawang Pilipino. Kaya ang pino-promote natin sa ating bansang Pilipinas ay Pyung mga industriya sa service sector na gumagamit ng kagalingan ng Filipino. Human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors, yan ang ating competitive advantage — kagaya ng information and communication technology, kasama ng turismo — dahil nga yun ang mga industriya na mabilis umangat, yun ang mga industriya na gumagamit ng kagalingan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Kaya mga kaibigan dito sa Inglatera, salamat sa inyong ginagawa para sa ating bansa. Salamat sa magandang mukhang binibigay niyo tungkol sa ating bansa. Salamat sa tulong na binibigay niyo na nagpapaangat ng ating ekonomiya.

Nung first quarter ng year 2001 ang ating GDP growth rate ay 3.1 percent, yun pag hindi kasama yung kontribusyon ng overseas Filipinos. pag sinama ang kontribusyon ng overseas Filipinos, yan na ang GNP, naging 3.7 percent. Kaya yung inyong seven billion dollars ay nagtutulong ng 0.6 percent sa ating 3.7 percent growth rate. Kaya napakalaki ang papel ninyo sa ating pag-angat ng ekonomiya sa Pilipinas kahit na kayo ay narito.

Kaya dahil kahit na kayo ay narito tumutulong kayo sa ating bansa, sa ating ekonomiya, talagang nararapat na bigyan kayo ng nararapat na atensyon at saka kapangyarihan. Kaya sinisikap ko na sana hindi tatagal na sana pumasa na sa wakas yung Overseas Filipino Voters' Rights. Eto ho ay natapos na doon sa committee level ng House of Representatives at nagdedebate na sila sa Plenary session. So sana po ito ay pagdasalan din natin para sa ganon yung inyong pinapadalang mga tulong sa Pilipinas ay babalik naman sa inyo sa kapangyarihan ng pagboboto sa mga official ng ating bansa.

At isa pang importanteng pinaglalaman ng inyong mga Congressmen at Senator ay yung Dual Citizenship dahil nga alam natin na kahit na kayo ay narito at maraming beses ay kumaha na kayo ng citizenship dito dahil yun ang paraan kung papano mananatili yung inyong iba't-ibang mga pribilehiyo ninyo, ang puso niyo ay nandun pa rin sa Pilipinas.

Magdasal tayo na itong dalawang panukalang batas na pinagkakaroon na ng debate sa Kongreso saka Senado ay papasa sa madaling panahon.

Ako ho ay nagpunta rito sa Inglatera para makita kayo at para ring makipagkita kay Prime Minister Tony Blair dahil ang Pilipinas at saka Inglatera ay kabalikat sa paglalaman kontra sa terorismo sa ating mundo. Sabi nga nila sa Europa ang pinakamatatag doon ay ang Inglatera at sa Asya ang pinakamatatag ay ang Pilipinas. Isang dahilan ay dahil sa ating malayong pulo, yung Basilan, kilala na natin kung ano ang ibig sabihin ng terorismo; at dahil kilala natin ang terorismo sa Basilan, alam din natin na ang terorismo at saka ang kahirapan ay magkakambal kaya pag nilalaban natin ang terorismo kailangan labanan din ang kahirapan at yun ang ating sinisikap na gawin.

At isa pa, itong problema ng terorismo, nung umpisa yung mga terorista sinikap nilang gawin na ito ay isang giyera ng mga relihiyon, ngunit sinasabi natin hindi yun giyera ng relihiyon kaya dapat magkaroon tayo ng lalong mas malawak na paguusap-usap sa iba't-ibang relihiyon.

The terrorists wish to make us believe that what is happening is a religious war. It is not a religious war, and what we must do is to turn the events of today and the response to those events into an opportunity for greater religious understanding and broader interfaith dialogue.

Ginagawa natin ito sa Pilipinas. Doon sa Pilipinas, mga Kristiyano at saka Muslim, lalong-lalo na pagkatapos ng September 11, ay ginawang mas matindi at mas masipag yung pag-uusap sa isa't-isa; at ginawang mas matindi yung pagsisikap na maintindihan ang isa't-isa.

At pagpunta ko rito nung binisita ko si Prime Minister Blair kanina, nagulat ako ngunit natuwa ako na sa katabi ng laban sa terorismo laban sa kahirapan, binigyan din pala ni Prime Minister Blair ng parehong kaimportansya yung interfaith dialogue. A few days ago Prime Minister Blair told me about the interfaith dialogue that was just concluded here in London. And so that is another commonality that the U.K. and the Philippines have — it is our devotion to the importance of interfaith dialogue.

So today in this church, this Catholic church which represents the majority of the Filipinos, we are here not in a Catholic mass but rather in an interfaith service because, as I said, during these times, these times of great challenge to peace, the more we understand the different faiths, the more we understand the different cultures, the more we will have universal understanding, the sooner we will have peace.

Kaya mga kaibigang mga Pilipino, kapwa Pilipino dito, salamat na kayo ay dumalo dito sa ating interfaith dialogue at higit doon, salamat na kayo ay dumalo dahil nagdadasal kayo para sa kapayapaan sa Pilipinas, nagdadasal kayo para sa kinabubuti ng Pilipinas. Pero higit sa lahat din, salamat dahil hindi lamang kayo nagdarasal, kayo ay nagsisikap, nagtatrabaho, nagpapadala ng puhunan, nagpapadala ng tulong sa ating bansa, talagang maging kayo ay nasa Pilipinas o nasa Inglatera, yung inyong kadakilaan ay nagbibigay ng biyaya sa inyong inang lupa.

Once again, fellow Filipinos, thank you for being here in this church with us today. Thank you for being wherever you are doing your work for the country you live in and for the country you come from.

And let me say once again, minamahal kayo ng inyong kapwa Pilipino, pinagmamalaki kayo ng inyong kapwa Pilipino. And therefore, may I pray also that you will have success always in your lives, in your careers for your good, the good of your family and the good of the Philippines.

Congratulations and thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during an Ecumenical Service. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231042/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7592&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with the Filipino community

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a meeting with the Filipino community

[Delivered at the Grand Ballroom, Crowne Plaza Hotel, Ottawa, Canada, January 29, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Alvarez sa pagpakilala.

And may I also take this opportunity to introduce to you the other members of our Official delegation. We have here the Senate President Pro-Tempore Senator Manny Villar, Senator Ralph Recto. We have Congresswoman Cynthia Villar of Las Pinas, Congressman Alipio Badelles of Lanao del Norte, Congressman Plaridel Abaya of Cavite, Congressman Edmundo Reyes of Marinduque. We also have Governor Parouk Hussin of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, Governor Willy Enverga of Quezon province, Governor Josie dela cruz of Bulacan, Mayor Lito Gatlabayan of Antipolo City. At mula sa Cabinet, si Secretary Dante canlas, Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Larry Baja, and Undersecretary of Trade Gregory Domingo.

Binabati ko siyempre ang nag-aalaga sa inyo dito, si Ambassador Benedicto at saka si Mrs. Benedicto. Mukhang mahal na mahal niyo siya kaya hindi ko siya pinalitan. I would also like to greet the Ambassador of Canada to the Philippines, Ambassador Collet; and former Ambassador to the Philippines, still a good friend of the Philippines, Ambassador John Treleaven; at sa inyong lahat mga kaibigan:

Magandang gabi po sa inyong lahat. Balamu atin kung Cabalen a Kapampangan keti. Ken no adda kakailyak ti bangir ni mamang ko, naimbag nga rabii yo amin, apo. San saray kabaleyan, masantos ya labi ed sikayon amin. Sa mga taga-mindanao, murag ni congressman ..., Maayo gabi kaninyo tanan. Kag sa mga kasimanwa sang akong bana, maayo gabi sa iyo nga tanan.

Natutuwa po ako at nagkaroon tayo ng pagkakataong magkasama-sama itong gabing ito dito sa magandang lungsod ng ottawa. At salamat sa mga nanggaling sa iba't-ibang mga lugar ang layu-layo ng montreal dito pero nakaabot kayo por que nagbisita.

Ako po ay narito sa Canada dahil sa imbitasyon ni Prime Minister Jean Chretien.

Ngunit ang isa pang mahalagang dahilan kung bakit kami ay naririto ay para makipag-usap sa 300,000 Overseas Filipinos dito sa Canada sa pamamagitan ninyo. At gusto ko ring pasalamatan ang gobyerno ng Canada sa halagang binibigay nila sa mga Pilipinong nakatira dito.

I have met Filipinos in Canada many times in the past.

But this time, I am doubly honored because for the first time I come as your president.

Bilang inyong pangulo, sa ngalan ng lahat ng inyong kababayan sa Pilipinas, pinupuri kayo ng inyong mga kapatid sa Pilipinas sapagkat sa pamamagitan ng inyong husay sa pagtatrabaho, inaangat ninyo ang pagkatao ng sambayanang Pilipino. Napapamalas ninyo sa mundo na ang Pilipino ay dapat ipagmalaki at hangaan.

Sa buong daigdig, nararamdaman ng mga bansa, ng mga may puhunan, ng mga magulang ang malaking tulong ng mga Pilipino, ang malaking tulong ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino. Kanya nalalagay nila sa isip nila na ang Pilipinas siguro nga ay tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Tinatanaw ng pamahalaan at ng taong-bayan ng Pilipinas ang kontribusyon ng mga overseas Filipinos sa ekonomiya at sa kabuhayang bansa, eto nga 'yung binigay niyo kanina 'yung isang halimbawa.

Ang inyong malaking tulong ay nagpapasigla sa ekonomiya at nagtutulak sa kaunlaran ng bansa.

Sa ibabaw ng magandang reputasyong na binibigay ninyo sa ating bansa bilang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino, milyun-milyong kabataan ang nakakapag-aral o nagtatapos ng edukasyon sa inyong tulong sa mga pinapadala ninyo sa Pilipinas.

Libu-libong bagong bahay ay napatatayo at nagkakaroon 'yung mga may bahay ng bagong buhay.

Dahil sa inyong tulong nakapaglunsad tayo ng napakaraming negosyo maging small business ng buong bansa.

Ang matagumpay na negosyo na napatayo sa ating bansa dahil sa inyong remittances ay isang malaking haligi ng ating ekonomiya.

Sumigla ang maraming barangay, bayan, lungsod, probinsiya sa kontribusyon ng mga overseas Filipinos.

Alam niyo ang pinakamalaking investment sa Pilipinas — foreign investment — ay five billion dollars, puhunan ng Shell sa Malampaya gas fields sa Pilipinas. Ngunit ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino ay taun-taon nagpapadala ng six billion dollars sa Pilipinas. Kaya hinahangaan natin ang Shell na nagbigay ng five billion dollars investment.

Ano pa ang mga Pilipino na nagbibigay ng six billion dollars investment every year? Kaya kayo'y major economic investors din sa ating bansa.

Kayo ang bagong economic investors ng bansa.

At sa aking palagay, dapat baguhin ang bansag na inyo sa bansa. Ang karaniwang tawag sa Pilipinong nasa ibang bansa ay overseas workers, pero palagay ko dapat kilalanin ang inyong kontribusyon, 'yung six billion dollars a year, dapat tawagin kayo bilang overseas Filipino investors.

Kayong mga overseas investors na araw-araw namumuhunan sa kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Pinupuhunan ninyo ang inyong "productive years" alang-alang sa ating bayan. Nagsasakripisyo kayo, ilan sa inyo malayo sa inyong mga mahal — mabuti na lamang dito sa Canada ay nadadala ninyo ang inyong pamilya, pero marami talaga sinasakripisyong malayo sa pamilya — para makamit ang mga pangarap para sa kanila. Kaya saludo ang inyong mga kababayang Pilipino sa inyo.

At dapat lamang suklian ng bansa ang inyong tulong.

Doon sa aking State of the Nation Address, sinabi ko na isang malaking prayoridad ng gobyerno ay ang pagpasa ng Absentee Voting Bill para sa mga Overseas Filipinos ay mabigyang kayo ng kapangyarihang makaboto at makapili ng mga mamumuno sa ating pamahalaan.

Nandito 'yong ating mga Senators at saka Congressmen. Kanina nung nagkaroon ng press conference pagkatapos ng aming bilateral ng Prime Minister ng Canada tinanong nga sa akin kumusta na ba 'yung kalagayan ng ating Overseas Filipino Voting Rights Bill na 1965 pa raw unang pinasok sa Kongreso. At ang ating mga Senador at Congressmen, sila ang sumagot at sabi nga nila ito ay tinatalakay na sa kongreso at inaasahan nila na sa wakas itong taon ay papasa.

Samahan niyo ako magdasal para pumasa na nga ito at maging batas na.

I also support the bill initiated by Congress and the Senate on dual citizenship.

You are a very important part of our economy as I illustrated earlier, and the Philippine economy will, for the foreseeable future, continue to be heavily dependent on overseas-worker remittances. Pitong milyong Pilipino ang nagtatrabaho sa ibayong dagat, mas marami pa sa mga nagtatrabaho sa mga korporasyon at kagawaran ng Pilipinas dahil 'yung mga nagtatrabaho sa mga korporasyon, mga opisina hindi umaabot ng pitong milyon dun sa Pilipinas.

On the basis of this and of the nation's humanitarian responsibilities to its people wherever they are, our government will work doubly hard to strengthen overseas Filipino workers' protection.

For instance, the department of foreign affairs is working on a "Tulong OFW" program whereby it has floated 100 million dollars-worth of "Bagong Bayani bonds" to support a new package of socioeconomic benefits for OFWs. The "Bagong Bayani Bonds" would raise funds to enable the OFWs to help them help themselves, to mobilize their savings to be invested in projects like housing programs back home.

We also have a housing program for overseas Filipinos under the housing and urban developing coordinating council. This is part of our goal to provide 100,000 housing units a year for workers, whether working in the Philippines or outside.

And I suppose by now you know that we have scrapped the requirement for overseas Filipino workers to file an income tax information sheet, and with that we have lifted the penalty for non-filing beginning tax year 2001.

We strengthen bilateral relations with countries hosting large numbers of Filipinos. Kasama na rito ang Canada.

Malaki ang inyong papel sa pagpapaunlad ng relasyon sa pamamagitan ng ating dalawang bayan. Kayong mga nagtatrabaho rito, kayong mga nakatira rito ang kinatawan ng Pilipinas sa Canada at inaasahan kayo na lalo pang magpapalakas sa ating magandang samahan.

In my State of the Nation Address last July 23rd, I cited the serious challenges facing the Philippines. The economy I inherited was stark and daunting. There were four million jobless. This has correspondingly led to a rise in poverty incidence to 40 percent of the population. The budget deficit threatened to balloon to 225 billion Pesos.

And the New York incident changed the global mood and world conditions became even more uncertain.

But despite the stark economy we inherited, and despite the uncertain world business conditions, in 2001, we made progress. Where richer and bigger economies failed, ours moved forward. Dante Canlas, our socioeconomic planning minister told me that we just finished accounting the figures for GDP and GNP for the year 2001. Our GDP growth rate was 3.4 percent, our GNP growth rate — which includes your remittances — was 3.7 percent — in a sea of countries that have zero growth rate, negative growth rate or even recession. Thank you for contributing to our growth rate.

And where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours held firm.

Indeed, we have gone a long way to bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world. A new Cabinet, picked as much for their integrity as for their competence and qualifications, has brought professionalism in public service to new heights. Our public deficit has been placed under control.

Interest rates and inflation rates have declined. Interest rates are at their lowest in the last 15 years. Our economy continues to grow despite faltering economies all around us, as I've said.

Even recent unemployment rates have shown periods of decline.

But the days and months ahead will still be filled with daunting challenges, however, I do not fear as long as I have your support. And I thank you for expressing your support.

Indeed, now is once again the time to prove our mettle as a nation and as a people.

We can sustain our economic rebirth by thinking Filipino to the extent that you came from here, buying Filipino, and I know what you do very well, investing Filipino.

When I became President last January, I told the people about my vision of winning the war against poverty within the decade. Trabaho. Edukasyon. Sariling tahanan. Pagkain sa bawat mesa. This, in common sense and plain talk, is the core of my vision.

I also urged everyone listening to my State of the Nation Address last July 23rd to set aside bickering and politicking for at least one year. Sa halip ng alitan, hiningi kong isang taon tayong magtulungan sa ikabubuti ng taong-bayan.

To succeed, our national agenda must revolve around four components — apat na elemento ng pakikibaka sa kahirapan.

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. Pagnenegosyo upang dumami ang trabaho.

The second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. Palalaguin ang kita at ani ng maralitang tagabukid.

The third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. Pagkalinga sa mga bahagi ng lipunan na naiiwanan ng kaunlaran.

And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society. Moralidad sa gobyerno at lipunan bilang saligan ng tunay na kaunlaran.

We are promoting fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful — service industries that mobilize the great Filipino worker. One of them is information and communication technology or ICT. Tomorrow I will speak before the Ottawa businessmen and the Toronto businessmen to let them know that Filipino workers are ranked no. 1 in the field of ICT, no. 1 among knowledge workers. Analysts have pointed to two developing countries as the likely world centers for ICT, software development and data management in this decade: India and the Philippines.

Aside from ICT, we also have the competitive edge in tourism.

And in agriculture, there can be a million new jobs which is what we're trying to look for. Upang lumikha ng isang milyong trabaho sa kanayunan, taun-taon gumagastos tayo ng dalawampung bilyong piso; in fact last year we spent 21 billion pesos.

Ang hinihingi ko po sa inyo, mga kababayan, ay ang inyong patuloy na pag-unawa sa mga nangyayari sa bayan natin at pagtitiwala na ginagampanan ng inyong pamahalaan ang aming tungkulin sa abot ng aming kakayahan. Ang hiling ko ay magkaisa tayo.

I am touched by your show of affection and support. And I ask that your unified sentiments and actions be also reflected in your continuing faith in your Philippine government. I am counting on all of you.

Muli, mga kaibigan, maraming salamat at mabuhay ang dakilang Pilipino na nakatira dito sa Canada.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech During a Meeting with the Filipino Community. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230945/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7587&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a Dinner hosted by the Right Honourable John Cretien, Prime Minister of Canada and Mrs. Aline Chretien
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Dinner hosted by the Right Honourable John Cretien, Prime Minister of Canada and Mrs. Aline Chretien

[Delivered at the National Gallery of Canada, Ottawa, Canada, January 29, 2002]

Your Excellency the Right Honorable Jean Chretien, Prime Minister of Canada; Les Membres distingues du Gouvernement Canadien; Excellencies of the Diplomatic Corps; Colleagues in the Philippine Government; les representants de la Communaute Economique; members of the Filipino Community in Canada; Mes Amis, Mesdames et Messieurs:

Ma visite aujourd'hui de ce grand pays, le Canada, est bien une occasion propice pour renouer de fort liens amicaux et historiques. Depuis plus d'un siecle, nos relations temoignent d'un dynamisme croissant.

A ce propos, je suis reconnaissante au gouvernement Canadien pour sa gracieuse invitation et son Chaleureux Accueil.

Depuis plus d'un an, j'ai releve le defi d'assumer la presidence de mon pays dans un passage difficile. J'ai promis de restaurer la confiance du peuple philippin en son gouvernement, d'etablir une societe reellement democratique, et d'ameliorer la qualite de vie de chacun de ses membres. Je suis heureuse aujourd'hui de constater que nous sommes sur le point d'atteindre notre objectif. Malgre les problemes divers poses par la situation economique mondiale et ceux crees par l'onze Septembre.

The economic prosperity of Canada is remarkable. Information and communications technology or ICT, which I learned is centered in Ottawa, is one of the major reasons for this. I hope that Canada can share its expertise towards the development of the ICT sector in the Philippines.

Although the Philippines was not spared from the effects of the global trends of 2001, we gained resiliency through maintaining economic fundamentals while pump-priming domestic demand. As a result, our GDP growth of 3.4 percent and GNP growth of 3.7 percent was among the highest in the world.

Our country's growth relies on investments. This is where we look towards Canada and the international business community to spur the Philippine economy and to contribute to its long-term stability and security. And Mr. Prime Minister, I know that many Filipinos have investments in Canada, they have even residences in Canada. So it's a two-way street.

Trade and investment between our two countries can and must be developed further. Canadian businesses can continue to take advantage of the best of both worlds — knowledge from Canada and capital from Canada and skilled human resources from the Philippines, the home of the great Filipino worker.

Stronger partnerships will make Canadian companies more profitable, while giving our country the benefit of high technology and greater economic activity.

Thus I have extended an invitation to His Excellency the Prime Minister to visit the Philippines in the near future and lead another team Canada mission, similar to those he led in 1995 and 1997.

There is no better proof of the skills of the great Filipino worker than the contributions of Filipino migrants to Canada. This wonderful country is the adopted home of, as His Excellency said, some 320,000 Filipinos who have either taken up citizenship or residency in Canada. We are proud of Rey and we are proud that many other Filipinos have contributed to the well-being, cultural diversity, and economic prosperity of this great country.

Our meetings today reinforced the excellent relations that have existed between our two countries since that historical point mentioned by his Excellency when Sunlife assurance of Canada established a branch in Manila in 1895.

It is always a great honor and privilege therefore for Filipinos and Filipino leaders like me to be in the company of our Canadian friends, and strengthening a friendship that began more than a century ago and that without doubt, will continue for many centuries more.

Allow me also to express the gratitude of all Filipinos for the continued assistance the Philippines receives from Canada. Through CIDA, Canada continues to be a partner in our development efforts through projects pursued in tandem with both government and the private sector.

Tomorrow, after meeting the business community in Ottawa and Toronto, and after meeting the Filipino community in Toronto, we shall leave Canada confident that the goodwill between Canadians and Filipinos is steadfast and secure.

In the spirit of friendship then, I ask you all to join me in a toast to the government and people of Canada, to the enduring bonds between the Canadian and Filipino people, to his Excellency the Prime Minister and Madame Chretien.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Dinner hosted by the Right Honourable John Cretien, Prime Minister of Canada and Mrs. Aline Chretien. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231007/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7588&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during a meeting with the Canadian Business Leaders at the I.T. Networking Session

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a meeting with the Canadian Business Leaders at the I.T. Networking Session

[Delivered at the Tudor Room Mezzanine, Fairmont Royal York Hotel, Toronto, Canada, January 30, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Mr. Sykes; Mr. Garcia; Mr. Lim; other distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen:

I'm very happy to be here with you this afternoon in this I.T. forum appropriately held in the global City of Toronto. With your vibrant economy and your 3,000 ICT firms, your city is indeed tangible proof that technology is a major key to economic growth.

In the Philippines today, as you may have heard from my colleagues, we have also identified ICT — information and communications technology — as the key to finding our niche in the 21st century. This is because we feel that our growth sectors are in the human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors, like, as I said, ICT, tourism, health care and other similarly skill-intensive sectors. Thanks to our millions of educated, English-speaking and I.T. literate workforce, the Philippines is fast becoming a hub for information and communications technology.

Our strategy for human capacity building is to transform our labor force into the new economy workforce. And to this end to be able to continue the supply of knowledge workers to the next generation, to the next batch, we are placing more emphasis on improving basic education in math and science. And in the tertiary level, in human resource development activities to create a pool of ICT professionals to our certification programs for programmers. My administration is also committed to expanding the country's physical ICT infrastructure. Even now we already offer foreign investors dedicated I.T. zones and cyberparks with reliable telecom infrastructure and high bandwidth. We are continually working on initiatives to further improve high-speed connectivity at low cost. My administration is also concentrating on improving the policy and legislative environment for ICT. Already we have an e-commerce law one of the first countries in Asia to do so was the Philippines. Our e-commerce law regulates the use of electronic technology and penalizes cybercrimes such as hacking. And we are going to pass even more laws related to security issues and also to convergence.

In line with my administration's focus on I.T. as a priority sector, I hope that the Canadian community will be attending the e-services Philippines, the country's major I.T. services fair on February 7 to 9th, in Manila. I hope you will visit this fair to learn more about business opportunities in the I.T. sector and to network with Philippine I.T. companies. We know that many foreign companies will be visiting the Philippines for this event. With Canada being a world leader in e-commerce and ICT and we the Philippines possessing the highly skilled and trainable I.T. labor force to make it Asia's hub for back office operations and its services, promising business opportunities are open to both sides for business alliances in this sector. And considering the global revenue projections for world outsourcing of I.T. services is showing significance shift towards the Asian region where American and European companies are increasingly contracting out their services to take advantage of lower cost, it will be indeed a wise move for Canadian companies to be a step ahead of your competition by choosing the new economy — Philippines — your winning e-services partner.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Meeting with the Canadian Business Leaders at the I.T. Networking Session. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230855/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7582&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a Luncheon hosted by the Empire Club and the Canadian Club of Toronto Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Luncheon hosted by the Empire Club and the Canadian Club of Toronto

[Delivered at the Ballroom, Fairmont Royal York Hotel, Toronto, Canada, January 30, 2002]

Thank you.

Thank you very much, Mr. ... For your kind introduction.

Secretary of State ...; Gordon Mckyver, President of the Canada Club of Toronto; Mr. Wo, Vce Chairman of International Banking and Wealth Management of ...; Honorable Brenda Elliot; my colleagues in the Philippine delegation who are here in the head tables: Senate President Pro Tempore Manny Villar, Senator Ralph Recto, Congressman Alipio Badelles, Congressman Plaridel Abaya, Congressman Edmundo Reyes, Congresswoman Cynthia Villar; Ambassador Benedicto, Ambassador Colette, Consul General Castrense. And may I also introduce our officials who are not in the head table, we have the Governor of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao Parouk Hussin; the Governor of Bulacan province, Josie dela Cruz; the Governor of Quezon province, Willy Enverga; the City Mayor of Antipolo, Lito Gatlabayan; my Cabinet members and other officials; other guests in the three head tables; ladies and gentlemen:

Yesterday, I had a productive and meaningful day in Ottawa. Prime Minister Chretien and I agreed that this is a good time to expand our trade and investment relations.

And today, thank you for this opportunity to speak at this prestigious forum with such a long and distinguished history more than a hundred years old. Many world leaders of the likes of Winston Churchill have had the privilege of addressing the members of both the empire club and the Canadian club of Toronto over the years. And considering the strong and friendly relations between Canada and the Philippines, I am not surprised to hear from Bill Laidlo that among the world leaders who have spoken before this forum are my two predecessors, President Corazon Aquino and President Fidel Ramos. President Aquino spoke here many, many years ago and so did President Ramos, but I am also very glad to hear from Gordon Mckyver that for a long time now this crowd has been the most sell-out crowd that they have had in this club. And i thank you very much for your support.

Our interaction is indeed meaningful especially today. Today we are strong allies in the fight against terrorism and in the fight against poverty. The Philippines has a special bond with Canada arising from our over 300,000 Filipinos whom Canada has welcomed as immigrants. And of the 300,000, 150,000 are here in Toronto.

Our economic relations are deep, solid, and robust.

Prime Minister Chretien accompanied his team Canada business delegation in January of 1997, where at that time 31 million dollars in commercial contracts and 469 million dollars in business agreements were signed. In November of that year, the team Philippines business delegation visited Canada and a total of 1.4 billion dollars-worth of agreements were signed.

Since then, Philippine-Canadian business relations have continued to grow even more.

Total trade between our two countries reached 1.2 billion dollars in the year 2000, an increase of 45 percent over 1997. And last month, SNC Lavalin, one of Canada's leaders in engineering and construction, signed an implementation agreement worth one billion dollars to finance, design and construct a light rail transit extension to the suburbs of Manila, to the district of Congressman Plaridel Abaya. The deal represents one of the biggest agreements signed in Philippine-Canadian history.

And there is more in store for our economic relations.

Since I assumed the presidency a year ago, we have made progress. Where bigger and richer economies failed, ours has moved forward. Our gross domestic product grew 3.4 percent in 2001 and our gross national product increased 3.7 percent, one of the highest growth rates in this world today where many countries are suffering from recession.

And where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours has held firm, even though, as the IMF acknowledges, I am the only president who assumed office following a period of political and economic turmoil who did not ask for an IMF program.

Indeed, we have gone a long way to bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world. A new Cabinet, picked as much for their integrity as for their competence and qualifications, has brought professionalism in public service to new heights. This professionalism in my cabinet is illustrated by the fact that in my cabinet there are seven Harvard graduates, three Wharton alumni, and four veterans of Wall Street. Something that I think very few governments can equal.

And much of what the world's investment community has asked of us, we have thus far delivered. The Power Bill and the Money Laundering Act, long considered litmus tests of our political will to legislate reforms, were put into law during my presidency, firmly overcoming years of delay. In fact just before we came to Canada the implementing rules and regulations for the privatization of the power sector under the power reform law were passed so that we can begin the road shows to privatize our power sector. And the Chairman of the House Committee who worked on those implementing rules is with us here today, Congressman Alipio Badelles. Our public deficit has been placed under control. Interest rates and inflation rates have declined. Interest rates are at their lowest in the last 15 years.

Even recent unemployment rates have shown decline. From 11.6 percent when I assumed the presidency a year ago, in nine months we were able to bring it down to 9.8 percent. And we intend to bring it down even more this year. Leading international credit rating agencies and multilateral bodies such as NEXI, JBIC of Japan, the World Bank, and the Asian Development Bank have all responded to our economic performance by endorsing our enhanced credit worthiness. J.P. Morgan reports that the prevailing decline in risk aversion has allowed the continuous improvement in economic fundamentals in the Philippines to finally shine through.

Even the less complimentary Salomon Smith Barney in its January to February 2002 credit research says: "increasing risk appetite in 2002 should favor the Philippines among Asian sovereigns."

"We expect the Philippines," they say, "the Philippines ratings to stay on the balance in 2002."

Salomon Smith Barney characterizes the Philippines as "gaining momentum."

It recognizes that "economic growth has been resilient largely thanks to strong personal consumption and some well-performing agriculture and services sectors ... This could be bolstered by the government's growing credibility in the eyes of foreign investors ... Given the government's commendable performance in 2001, we expect it should stay close to its more difficult targets in 2002."

They probably based their evaluation on our first semester growth, which was consumption-led. And I think that the analysis would have even been more upbeat now that it is clear that our full-year growth was investment-led rather than consumption-led because investment-led growth is more sustainable. Investment-led indeed was our growth with our domestic capital formation rising 4.3 percent amidst a world where there is disinvestment in many economies.

And as for Salomon's statement regarding well-performing agriculture and service sectors, I agree with the adjective with regards to our agricultural sector, which grew 3.9 percent in 2001. But I think the word "well-performing" is mild with regard to our service sectors, where there was a 20.5 percent growth in telecommunications and 7.9 growth in business services, which includes I.T. services. The high growth of our human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors like I.T. demonstrates that the Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker. We are the third largest English speaking country in the world. And this great Filipino worker you know them because 300,000 of them are in Canada. We have a workforce that is I.T.-literate and multi-skilled. We have a large labor pool with an educational sector churning out 400,000 college graduates per year, 40,000 of these being knowledge workers like engineers and I.T. professionals. Filipino professionals are known for having the fastest learning curve of only about six weeks to learn technical skills.

With its highly skilled and highly trainable labor force, the Philippines is an ideal outsourcing partner for I.T. services. We have already enacted an e-commerce law, a first in Asia. This law regulates the use of electronic technology and penalizes cybercrimes such as hacking, and there are more bills to promote information technology in the pipeline to address other security issues and also the issue of convergence. I am pleased to announce that the Philippines will be hosting e-services Philippines, a major I.T. services fair, next month in Manila. And I would like to invite our Canadian friends to visit this fair.

We want to make the Philippines a welcome and safe place for our investors. To promote urban peace and order, the Philippine National Police last month increased its visibility by hiring 1,700 new policemen, all college graduates, all highly professional.

We are determined to promote efficient and transparent governance. Under the leadership of my Cabinet members, government agencies are implementing measures to cut in half the number of signatures required for the delivery of services such as licenses, permits, registration and franchises.

And our local governments — four of the leaders are here today to represent the local governments — have likewise agreed to streamline and slash red tape in order to provide seamless efforts between national and local governments to be investor-friendly.

Let us focus on some examples of trade and investment sectors that offer the brightest opportunities for Canadian businessmen.

As I mentioned earlier, we are promoting fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful and which can use our most competitive resource — the great Filipino worker — and that is information technology being a primary example. In the area of telecommunications where I mentioned we are growing at the rate of 20 percent, we are promoting investments in physical infrastructure for high-speed connectivity at low cost. We are also establishing municipal telecommunications centers, and working with mobile phone producers to disperse cell sites to make their services available all over the country. The Philippines has 7,100 islands, and this certainly offers solid opportunities for wireless telecommunications infrastructure.

Tourism is also a growing sector in the Philippines because it is also human resource intensive, skills-intensive. And we are developing eco-tourism and beach tourism sites and projects.

Related now to agribusiness, where in agriculture we grew 3.9 percent — a healthy agriculture growth rate compared to many other countries in the world today — in agribusiness my administration is committed to bring about countryside development through a modernized and socially equitable agricultural sector. Here there are opportunities for technology transfer in animal breeding stocks, food processing equipment, organic products and irrigation technology.

Opportunities also lie in the energy sector. As I mentioned earlier, we have an Omnibus Power Law enacted last year to privatize the state-owned national power corporation, break the monopoly of power generation and transmission and develop electricity in rural areas. This offers solid investment for Canadian firms that have excelled in the power sector whether it be in generation, transmission or distribution.

In the area of infrastructure, we are looking at private sector development of our mass transit systems very much like the billion-dollar opportunity that Lavalin found in our country. This is one of the areas indeed where Canadian expertise in engineering and transportation infrastructure would be welcome. We are also expanding and modernizing our airports and seaports, creating opportunities again for Canadian investments in design, construction, and equipment.

Housing construction also presents business opportunities, as low-cost housing is one of our key priorities. This offers opportunities for Canadian housing technology that is inexpensive, innovative and adaptable to a tropical climate. We want to build a 100,000 low-cost housing a year for our workers and we invite Canadian housing technology to try it out in the Philippines.

Indeed, this is the time to capitalize on deepening convergence of Philippine and Canadian interests by strengthening our commercial relations. For in a world where there is great uncertainty it is time for friends to work together. To create jobs together. To improve trade together. To invest in one another's economies. And if the old relationship between Canada and the Philippines — our relationship that started more than a hundred years ago, in 1895 when Sunlife of Canada first put its investments in the Philippines — if this old relationship can be made to grow and flourish even more in this century — this century of uncertainty but also this century of great coalitions and great opportunities — together we can weather the storm of global recession and achieve mutually profitable alliances. Come to the Philippines, Canada, as we the Filipinos have also come to Canada.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Luncheon hosted by the Empire Club and the Canadian Club of Toronto. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230904/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7584&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a Breakfast with Canadian-Filipino Business Leaders

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During a Breakfast with Canadian-Filipino Business Leaders

[Delivered at the Ballroom, Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, Canada, January 30, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Alvarez.

Before anything I would like to first greet our most prominent Filipino-Canadian, the Minister of Veterans Affairs Rey Pagtakhan. Before this he was Canada's Secretary of Foreign Affairs for Asia-Pacific. And we have plenty of time ... Opportunities to see him because the Philippines was part of the scope of his work. But now he is a full Minister for Veterans Affairs. His ... Be around Canada. We will miss him but we are very proud to have a member of the cabinet, a Filipino here in Canada. Congratulations, Rey. I would like to greet also Ambassador Benedicto; Ambassador Collete.

And to introduce to you if they had not been introduced earlier, the members of our official delegation. We have the Senate President Pro-Tempore Mr. Manuel Villar, Senator Ralph Recto; from the House of Representatives we have Congresswoman Cynthia Villar, Congressman Alipio Badelles who is the Chairman of the House Panel of the Committee on Energy that did the implementing rules for the energy presentation that we made today. We have Congressman Plaridel Abaya; Congressman Edmundo Reyes; Congressman Ed Zialcita. From the local governments we have from the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, the regional Governor Parouk Hussin; from Quezon Wilfredo Enverga, Governor; from Bulacan, Governor Josefina Dela Cruz; and from the City of Antipolo Mayor Angelito Gatlabayan; for our Cabinet Dante Canlas, Rigoberto Tiglao; well, you've met Secretary Alvarez but I understand earlier Undersecretary Domingo already made a presentation before you; and we have the Senior Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs Lauro Baja; members of the Philippine and Canadian Business Community; distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen:

I am pleased to be here with you today and I thank Ambassador Benedicto for hosting this forum. The Philippines and Canada share a long history of political, social, and commercial relations. And we are strong allies today more than ever in the fight against global terrorism and poverty. The Philippines has a special bond with Canada arising from 320,000 Filipinos headed by our cabinet minister here whom you have welcomed as immigrants. We are very proud of our Filipino-Canadians who are contributing their share to the growth of the Canadian economy. Canada also has always been a strong supporter of our efforts to improve the quality of life of our people through its generous development assistance under the Canadian international development agency, or CIDA. One of the agreements that were signed this morning was enabled by the assistance program of CIDA for small and medium enterprises.

Our economic relations are deep, solid, and as minister ... Said, robust.

Looking back to the distant past, Sunlife established an office in Manila over a century ago in 1895. Sunlife and Manulife have been in the Philippines for more than 90 years.

And on a contemporary note, Prime Minister Chretien accompanied his team Canada business delegation to the Philippines in January 1997, where 31 million dollars in commercial contracts and 469 million dollars in business agreements were signed. And today we had six more signings. In November of that year, 1997, the team Philippines business delegation also visited Canada and a total of 1.4 billion dollars-worth of agreements were signed. Today team Philippines is here again.

Truly since those mission in 1997 Philippine-Canadian business relations have continued to grow even more.

Total trade between our two countries is more than a billion dollars and it has been increasing from 1997 up to today, it is larger by 45 percent. And last month, SNC Lavalin, whose President we had breakfast with this morning, one of Canada's leaders in engineering and construction, signed an implementation agreement worth one billion Canadian dollars to finance, design and construct a light rail transit extension to the suburbs of Manila going to the province of Congressman Abaya. In fact your district, right Congressman? Yes. The deal represents one of the biggest agreements signed in Philippine-Canadian history.

Indeed, this is a good time to expand our trade and investment relations.

Since I assumed the presidency a year ago, we have made progress. Where richer and bigger economies failed, ours has moved forward.

I'm very glad that today my economic planning minister sent me our statistics for our GNP growth rate that has just come out. For the year 2001 our GDP grew at 3.4 percent, our GNP grew at 3.7 percent in a sea of economies that we are growing at negative or zero percent. And therefore our growth rate for 2001 was one of the highest in the world and we are very proud of that. Where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours has held firm.

In fact earlier, at breakfast one of the Canadian big businessmen said that because there were devaluations last year, the year before during the period of the last days, the last month of President Estrada, they were afraid of where our currency would go. Well it has gone and stayed where it should be so it has been stable during this past year and in fact stable just by our own efforts not by getting any support from any external source to finance our exchange rate.

When I was in Washington the IMF told me that I was the only president who became president under unusual circumstances who did not ask for an IMF program and yet our exchange rate remained stable.

Indeed, we have gone a long way to bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world. A new Cabinet, some of whom you see here, picked as much for their integrity as for their competence and qualifications, has brought professionalism in public service to new heights. Just to give an example of professionalism, I have seven Harvard graduates — one of them is my secretary of environment — three Wharton graduates and four veterans of Wall Street. I still have to see another government with that kind of Cabinet composition.

Much of what the world's investment community has asked of us, we have thus far delivered. The Power Bill — and I must thank Congressman Badelles for his work there — the money laundering act. Those two laws were long considered litmus tests of our political will to legislate reforms, they were put into law, firmly overcoming years of delay. For instance, in the case of the power bill, it got passed into law after nine years of long wait. Our public deficit has been placed under control.

Interest rates and inflation rates have declined. Our interest rates are at their lowest in the last 15 years. As for our inflation rate it's more than six percent when I became president, now it is down to 3.9 percent.

Even recent unemployment rates have shown decline. When I first became president the unemployment rate was 11.6 percent and after nine months of my presidency it went down to 9.8 percent, and we are working to bring it down even more.

Several financial institutions have lined up to strengthen our banking industry.

Foreign direct investment levels have also exceeded targets during 2001. I will not tell you the numbers because Undersecretary Domingo has already given them in his briefing.

Leading international credit rating agencies and multilateral bodies such as NEXI, JBIC, the World Bank, and the Asian Development Bank have all responded by endorsing our enhanced credit worthiness. J.P. Morgan reports that the prevailing decline in risk aversion has allowed the continuous improvement in economic fundamentals in the Philippines to finally shine through.

Even less generous rating agencies like Salomon Smith Barney in its January-February 2002 credit research says: “increasing risk appetite in 2002 should favor the Philippines among Asian sovereigns.”

“We expect the Philippines’ ratings to stay on the balance in 1ho2.” In other words, first half of 2002.

Salomon Smith Barney also characterizes the Philippines as “gaining momentum.”

It recognizes that, “economic growth has been resilient thanks largely thanks to strong personal consumption and some well-performing agriculture and service sectors ... This could be bolstered by the government’s growing credibility in the eyes of foreign investors ... Given the government’s commendable performance in 2001, we expect it should stay close to its more difficult targets in 2002.”

I think that Salomon was being very conservative when it said some well-performing service sectors because our figures just showed for instance telecommunications growing at 20 percent, business services including I.T. services grew at what Dante, seven percent. And when they said it was bolstered by strong consumption they were probably looking at our first half growth because our full year growth is an investment-led growth. And investment-led growth is certainly more sustainable than consumption-led growth.

In April 2000, a survey of the political and economic risk consultancy ranked the Philippines number one in offering the best quality of life for expatriates in Asia.

Indeed, the Philippines offers a productive environment for business people. Overall, we offer lower business costs. In the Philippines, multinational companies can expect as much as 40 percent cost savings for their operations versus average cost in North America and Europe.

The Philippines has several modern industrial estates, economic zones, as well as dedicated I.T parks and cyberparks with reliable physical and telecommunications infrastructure.

When I first became president and I talked about promoting I.T. I said one of the areas of concerns we should work on is the physical infrastructure because we need to promote inter connectivity at low cost.

When I went to New York last November there were so many call centers, memorandum of agreement signed and the investors told me the reason why they are going to the Philippines is because they like the infrastructure. We have good broadband facilities in the Philippines so therefore what we aim to do when I became president in January apparently we have not succeeded enough by November to bring the investors there for I.T.

The Philippines also offers attractive investments to investors and my administration is committed to work with Congress once again — and the Congressmen are here — to further enhance these investment incentives.

We realize of course that work remains to be done:

We are working with the international community to root out terrorism, including the terrorism in an isolated island in Southwestern Philippines.

We are committed to return the reputation of Manila and the Philippines as a welcoming and safe place in which to live and do business.

We are increasing the benefits from our new global relevance and engagement after years of being isolated and adrift.

To promote urban peace and order, the Philippine National Police last month increased its visibility by hiring 1,700 new policemen for metro manila alone, all college graduates, all highly professional.

We are determined to promote efficient and transparent governance. Under the leadership of my cabinet members, government agencies are implementing measures to cut in half the number of signatures required for the delivery of services such as licenses, permits, registration and franchises.

Our local governments — and we have two governors and one city mayor here — have likewise agreed to streamline and slash red tape in order to provide seamless efforts between national and local governments to be investor-friendly.

Today earlier you had briefings on I.T. and energy. Let us focus on some examples including those of trade and investment sectors that offer the brightest opportunities for Canadian businessmen.

Well our 20 percent increase in telecommunications and our seven percent increase in business services including I.T. show a result of a policy to promote fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful and which can use our most competitive resource — the great Filipino worker. We are the third largest English speaking country in the world. We have a workforce that is I.T.-literate and multi-skilled. We have a large labor pool with an educational sector churning out 400,000 college graduates a year, 40,000 of these being knowledge workers like engineers and I.T. professionals.

Filipino professionals are known for having the fastest learning curve of only eight weeks to learn technical skills.

With its highly skilled and highly trainable labor force, the Philippines is an ideal outsourcing partner for I.T. services. We have already enacted an e-commerce law, a first in Asia. The law regulates the use of electronic technology and penalizes cybercrimes such as hacking, even as more bills are in the pipeline to address the other security issues and also to promote convergence. And I am pleased to announce that the Philippines will be hosting — I think I has been announced earlier but I want to stress this — a major I.T. services fair next month in Manila. And I would like to invite our Canadian friends to visit this fair.

The other area — the 20 percent growing sector — telecommunications, we are promoting investments in physical infrastructure for high-speed connectivity at low cost, as I said. We are also establishing municipal telecommunications centers and working with mobile phone producers to disperse cell sites to make their services available all over the country. The Philippines has 7,100 islands, this certainly offers solid opportunities for wireless telecommunications infrastructure.

I was so glad to see a memorandum of agreement on tour packages for the Philippines because tourism is also a growing sector in the Philippines. We are developing eco-tourism and beach tourism sites and projects in particular.

And related to agribusiness, my administration is committed to bring about countryside development through a modernized and socially equitable agricultural sector. Here, opportunities for technology transfer in animal breeding stocks, food processing equipment, organic products and irrigation technology are available for investment areas.

Opportunities also lie in the energy sector as you have heard earlier in the briefing. As you know by now, I hope, we have an Omnibus Power law enacted last year after nine long years of wait to privatize the state-owned national power corporation, break the monopoly of power generation and transmission and to develop electricity in rural areas. This offers solid investment opportunities for Canadian firms that have excelled both in generation and transmission in the power sector.

We will be having the bidding for a transmission company in June of this year. And that investment is worth two billion dollars.

In the area of infrastructure, we are looking at private sector development of our mass transit systems. This is one of the areas where Canadian expertise in engineering and transportation infrastructure certainly is welcome. We are also expanding and modernizing our airports and seaports, creating opportunities for Canadian investments in design, construction, and equipment.

Housing construction, earlier we had a signing, for, what, 3,000 houses in Pampanga, my province. Housing also presents business opportunities: as low-cost housing is one of our key priorities, we want to build 100,000 low cost housing for the working class every year. This offers opportunities for Canadian housing technology if it is inexpensive, innovative and adaptable to a tropical climate.

Indeed, this is the time to capitalize on the deepening convergence of Philippine and Canadian interests by strengthening our commercial relations. I'm sure that as we have been friends commercially, culturally for so long now, over a century, this time in the 21st century, together, we can weather the storm of global recession and achieve mutually profitable alliances.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Breakfast with Canadian-Filipino Business Leaders. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230922/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7583&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Investment Roundtable Luncheon sponsored by the Credit Suisse
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Investment Roundtable Luncheon sponsored by the Credit Suisse

[Delivered at the St. Regis Roof, the St. Regis Hotel, New York City, New York, U.S.A., January 31, 2002]

Thank you very much Vince.

I'd like to greet and thank first of all Brady Dugan for hosting this affair, putting all of this together; and also Mr. Hilley, the member of the Board of Credit Suisse; also to thank Mr. Madrid for always being there to help organize the affairs to promote business credit in the Philippines and the U.S.; Ambassador del Rosario, Ambassador Yuchengco.

And I would like to greet the members of my official my delegation: Senate President Pro-Tempore Manny Villar, Senator Ralph Recto, Congressman Badelles who chairs the house panel on the implementing rules for the power sector reform, Congressman Plaridel Abaya, Congresswoman Villar, Congressman Reyes; then you are quite familiar with my economic team Lito Camacho who spoke earlier; Dante Canlas, my economic planning minister; Sonny Alvarez, my environment Secretary, Central Bank Governor Buenaventura; I rudely interrupted Board of Investments managing head Gregory Domingo.

I would like to greet all of you, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen, a good afternoon.

And I hope that you found the previous briefings were useful. This is a good time to expand our trade and investment relations.

I am sure most of you heard President Bush in his State of the Union Address. And I can say as a response, that the Philippines will continue to be a partner of the United States in the war-to-the-end of terrorism. American troops are training side-by-side with ours in Basilan, the isolated island in Southwestern Philippines where the terrorist group Abu Sayyaf has its lair. The anti-terrorism partnership will continue until the whole world is secure against terrorists.

I also welcome President Bush's strong pitch to pull out America from recession. This will help in a big way to pull out the global economy from lethargy. We all anticipate this effort with great confidence and faith in the American people — to surmount crisis, to obtain security, and to have more jobs.

The drive against terrorism and poverty is now driven by a widening global consensus. A new kind of war needs a new kind of peace. As we shift from war to peacekeeping and nation-building in Afghanistan, nations are gearing their resources for a big push against poverty that will decisively strike at the breeding grounds for terrorism's recruits.

My battle plan for the war against poverty in the Philippines continues to revolve around four components:

Free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century, that's the first;

Second, modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity;

Third, a bias toward the disadvantaged to spread out the fruits of economic development to many and;

Fourth, a commitment to high moral standards in government and society.

Development is in full swing in the Philippines. Our stock market for the last two weeks say that.

Since I assumed the Presidency a year ago, we have made progress. Where bigger and richer economies failed, ours has moved forward. Gross Domestic Product grew 3.4 percent in 2001 and gross national product grew 3.7 percent, one of the highest growth rates in a world where many countries are suffering from recession.

Where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours has held firm, even though, as the IMF acknowledges, I am the only president who assumed office following a period of political turmoil who did not ask for an IMF program. So we kept our currency stable without an IMF program and without instituting capital controls.

Indeed, we have gone a long way to bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world. A new Cabinet — many of whom you've met — picked as much for their integrity as for their competence and qualifications, has brought professionalism in public service to new heights. This professionalism is illustrated by the fact that in my Cabinet there are seven Harvard graduates including Lito Camacho, there are three Wharton Alumni including Vince Perez and even the BOI head Gregory Domingo, another Harvard graduate is Sonny Alvarez, my Secretary of Environment, there are four veterans of Wall street Lito and Vince, there are two Phds in economics, one is my secretary of planning and the other one is the President of the Philippines.

Much of what the world's investment community has asked of us, we have thus far delivered. The Power Bill and the Money Laundering Act, long considered litmus tests of our political will to legislate reforms, were put into law, firmly overcoming years of delay. Our public deficit has been placed under control and Lito told you about that.

Well, let me tell you also about a story that we had when we were discussing with the IMF the Philippine economic performance — and this has been discussed oh sometime in the last quarter of last year — and the IMF admitted to me that they had been betting against the Philippines. They bet I could not pass the Power Sector Reform Law. Thanks to our Congressmen and Senators here, we did so they lost that bet. They bet we could not do our Money Laundering Law before September 30th and they lost that bet. So, he said, "we were also betting that you won't make your fiscal deficit ceiling. And I'm afraid they're going to strike out." And they did strike out at the end.

So, we have tamed our deficit. We have passed important structural reforms legislatively. Results: interest rates and inflation rates have declined. Interest rates are at their lowest in the last 15 years — I must acknowledge the work of the Central Bank there.

And recent unemployment rates have also shown decline. From 11.6 percent when I assumed the presidency, in nine months we were able to bring it down to 9.8 percent and counting, I hope.

Foreign direct investment levels as you have seen from Gregory's interrupted presentation exceeded targets in 2001.

Leading international credit rating agencies and multilateral bodies such as NEXI, JBIC, the World Bank, and the Asian Development Bank have all responded to our economic performance by endorsing our enhanced credit worthiness. Sorry about this Credit Suisse but I'll just talk about everybody else. J.P. Morgan reports that the prevailing decline in risk aversion has allowed the continuous improvement in economic fundamentals in the Philippines to finally shine through.

Even the less complimentary Salomon Smith Barney in its January-February 2002 credit research says: "increasing risk appetite in 2002 should favor the Philippines among Asian sovereigns.

"We expect the Philippines' ratings to stay on balance in 1ho2."

And they further characterize the Philippines the Philippines as, again I quote, "gaining momentum."

They recognize that, quote again, "economic growth has been resilient largely thanks to strong personal consumption and some well-performing agriculture and services sectors ... This could be bolstered by the government's growing credibility in the eyes of foreign investors ... And given the government's commendable performance in 2001, we expect it should stay close to its more difficult targets in 2002."

Salomon Smith Barney probably based its evaluation on our first semester growth which was consumption-led. But I think it should be more upbeat now that it is clear that our full-year growth was investment-led, with capital formation rising 4.3 percent amidst a world where there is disinvestment in many economies.

And as for its statement regarding well-performing agriculture and service sectors I agree with the adjective "well-performing" with regard to our agricultural sector, which grew 3.9 percent in 2001. But I think the word "well-performing" is mild with regard to our service sectors, where there was a 20.5 percent growth in telecommunications and 7.9 percent growth in business services, which include I.T. services.

And of course, more than any published evaluation of credit risk, I believe the most practical judgment of our economic viability is expressed in the international financial markets. Some of them have been discussed today in addition to the credit-enhanced 50 billion yen raised in Shobosai bonds last year, the latest bond offering in January this year raised a total of 750 million dollars over subscribed three times over, and issued at a lower rate than the guidance price.

Let us focus now on some examples of trade and investment sectors that offer the brightest opportunities. And also comply with my own priorities as the chief economic manager of the Philippines.

We are promoting fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful and which can use our most competitive resource — the great Filipino worker. In the area of telecommunications, we are promoting investments in physical infrastructure for high-speed connectivity at low cost. We are also establishing municipal telecommunications centers, and working with mobile phone producers to disperse cell sites to make their services available all over the country. The Philippines, with its 7,100 islands, certainly offers solid opportunities for wireless telecommunications infrastructure. And so, this is one great area for investment.

The high growth of our human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors demonstrates that the Philippines indeed is the home of the great Filipino worker. We're the third largest English speaking country in the world. We have a workforce that is I.T.-literate and multi-skilled. We have a large labor pool with an educational sector churning out 400,000 college graduates per year, 40,000 of these being knowledge workers like engineers and I.T. professionals. Filipino professionals are known for having the fastest learning curve of at the most eight weeks to learn technical skills.

With its highly skilled and highly trainable labor force, the Philippines is an ideal outsourcing partner for I.T. services. We've already enacted an e-commerce law, a first in Asia. The law regulates the use of electronic technology and penalizes cybercrimes like hacking, and now there are more bills in the pipeline to address other security issues as well as convergence. I am pleased to announce that the Philippines will be hosting e-services Philippines, a major I.T. services fair, next month in Manila. And I hope some of you who are in I.T. will go there.

Tourism is also a growing sector in the Philippines. We are developing eco-tourism and beach tourism sites and projects.

And as we have seen today, opportunities also lie in the energy sector. We have been assisting the National Power Corporation in sourcing funds to carry out its privatization program. We have been refinancing its assets to the tune of 250 million dollars of our most recent 750 million-dollar bond offer, coupled with the Euro 500 million issue this past November. These very successful issues were made possible by the passage of the Power Reform Bill which I mentioned earlier, one of the first and significant milestones of my administration last year.

The privatization of the National Power Corporation will be a major structural reform and it will provide long-term fiscal benefits. The sale of its transmission company, as you have heard from Vince, will begin by June of this year and the generation companies to follow.

We aim to expand the investment opportunities also related to infrastructure required to improve the competitiveness of industries in the form of not only electricity, but also mass transit systems, roads, bridges, telecommunications and ports.

Housing construction also presents business opportunities, as low-cost housing is one of our key priorities. This offers opportunities for American housing technology that is inexpensive, innovative and adaptable to a tropical climate.

In 2002, this year, our reforms will seek to strengthen the banking sector, further unlock bottlenecks to major infrastructure and investment projects that have been stuck in the pipeline for many years. So what we did with the Power Reform Bill which was stuck for so long and we unstuck it, we will be doing that with major infrastructure and investment projects. We will expand our revenue sources. We will also distribute more land to farmers, complemented by agricultural modernization measures, including investments to rehabilitate and expand irrigation, construct post-harvest facilities, and assist with marketing and research and development.

As we implement the Philippine economic plan, I cannot emphasize enough that economic growth is of no value if it is not linked to good governance practices. And that is why we are determined to promote efficient and transparent governance. Under the leadership of my cabinet members, whom I find that you are also impressed with, government agencies are implementing measures to cut in half the number of signatures required for the delivery of services such as licenses, permits, registration and franchises.

Our local governments have likewise agreed to streamline and slash red tape in order to provide seamless efforts between national and local governments to be investor-friendly.

This is the time to capitalize on the deepening convergence of interests by strengthening our commercial relations. And I am very sure that if we continue our long-term partnership, our long-term strategic partnership, in security matters, in economic matters, together, the U.S., the Philippines can weather the storm of the global recession and achieve mutually profitable alliances.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Investment Roundtable Luncheon Sponsored by the Credit Suisse. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230841/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7581&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a Special Mass with the Filipino-American community Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Special Mass with the Filipino-American community

[Delivered at the Our Lady of Mercy Parish, Chicago, U.S.A., February 3, 2002]

Maraming salamat Ambassador Albert del Rosario.

Most reverend Bishop Goedert; Father Headley, Consul General Pineda.

At gusto kong ipakilala sa inyo ang iba't-ibang mga elected officials na kasama ko sa ating delegasyon itong araw na ito. siguro bilang Pilipino pinapanood ninyo noong araw iyung mga pangyayari bago ako naging pangulo — iyung umabot sa January 20 People Power 2. Siguro napapanood ninyo sa telebisyon kung papano nag-umpisa iyung impeachment trial — kung papano iyung Speaker ng ating Kamara, House of Representatives ay nagsimula ng session noong November 30 year 2000, nagdasal nang mahaba pagkatapos tinuloy mula sa kanyang asal, nagulat lahat, tinuloy na niya iyung kanyang diskurso na pinapadala na iyung Articles of Impeachment sa Senado, iyun ay si Speaker Manny Villar, ngayon Senador Manny Villar kasama natin itong araw na ito. Nandito rin iyong kanyang maybahay na Congresswoman ng distrito ng Las Piñas; mula naman doon sa Cavite, nandito rin si Congressman Plaridel Abaya; at Gikan sa Iligan sa Lanao del Norte si Congressman Alipio Badelles. Nandito rin ang ating mga, ang ating bagong halal na Governor ng Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao si Governor Parouk Hussin. Meron ng mga Cabinet Member na naririto, Secretary of Energy si Vince Perez, at ang Presidential Spokesman si Bobby Tiglao, at ang ating Senior Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs si Larry Baja.

Kasama ko rin ngayong umaga ito ang aking kabiyak, si Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo at ang anak kong si Diosdado Macapagal-Arroyo.

Thank you, Bishop Goedert, for giving me the opportunity to be a part of this holy celebration today. thank you also, Reverend Headley, for your warm hospitality and providing a welcoming home for Filipinos in this Parish.

At mga kababayan ko, magandang tanghali sa inyong lahat! Caring Cabalen cung capangpangan, mayap aldaw quecongan! dagiti kakailiac ti bangir ni mamang ko, naimbag nga aldaw yo amin appo! sa atong mga kaiguonon gikan sa mindanao asa ako ug Congressman Badelles ni dako, maayong buntag kaninyong tanan! Kag sa mga kasimanwa sang akong bana nga Ilonggo, maayong udto sa inyo nga tanan!

Nagagalak akong makapiling kayong mga mahal kong kababayan na nakatira sa Chicago, at sa mga kababayan na nanggaling pa sa ibang lugar lalung-lalo na sa mga taga-Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, at Ohio.

Mapalad po na tayo ay pinagtagpo muli ng Panginoon.

I appreciate this opportunity to be with all of you in this Windy City, which to its good fortune has been enjoying an unseasonably mild-winter. Demographers estimate that there are over two million Filipinos in the United States.

Because of your number, Filipino-Americans constitute a veritable second Philippines. Nowhere in the world outside of the Philippines can you find this mass of Filipinos. According to the 1990 Census report, Tagalog is the 6th most spoken foreign language in American homes.

And today's mass among Filipinos, today's mass for peace is most relevant to our times. The international community continues to face a clear and grave threat to its security and well being. As I did when I visited New York and Washington, D.C. last November, let me extend again my heartfelt condolences and that of the people of the Philippines to all those who suffered the loss or injury of a loved one as a consequence of the September 11 attacks.

I also find it proper that we, through this mass and this assembly, seek comfort, tranquility, and peace for ourselves, for our countries, the Philippines and the United States, and for the rest of mankind.

Long before September 11th, the Philippines was already fighting terrorism on the southwestern part of its soil and gained the upper hand, isolating terrorism to one small island. We have felt the pain of terrorism first hand and knew it must not spread to the rest of the world. That is why we were the first in Asia to lend our support.

Much has been written about our protracted campaign to destroy the Abu Sayyaf terrorists in that remote island in southwestern Philippines in Basilan but headlines have been revved up recently with the arrival of U.S. anti-terrorist trainers and several hundred support troops who are there for joint military exercises. Predictably, their presence has stirred up passion among a vocal minority of our citizenry. Old rhetoric reminiscent of the U.S. bases debate and even Vietnam have again surfaced.

But as the first Asian leader to come out in support of the international coalition, I applaud the imperative to wipe out terrorism. That is why I took the politically risky action of recommending that this year's annual joint military exercises between the Philippines and the U.S. be adapted to enhancing the capability of Filipino soldiers to fight terrorism. This will help us go the last mile in destroying the Abu Sayyaf terrorists and have peace at last in our land. I have done so in what I believe is a responsible and lawful contribution of the U.S. military to ensure the stability and freedom of our people. The Americans are there to provide the intelligence and capability building, including the operation of sophisticated tracking equipment. And even though in my view the circumstances exist for them to be lawfully engaged in combat, we have taken the policy decision for the American soldiers not to do combat in the Philippines because our own soldiers will do the fighting.

We Filipinos bring a unique view to this issue: from a few small islands in southwestern Philippines to the grand island of Manhattan, we have seen what terrorism can do to our society, our economy, our security, and our sense of moral purpose.

But this is a war that must be devoid of any religious undertones. The Philippines has institutionalized the tools of autonomy, consensus, and interfaith dialogue with our Muslim brothers. We have a ceasefire with the Moro National Islamic Liberation Front, and I thank them for having renounced the Abu Sayyaf. A few months ago, our Muslim brethren in Mindanao reaffirmed their solidarity with the Filipino nation when they renewed the electoral mandate of the leadership of the Autonomous Region for Muslim Mindanao. They elected Parouk Hussin as the new Governor of the Autonomous Region — and he's here with us today.

We have put a face on terrorists, and now we must put a face on the poor. We will eliminate terrorism but we must eliminate poverty. If we do not eliminate poverty, the breeding ground of resentment will begin again to plague another generation.

My battle plan for the war against poverty revolves around four components:

First, free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century;

Second, a modernized agriculture founded on social equity;

Third, a bias toward the disadvantaged to spread out the fruits of economic development; and,

Fourth, a commitment to high moral standards in government and society.

With God's grace, under the custody of skilled economic managers like Vince Perez who's here today, and with the cooperation of our Senators like our Senate President Pro-Tempore Manny Villar and Congressmen like our Congressmen here Del Abaya and Tikbong Badelles, the plan we created is bearing significant and tangible results.

Where bigger and richer economies failed during the past year, our Philippine economy moved forward. Our Gross National Product grew 3.7 percent — 3.4 percent without your remittances, 3.7 percent including your remittances. And this growth rate is one of the highest growth rates in the world today where many countries are suffering from recession.

Where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours held firm, even though, as the IMF acknowledges, I am the only president who assumed office during fragile times who did not ask for an IMF program. So, we stabilized our currency without an IMF program and without instituting capital controls.

Indeed, we have gone a long way to bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world. And for the month of January 2002, Bloomberg says that the Philippine Stock Market was the top performing stock market in the world — a first for the Philippines. Our public deficit has been placed under control. Interest rates are at their lowest in the last 15 years, and inflation rates have likewise declined.

Even unemployment rates have declined. From 11.6 percent when first I assumed the presidency, in nine months we were able to bring down the unemployment rate to 9.8 percent and we intend to bring it down some more.

This is a good time for you to put in your investment or to expand your business in your homeland.

I have come to talk to our kababayans in the United States and to extend to you the gratitude of the Philippine government and the Filipino people. Filipinos are indebted to our brothers and sisters in the United States, the great Filipino workers in the United States, for many reasons:

Sa ibabaw ng magandang reputasyon na binibigay ninyo sa ating bansa bilang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Filipino, milyun-milyong kabataan ang nakapag-aral o nakakatapos ng edukasyon sa inyong tulong.

Libu-libong bagong bahay ang napapatayo ninyo at ang mga mahal ninyo doon na nagkakaroon ng mga bagong bahay ay nagkakaroon din ng bagong buhay. Dahil sa inyong tulong ay nakapaglunsad tayo ng napakaraming negosyo maging ng small business sa buong bansa. Ang matagumpay na negosyo na napatayo sa ating bansa dahil sa inyong remittances ay isang malaking haligi ng ating ekonomiya. Sumigla ang maraming barangay, bayan, lungsod at probinsiya sa kontribusyon ng mga overseas Filipinos.

Ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino ay taun-taon nagpapadala sa ating bansa ng sixbillion dollars kaya kayo ay major economic investors sa bansa.

Alam niyo ipinagmamalaki natin, ngayon sa akin biyahe sa Amerika, Canada at U.K., meron na tayong nakuhang investments na 1.2 billion dollars ngunit kayo six billion dollars taun-taon.

Kaya sa aking palagay, dapat nang baguhin ang bansag sa inyo ng bansa. Kasi ang karaniwang tawag sa Filipinos sa ibang bansa, maging may kontrata or green card holder, ang tawag ay overseas Filipino workers. Palagay ko mas bagay na ang dapat itawag sa inyo ay overseas Filipino investors.

Kayo ay mga overseas investors na araw-araw ay namumuhunan sa kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Pinupuhunan ninyo ang inyong productive years alang-alang sa ating bayan.

The Filipino-Americans constitute 34 percent of overseas Filipinos, but you contribute 71 percent of all foreign exchange remittances to the Philippines in the last five years.

Filipino doctors, surgeons, dentists, nurses conduct regular medical and dental missions in many parts of our homeland.

And through your donations of books, food and medical supplies, Fil-Ams have made a great difference in the lives of poor school children and families in the barrios.

Our Senator and our Congressmen and women here have good news for your. Sabi nila, sabi ni Senate President Pro-Tempore Manny Villar at saka ni Congresswoman Villar at saka ni Congressman Abaya at Congressman Badelles na inaasahan nilang papasa iyung Absentee Voting Bill itong taong ito.

At sila rin ay lumikha ng panukalang batas on Dual Citizenship for Filipinos. Magdasal tayo na walang masyadong magbibigay ng oposisyon sa dalawang panukalang batas na 'to para sa ganon pumasa nga sa madaling panahon.

In the meantime here in the U.S., let us strive to build a National Coalition of Filipino organizations and forge greater unity to promote the interest of Filipino immigrants, contract workers, and Fil-Am in this great country.

Lakasan pa natin ang ating pagkakaisa, ang pagtutulungan, ang pag-iisang bisig, ang diwa ng bayanihan, ang balikatan, ang kapatiran.

Lakasan pa natin ang ating pagmamalasakit sa inang bansa, sa inyong bagong bansa, sa ating kinabukasan, at sa ating mga kabataan.

Mga Pilipino dito sa Amerika, alam ko na kahit kayo ay naririto at marami ay green card holder na, marami nga ay mga citizens na, alam ko ang puso ninyo ay nandoon pa rin sa Pilipinas. kaya kami, inyong mga nanunungkulan sa ating bansa bahagi ng aming tungkulin, bahagi ng aming kasiyahan ay nakakabisita sa inyo dito sa Amerika. Pinagmamalaki namin kayo at sana sa mga darating na panahon kahit na naghihirap ang ekonomiya ng mundo ay kayo ay manatiling matatag sa inyong mga hanapbuhay, sa inyong pagtatrabaho, sa inyong pagnenegosyo; at huwag nating kalilimutan ang ating bansa, at gusto kong malaman ninyo na kayo ay hindi kinalilimutan ng mga Pilipino sa Pilipinas.

Mahal namin kayong lahat.

Maraming salamat po.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Special Mass with the Filipino-American Community. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230818/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7622&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a Luncheon hosted by the Economic Club of Chicago
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a Luncheon hosted by the Economic Club of Chicago

[Delivered at The Peninsula, Chicago, U.S.A., February 3, 2002]

Thank you very much Mr. Moskow.

And I would just like to tell our journalists, inform them that you are the Chairman of the Economic Club of Chicago and the President of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

May I also like to greet Ms. Gradier, representing Mayor Daly; Mr. Hanon, the Managing Director of the Illinois Trade Office.

And I would like to introduce to our friends from Chicago not only our Ambassador, Ambassador Del Rosario but also the other members of my delegation our Senate President Pro Tempore, Senator Manny Villar; Congresswoman Cynthia Villar; Congressman Alipio Badilles and Congressman Plaridel Abaya; as well as the Governor of the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao; and we have members of my Cabinet Secretary Perez of Energy and my Presidential Spokesman, Mr. Tiglao; members and guests of the Economic Club of Chicago; ladies and gentlemen:

Good afternoon.

First of all I wish to thank you, Mr. Moskow, the Club Chairman, and Mr. James Mcclung, a very close friend of the Philippine Consulate, for bringing us together at such short notice and on a Sunday at that. Thank you for bringing your wives over to listen to a female president and it's a good way to spend Sunday together. And i hope you'll be ... I'm sure you'll get out in time for the Super Bowl. Am sure most of you heard President Bush in his State of the Union Address. I welcome his strong pitch to pull out America from recession because this will help in a big way to pull out the global economy from lethargy. We all anticipate this effort with great confidence and faith in the American people in your ability to surmount crisis, to obtain security, to have more jobs.

The drive against terrorism, which has been taking most of our attention, and the drive against poverty, these are now driven by a widening global consensus. We could see it in WEF. A new kind of war needs a new kind of peace. As we shift from war to peacekeeping and nation-building in Afghanistan, nations are gearing their resources for a big push against poverty that should decisively strike at the breeding grounds for the recruits of terrorism. In my country my battle plan for the war against poverty revolves around four components: first, free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; second, modernized agriculture founded on social equity; third, a bias toward the disadvantaged to spread out the fruits of development; and, fourth, a commitment to high moral standards in government and society.

And I am happy and gratified that since I assumed the presidency a year ago, we have made progress. Where bigger and richer economies failed, ours has moved forward. Our gross national product in 2001 grew 3.7 percent of which gross domestic product grew at 3.4 percent, this is now one of the highest growth rates in a world where many countries are suffering recession.

For instance our neighbors, Singapore and Hong Kong, are suffering from negative growth rates.

Where bigger and stronger currencies collapsed, ours has held firm, even though, as the IMF acknowledges, I am the only President who assumed office following a period of political and economic turmoil who did not ask for an IMF program.

Indeed, we have gone a long way to bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world. A new cabinet, two of them are here, picked as much for their integrity as for their competence and qualifications, has brought professionalism in public service to new heights. This professionalism is illustrated by the fact that in my cabinet there are eight Harvard graduates — my Spokesman is one of them — three Wharton Alumni — my Energy Secretary is one of them — four veterans of Wall Street — my Energy Secretary is one of them again — and two Phds in economics, including the President of the Philippines.

Much of what the world's investment community has asked of us, we have thus far delivered. We have opened our retail trade sector to foreign ownership — and Amway has been able to take advantage of that. The Power Reform Bill and the Money Laundering Act, which were long considered litmus tests of our political will to legislate reforms, were put into law during the first months of this administration after many years of delay. Our public deficit has been placed under control. Interest and inflation rates have declined — in fact, interest rates are at their lowest in the last 15 years, and you as bankers — many of you are bankers here — I hope, would appreciate that.

Even recent unemployment rates have shown decline. From 11.6 percent when I assumed the presidency, in nine months we were able to bring it down to 9.8 percent inspite of the world's slow down. And we intend to bring it down some more.

Foreign direct investment levels have also exceeded targets in 2001.

Leading international credit agencies and multilateral bodies such as NEXI, JBIC, the World Bank, and the Asian Development Bank have all responded to our economic performance by endorsing our enhanced credit worthiness. J.P. Morgan reports that the prevailing decline in risk aversion has allowed the continuous improvement in economic fundamentals in the Philippines to finally shine through.

Even the less complimentary Salomon Smith Barney in its January-February 2002 credit research says: increasing risk appetite in 2002 should favor the Philippines among Asian sovereigns.

We expect the Philippines ratings to stay on the balance in 1ho2. The Philippines is gaining momentum.

Economic growth has been resilient largely thanks to strong personal consumption and some well-performing agriculture and services sectors. This could be bolstered by the government's growing credibility in the eyes of foreign investors. Given the government's commendable performance in 2001, we expect it should stay close to its more difficult targets in 2002.

Salomon Smith Barney probably based its evaluation on our first semester growth which was consumption-led. But if it had based its evaluation on our full year figures which just came out two or three days I think it would even more upbeat. For instance, it said that we grew thanks largely to strong personal consumption. But economies will say that's not sustainable. Well in the end our growth was investment-led, with domestic capital formation rising 4.3 percent amidst a world where there is dis investment in many economies — and many of your economies and bankers and you know that investment-led growth is more sustainable than consumption-led growth. So our growth is investment-led.

As for its statement regarding well-performing agriculture and service sectors, I agree with the adjective with regards to our agricultural sector because it grew 3.9 percent in 2001, again higher than expectation. And we also thank the Carageenan industry — of which FMC has been contributing — for the 3.9 percent growth. But i think the word well-performing' is mild with regard to our service sectors, where there was a 20.5 percent growth in telecommunications. And I think Motorola sales will be testament to that. And there was a 7.9 percent growth in business services, which includes information and communication technology services.

But more than any published evaluation of credit risk, I believe the most practical judgment of our economic viability is expressed in the international financial markets. The latest bond offering last January, last month, raised a total of 750 million dollars on subscriptions worth over 2.5 billion dollars, and issued at a lower rate than the guidance price. And for the month of January, which was just finished, Bloomberg has just come out with a judgment that the Philippine stock market was the number one performer in the world — a first time for our country.

Let us now focus on some examples of trade and investment sectors that offer the brightest opportunities.

We are promoting fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful and which can use our most competitive resource — the great Filipino worker. In the area of telecommunications — where we grew 10.5 percent last year — we are promoting investments in physical infrastructure for high-speed connectivity at low cost. So I hope that Motorola instead of just selling to us will set-up shop in the Philippines. We are also establishing municipal telecommunications centers, and working with mobile phone producers to disperse cell sites to make their services available all over the country. The Philippines has 7,100 islands and that certainly offers solid opportunities for wireless telecommunications infrastructure. That's why we would like to invite you, the Chicago business community, to look into.

The high growth of our human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors demonstrates that the Philippines is indeed, the home of the great Filipino worker. We are the third largest English speaking country in the world. We have a workforce that is I.T.-literate and multi-skilled. We have a large labor pool with an educational sector that churns out 400,000 college graduates a year, 40,000 of them being knowledge workers like engineers and I.T. professionals. Filipino professionals are known for having the fastest learning curve — about only eight weeks to learn technical skills.

With its highly skilled and highly trainable labor force, the Philippines is an ideal outsourcing partner for I.T. services. We have already enacted an e-commerce law, which is a first in Asia. It regulates the use of electronic technology and penalizes cybercrimes like hacking, and there are more laws, more bills in the pipeline to address other security issues as well as convergence in ICT, in telecommunications. I am pleased to announce that the Philippines will be hosting an e-services fair, next month in Manila.

Tourism is also a growing sector in the Philippines. And we are developing eco-tourism and beach tourism sites and projects.

Opportunities also lie in the energy sector. We are assisting the national power corporation in its privatization program in sourcing funds to refinance its assets to the tune of 250 million dollars out of our most recent 750 million-dollar bond offer, coupled with the Euro 500 million bond issue last November. These very successful issues were made possible by the passage of the Power Reform Bill that I mentioned earlier, which we passed last June — one of the first and significant milestones of my administration. In fact the implementing rules and regulations have just come out for the sale of these assets, chaired by Congressman Badilles who is the chairman of the House Committee on Energy.

The privatization of the national power corporation will be a major structural reform and provide long-term fiscal benefits for country, and it's worth about five billion dollars all in all — different assets. The first one to go on the block will be the transmission company worth two billion dollars which will be bidded out in June this year.

We also aim to expand the investment opportunities related to infrastructure required to improve the competitiveness of industries in the form of electricity, mass transport systems, roads, bridges, telecoms and ports.

Housing construction also presents business opportunities, as low-cost housing is one of our key priorities. I want to build 100,000 houses for workers a year and 50,000 houses for the poorest of the poor. This offers opportunities for Chicago housing technology that is inexpensive, innovative and adaptable to a tropical climate.

We also need to increase further farm incomes and harvests. And I'm saying this here in Chicago, in the Midwest because the resources, expertise, and market savvy of Midwest agribusiness corporations would be of great value to our economy.

Also our country has already positioned itself as a major player in the air express industry. The air hub of Fedex in Asia is in Subic. Ups also recently announced it would develop its own facility in the Philippines which will open on April 5th this year.

In 2002 our reforms will seek to strengthen the banking sector — that should give more opportunities for some of the bankers who are here today — and we will further unlock bottlenecks to major infrastructure and investment projects that have been stuck in the pipeline for many years. We will also expand our revenue sources.

We are determined to promote efficient and transparent governance. Under the leadership of my cabinet members, government agencies are implementing measures to cut in half the number of signatures required for the delivery of services like licenses, permits, registration and franchises.

Even our local governments have agreed to streamline and slash red tape in order to provide seamless efforts between national and local governments to be investor-friendly. That includes the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao.

And so therefore I've come here for a few hours to meet the Philippine community and also to meet the movers and shakers of the Midwest business community and to let you know that this is the time to capitalize on the deepening convergence of interests by strengthening the strategic economic alliance between the United States and the Philippines. Together, we can weather the storm of the aftermath of September 11 and avert a global recession and achieve mutually profitable alliances.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Luncheon hosted by the Economic Club of Chicago. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230834/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7621&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the arrival ceremonies after a 7-day Official/Working Visit to Northern America, Canada and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the arrival ceremonies after a 7-day Official/Working Visit to Northern America, Canada and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland

[Delivered at the NAIA Terminal 2, Pasay City, February 5, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Mr. Vice President; Mr. Senate President; Mr. Speaker; Secretary Romulo and the other cabinet members; U.S. Charge d' Affaires Bob Fitts; Canadian Charge d' Affaires Dougall Aucoin; members of the Senate and House Representatives; General Villanueva and the other Generals and Admirals; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

The weather on the other side has been quite cold and damp, but the reception for me and my delegation was consistently warm and hospitable. I Met Prime Minister Blair in London and Prime Minister Chretien in Ottawa. I met some of the world's top political and business leaders who went to New York for the World Economic Forum. I dropped by Chicago on the last leg of my trip to address a group of potential investors. I met our kababayans in all these places. They have all the best and encouraging words and sentiments for our country and our government.

Confidence in the Philippines is growing. This is because of the excellence of the great Filipino worker. The leaders and peoples of the world have seen our sense of sacrifice, our discipline and our universal ethics. They know and appreciate our unswerving stand against terrorism and poverty, our commitment to good governance.

There is a growing respect for what we have done and what we can do. The Filipino worker is shaping the destiny of the Philippines, but he is also Involved in shaping the global future.

It has been one year since I became President and four months since the September 11 tragedy. The pace with which we have been able to restore political and economic stability, and the pace of global consolidation have been extraordinary and exciting. Just as our economy began to show evidence of our resiliency, just as the Taliban fell, British peacekeeping forces moved into Afghanistan ahead of the installation of an interim government. And soon we will be meeting with the appropriate officials regarding our participation in the rehabilitation of Afghanistan. I spoke to Prime Minister Blair about Scotland yard assisting the efforts of our Philippine National Police in maintaining peace and order by helping them build up the capacity to fight kidnapping and other organized crimes. Prime Minister Blair has approved the proposal and one of our police generals is being invited to go to London soon to work out the detailed curriculum.

Our talks with Prime Minister Blair also dwelt on the need for social equity and inter-faith dialogue, long-term harmony and peace.

Canada's outlook is running along the same track as Britain. Prime Minister Chretien appreciates the need for more assistance to uplift Muslim communities in Mindanao. I brought the ARMM Governor, Dr. Parouk Hussein, with me on this trip so he could talk directly to the Canadians and the Americans, which he did. I am sure he will go back and tell his constituents that the West is really concerned about them.

But it is not only Afghanistan, not only the Philippines, that is moving into a new phase of consolidation.

President Bush in his State of the Union Address spoke of a new culture of responsibility — for upholding the non-negotiable values of human dignity everywhere — the rule of law, limits to the power of the state, respect for women, private property, free speech, equal justice, and religious tolerance.

At the World Economic Forum, I was asked to keynote no less than six meetings. The first was the Opening Plenary Session itself, where, before a standing room audience of the entire forum participants, I keynoted the panel discussion on hope, followed by Queen Rania of Jordan, the new Foreign Minister of Afghanistan, the hero of the battle against apartheid Archbishop Tutu, the singer and debt relief advocate Bono, and a Nobel Prize laureate in the person of professor Elie Wiesel. The second event where I was asked to take a leading role was a press conference arranged by the W.E.F. for selected personalities. The third was as Keynote Speaker at the luncheon of the W.E.F. fellows, media fellows, a selection of publishers and editors-in-chief of the top media organizations in the world. The fourth was an exclusive luncheon with the World Business Council whose membership consists of the top 100 CEOs of the world, with three guests of honor: the Prime Minister of Finland, to share on how Finland has become the most competitive country in the world; the King of Jordan, to give a Middle East perspective to the aftermath of September 11; and the President of the Philippines, to talk about how the business community of the developed world can help the developing countries fight terrorism and poverty. The fifth meeting was a panel discussion for the global leaders of tomorrow on leadership in fragile times, which I again keynoted, followed by a panel discussion by the CEOs of Enns and Young, Shell gas and power, Goldman Sachs, the International NGO Civicus, and a Young Arab tycoon. And the sixth was the standard country presentation for The Philippines.

In all these meetings, I brought the message that the coalition in the war against terrorism must now be decisively transformed into a coalition in the larger war against poverty.

And during these meeting in the fringes King Abdullah of Jordan and I had a chance to discuss the war against terrorism and he offered to provide the Philippines with intelligence fusion against the international terrorists who maintain cells all over our region. And he asked me to send the head of my intelligence to Jordan so that they can work out the intelligence fusion arrangements.

The World Economic Forum delivered the message that big business is earnestly striving to accommodate its critics. Equity for the developing world is the byword of the times. The wealthier nations are preparing to foot more of the bill in fighting poverty, for as long as the recipient countries show transparency, democracy, and good government practices.

We are ready for this. We have not only been a leader in the fight against terrorism and poverty, we have also bolstered our competitiveness on several fronts. I briefed the shakers and movers of the world on opportunities for business in our country. I told my audiences that we are cleaning up our democratic processes and procedures, hardening the chain of responsibility in governance, and enabling professionalism from the Cabinet down to the local governments.

Things are also looking up on the business side. It should be noted that Britain is the biggest current investor in the Philippines, by virtue of its five billion dollars exposure in the Malampaya project. Canada also has a big investment in the one billion-dollar LRT extension to Cavite. and this time, this past week time, we pinned down 1.2 billion dollars-worth of investments as follows:

Mace limited of Britain will put up in Clark an 850 million-dollar aircraft maintenance facility that will employ 28,000 workers.

Garsol Management of the United States will set up, also in Clark, an international flying school with a total investment of 300 million dollars that will employ 1,000 workers.

Royal ventures of Canada will invest 12 million dollars to construct 3,400 low-cost housing units especially for policemen, government employees, teachers, and overseas workers.

Finitech, a Canadian firm, will set up porcelain enamel coating service for steel and aluminum products. It will initially invest five million dollars And export value 12 million dollars a year.

An American firm, a large one, whose name will be announced upon the formal approval of their board, will invest five million dollars in yet another call center in the country.

Panox petroleum of the united States, Beluga tanks of Canada, and Stoneworks of the Philippines will manufacture and distribute petroleum equipment Tanks.

I launched the roadshow for the power sector privatization program, which should yield five billion dollars in investments. In London and New York, I met big players in the global power industry like national grid of the United Kingdom; Edison, Intergen, and mid-American of the United States, and Hydro Quebec of Canada — all prospective investors in the privatization of Napocor, its transmission company, and its generation companies.

There is growing consensus that the global economy is slowly reawakening from its lethargy. America itself is gaining more activity and employment in the face of a projected stimulus package slated by the Bush administration.

But business is cautiously optimistic, in awareness that much more has to be done for homeland security in the U.S., and global security for all nations.

I traveled with a congressional delegation, a delegation of local government executives, and a business delegation. I believe they can attest that people have confidence in the Philippines, and the world would be more upbeat about us if we stop tearing our nation apart by petty political squabbles.

If America is heaving a sigh of relief because the last quarter of 2001 showed a growth rate of 0.2 percent, we should be prouder of our last quarter growth of 3.9 percent for a full-year GNP growth of 3.7 percent. we should also be elated that in the month of January the value of our stocks in the stock market went up four times so the Bloomberg adjudged the Philippine Stock Market in January as the best buy in the whole world. The first time ever for our country. We should also be gratified that Moody's has just upgraded our rating from negative to stable.

So more than ever, it is important to capitalize and project the strengths of our nation in both realms of security and economic competitiveness. We must put our act together to show the world that we are a strong and determined ally in the fight against terrorism and poverty, and an active, principled player in the global regime.

I call on our people and our nation, and all our institutions, to close ranks for the big push forward.

Now is the time to consolidate.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Arrival Ceremonies after a 7-day Official/Working Visit to Northern America, Canada and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230805/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7620&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 11th Anniversary of the Philippine National Police

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 11th anniversary of the Philippine National Police

[Delivered at Camp Crame, Quezon City, February 7, 2002]

Isang malaking pagbati ang pinaabot ko sa lahat ng mga pulis ng Pilipinas sa pagdiriwang natin ngayon ng Ika-11 anibersaryo ng Philippine National Police.

Ang panahon ng anibersaryo ay panahon ng pagpapasalamat. Unang-una, nagpapasalamat ako sa sistema ng inyong anibersaryo. Ang tema ninyo ngayon ay, “Sa Serbisyon Matatag, May Gloria Ang Katapat”. Hindi ako ay pumili noon, si General Mendoza ang pumili noon.

Pero totoong sinusubaybayan ko ang lahat ng ginagawa ninyo. Ngunit kahit hindi pa man Gloria ang aking pangalan, siguradong tayo ay haharap pa rin sa isang kinabukasan, may Gloria o may kaluwalhatian kung kayong mga pulis, tayong mga naglilingkod sa pamahalaan at lahat tayong Pilipino ay magtutulung-tulungan upang magapi ang kahirapan, masugpo ang kriminalidad, at makamit ang katahimikan ng buong bansa.

On may 1 last year, you defended the presidency and constitutional rule. You showed temperance, restraint and courage in the face of provocation and danger. You wielded the iron hand of the law, but in full human respect for human rights. This has been the hallmark of your work. Loyalty, reform and achievement, these have been, indeed, the hallmark of your work.

I am glad that you respect human rights. Kasi pag ang pulis nakakalimutan ang human rights, isang araw summary justice, susunod na araw kalaban na ninyo ang pinapatay, kaya hindi mabuti iyon. You wield the iron hand of the law, but respect human rights. And I am very glad that has been the characteristic of the Philippine National Police in the present administration.

I am gratified that the reforms being done in our national police, crime solution efficiency is high. You arrested 230 members of kidnapped for ransom syndicate this past year compared with only 51 the year before. I commend your PNP Chief General Mendoza and our anti-kidnapping task force Chief, General Ebdane, for producing this result quietly and professionally. And in the face of stiff constraints, I can see that your morale is enduring. I thank you for that and I congratulate you.

On the domestic side, you also enforced last New Year’s Eve a successful ban against fire crackers and the firing of weapons during the entire holiday season, which resulted in the most peaceful Christmas and new year celebration in many years.

And I am particularly proud of your contribution to the global and regional fight against terrorism. Careful sleuthing and efficient networking led to the seizure of explosives and arms in General Santos city and the arrest of 4 international terrorists — including Indonesian Roman Al-ghozzi who has been confirmed by the Singaporean authorities to be a key member of Jimaa Islamiya. These achievements mark our determination to operate unilaterally and trilaterally with Indonesia and Malaysia to constrict terrorism traversing our common borders. Your feat has not escaped the eyes of other countries.

King Abdullah of Jordan in the world economic forum said, that he specifically wanted to meet me because he knows and appreciates our efforts regarding this. He has offered to provide us with intelligence assistance regarding the Jimaa Islamiya and its operations and network in our region.

Indeed, as King Abdullah said, those guys you are fighting are the same guys I am fighting; and I'm willing to help you fight them. Fighting crime and terrorism is a globalized effort. Alliances are important, and we must strive to expand and deepen them. But much work remains to be done. Root out terrorism, work with the international community, return the reputation of Manila and the Philippines as a welcoming and safe place in which to live and do business. Increase the benefits from our new global relevance and engagements after years of being isolated and adrift. We will meet the new round of kidnappings with more intense focus and counter force.

I have ordered a clear cut delineation of the functions along anti-crime and anti-terrorism fronts. Let me make it clear, the police has primary responsibilities over operation against the pentagon gang while the military has primary responsibility over operations against Abu Sayyaf.

I am clearly drawing these lines of authority and responsibility. And with this, I hope we shall push on until all these groups are fully neutralized and accounted for.

To eradicate the recruitment ground of terrorists, criminals and destabilizers, I am instructing the police to take the lead in organizing visible, sustained outreach and emergency employment programs particularly for out-of-school, out-of-work urban poor youth in Metro Manila. When the police mean business, terrorists and criminal syndicates are put out of business.

We will continue our long term program to professionalize the PNP. The organization is being beefed up. Last June, I created the national anti-crime commission to make the agencies in-charge of fighting crimes more interactive. For instance, you may have arrests, but that doesn't mean that your work is over. Because it is interactive, it is also part of your interest to see to it that these arrests are followed through with the appropriate prosecution.

I instructed General Mendoza last year to hire 1,700 new personnel, all college graduates. They made their first appearance in mall assignments last Christmas. We are increasing the quality and quantity of training programs, including those promoting effective community relations.

I am instructing the public safety college to add a specialization course on crime investigation and detection. And I am directing the PAGCOR to provide a supplementary budget for this specialized course.

My recent visit to London, Canada and the U.S. Resulted in $1.2 billion of new investments, but it also resulted in the formal commitment by Prime Minister Tony Blair for Scotland Yard to help the PNP, build up the skills and capacity to fight kidnapping and other organized crimes. Scotland Yard is waiting for our troop Commander General Fianza to go there to London to discuss the detailed curriculum with them.

I have also instructed General Fianza to make a similar formal proposal to the Hongkong police for a similar training program as a follow up on my talks with Chief Executive Tung Chee Hwa during my official trip to Hongkong late last year.

I frequently keep in touch with our police officials through command conferences and some other informal assemblies to ferret out and resolve problems. These informal assemblies include 1:30 a.m. Telephone calls to General Mendoza.

Last year, I checked on your needs. And I gave myself target for providing those needs. I am proud, that as General Mendoza reported, I am complying with those targets.

For instance, RA-8551, the law to professionalize the PNP, ten years ago or eleven years ago, provided for a salary scale for policemen equal to that of teachers. But for ten years this was not implemented until last year, when I got a supplemental budget from congress to finally carry out the new salary scale of our policemen.

And this year, congress provided an even bigger additional budget. And I thank the congressmen and congresswomen, several of whom are here for that. This will enable us to implement the law fully this year.

I would also like to thank senator Nene Pimentel who is not here today, for supporting the formulation of the new PNP rules of engagement. Your new rules of engagement and your revised medium term plan for development will further improve your performance.

Indeed, last year, I also listened to your tales of woe about your retirement pay. As a result, the budget secretary released P5 billion to cover retirement gratuities up to January of 2001. Other obligations had been included in the 2002 budget. Your additional budget and the senators' support for your new rules of engagement exemplify the close executive-legislative partnership we need to shore up law enforcement. The partnership should even extend more widely to the entire community.

As we have seen, as an example from some of the awards you gave out today, there has been a dramatic rise in the number of civic, religious, and non-government organizations supporting the PNP.

For your health care needs, the Camp Crame hospital is now being upgraded with the support of the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office and the national development company. We are acquiring modern hospital equipment amounting to P282 million funded by a loan facility ____ through the MBC.

We have increased the number of educational grants and scholarships to police dependents. The mechanism is now in place . Please avail of these opportunities.

Your president worked hard for these benefits for you. Because your president trusts in your sense of duty. I believe in the great Filipino worker, whether in government service or in the private sector, whether in the police force or in the civil service, whether in industries or in the services. The great Filipino worker including the great Filipino policeman is a pillar of excellence imbued with the strong sense of sacrifice, discipline and professionalism.

Pulse Asia's third quarter 2001 survey cited a 30 percent net approval rating for the PNP. Congratulations. And a 22 percent net approval rating for the PNP Chief, congratulations too. But we must take this as a signal to aim higher in our goals. Public trust must be the prime mover of achievement.

You have my unremitting faith and my commitment to push our common quest forward. In cooperation with all the pillars of the criminal justice system, we restrengthened the rule of law permanently throughout the republic. The task is difficult and full of pit holes, but we will not abandon it. Mastering a supreme sense of duty, the unity and support of the people and the institutions of good government, we will restore justice, law and order, and public safety in all corners of the land. Yes, the job is difficult, the sacrifices are stiff. Some succumb to corruption and abuse. This past year, the PNP dismissed and charged no less than 800 scalawags. But this should only go to show that the PND is capable of cleaning up its house and I know that most of you hold the line of courage and integrity. Shameful lessons of the past must not be repeated. For instance, we must never again..... Merit with patronage. We must never again divide the police force, between those who tow the political line and those who do not. Blind to partisan loyalties is what we must be. We must move forward in recognition of committed, earnest and effective performance. There is no gauge for excellence but achievement. There is no overlord but the people. Such principles infuse the awards we gave out today. Those who received these awards are our beacons of service. We emulate them because they show the way to our law-abiding, compassionate and just society. And i ask you once again to join me in fulfilling that vision of a law abiding, just and compassionate society.

Ito ang ibig kong iparating ng sabihin kong dapat tayong magtulungan. Sapagkat ang inyong tungkulin, tinutulungan kayo ng pamahalaan upang lalo pang mapahusay ang inyong trabaho at upang mapabuti pa rin ang inyong pamumuhay. At ang ating mga kababayan ay tumutulong din upang higit pang husay ang mapapakita ng pnp. Sa inyong serbisyo hindi lamang ang inyong pangulo ang inyong katapat kundi ang buong sambayanang Pilipino. Tinatapatan nila, tinatapatan ng pamahalaan nang suporta ang lahat ng inyong mga programa tungo sa kapayapaan at kaunlaran. At sa pagtutulungan ng lahat, malaki ang pag-asang darating na rin ang luwalhati ng ating kinabukasan.

Muli binabati ko ang mga binigyan nating parangal bilang outstanding policemen and policewomen ng taong ito at binabati ko lahat kayong narito. Lalo pa tayong sumikat para sugpuin ang kahirapan, sugpuin ang kriminalidad. Mabuhay kayong lahat mga dakilang pulis ng bansa Pilipinas.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 11th Anniversary of the Philippine National Police. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230755/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7619&Itemid=38

Closing Message of President Arroyo for the local roadshow conducted by Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas called “Briefings 2002”

Closing Message
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
For the local roadshow conducted by Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas called “Briefings 2002”

[Delivered at the Office of the President, Malacañang, February 8, 2002]

Good day, Ladies and Gentlemen.

A year ago, we accepted the challenge to return the Philippines to the path of progress. Our vision is promoting prosperity and improving the quality of life of our people.

I am pleased to say that this vision is bearing significant and tangible results. Through our collective work, we have put the Philippine economy back on the road to sustainable development.

We have gained a significant measure of control over our budget deficit, met our inflation and interest rate targets, stabilized the foreign exchange rate and posted a healthy growth rate last year of approximately 3.7 percent despite heavy constraints imposed by the global economic environment.

The implementation of our economic plan will continue to revolve around four components:

An economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the globalization of the 21st century;

A modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity and enhanced productivity;

A social bias toward the disadvantaged to ensure that our economic growth brings prosperity to many and not just a few; and,

An unwavering commitment to raising the moral standards of government and society.

For 2002, we will further strengthen the resilience of the economy in the face of domestic and external shocks. We shall fortify the banking sector, address corporate governance deficiencies and expand our revenue sources and GDP base. All of these shall be done in concert with steps to maintain a stable macroeconomic environment and continued support for our strong agricultural and service base.

The private sector must be the driving force of the economy. It must undertake this role by generating increased levels of productive employment opportunities and by enhancing the competitiveness of key industries.

On our part as a pro-business government, we aim to provide the country with the required public infrastructure in the form of electricity, mass transit systems, roads, bridges, telecommunications and ports, competitive investment incentive packages, and sector specific investments in training to support the private sector.

Furthermore, we are looking at creative efforts that will fuel the growth of small and medium enterprises, such as novel financing and technology transfer arrangements.

We shall also work with congress to pursue legislation to support private sector asset management initiatives and the stability of domestic interest rates. Since the start of the year, we have shifted to inflation targeting. This increases the accountability and transparency for monetary policies through a system of regular reporting.

These moves are complemented by initiatives in agricultural modernization, including investments to rehabilitate irrigation facilities, construct post-harvest facilities and assist with marketing and research and development.

I cannot emphasize enough that economic growth is of no value if it is not linked to good governance practices required to sustain it. Moreover, without peace and security, our efforts to encourage growth will also fall short. We must continue to work and deliver on both fronts.

An example is our continuing development thrusts in the regions of Visayas and Mindanao. Our regional development strategy seeks to reduce disparities by encouraging the growth of urban centers outside Metro Manila, so that they can become attractive investment destinations on their own. Our national economy will only benefit from a dispersed, but closely integrated system of urban centers.

In closing, I reiterate that we have a strong and unified plan in place and that it is working to successfully reform and build the Philippine economy. I now face 2002 with a sense of excitement and optimism, as our future looks much clearer than before. I enjoin everyone to work together and support our economic plan, which will ensure the sustainability of our precious gains in national development and most of all, in the fight against poverty.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Closing Message for Local Roadshow Conducted by Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas called "Briefings 2002". Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230733/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7617&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 16th Death Anniversary of the late Governor Evelio B. Javier

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 16th Death Anniversary of the late Governor Evelio B. Javier

[Delivered at the Gov. Evelio Javier Memorial Auditorium, Del Angel Salazar Jr. Memorial School (DASJMS), San Jose Antique, February 11, 2002]

Damo gid nga salamat Governor Sally Perez.

Please sit down.

Si Sally anak ni Justice Perez na Executive Secretary ng aking tatay, the late Diosdado Macapagal.

I'm also happy to be here with Congressman Ex Javier, classmate naman siya akong bana, and si Mayor Fernando Corvera na dati pa Coordinator ko na rito; and from our Cabinet na nandito, si Secretary Raul Roco; 'yung nag-aayos nung pondo para mapondohan ang Airport ninyo, si Secretary Emy Boncodin; si Presidential Assistant Rene Villa; Special greetings sa atong members sang Veterans Federation of the Philippines, Antique chapter; kag sa mga members sang kaibigan ni Gloria kay GMA; Tanan atong mga Government Officials; mga pinalangga kong mga Antiqueño:

Maayong aga sa inyo nga tanan.

May I also greet Vivian Javier and the other members of the Javier family because today we commemorate today the 16th Death Anniversary of one of our country's heroes, one of our country's most courageous and inspiring political leaders, the late Governor Evelio Javier.

Today's commemoration is part of our 40-day celebration of People Power 1 and People Power 2. People Power 2 started on January 16, while People Power 1 culminated in February 25th. Between January 16 and February 25 is a period of 40 days, a period recognized in our culture and religion as a traditional period for prayer, much like a 9-day novena. Through this providential reckoning of time, I believe the Lord, the divine leader of both People Power 1 and People Power 2, is sending us a message that the two events of People Power are part of one and the same continuum, and should be commemorated together, including the significant events during this period that led to the climax of People Power. Whether People Power 1 or People Power 2. One of the great events was the assassination of Evelio Javier.

Thus, in our celebration of People Power, it is fitting that we commemorate January 16, 2001, the day of the spontaneous outpouring of outrage against plunder and its cover-up; January 19, the day that signalled the collapse of the discredited government; January 20, the beginning of a new People Power government; February 22, 1986, the day Cardinal Sin called on the people to protect Fidel Ramos and the other defectors against dictatorship; and February 25th, the day Cory Aquino began to lead a restored democracy, together with all these important dates of People Power 1 and People 2 There is February 11, 1986, the day Evelio Javier gave up his life for the sanctity of the ballot.

Today we commemorate how an assassin's bullets felled Evelio Javier on the morning of February 11, 1986 right here walking distance from where we are near the provincial capitol where the Provincial Board of Canvassers was completing the tally of Antique's 18 municipalities. It was a moment of crisis as an air of indignation was sweeping the land.

At that time I was a foot soldier in the anti-fascist united front. I was writing for the underground press, speaking in various symposia, helping organize mass actions. People Power was gaining momentum, to reach its peak on the four days starting February 22nd.

The treacherous killing of Evelio Javier, together with the walkout of the canvassers in the National Canvass in PICC, where major elements in the build-up of outrage that led to the gathering of two million people in Luneta a few days later for the Tagumpay ng Bayan and to the unity between the civilian and the military that began on the 22nd of February. Thus, the killing of Evelio Javier strengthened the resolve to fight for freedom, and further inflamed the spirit of EDSA 1 that ultimately returned democracy to the Philippines.

We are of course sad, however, that final justice still evades Evelio Javier, because the perpetrators continue to elude the final consequences of their terrible act. The extradition of the mastermind, I would like to report, was one of the things that I went to Canada about. It was one of the main items in my agenda during my official visit to Canada. I asked the Prime Minister of Canada to find out why the mastermind is not being extradited up to now to the Philippines. And the information shared by the premier is that the mastermind is hiding behind the cloak of political asylum, and therefore Canada being like the Philippines — a country of due process — the claim of the mastermind for political asylum is still in the Canadian courts undergoing hearing. And so as a result of the information that I found out from the highest levels of the Canadian government back here in the Philippines I am directing the justice department to mobilize fully its experts in international law to put an end to this notorious case wherever the legal battleground may be.

Governor Javier's successor, Governor Enrique Zaldivar, Sally's brother, described the political life of Evelio Javier in the following beautiful words, and I quote:

"Evelio Javier's life was built upon a dream — let freedom ring — a dream fondly shared by Antiqueños. With daring faith and vigor, he pursued that dream in the sleepy hinterlands of antique, in every mountainside and every Hamlet. He was not daunted by the poverty of the place where we was sprung nor by the Antiquenos' resignation to their tyrannized lot. Where there Was sloth, he gave labor; where there was silence, he gave speech; where there was timidity, he gave courage. And finally, where there was death, he gave his life."

Eloquent words about Evelio Javier, from Ike Zaldivar. And today, as I come to Antique, a province whose every town I have visited but where I am returning this time for the first time as President of the Philippines, I see Evelio's brother once again in the halls of Congress. I thank him for his support speaking for the people of Antique especially for our Balikatan, and I see Ike Zaldivar's sister in the provincial capitol.

I congratulate them and I congratulate you, all of you here for keeping Evelio's dreams alive.

Congratulations that your capital town, San Jose, is one of the outstanding Galing Pook awardees on programs and project implementation. Your work here in San Jose has brought progress which has brought more banks, and improved communication facilities much more than when I was a Senator of the Philippines, improved the colleges and trade schools, and sea ports. These are growth indicators that demonstrate a will to move up in the ladder of enterprise and stability.

And I congratulate you for balancing all these by aggressive and far reaching social amelioration programs. I congratulate you for improving the lot of the great Antiqueño worker — for his is known for his greatness combined with his humility as far as the sugarlands of Negros during planting and harvesting season and now to the urban services here in San Jose meant to improve the daily lives of the average citizen.

I support your efforts. That is why today I just want to let you know as a matter of, number one, information that from the typhoon Nanang we have released, Emy Boncodin has released, one million pesos to help in the relief and rehabilitation for the people of Antique. But I believe more important, more far reaching and more strategic, I just released a check of 40 million pesos from the office of the President to the Department of Transportation and Communication in order to immediately begin the upgrading of the Antique Airport, which, on this day, I am hereby renaming the Evelio Javier airport.

Governor Saldivar informed me that he has entered into a Memorandum of Agreement with the province of Aklan which, as we know, is world famous for Boracay, to have an eco-tourism partnership. And in our national government policy the Department of Tourism and the Cabinet have adapted for the year 2002 as the major thrust for our tourism development eco-tourism and beach tourism. And certainly the airport will go a long way.

General Adelberto Yap, who is here to receive the check in behalf of DOTC in order to begin immediately the upgrading of the airport now that the money is available, also wishes me to announce to you that Air Transportation Office is opening the airport for commercial flights and Asian Spirit and Sea Air are ready to come to San Jose with our tourists.

Evelio Javier may no longer be around to help us, but his idealism unto death must continue to inspire us in our work, particularly in the support of good governance for good governance was what he died for. Good governance essentially means sacrifice — the sacrifice of time, energy, honor and even life — so that others may find a life of dignity, freedom, peace and prosperity. Good governance is not the gung-ho type of public drama and propaganda because certainly there was enough, too much of drama in the killing of Evelio Javier. We would have preferred that he be alive today rather than go through that drama of his assassination. But nonetheless, that was the way destiny and history meant for Evelio Javier to contribute to democracy in the Philippines. Outside of great heroic acts like his though, good governance is the quite, day-to-day focus on a clear cut plan to build communities and empower people.

Governor Javier said in one of his valedictories, and I quote:

“For the past eight years, I have seen the fulfillment of my dreams, I have seen that there are more dreams to work for, and even to fight for. So if you ask me, what will you do now when you are not longer governor? Answer: I will continue to tilt against windmills, I will continue to reach the impossible dream even against unbeatable foes.”

Great words from Evelio Javier. And we were contemplating his beautiful statue earlier today the band was playing the “Impossible Dream” and through that band Evelio Javier was telling us once again these words in his valedictory speech.

Let us continue Evelio Javier’s dreams. Let us continue to tilt against windmills especially the windmills of poverty as we tilted windmills in Power 1 and 2. Let us continue to reach out even for dreams that seem impossible. They say the fight against poverty is impossible to be won because it’s been here for centuries, let us be bold in our ambition and seek to win that fight within the decade.

And let us continue to work for justice not only against the assassins of Governor Javier, but against all enemies of freedom and decency. And that is why I thank Ex Javier for expressing the support of the people of Antique for our looking for every way possible to fight against those who want to kill our freedom and our way of life in the jungles of Basilan. Let us not relent until our society is secure, until Basilan is secure, until Panay Island is secure, until good government is secure — in the hands of brave, upright, and decent leaders. Let us fight for peace, law And order and justice wherever the challenge takes us.

On this day, we bow our heads in memory of a great man. A hero of the Philippine peaceful People Power revolution.

At the same time, we acknowledge god’s sovereignty over life and death, his sovereignty over our lives.

Let us pray for the same courage and conviction to help us in carrying on Evelio Javier’s work. As we reflect on the contributions that Evelio Javier made to community and country, let us inspire them to do our part in Seeing his noble ideals become reality.

We cannot say mabuhay si Evelio Javier dahil wala na siya sa atin. Ngunit mabuhay ang paalaala na iniwan ni Evelio Javier sa atin — ang diwa ng pagkabayani, ang diwa ng mabuting pamamalakad ng isang probinsya, pamamalakad ng isang bansa.

Maraming salamat. And peaceful commemoration to all of us.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 16th Death Anniversary of the late Governor Evelio B. Javier. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230723/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7616&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 10th National Convention of the Provincial Board Member of the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 10th National Convention of the Provincial Board Member of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Ballroom, Sheraton Hotel, Manila, February 18, 2002]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat Secretary Joey Lina at magandang hapon sa inyong lahat.

Binabati ko yung mga very supportive na Local Government Officers Leagues na narito ngayon: Si Governor del Rosario, ang presidente ng Governors' League of the Philippines at ang Union of Local Authorities of the Philippines; at maraming Vice Governors na narito, mga kabalikat ninyo doon sa Provincial Board kaya sila ang presiding officer sa pamumuno ni Vice Governor Julius Herrera. Nagpapasalamat din ako kay Board Member Palmero sa kanyang magandang pagbati kanina; at si Vice Mayor Louie Bustamante ang katangi-tanging delegado natin mula sa Metro Manila. Nandito rin si Joey Rufino ang aking Political Secretary; mga panauhin:

Magandang hapon sa inyong lahat. Kareng kabalen kong delegadu menibat Pampanga amu Tarlac mayap a gatpanapun kecongan. Dagiti kakailayak ti bangir ni mamang ko, naimbag nga malem yo apo. Ken sa ating mga kaigsuonan gikan sa mindanao ug Central Visayas, maayong hapon kaninyong tanan. Kag sa mga kasimanwa sang akong bana na Ilonggo maayong hapon sa inyo nga tanan. Ang dami pa diyan. San saray kabaleyan, Pangasinan. And maumay nga kulok sa ating mga taga-Waray country. And of course to our Bicolanos, good afternoon also to all of you.

At ako ay nasisiyahan na tayo ay nandito ngayon.

Binabati ko ang mga Provincial Board Members ng Pilipinas sa okasyon ng inyong ika-sampung National Convention. Ten years yan ay napaka-importanteng masasabi nating Jubilee celebration.

At hindi lang ito espesyal dahil 10 years na itong League na ito. Espesyal din ang ating pagkakasama ngayon dahil itong araw na ito ay sakop sa kwaresma ng anibersaryo ng People Power 1 at People Power 2. Ang People Power 1 kung naaalala natin ay nag-culminate noong February 25, 1986 at ang People Power 2 naman ay nagsimula noong January 16, 2001. Mula sa January 16 hanggang sa February 25 ay apat-na-pung araw, at ang pagdasal na apat-na-pung araw ay tinatawag nating kwaresma yan ay bahagi sa ating kultura kasama ng siyam araw na tinatawag nating nobena. Para bang nagbigay ng mensahe ang Panginoon, dahil siya naman ang pinanggalingan ng People Power, na ang dalawang People Power ng ating kasaysayan ay bahagi ng isang pangyayari at diwa, at dapat ipagdiwang nang magkasama.

Kaya araw-araw sa loob nitong kwaresma ay pinagdidiwang natin ito People Power 1 at Power 2. Pinagdidiwang ko, kasama ng iba't ibang importanteng bahagi ng People Power. At ngayon, nararapat lamang na kasama ko kayo sa pagdiwang na ito dahil tinuturing ko at tinuturing ng sambayanan ng mga Provincial Board Members ng Pilipinas, ang mga gumagawa ng sa mga batas ng probinsya, ay tunay na alagad ng People Power.

Kaya kayo ay importanteng bahagi ng People Power. Kaya binabati ko kayong lahat, tayong lahat. 'Pag sinabi nating Happy People Power Anniversary, kasama doon ang Board Members ng bawa't probinsya ng ating bansa.

At noong ako ay dumadaan dito sa middle aisle, ang dami kong mga kilala sa inyo dahil marami sa inyo ay dating punong bayan, marami sa inyo ay re-elected na bilang board member. So hindi kayo mga baguhan sa pagpapatakbo ng pamahalaan. Marami sa inyo beterano na sa paggawa ng batas. Marami sa inyo beterano na sa pagpapatakbo ng isang bayan. At alam ninyo kung ano iyong dapat mapasa na mga ordinansa ng probinsya na makakatulong sa magandang pagpapatakbo ng isang bayan.

Ako, malaki rin ang aking kahangaan sa mga local government officials. Gaya nga ng sabi ni Joey — actually si Joey ay talagang brinaso ko para maging Secretary ng Interior and Local Government, eh shoe-in na shoe-in iyan for re-election as Governor pero nagsakripisyo at biglang iniwanan niya iyong contest doon sa local at naging Secretary ng Interior and Local Government. At mabuti naman dahil dala-dala niya ang inyong mga pangarap, inyong mga hangarin. Kaya kung sinasabi niyang buong binibigay kong ira ninyo ngayon, kung sinasabi niyang wala ng 10 percent or 20 percent retention, wala nang LGSEF at binabayaran pa iyong utang noong nakaraang administrasyon eh kasi kinukulit ako ni Joey dahil nanggaling siya sa inyo.

Noong ako ay bagong pangulo noong araw sa entablado sa Edsa 2, January 20, 2001, ang sinabi ko noon pa, na ang ating pangunahing layunin dapat maging ambisyoso tayo. Matagal na kasing nilalabanan ng ating bansa ang kahirapan. Dapat ngayon mag-ambisyoso tayo, bigyan natin ang sarili natin ng deadline. Sabihin natin, sikapin natin na sa loob ng isang dekada masusugpo natin itong kahirapan ng ating bansa.

Papaano na natin gagawin iyon? Di titignan natin iba't ibang mga sukat ng kahirapan at sagutin natin. Halimbawa, marami sa inyo ay nasa probinsya. doon sa probinsya malaking kahirapan ay nandoon sa mga magsasaka. At isang malaking problema ng pagsasaka ay iyong Agrarian Reform. Mayroon pang dalawang milyong ektaryang hindi pa namumudmod sa Agrarian Reform. Kaya kung gusto nating sugpuin ang kahirapan ng ating bansa, di hangarin natin na sa loob ng isang dekada iyang two million hectares na iyan ay ipamumudmod natin. At kung two million ang ating hangarin sa sampung taon, di ang ibig sabihin noon taun-taun 200,000 hectares ang ating target.

Ganoon ang ibig sabihin na nagkakaroon ng ambisyon na mayroon deadline para sa ganoon sama-sama tayo sa road map na ito at bawa't isang sangay ng gobyerno, bawa't isang level ng gobyerno ay may kanyang tungkulin.

Noon nga ako ay pumunta sa State of the Nation Address ng Kongreso, sinabi ko iyong apat na bahagi ng ating paglalaban kontra sa kahirapan. Una sa lahat, ito ay 21st century na ito, at itong 21st century na ito papaano nilalabanan ang kahirapan? Higit sa lahat, trabaho. Dapat mayroong trabaho ang humahanap ng trabaho. At paano nating hahapin ang pagkakataon ng pagtatrabaho? Kailangan may investments. At papano tayo hahanap ng investments? Kailangan maganda ang macro-economic environment.

Kaya iyon ang sinikap kong gawin itong unang taon ng aking pagka-pangulo, iyong macro-economic development dapat maayos para papasok ang mga investments maging dayuhan o maging Pilipino. At anu-ano ang mga hinahanap nilang mga bahagi ng macro-economic environment? Kapayapaan isa doon, at malaking magagawa ng local government sa kapayapaan gawa ng kayo ang nandoon, kayo ang kinikilala kung sino ang masasamang elemento sa inyong lugar. Ang dami-daming local government units ang nakatulong sa paglaban kontra doon sa mga lumalaban sa ating kapayapaan.

Pero ang masasabi kong isang napaka-importante para sa ating mga macro-economic environment ng investments ay iyong red tape. Iyon ang isang talagang malaking inaayawan ng mga investors maging local, maging foreign.

At sa aking naalala bilang isang Government Official mula pa noong 1986, ang aking unang trabaho ay doon sa Department of Trade and Industry, at ako ang nag-set-up ng one-stop-shop for investors. So medyo over these past years, iyong one-stop-shop ay nagagawa sa national level pero ang investments ay hindi nangyayari sa national level. Ang investments ay nilalagay sa isang lokalidad — isang lugar maging Metro Manila o maging sa mga probinsiya.

Kaya ang hinahanap ng investors ay mula sa national haggang sa local, gusto nila na kung puwede isa lang ang kausap, isa lang ang nag-aalaga o kaya isang opisina lamang ang pinupuntahan so napaka-importante na kung ano iyong one-stop mga reforms na ginagawa o iyong maiikling panahon para makakuha ng approval, iyon ay kailangan mangyari rin sa mga local government units. Kaya importante na iyong mga Provincial Board Members, iyong mga provincial ordinances tungkol sa negosyo ay kailangan kayo, nasa kamay ninyo ito upang sa ganoon ay paikliin o padaliin iyong mga proseso ng pagpasok ng investment maging lokal o maging international itong mga investments na ito.

At ako naman ay ginagalang ko nga na iyong mga investors they don't come to the Philippines, they go somewhere in the Philippines. So noong araw iyong mga State Visit ng mga presidente dinadala nila iyong mga Congressman at saka mga Senador. Madaling maintindihan iyon kasi iyong budget na nangagaling sa Congress at saka sa Senado kaya kailangang ipakita nila na hindi nasasayang 'yung budget na ginagastos doon sa mga State Visits.

Pero noong ako ay naging pangulo at kaupo kayo, kaupo ko iyong mga Leagues, mga government officials, sabi nga nila, "iyong mag-aalaga naman ng investors, iyong mga mag-aalok ng investors hindi naman iyong mga Congressman at Senators dahil nandoon sila sa Kongreso, gumagawa ng batas." Pagdating ng investments o mag-aalok ng investments, ang mag-e-entertain naman ay iyong mga local government officials. At iyong mga batas ay hindi lamang naman iyong mga national laws ang kailangan — na actually, ngayon halos lahat ng national laws for investment ay nandoon na pero iyong mga Local Ordinances and Provincial Ordinances. So kaya mula noon, noong malaman ko iyong insight na iyon, hindi lang Congressman at Senator ang dinadala pati na rin mga kinatawan ng local government units; ang governors at city mayors ay parating kasama na rin sa mga Official Visit at State Visit ng Pangulo ng Pilipinas.

Sa ganoon, 'pag nandoon kami ay sila, sila na rin ay binibenta iyong mga probinsiya sa ating mga investors, pero siyempre sa inyo rin kung papaano ang mga batas na dadalhan, kung papaano mga batas na maaabutan ng mga investors dahil kung ang Pilipinas ay nagko-contest sa ibang mga bansa para sa investors, including our own domestic investors. Kasi kung ang ating businessmen nakita nila na mas maganda ang batas ng Vietnam, lilipat sila doon kahit na Pilipino sila. O China, lilipat sila kahit Pilipino sila. Tayo ay nagpapaligsahan sa ibang mga bansa sa mga investments kahit na investments sarili natin negosyante. Eh ganoon din ang iba't ibang mga probinsiya nagpapaligsahan din kung saan magandang pumunta.

At alam ninyo, may mga investors na kung minsan umaalis. At 'pag umaalis sila, iyong dti ay nagkakaroon ng exit interview para malaman kung bakit umaalis. At sa mga resulta ng exit interview nakikita na malaking bagay iyong kung papano nila nararamdaman ang suporta ng local governments sa kanilang investments. Kaya ito ay napaka-importante na sana maging bahagi ng inyong mga workshop: how to have seamless efforts between national and local governments with regard to investment promotion.

Maraming ginagawa ang provincial board, maraming approvals. Halimbawa, hindi ba iyong mga environmental clearance certificate at ibang mga bagay na ganoon, may kinalaman ang mga provincial board. So sa mga proseso ng mga approvals ng iba't ibang papeles na kailangan ng investments, ang laking importansiya ng provincial board. At 'pag tayo ay humahanap ng mga Official Development Assistance para magkaroon ng infrastructure dahil hinahanap ng mga investors na mayroon tayong infrastructure — kalsada, pantalan, telepono, airport — marami dito hindi kaya ng budget natin dahil nagmana nga ako ng budget na magiging 225 billion pesos salamat na lamang naibaba natin iyong sa 147 billion. At kung gusto nating manatili pang maganda ang ating macro-economics, we should try to bring it down best efforts to 130 billion pesos.

So maraming infrastructure ay talagang manggagaling sa Official Development Assistance, at maraming gustong tumulong dahil maganda ang ating credit rating ngayon. Salamat sa panginoon na nakikita ng mga Official Development Assistance sources na ang ating utilization ay maganda. Kaya kung maganda ang utilization hindi sila nasasayangan.

Halimbawa, Japan, dahil nagkakaroon sila ng problema ay binabaan nila ang kanilang ODA by 10 percent, pero official na, hindi nila binawasan ang Official Development Assistance sa Pilipinas dahil maganda ang ating paggamit. Eh ang Japan 70 percent ng ating Official Development Assistance ay nasa Japan, nangagaling sa Japan at hirap na hirap sila sa sariling ekonomiya nila, tuloy pa rin ang kanilang tulong sa Pilipinas hindi binabawasan. Kaya nakakahiya naman kung sinasayang natin 'yang tulong na iyan sa pamamagitan ng red tape. At napaka-importante, 'pag provincial project — 'di ba Dolfo? — 'pag provincial project ang sina-submit sa Official Development Assistance, napaka-importante ang approval, ang concurrence ng provincial board. Kaya napakaimportante talaga ang papel ng provincial board sa paggawa nung macro-economic environment na magbibigay ng trabaho sa ating taong-bayan.

Kaya ako ay nasisiyahan na tayo'y magkasama para pag-usapan yoon. Iyon ang unang bahagi ng ating apat na bahagi ng laban kontra sa kahirapan.

Pangalawa, dahil gaya ng sabi ko kanina, nakararami sa ating mahihirap ay nandoon sa kanayunan, ating magsasaka. Kaya kailangan natin ang mga bagay kagaya ng reporma sa lupa at kagaya ng ating matatawag nating modernization ng agrikultura.

Actually, ito talaga ang isang bagay kung bakit talagang nilabas natin ang pera, ang IRA ninyo, nitong taong ito, at binayaran pa iyong IRA nung mga nakaraang taon.

Alam niyo ang ating exports ay bumaba ng 40 percent, dahil sa kahirapan ng mundo. Ngunit kahit bumaba ang exports natin ng 40 percent, tumaas pa rin ang ating GNP ng 3.7 percent. Bakit? Dahil inalagaan natin ang domestic demand.

Nuong ako ay nasa world economic forum, nung kinukuwento ko na bumaba ang ating export 39.5 percent at umakyat pa rin ang GNP ng 3.7, because I built up domestic demand and yet we kept the budget deficit at 147 billion, lahat sila kahanga-hanga. At talagang sabi nila, "how did you do it? How did you build up domestic demand?" Eh noong pinag-uusapan nila Dante Canlas — kasi kasama ko siya doon — what ways we built up domestic demand, ang number one na paraan kung papaano na-build up iyong ating domestic demand ay nung nilabas ang buong ira at binayaran iyong mga ira nuong mga nakaraang taon, kayo mga lgu, ginastos ninyo through the budget passed by the provincial board, you spent your budget on good productive income generating activities that gave income to the people kaya umangat ang ating domestic demand at nag-survive tayo ng krisis ng year 2001. marami dito ay iyong mga nagastos para sa agricultural productivity. Kaya naman iyong mga magsasaka, kahit papaano may nagastos; at hindi lamang may nagastos, umangat ang ating produksyon ng agrikultura dahil pinaggastusan ninyo iyong countryside.

Last year, ang ating import requirement, ang kakulangan ng ating production of rice was 650,000 metric tons, pero dahil sa ating pagtulung-tulungan sa paggastos ng farm-to-market roads, kung anu-anong mga kailangan for agriculture, ay umangat by 300,000 metric tons. Kaya this year ang ating shortfall na lamang ay 390 metric tons. Kaya bumababa nang bumababa.

At 'yun din siguro kung dinamutan ko kayo ng IRA at hinihintay ko sa Malakanyang kung sino ang magsisipsip at hihingi, eh, di mahina ang labas nung perang iyon, mahina ang gastos ninyo, mahina ang allocation. Kaya ako ay nagpapasalamat na sa ganoong bagay ay nakatulong din tayo sa kanayunan at sa pag-angat ng ating GNP.

Iyong pangatlong bahagi ng ating paglaban kontra sa kahirapan ay iyong mga diretsong tulong sa mga pinakamahihirap. Halimbawa, binanggit ko na iyong land reform. Isa pang halimbawa, sinabi ko sa State of the Nation Address, gusto ko na makatayo ng 100,000 housing para sa mga manggagawa — iyong economic housing ang tawag dun sa marami sa inyo alam na ninyo 'yan — at 50,000 na housing sa mga pinakadukha. Eh 'yung economic housing bangko 'yon, maaayos natin iyon kung aayusin natin iyong Securitization Law; maayos natin iyon kung maayos iyong Asset Management Law; at ganung-ganong bagay; kung maayos natin iyong pag-ibig na mas mabilis ang kilos. Pero iyong bahay para sa mga pinakadukha, iyong talagang dukhang dukha na ang kaya lang nilang rent or amortization 300/ 500, iyon ay hindi mo mahahanap iyong 50,000 na iyong sa market o sa private sector, kailangang gobyerno ang magtatayo noon. Ngunit 50,000 na iyong magkano iyon at magkano ang buong budget nuon? Malaking malaki, bilyon bilyon ang pangangailangan, and never before did the government put money for that kind of housing in the budget. In fact, ang estimate ko dapat five billion pesos, but since never before was five billion pesos put in housing in the budget ... Hindi ba ang budgeting natin, ang budgeting ninyo hindi naman zero-based, it is present budget plus five percent, plus 10 percent, depending. So five percent or 10 percent of zero, wala talaga. So talagang we have to squeeze blood from stone. At pinilit ko si Emy Boncodin, palagay ko nakahanap siya ng 2.5 billion para sa housing for the poorest of the poor, kulang iyong, so kailangan mag-partner tayo — iyong provincial government at iyong National Government hanapin ninyo iyong pinakamahirap sa inyong probinsiya at siguro iyon ang magagawa nating pagtutulongan.

Halimbawa, well, wala dito... Nandito ba 'yung tiga-Nueva Ecija? Sa alam ko, halimbawa, si Tommy Joson, mayroon siyang housing for his poorest farmers, at sa dinig ko, 5,000 iyong kanyang housing. Eh, kung 5,000 aba, kung may sampung probinsyang mayayaman na makakagawa noon at mag-partner tayo eh nakuha na iyong 50,000 housing for the poorest of the poor. Pero siyempre kailangan na iyong provincial board ibibigay niya iyong budget na iyon kagaya ng kailangan din na iyong kongreso ay bibigyan ng budget sa atin.

Tapos 'yung pang-apat, 'yung tinatawag nating good governance ay kailangan. raising moral standards in government and in society. At iyon ay isang dahilan kung bakit binigay ko na lahat ang ira ninyo kasi ayaw ko iyong sistema pulitika na patronage na pupunta pa kayo sa pangulo para magmakaawa na magkaroon kayo ng additional project money dahil in the first place dahil tinanggal kayo ng 10 or 20 percent. Dapat kayo ay magkakaroon ng salapi para sa inyong mga proyekto because it is your right and not because you begged for it. At dahil nga empowered ang lgus sa administrasyong ito dahil hindi kayo binabawasan ng ira ay biglang lumalaki nga iyong inyong perang imumudmod at iba-budget. Noong araw, Joey, 106 billion ang nire-release ng gobyerno, ngayon, 136 billion ang ni-release para sa local government. Ah 134.

Kaya ito siguro ang mapag-uusapan sa darating na dalawang araw: kung papaano kaya makakatulong ang provincial board sa pagdadala ng negosyo lalo na iyong cutting down on red tape and being investor-friendly sa pagtutulong sa mga magsasaka na sila ang napakahirap, maraming napakahirap, sa ating bansa; kung paano makakapagbigay ng mga derechong suporta sa pinaka-mahirap sa inyong iba't-ibang mga community at kung paano aangat ang sukat ng moralidad sa ating mga komunidad.

Kaya marami tayong kailangang gawin. Isang taon pa lang tayo nagkakasama bilang isang administrasyon, ngunit sa nakita ko ngayon, matagal na tayong nagkakasama bilang mga naglilingkod sa taong-bayan. Gamitin natin ang ating matagal ng pagkakasama, gamitin natin ang ating mga bagong mga pinagkasunduan na prayoridad nitong People Power administration. At sana nga, sa ating pagkakaisa, tunay na sa loob ng isang dekada masasabi natin sa 20th anniversary ng Board Members League of the Philippines, sana maka-celebrate tayo na nasugpo na ang kahirapan sa ating bansa.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 10th National Convention of the Provincial Board Member of the Philippines. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230622/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7611&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a State Dinner in Honor of President Ion Iliescu of Romania

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During a State Dinner in Honor of President Ion Iliescu of Romania

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, February 19, 2002]

His Excellency President Iliescu; Vice President and Mrs. Guingona; Senate President and Mrs. Drilon; Speaker and Mrs. de Venecia; our Honorable Chairmen of the Committee of Foreign Relations of the Senate and the House of Representatives of Romania; friends in the Philippines; members of the delegation of his Excellency; Ladies and Gentlemen: His Excellency comes from a land far away but in a way very near to the hearts and the minds and the culture and the soul of the Philippines.

We have many things in common with Romania even if Romania may be so far away. For one, just as the Philippines is a Latin country in a sea surrounded by other Asiatic cultures Romania also is a Latin country surrounded by Slavik countries in Eastern Europe. So Romania is more akin to the Philippines culturally than it is to its neighboring countries in Eastern Europe.

This is an old relationship but a more contemporary one that we share together in this century and century just passed the century where we have reemerging democracies is our common journey from dictatorship to democracy.

The Philippines was able to achieve this during the People Power Revolution and we are now about celebrate the People Power Revolution from February 22nd to February 25th. In 1989 Romania also underwent the same journey from dictatorship to democracy.

His Excellency shares the same history as Ninoy Aquino and Cory Aquino put together because in 1971 when there was a re-beginning of the great depression in the country of Romania His Excellency was one of the intellectuals who thought too independently and therefore was sent to exile just like Ninoy Aquino. and now His Excellency is President of Romania as President Aquino became President of the Philippines.

So, we have in our midst a guest who brings therefore hopefully more knowledge about peoples from across lands but peoples who share with us many things in common, and this simply shows us that indeed the world is not such a big world after all. It is a small world because we see something in common with a country that many contemporary Filipinos really do not know so much about.

And so I'm very grateful your Excellency that you have come to the Philippines. It is a good time in this 21st century when the world is shrinking that our countries should get to know each other better. I have the great fortune of being able to visit your country in 1971 at the time in fact that Romania was entering a new chapter in your history and now you have come here, the first Romanian head of government to be able to come to the Philippines in this modern times.

Let us hope therefore that this visit of His Excellency will be the beginning of greater friendship, greater interaction and greater mutual assistance in the fight that both our countries are waging against poverty and towards the promotion of sustainable democracy.

And so I ask everyone tonight to join me in a toast: to His Excellency, President Ion Iliescu, President of Romania.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a State Dinner in honor of President Ion Iliescu of Romania.
Retrieved
from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230612/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7610&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the launching ceremony of Amando Doronila's books

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the launching ceremony of Amando Doronila's books, "The Fall of Joseph Estrada: The Inside Story" and "Between Fires: Fifteen Perspectives on the Estrada Crisis"

[Delivered at the Manila Polo Club, McKinley Road Forbes Park, Makati City, February 21, 2002]

Thank you very much secretary Camacho.

Mr. Amando Doronila, our hero of tonight and of many days; ms. Bolasco; Ms. Prieto-Romualdez; distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen:

in January last year, many of us, many of you who are here tonight were in the vortex of a storm. The experience of EDSA Dos combined with the May 1 riot have their lingering effects. It is only when these events are finally chronicled, as they have been done by Doro, that one feels a sense of settling down — that things have been put in their proper place.

The titles of the books themselves point to their message. One is an inside story, the other is a compendium of perspectives. This is the way a good story must move forward. One must first have a feel of the plot, then he must be aware of the future horizon. Here we are given a comprehensive and sweeping view of events for which we learn formidable lessons.

The most formidable lesson is that absolute power is an illusion. The presidency is a symbol of the power of the people, and of their time-honored aspirations and values of truth, of justice, and of moral rectitude. The presidency is nothing without the people. The Presidency is nothing if it fails to stand for the ideals of the people.

Some leaders think they can fool history, these leaders have failed. Some think they can conceal dirt in contrived virtue, when they cannot. Others would attempt to mesmerize, cajole and engage in distracting drama. But the simple fact remains: you cannot fool all the people all the time. This has been proven twice in our recent history, in extraordinary democratic upheavals in our country in the past 16 years.

Tonight's event comes in the transition between the first anniversary of EDSA Dos and the 16th anniversary of EDSA One. We chose to bridge these celebrations in a continuum of 40 days — our traditional cuaresma — from January 16th to February 25th, because we want to convey the message of two episodes with a single meaning that can be stated in one phrase: democracy and morality.

Democracy is our gift, our weapon, our profound blessing. Often we take it for granted like the air we breathe. But when it is taken away from us, we risk honor, treasure, life and limb to retrieve it. Such is our character as a people. And we must be proud of this.

Morality is our obligation to the divine giver of democracy. Philippine society is often looked upon as tolerant instead of puritanical. But we have shown that there is a limit where we must draw the line, and again, be willing to risk honor, treasure, life and limb to draw that line.

I speak not only for myself but also for my late father in expressing great admiration for Doro, the writer and editor of these volumes. My father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal considered Doro one of the most profound writers and political analysts of our times, and he pondered upon every word that he read in Doro. I have inherited some of that awestruck ness. I cannot remember anytime when my father ever disagreed with the analysis of Doro. On my part there are times when I do disagree. But this is irrelevant in tonight's setting today, tonight we celebrate good journalism, which means we celebrate principled disagreement, enlightened debate, productive controversy. We celebrate the light that shines through events and mirrors them in the firmament of truth.

Truth is what EDSA was all about. And when we say truth responsible journalism cannot be far behind. People Power has always marched with the press in defeating despotism and corruption. And the press, despite its perceived failings sometimes, always comes to the rescue of democracy and of the bedrock of morality in the most critical times.

The world is keenly interested in how the distinguished, world famous author examines in detail the roles of our political and social institutions in a time of crisis — the military, the church, business, civil society, congress and the Supreme Court. Doro consistently suggests that Philippine democracy is strengthened by the exposure and the response of these institutions to crisis. And I agree with him.

The second volume applies the cold light of scholarship to what may have been to many an emotional upheaval. Fifteen of our leading academics, journalists and social critics contributed to the production of this book put together by Doro.

For many decades now indeed, Doro has graced and brought life to our papers with his thoughtful and incisive commentary. His insights are street smart and yet scholarly. His good sense forged in the crucible of incorruptibility.

Doro's presence is evident in a piece he wrote in March 1998 when he said, and I quote:

“Today, the real issue should be competence, the character of a presidential candidate, and the people the candidate is associated with. If a candidate is associated with shadowy characters, we have an early warning sign of crony corruption and compromises that could tie the hands of a new government in tackling the economic crisis in initiating reforms.” Unquote.

Very wise indeed, that's why you noticed before I became president and now as president when I come to parties such as this I don't bring a coterie of cronies with me anywhere.

For such meaningful insights, I always take Doro very seriously. He is an apostle of strategic outlook as well as common sense.

Let me therefore thank and congratulate also the people behind these two volumes — anvil publishing — which has always published some of the most important works in our country even when they were written by people who are not always as bankable as Amanda Doronila. And the Philippine daily inquirer, I congratulate them too. I congratulate both of them as I congratulate Doro for such worthwhile projects. And I pray that the substance of these works will enlighten and inspire all our people. It will certainly inspire this present administration to do more and to do right by the Filipino.

Doro, congratulations and Mabuhay!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Launching Ceremony of Amando Doronila's books, "The Fall of Joseph Estrada: The Inside Story" and "Between Fires: Fifteen Perspectives on the Estrada Crisis". Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230534/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7609&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 5th National Congress of the Philippine Councilors League (PCL)

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 5th National Congress of the Philippine Councilors League (PCL)

[Delivered at the World Trade Center, Pasay City, February 22, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Lina. ‘Yung ating Secretary of Interior and Local Government na dating pangulo ng ULAP. Kaya talagang alam na alam niya ang inyong pangangailangan kaya tuloy nung siya ang naging Secretary of Interior and Local Government lahat na hinahangad n’yo sa nakaraan ay pinilit niya akong ibigay sa inyo.

Kagalang-galang na host mayor ng Pasay City si Mayor Peewee Trinidad; Si Congresswoman ng Pasay City na dating kasapi ng Councilors League si Congresswoman Connie Dy; pangulo ninyo si National President Melendrez; EVP Benavidez; kablawan man Dakayo ti diskurso yo apo Chairman Datuin; Vice Chairman Veloso; Secretary General Alejandro; Pangulo ng Metro Manila Camila; Chairman ng Metro Manila si Jorge Banal, na mas kilala sa kanyang anak na bayani ng impeachment trial; mga kasapi ng executive committee at national board members; at nandito rin ang ibang mga panauhin mula sa DILG si Undersecretary Soliman; dating chairman ng PCI si Pinggoy Lagumbay aking kabaleyan; at dating pangulo si Mike Rama; at sa inyong lahat mga konsehal binabati ko kayo sa Okasyon ng inyong ika-limang congress. Magandang hapon sa inyong lahat.

Kareng kabalen kong kapampangan maayap a gatpanapon kecongan. Dagit kakailyak ken kadwak ken ni Chairman Datuin naimbag nga malem yo amin apo. San saray kabaleyan, masantos ya ngarem ed sikayon amin. sa aton mga kaigsuunan gikan sa mindanao asa ako nidako, maayong hapon kaninyong tanan. assalamu alaikom pagariya. Sa mga kasimanwa sang akon bana nga ilonggo, maayong hapon sa inyo nga tanan. sa mga waray, maupay nga kulop ha iyo tanan. At sa mga bicolano, marhay nga hapon sa indo gabos.

Espesyal ang ating pagkakasama ngayon dahil ito, itong inyong anibersaryo hindi lamang anibersaryo ninyo. Espesyal na ginanap natin itong araw na ito dahil ito ang unang araw ng pagdiriwang natin ng ika-labing-anim na anibersaryo ng edsa 1. Lahat tayo, naaalala natin yung mga naganap noong ika-Beinte dos ng Pebrero 1986. Naalala natin nagsimula yung edsa people Power 1 nung yung malaking bahagi ng sandatahan sa pamumuno nang nung vice chief of staff Fidel Ramos at yung mga RAM sa pamumuno ni noon Colonel Gregorio Honasan ay kumalas sa gobyerno ni Ferdinand Marcos at kumampi sa sambayanang Pilipino.

Kaninang umaga, bilang pagdiriwang sa Fort Bonifacio, sa libingan ng mga Bayani binigyang galang natin si pangulong Ramos sa kanyang papel hindi bilang naging pangulo ng Pilipinas kundi bilang pinuno ng bahagi ng sandatahan na lumipat sa panig ng taongbayan noong araw na ‘yon, February 22, 1986. Nung tanghali naman kanina, for the first time sa selebrasyon ng People Power, nagkaroon ng unang fellowship ang mga RAM, mga kasama ni Senator Honasan at iyong iba’t ibang mga lider ng RAM upang ipagdiwang ang kanilang kontribusyon naman hindi lamang sa EDSA — iyong paglipat nila sa panig ng taumbayan itong araw na ito 16 years ago — kundi na rin dahil pagkatapos ng paghihiwalay ng landas after EDSA 1 nung EDSA 2 ay marami ay bumalik muli at naging bahagi ng EDSA 2. At ngayon naman kasama ko kayo sa pagdiwang ng araw na ito. Ang araw ng paglipat ng sandatahang pilipinas sa taongbayan. Eh papaano kayo napasok doon? Iba-iba ‘yung mga sandatahan ang ating pinagdiwang kanina? Dahil sila ay lumipat sa taongbayan. Kailangan may kinatawan ang taongbayan sa ating pagdiriwang at ang mga Konsehal ng pilipinas, kayo ang kinatawan ng taongbayan, ng karaniwang taongbayan na kinampihan ng sandatahan noong araw na ‘yon. Tinuturing ko kayo mga konsehal ng pilipinas na tunay na alagad ng People Power.

Napag-alaman ko na bagama’t 1,200 lamang ang dumalo nung 1st national Congress five years ago, itong bilang ay tumaas sa 7,000 sa 4th national Congress noong 1999, at ngayon ay mahigit na 8,000 ang delegates na naririto. Record attendance. Congratulations sa magandang attendance.

Ako ay nagalak na ang Philippine Councilors League ay buhay na buhay, aktibo at lalo pang lumalakas. Kailangan ng gobyernong nasyonal ang inyong tulong upang isulong ang kapakanan ng ating bansa. Kayo ang kabalikat ng panguluhan sa paglaban sa kahirapan at pagpapa-iral ng batas at katiwasayan.

Ang inyong liga ay sadyang malapit sa aking puso. Noong ako ay Senador at Bise-Presidente, parati akong dumadalo sa inyong mga PCL National Congress. Siguro sawang-sawa na kayo sa aking pagdating dito. May panahon pang dumalo rin ako sa ilan sa inyong mga Provincial at Regional Councilors Congresses. Dinaluhan ko ang inyong national assembly sa Cebu City noong February 3rd ng nakaraang taon, nang una akong dinaluhan ang inyong assembly bilang pangulo.

Nung tayo ay nasa cebu sinabi ko sa inyo na ang pagsulong at kaunlaran ng ating bansa ay nakasalalay sa ating mga lungsod at mga bayan. At tamang-tama pinagdiriwang nating ito sa unang araw ng people power. Dahil ang kaunlaran ng ating bansa ay nandoon sa people power. Hindi ito dinidikta o minamani-obra mula sa taas ng national government.

Ang mga yaman, kakayahan, imahinasyon at kasipagan na inyong kinakailangan ay matatagpuang lahat sa inyong komunidad.

Sa aking state of the nation address sa kongreso noong nakaraang Hulyo, Sinabi ko na upang masugpo natin ang kahirapan ng bansa, apat ang bahagi ng ating Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan: Una, pairalin ang sistema ng free enterprise na bagay sa siglo beinte-uno; Pangalawa, gawing modern ang agrikultura sa nakaraang nakapundar sa social equity; Pangatlo, asikasuhing espesyal ang mga kapuspalad; at Pang-apat, itaas ang sukat ng moralidad sa gobyerno at panlipunan. Kagaya ng sinabi n'yo sa Theme, "Advancing Good Local Governance Platform for Poverty Reduction" 'yon ang sang-ayon at kapareha nung aking pang-apat na bahagi ng laban kontra sa kahirapan, yung pag-taas ng sukat ng moralidad sa gobyerno.

Yung una, yung free enterprise na bagay sa 21st century. Sa free enterprise, ang pangunahing paraan kung papano sugpuin ang kahirapan ay magkaroon ng trabaho ang taongbayan. At upang magkaroon ng trabaho ang taongbayan, ang pangunahing kailangan ay mga investments. Kaya ito ang pangunahing kailangan ng national government sa mga local government. Magtulong-tulongan para bawasan ang red tape, dahil iyon ang pinakadaing ng mga investors na sumasagabal sa kanilang investments.

Pangalawa, tingnan din natin ang problema ng katahimikan at katiwasayan. Kitang-kita natin kung gaano sinisira ng terorismo at krimen ang ekonomiya. Kitang-kita natin kung paano binihag ng mga abu sayyaf hindi lamang iyung Mga nagbabakasyon sa dos palmas, hindi lamang iyung mga nurse sa lamitan, Kundi na rin binihag ang ating buong turismo at ekonomiya, at sinira pa ang buhay ng mga bihag, at tuloy pang sinisira ang buhay nila kagaya ng buhay ni deborah yap at Roland Ullah.

Gusto kong tiyakin si Deborah Yap at ang mga mahal sa buhay na hindi siya kinalilimutan ng gobyerno. Siya'y lagi sa aking alaala bilang isang babae. Kasama siya lagi sa aking dasal.

Gusto ko ring ipahatid ang mensaheng ito kay roland ullah at sa kanyang pamilya. At sana yung ating mga konsehal na bumati sa atin doon galing sa Sulu ay ipaabot ninyo itong mensahe ko sa pamilya ni roland ullah na hindi matatapos ang pakikibaka sa Abu Sayyaf hanggang maligtas si Roland Ullah.

Si ginang Deborah Yap ay nagtatrabahao bilang isang registered nurse sa Jose Torres Memorial Hospital sa lamitan nang siya at apat pang iba ay tinangay ng mga Abu Sayyaf na tumakas noon mula sa ospital.

Ang hukbong sandatahan ay may utos na tiyakin ang kaligtasan ni ginang Yap at ginoong Ullah habang tinutugis nila ang dumukot sa kanilang dalawa at kina Mr. And Mrs. Burnham ng Wichita, Kansas.

Kasabay nito, inatasan ko ang Department of Social Welfare and Development na asikasuhin ang kalagayan at problema ng apat na anak ni ginang Yap. Gawa ng sinabi ni ginang Elvira pamaran Valbuena, kapatid ni ginang

Yap, Na ang apat na anak ng nurse — sila Jonathan, Anthony, Mary Anne at Bonbon — ay tumigil na sa pag-aaral dahil wala nang salaping panggastos mula nang dinukot ang kanilang ina.

Si ginang Yap, napakatapang. Ayon sa balita, ay siya ang tumutulong ngayon bilang doctor at nurse nila Mr. And Mrs. Burnham na ngayon daw ay mahina ang katawan at kapwa'y may karamdaman. Magiting na babae si Deborah. Ayon sa balita, pati siya namayat na rin at nahulog ang katawan dahil sa hirap na kanyang nararanasan. Inaatasan ko rin ang DSWD na bigyan din ng tulong Ang pamilya ni Roland Ullah.

Samantala naman binabati ko muli ang mga kawal ng Armed Forces, lalo ngayon sa pagdiriwang ng February 22, araw ng pagsama nila sa taongbayan. Binabati ko sila sa kanilang matapang at tuluyang pagtutugis sa mga terorista sa Basilan.

And I would like to acknowledge once again the united states for their support to our soldiers in their capability-building so as to speed up the annihilation of the Abu Sayyaf. As we have realized from the helicopter crash that occurred this dawn, coming to the Philippines to train our soldiers is not a picnic for the U. S. soldiers. They also put their lives on the line and they came here knowing the dangers as well.

Ang tagumpay ng 'balikatan' ay tagumpay ng dalawang magkaibigang bansa na sa loob ng sandaang taon nagkaroon ng malalim na pinagsamahan. Kung minsan maganda ang pinagsamahan, kung minsan hindi gaano kaganda kapag nagkakaiba ang interes.

Pero ngayon nagkakaisa ang interes ng pilipinas at amerika laban sa terorismo, laban sa mga kaaway ng kalayaan, at laban sa mga kaaway ng demokrasya.

Hindi lamang kalayaan sa pananakot ang ating gantimpala kung hindi kalayaan sa kahirapan o mass poverty ang magiging resulta ng ating pagsasama. Ang magkatambal na kapayapaan at kaunlaran ang bunga ng tagumpay ng 'Balikatan'.

Ang kasabay niyan ay higit na matitiyak natin ang kaligtasan nila ginang Deborah yap, ni ginoong Ronald Ullah at Mr. and Mrs. Martin Burnham.

Kaya mga konsehal, kanina nagpalakpak kayo sa akin nung binanggit ko yung pagpasalamat sa mga Amerikano. Sana ipagpatuloy po ninyo ang inyong suporta sa 'Balikatan 2002'. Let us thank the American soldiers at saluduhan din natin ang kawal Pilipino.

Iwagayway po natin ang bandilang pilipino nang mas mataas sapagkat sa isla ng Basilan ay buhay na buhay ang diwa ng pagkakaibigan at kooperasyon ng mga bansa. Buhay na buhay ang tapang ng kawal Pilipino na handing magpakamatay at magsakripisyo ang kanilang mga mahal sa buhay para tayo'y maging muling malaya, mapayapa at nagkakaisa bilang isang dakilang bansa.

Iyon naman sabi n'yong advancing good local governance. 'Yung pag-taas ng sukat ng moralidad sa pamahalaan, ang inaasahan sa inyo mga konsehal ng ating mga mamamayan ay sa pamamagitan ng council resolutions at ordinances at sa personal na halimbawa ay tanggalin ang mga hindi nararapat, paghusayin ang serbisyo ng organisasyon, ipagtanggol ang katapatan, at maging estrikto sa kagandahang-asal. Ang matapat na pamamahala ay hindi puwedeng gawin lang ng ilan. Kailangan itong ipatupad sa lahat ng antas ng pamahalaan.

Ang matapat na pamamahala ay nagsisimula sa personal na integridad at work ethic. Halimbawa, bilang inyong pangulo 'yon ang aking paniniwala. Kung gusto kong magkaroon ng good governance kailangan magsimula sa akin. Ito ay sumasaklaw din sa pamilya ng namumuno, kung kaya't ang una kong Administrative Order ay nagbabawal sa mga ahensiya ng pamahalaan na makitungo, makipag-ugnay sa aking mga kamag-anak kaugnay sa mga kontrata, supply at appointment sa mga posisyon sa gobyerno.

Ang matapat na pamamahala ay tungkol din sa pagsugpo sa corruption, sa katiwalian. Na ang ibig sabihin ng masamang pamamahala ay nakaka-apekto sa mga mahihirap dahil hindi tama ang paggamit at pag-aabuso ng pondo ay tinatangalan sila ng pagkakataong guminhawa, gayundin sa mga serbisyong kanilang kailangan.

Kailangan nating labanan ang katiwalian. Sinisira nito ang tiwala sa ating mga institusyon, pinapalaganap ang krimen at kawalan ng katarungan, at ninanakawan ang mga mamamayan ng pag-asa sa kanilang kinabukasan.

Sa lahat ng ito, gaya ng sabi ni Joey Lina ang ating administrasyon ay patuloy na susuportahan at palalakasin ang ating local government units. Nakita na naman ninyo nung nakaraan, yung nakaraang administrasyon, kinaltas kayo ng 10, 20 percent ng inyong IRA at saka naglagay ng local government equalization fund para kayo ay luluhod bago bigyan ng pondong nanggaling din naman sa inyong bahagi ng internal revenue. At bago ma-release ang pondo sa inyo yung inyong IRA naiiwan kailangang mag-submit pa kayo ng mga work and financial plan na aaprubahan pa ng DBM. Lahat noon ay binaligtad nitong bagong administrasyon. Kaya naman kailangang gawin nating magkasabay ang ating mga gawain. Kailangan nating patibayin ang ating samahan upang matiyak ang tagumpay para sa kabutihan ng sambayanan.

Ang hinaing ng mahihirap ay kinakailangang patuloy na marinig sa mga bulwagan ng pamahalaan. Narinig ito sa EDSA labing-anim na taon na ang nakararaan, narinig natin muli ito sa edsa dos noong nakaraang taon. Matapat na pamamahala, good governance ang ating armas laban sa kahirapan. Good governance is our platform for poverty reduction. Ito ay isang prinsipyo ng serbisyo na dapat nating sundin sa lahat ng oras.

Tulad ng sinabi ko sa lecture sa international institute for strategic studies sa London kamakailan lamang, and I quote, “evil causes terrorism but the evil of terrorism would not be able to spread so much if we did not have so much poverty.” End of quote.

Dapat nating tandaan na ang terorismo ay mabilis na lumago kung saan laganap ang kahirapan at dalita. Hindi ito coincidence na ngayon yung terorismo ay nandoon na na-confine sa probinsya ng Basilan dahil ang Basilan ang pinaka-mahirap na probinsya sa buong Pilipinas. Kaya talagang kambal ang laban sa terorismo at laban sa kahirapan.

Kung kaya, habang hinihikayat ko ang mga world leaders na ipagpatuloy ang coalition against terrorism bilang paraan tungo sa global prosperity, tinatawagan ko rin ang ating mga pinunong lokal, mga konsehal na pag-ibayuhin ang paglaban sa kahirapan at terorismo. Kailangan ko ang inyong tulong at tulong ng bawa’t Pilipino para harapin ang mga hamong ito, at para palakas ang pundasyon ng pagpapaunlad ng ating bayan.

Patuloy tayong sama-samang magtulungan para tuparin ang ating mga pambansang pangarap. Patuloy nating palakas ang ating samahan para pabilisin ang kaunlaran sa kanayunan para lumaganap ang matapat na pamamahala o good governance gaya ng sinabi n’yo, at para bigyan ng mapayapa at masaganang buhay ang lahat ng ating mga mamamayan at darating pang mga henerasyon ng Pilipino.

Mabuhay ang Councilors ng People Power.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the 5th National Congress of the Philippine Councilors League (PCL). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230518/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7608&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 16th Anniversary Celebration of the EDSA People Power Revolution

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 16th Anniversary Celebration of the EDSA People Power Revolution

[Delivered at the People Power Monument, EDSA, Quezon City, February 25, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Bert Romulo.

Ating kagagalang na heroine ng EDSA at naging halimbawa ng walumpung pang mga EDSA sa buong mundo, President Cory Aquino; Ang pinuntahan natin dito sa EDSA noon nung 1986 at nagtanggol ng demokrasya ng ilang beses pagkatapos noon, President Fidel V. Ramos; Si Secretary Romulo; Si co-chairman ng People Power Commission, Ramon Del Rosario; yung iba't-ibang mga commissioner ng EDSA People Power; yung iba't-ibang mga Government officials na naririto; Excellencies of the diplomatic corps; mga kasama natin dito itong araw na ito — at ako'y nasisiyahan na sa pagbasa ng inyong mga karatula mukhang ang mga pumunta rito ay nakararami ay yung mga kinatawan ng 150,000 families na nakabiyaya na sa ating pagbibigay ng karapatan na bilhin ang lupang tinitirikan dito sa Metro Manila at mga karatig na lugar, kaninang umaga nga yung huling-huling nakatanggap ng land titles itong araw na ito yung NAPICO ng Pasig; mga kinatawan ng civil society; mga giliw kong kababayan:

Sa araw na ito, Labing-Anim na Taon nang nakararaan, binawi ng sambayanang Pilipino ang ating kalayaan at demokrasya. Maaring sa kasaysayan ng isang Bansa, ang Labing-Anim na Taon ay isang kisapmata lamang, nguni't sa pagitan ng EDSA 1 at EDSA Dos ay isang henerasyon. Ang nakararaming dumalo Sa EDSA dos ay mga kabataan na sanggol pa noong ginanap ang EDSA 1.

Noong araw pagkatapos ako ay naging presidente labing-tatlong buwang Nakaraan, noong fiesta ng Sto. Niñong naganap ng January 21, 2002, sinabi ko kinukwento ko sa buong mundo na ang namulaklak sa EDSA 2, at dapat ang bunga, ay alang-alang sa mga kabataan. Sa ating kabataan, kahit na masyadong maliit pa sila upang dumalo sa EDSA 1, ay nakikita natin ang bagong henerasyon ng mga Pilipino na lumaki na walang takot; na kumilala sa demokrasya bilang karapat-dapat na sistema para sa pagpapatakbo ng ating Pamahalaan; at handang-handang hawakan ng buong taos-pusong kagitingan ang sugo ng kalayaan at pamamalakad ng pamahalaang hindi pag-aari ng iilan lamang kundi pag-aari ng lahat. Sa palagay ko, sa aking pagninilay isang dahilan marahil kung bakit nanguna ang mga kabataang ito sa edsa dos ay dahil lumaki sila sa ganitong kultura, kultura ng demokrasya, dahil iyon ang kapaligiran na pinagtanggol at inalagaan ng Pangulo ng EDSA 1, Pangulo ng People Power ng buong mundo, ang kagalang-galang na pangulong Cory Aquino. Kaya magpasalamat tayo sa kaniya.

At kung anuman ang papel na ginanap nung hindi binuksan ang pangalawang sobre ang papel niya sa edsa dos, iyon namang ginanap ng mga kawal na kumalas sa diktadura at upang sila ay samahan, milyong mamamayan ay dumalo sa EDSA, itong mga kawal naman ito na kumalas sa diktadura ay pinamunuan ng Vice-Chief of Staff ng Armed Forces of the Philippines, si General Fidel V. Ramos. Kaya magpasalamat rin tayo sa kaniya.

Sa makulay na kasaysayan ng ating bansa, maraming sakripisyo ang nagawa ng ating mga ninuno bilang katibayan ng kanilang pagmamahal sa bayang tinubuan. Binuksan nina Rizal at Marcelo H. Del Pilar ang mga mata ng kanilang kapwa Pilipino sa katotohanang may sarili tayong bansa at sa obligasyon nating lahat na walang magmamahal at mag-aalaga sa ating bayan kundi tayo na rin. Ipinaglaban nina Bonifacio at Aguinaldo ang ating kasarinlan; ipinaglaban sa paraang mapayapa ang hangarin nating maging malaya muli nina Quezon, Osmeña, Roxas, Recto; ipinaglaban ng isang buong henerasyon ang dangal ng Pilipinas noong Ikalawang Digmaang Pandaigdig. At ang kasarinlan at kalayaan na nawala noong martial law ay ipinaglaban din sa mga barikada, sa lansangan, at, higit sa lahat, sa pamamagitan ng pagdepensa ng prinsipyo na sagrado ang bawa't boto ng bawat Pilipino, sa Snap Election noong 1986, kaya binigyan natin ngayon ng parangal si Evelio Javier bilang halimbawa at simbolo ng ganoong pagtatanaw sa boto ng Pilipino. Pinakita rin natin ang ating diwa siyempre sa pagtitipon ng mahirap at mayaman dito sa EDSA noong Pebrero ng taong iyon.

Hatol ng sambayanang Pilipino na ang pinaka makabuluhang pangyayari sa ating buong kasaysayan ay ang People Power noong 1986. The most important event in the Philippines in the 20th century, yung 1986. Ito ay nagpatunay na ang kalayaan at demokrasyang nilikha ng ating mga bayani ay binigyang halaga at ipinagtanggol ng mga sumusunod na henerasyon. Noong nagtipun-tipon at nagpulung-pulong ang sambayanang Pilipino dito sa EDSA, sa Baguio, sa Cebu, at sa iba pang dako ng ating kapuluan, ipinakita natin sa isa't-isa at sa buong mundo na hindi papayag ang Pilipino na maging alipin ng sino man.

Jose Rizal said a people who submit to slavery deserve to be slaves. We showed the world that the Filipino is not a slave or a coward. We showed the world that the Filipino not only treasures freedom, but is prepared to make the supreme sacrifice for freedom.

Sa lugar na ito ay nagkaisa ang sambayanan. Kawal, dukha, may pangalan o walang kaalaman, may pera o wala, ang nabibilang sa lahat ng uri ng pamumuhay at sektor ng lipunan ay nagtungo sa EDSA upang magsama-sama at makibaka.

Hindi dapat makakalimutan ng kasaysayan o ng mga darating pang henerasyon ng Pilipino ang mga ginawa noon ni Heneral na naging Pangulong Fidel V. Ramos. Nang dumating ang pagsubok ng kanyang konsiyensiya, malinaw at matapang ang kanyang sagot: hindi siya papayag na maisasantabi lamang ang hangarin ng kanyang mga kababayan. Sa kanyang pananaw, ipinakita niya na hindi siya takot na mamatay upang mabalik lamang ang puri at dangal ng kawal Pilipino. Pumunta siya sa Kampo Heneral Aguinaldo at doo'y pinahayag sa buong kapuluan na mamatay man siya, hindi niya matatanggap na isiping walang mga heneral at kawal na may tibay ang loob na ialay ang kanilang buhay para sa demokrasya at kalayaan.

Nang nanawagan ang ating minamahal na Cardinal Sin na magpunta tayo sa EDSA, milyun-milyon ay kusang-loob na umalis sa ating mga tahanan at iniwan ang seguridad ng ating mga pamilya upang manindigan.

Noong nagkatipun-tipon tayo, pamipamilya, nagkatipun-tipon ang sambayanan sa EDSA, ni minsan ay hindi naalis sa ating isipan ang dalawang dahilan kung bakit naghintay lamang ang bayang Pilipino ng pagkakataong ipakita na 'di tayo papayag na maging alipin pa ng diktadurya. Nasa isipan at damdamin ng marami sa atin ang dugong inialay ni Ninoy Aquino upang patunayan sa kanyang mga kababayan na ang buhay ng bawa't Pilipino ay nilikha ng Diyos upang ipaglaban ang kalayaan ng inang bayan. Sinabi nga niya the Filipino is worth dying for. Nasa isipan at puso ng bawa't Pilipino ang panawagan ni Cory Aquino, ang ating napakatapang na Bayani na tumakbo bilang pangulo kontra sa kalakasan ng diktadurya na huwag umatras sabi niya sa atin, huwag umatras sa harap ng mga armas, pananakot, at panunuhol ng diktadurya.

At kung si Fidel Ramos ay nagpamalalas ng dangal ng mga kawal, si Cory Aquino naman ang ating inspirasyon para sa buong sambayanan, konsiyensiya ng bayan at simbolo ng kalayaang malapit nang muling makamtan ng lahat nung nandoon tayo sa EDSA. At ganoon na ang nakamit nating muli ang Kalayaan.

Sa Manila, ang mga walang kapangyarihan, ang mga walang armas, ay nagbantay at tiniyak ang kaligtasan ng mga kawal; sa Cebu, nagsimula sa pamamagitan ng mga pahayag ni Cory Aquino, na ang panlaban sa kadiliman ay pananampalataya. Hiniling ni Cory Aquino na magdasal ang mga madre sa Cebu; nanawagan si Cardinal Sin na magdasal ang mga madre sa Maynila. Sa EDSA, at sa milyun-milyong mga bahay sa buong kapuluan, inialay ng mga pari at madre at mga pamilyang Pilipino ang ating mga panalangin sa Poong Maykapal.

Sabi natin sa kampanya nung 1986, tama na, sobra na, palitan na, sabi natin. Ito ang naging panawagan ng bayan nung mag-Snap Election, ito rin ang naging panawagan ng bayan sa EDSA.

Tama na sa pagtatakip sa kagustuhan ng lahat na tayo ay maging malaya.

Sobra na ang pang-aabuso ng karapatang pantao ng Pilipino.

Tama na sa pakikipagtulungan sa mga ahente ng kadiliman.

Sobra na ang baluktot kailangan palitan ang baluktot upang maituwid ang lahat.

We are here today because we believe the spirit of EDSA 1 and the spirit of EDSA 2 — which is only one spirit — continues to live. But the spirit of EDSA 1 and 2 has to be deepened and transformed, if it is to live on for generations to come.

People power must be transformed into a force for nation- building.

In 1986 and then in 2001, a million people trekked to EDSA and the EDSAs of our other cities. The people sacrificed, we all sacrificed our energies, our time, and even risked their lives first to topple a dictatorship, and then to topple a corrupt government.

16 years after EDSA 1, one year after EDSA 2, we still look with deep sadness at the plight of our poor, some of whom, unfortunately and understandably, have started to believe that EDSA doesn't really matter much for them.

There is now a call to our people, to our leaders who have kept aflame the spirit of people power.

This is now the call, it is not a call to summon our courage to fight just with prayers and flowers, a dictatorship or a corrupt regime.

It is not a call for massing at EDSA and committing to stay here for days until an enemy of the people falls.

The people power call of today to our people is: bare the heavier responsibility for building our nation not just for four days, but day in and day out, for years, even for a generation.

Kaya tama yung sabi jim paredes kanina, bawat isa sa atin kailangan may kabayanihan ng pang-araw-araw. Kaya meron tayong kahon at meron tayong mga papeles na sabi nitong kilusan ni jim na dapat ilagay natin ang ating pangako — at ilang pangako na ang binasa ni Joe Concepcion kaninang mga halimbawa, pangako ng iba't-ibang mga na-submit na ng kanilang resolusyon. Dito ang sabi nito isabuhay ang EDSA. Matapat na pamamahala tugon sa kahirapan.

At ito ang aking nilagay: bilang Pilipino ako ay higit na makikinig. Ako ay higit na magpapasensiya na makinig sa taong-bayan. Ito ang handog ko sa bansang Pilipino. Lagda, Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

If we could put our lives on the line in EDSA in 1986 and 2001, we can certainly sacrifice just a small part of our character, or our wealth, or our time in building a new Philippines. If we can tap even just one-hundredth of the tremendous energy and patriotism of EDSA 1 and EDSA 2 in the next few years, we can build a better, prosperous Philippines.

This new people power, the real EDSA 3 — not the one that happened last may but the one that we will do together through our little pledges that will be fulfilled everyday of our lives the next few years — this real EDSA 3 will not be as dramatic, it will not even be as glorious as EDSA 1 and EDSA 2; and there will be no date, February 25 or January 20, when this real EDSA will be celebrated because it is for every day of our lives.

And its heroes unlike the very clear icons, Cory and Cardinal, FVR, the heroes of EDSA 3 will be anonymous. But its struggle cannot be undertaken in days, but in years, even decades. Its battlefield will not be here at EDSA but in our country's shanty areas and in the poorest farms of our Country. And yes, even in Basilan where the ultimate enemy is not the Abu Sayyaf, but the ultimate enemy is poverty.

Thus, this new people power's enemy will not be a dictatorial regime or a corrupt government, this new people power's enemy will be the scourge of poverty.

The rich and the middle-class demonstrated their patriotism at the past two EDSAs. But the new EDSA will require more of the rich and the middle-class: for you to give your time, your energy, and your resources. even as the rich have found myriad forms of toppling two regimes, the rich and the middle-class, they will find ways and means to help our poor.

And the new EDSA's enemy will not only be the scourge of poverty, the new EDSA's enemy will also be ourselves. It will require changing the culture of corruption in our country, in such mundane things, as mentioned earlier, as refusing to pay bribes for traffic violation or for getting a clearance from a government office; and of course giving up the culture of bribe-asking.

It will require a real concern for capital to give more of their profits to their workers. But it will also require our unions to look with more realism their wage demands. It will require our politicians to look at their positions not as posts for rent-seeking and ego trips, but as opportunities to really serve the people. But also it will require the citizens looking at government not as something we demand benefits and dole-outs from, but a people's state we should always be asking, "how can we help the government do its job?"

Magtulongan tayo para labanan ang kahirapan, para paunlarin ang ating bayan.

Ito ang bagong People Power para sa unang dekada ng siglo biente uno. Ito ang pakikibakang inilulunsad natin. Tulungan ninyo ako sa pakikibakang ito.

Mga kaibigan, salamat sa inyong pagdalo itong araw na ito. Salamat sa inyong pagdalo nung People Power 2. At alam ko pinasasalamatan tayo sa ating pagdalo nung People Power 1. Magdasal tayo ngayon — nagdasal tayo nung People Power 1, nagdasal tayo nung People Power 2 — magdasal tayo muli ngayon dahil ngayon hindi drama ang hinihintayng taong-bayan kung hindi yung araw-araw na maliliit na sakripisyo sa bawat ating lahat.

Maraming salamat at happy EDSA Anniversary sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 16th Anniversary Celebration of the EDSA People Power Revolution. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230422/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7607&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Fire Prevention Month

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Fire Prevention Month

[Delivered at the Quirino Grandstand, Luneta, March 1, 2002]

Maraming salamat kay Secretary Joey Lina. Ang ating napakasipag at napakagaling magpahayag ng mga napaka-importanteng ideya ng pamahalaan, si Secretary Joey Lina, Secretary of Local Government.

Binabati ko rin si Undersecretary Wencilito Andanar na siya ang namamahala sa peace and order, at kasama na rin iyung kanyang pagtutulong sa pagpalakad ng Bureau of Fire Protection; at nagpapasalamat ako sa kanya at saka sa inyo, dahil noong may 1 ay nandoon kayo nagbabantay sa perimeter ng Malacañang. Binabati ko rin siyempre ang inyong namumuno, iyung nag-welcome sa akin kanina, iyung namumuno sa Bureau of Fire Protection, si Chief Superintendent or General Francisco Senot; iba't-ibang officials ng DILG, iba't-ibang mga namumuno sa iba't-ibang mga ahensya sa ilalim ng DILG. At gusto kong pasalamatan iyung ating mga volunteer friends, iyung chinese community napaka-masipag; at siyempre kayo mga babae at lalaki, ating mga napakasipag na mga kasapi ng bureau of fire protection; mga panauhin; mga kaibigan:

Gusto kong batiin kayo dito sa pagbukas natin ng fire prevention month. Itong araw na ito, gaya ng sabi ni Joey Lina at sabi ni General Senot, first time na ang pangulo mismo ay ang dumalo sa pagsimula ng fire prevention month. Para sa akin, importante na magkaroon tayo ng fire prevention month para maalala nating lahat na napakahalaga na mag-iwas ng sunog.

Ako, matagal na, hindi pa ako Presidente, ni hindi pa ako politician, hindi pa ako public servant, housewife pa lamang ako noon, tuwing fire prevention month, iyun ang ginagamit ko pagdating ng fire prevention month na bilang paalala na tatawagin iyung electrician para i-check iyung electrical connections ng aking tahanan. Kaya noon pa, para sa akin importante na ang fire prevention month bilang paalala. At sana ngayon bilang pangulo, kaya ako'y naririto, ako'y nananawagan sa lahat ng mga nagpapatakbo ng tahanan, nagpapatakbo ng gusali, na sana iyun ang ginagawa n'yo 'pag fire prevention month, gamitin ninyo yun bilang routine na tatawag ng certified electrician para tingnan ang electrical connection ng inyong mga gusali dahil napakaraming mga sunog ay nanggagaling sa faulty wiring. Kaya iyan ang isang magandang gawain 'pag fire prevention month.

Buong buwan natin itong ginaganap para itanim sa ating isipan na dapat nating gawin ang lahat ng paraan upang hindi tayo makaranas nang masunugan.

Napakalungkot iyung nasusunugan. Halimbawa, kahit na iyung mayayaman na nakita kong nasusunugan, napakalungkot dahil lahat ng mga sentimental aspects ng kanilang ari-arian ay nawawala. Although sila, usually may insurance kung pag-uusapan ho iyung pera, nababalik naman ang pera sa kanila, pero meron silang mga memories na hindi mababalik, na hindi mabibili muli.

Ngunit mas lalo naman iyung mahihirap 'pag nawawalaan ng tahanan dahil sa sunog. Ilang mga squatter area ang napuntahan ko na dahil nagkaroon ng sunog, ilang mga palengke ang kinailangang pondohan ko o nagko-contribute ako noong ako pa ay senador para matayo muli. At doon sa mga palengke usually, nakikita ko 'pag tinatanong ko, "bakit? Papano nagsimula? Bakit ba madalas na ang palengke ay nasusunog?" usually, nagsisimula doon sa mga karinderia, doon sa mga gas, mga gas, iyung mga oxygen tank, iyung mga gas tanks na pumuputok, kaya iyun din ang isang kailangang ginagawa natin 'pag fire prevention month: iyung mga gas cylinders ay kailangang kinocorrect. At siguro pagkakataon din na ang mga Department of Trade and Industry na magkakaroon ng spot inspection sa lahat ng mga gas cylinders na ibinebenta sa iba't-ibang mga lugar.

At iyun namang mga mahihirap doon sa mga liblib o kaya doon sa mga hindi naman talaga liblib pero nandito sa ginta na siyudad kaya lang makipot iyung mga daanan kaya kahit na meron tayong magigiting na fire volunteers ay hindi makakaabot ang mga fire truck, iyun din ay dapat ding hanapan ng paraan kung papano mareresulbahan iyung madaling umapaw, madaling kumalat na mga sunog sa mga lugar na iyon.

Isa na marahil talaga sa pinakamabigat na maaaring maganap kaninuman ay maging biktima ng sunog. Ilang ang namamatay sa sunog. Alam ko rin iyung mga ilang mga halimbawa ng namamatay sa sunog — iyung mga rehas na sarado. Kaya pagdating ng sunog hindi nila nabubuksan. At napakalungkot, nakikita natin sila, nakikita ng mga firemen, nakikita ng telebisyon sumisigaw, humihingi ng saklolo pero hindi makakalabas dahil iyung rehas ay nakatakip. Hindi naman masamang maglagay ng rehas sa mga bintana ngunit dapat iyung rehas ay nabubuksan. Kung kayo ay takot sa magnanakaw, well, pwede n'yong lagyan ng susi mula sa loob para sa ganon kapag may sunog ay mabubuksan din ninyo. Kaya iyan din ay isang dapat gawin sa fire prevention month: iyung mga tahanan, iyung mga gusali na may rehas iyung mga bintana. Hindi natin sinasabing tanggalin n'yo iyung rehas pero ibahin n'yo iyung design, lagyan n'yo ng konting butas na may pwerta at rehas pa rin iyung pwerta pero lagyan n'yo ng susi sa loob pero iyung pwedeng mabubuksan, 'pag ganon ay meron tayong matatakanan 'pag dumadating ang sunog.

May kasabihan tayong hindi na baleng manakawan, huwag lamang masunugan. Ang sunog ay walang pinipili at lahat ay kinukuha pati na ang buhay na kanyang nadadaan.

Kaya dito sa ating fire prevention month, marami tayong dapat gawin at maraming dapat gawin para mag-prevent. Pero isa ang dapat nating gawin ay 'pag dumating na nga iyung sunog at nandiyan na iyung hindi natin naiwasan, isang kailangang dapat nating gawin ay gamitin itong pagkakataon para magpasalamat doon sa mga nagtataya ng kanilang buhay para patayin iyung apoy at sagipin iyung sinusunugan, walang iba iyung ating mga fire fighters at saka iyung mga fire volunteers.

I salute our gallant fire fighters who risk life and limb to save persons and properties from fire. You have shown the true meaning of courage and commitment to public safety and welfare.

Iyung buong mundo noong September 11 ay isa sa nakita ng buong mundo kung gaano kadakila ang ating mga fire fighters ng buong mundo. Iyung New York Fire Department, sila ngayon ang bayani ng buong mundo. Ngunit kung anuman iyung New York Fire Department with all of their modern equipment ay ginagalang bilang bayani, ako rin, kayo, ating mga fire fighters ng pilipinas, ay hindi kayo nagkukulang sa kabayanihan dahil kayo hindi maganda ang equipment ninyo pero ganon pa rin kayo katapang.

Nine hundred pa raw ang ating bayan na walang fire truck. At kung pag-uusapan natin, magkano ang fire truck, iyung pinakamura two-and-a-half million, iyung nararapat, five million. Kaya sa nine hundred na bayan na wala pang fire truck ay kailangan ng bilyong-bilyong piso na wala naman doon sa budget. Kaya sabi ni Undersecretary Wency Andanar ay sinisikap na gumawa ng project proposal sa Obuchi Fund ng hapon para sa ganon makahanap tayo ng tulong.

Ngunit tinitingnan natin ang budget ng fire protection. Alam ba n'yo kung magkano ang kanyang capital outlay budget? 37 million pesos. Ilang fire truck ang mabibili ng 37 million pesos? Nagpapasalamat tayo sa mga congressmen at senators dahil nagdagdag sila ng mga 55 million pesos para sa kanilang mga paboritong distrito at constituency. So, kahit na saan naman 'yun, para sa atin basta makumpleto iyung nine hundred ay nagpapasalamat tayo. Ngunit talagang napakaliit iyung 37 million pesos ng Bureau of Fire Protection. Para sa akin kaysa may konting may magandang fire truck, ang iniisip ko sana sikapin na lahat na mga bayan, lahat ng mga community ay meron man lamang namang sanang fire pump para sa ganon lalo na iyung mga maliliit na bayan ay magkakaroon ng paraan kung papano maiwasan iyung mga sunog at kung papano iyung inyong trabaho, mga bureau of fire protection, ay magiging mas magaan.

Kaya doon sa 37 million na capital outlay ng ating bureau of fire protection ay tatapatan ko mula sa president's social fund ng 37 million para makabili tayo, hindi para sa fire truck — kontilang ang matutulungan ng 37 million na fire truck — pero sa fire pump para maraming mga maliliit na bayan at malalaking barangay na siksik ay matutulungan natin at sa ganon, kayo ating mga gallant fire fighters ay makakatuloy ng inyong pagka-bayani na ang inyong mga buhay naman ay ligtas din.

Congratulations! happy fire prevention month. At gawin nating lahat, mamamayan at pamahalaan, kung ano ang dapat gawin para iwasan ang sunog.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Fire Prevention Month. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230402/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7635&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the National Intelligence Summit

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the National Intelligence Summit

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, March 6, 2002]

Thank you very much Roi, my National Security Adviser.

Senator Jun Magsaysay; Governor Dolfo del Rosario; Mayor Monching Gico; Secretary Bert Gonzalez; Commissioner Andrea Domingo and NBI Director Wycoco representing DOJ; Undersecretary Andanar Representing DILG; Undersecretary Brion representing DOLE; Undersecretary Cesar Garcia of NICA; Undersecretary Gacis Representing DND; Summit Participants; honored guests; Ladies and Gentlemen:

Parati kong sinasabi na ang Pilipinas ay tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino. Ngunit itong manggagawang Pilipino ay mamumulaklak lamang ang kanyang kadakilaan at produktibidad kapag may kapayapaan sa kanyang tahananang bayan. at iyung kapayapaan, iyung pagmentene ng ating kapayapaan, malaki ang kinalaman kung gaano kagaling ang ating intelligence community.

And so, this is the reason why I asked Roi Golez to convene an Intelligence Summit.

In the field of security, the foremost enemy of any nation is surprise. It can happen anywhere — Sipadan, Dos Palmas, Cotabato, Manila. It can happen in Beirut or Paris, New York or Washington. The weapon involved could be a crude bomb or a car, or an entire plane. It could happen to the poorest country, or to the most powerful nation in the world.

Surprise is the advantage of small, clandestine cells operating beyond the primary focus of intelligence networks. Again and again, it has been proven that intelligence systems, no matter how elaborate and sophisticated, have loopholes somewhere. These loopholes are a result of either human or technical failure. They are somehow discovered by terrorist cells that gain an advantage, which enables them to strike at will, with deadly effect.

Intelligence simply means information — vital information that is collected, assessed and delivered in timely fashion. Timely is the key word, because a minute late could prove fatal.

Analysts who have looked into the September 11 attacks in the United States point out that the signs pointing to such an event were extant at the time. The possible use of aircraft was already being considered a long time before the event. This was borne out by intelligence gathered from terrorist cells right here in the Philippines. Deep intelligence from within Afghanistan also showed that something big was being hatched. Something ominous and foreboding was in the air, but no one could put a finger on it.

This only proves the point that pieces of intelligence are useless if they exist in isolation. Someone has to fit the pieces together, as in a jigsaw puzzle. Someone has to analyse the patterns to discover a definite form in them. Information has to be integrated to be useful at a strategic level.

The job of intelligence gathering is different from the job of integration. Gathering intelligence is like reaping the crop. Integrating it is like separating the chaff from the grain, and harvesting the nutrients from it. Both jobs require diligence, imagination, excellence and most of all, commitment to a high cause.

That is why we have some of the most dedicated and patriotic people in the intelligence services. We have eminent persons from the private sector like former DILG secretary Raffy Alunan. You, who are here are the people who work to put a face to the enemy, deny him the advantage of maneuver, pinpoint where he lies and lead our forces to defeat him.

Integration is the key. The purpose of this summit is to put our minds together so that we can think as one, plan as one and act as one against the common enemy.

Two months ago, when I announced that I wanted this summit to take place — this was at the graduation ceremonies of the PNP Academy in Silang, Cavite — I said the basic purpose of intelligence is to enhance national security not only by supporting police and military operations, but by informing policy makers of the challenges that are relevant to effective governance. At that point, I also enumerated the objectives of this summit: reorganization; rapid threat assessment; determination of information requirements vital to military, political, economic and social imperatives, cyber security and law enforcement; data base integration, human resource development, international cooperation and counter intelligence.

Let me, however, define the challenge in simpler terms. We all know that there is a lot of information of intelligence value out there. The government has the most elaborately spread network to gather it, stretching from the national, regional, provincial, municipal and barangay levels. Theoretically, we have eyes and ears in every nook and cranny of the land. There is no organization that can beat the depth and breadth of the government.

But sad to say, we are a seriously fragmented organization when it comes to information sharing and management. We have a multiplicity of data bases. Departments do not always communicate with each other effectively and efficiently. Work tends to be compartmentalized and canalized within each department and agency. Turf issues abound. the prevalent attitude is that i-have-my-job-to-do-and-i-don't-care-how-you-do- yours.

Getting our act together. This is the basic problem we have to face, even before we go into the more esoteric issues. We have to unlearn the turf mentality and get into the team mode. This is the essence of the homeland strategy of the United States. Every agency of government, every sector of society, every state, every county, every citizen must lock into a single, overriding idea — the security of the country from terrorism.

We must build on the same concept, even if the challenges are different here. Every department and agency, every local government unit, every extension worker, every law enforcer or development officer, every group in civil society, every community, church and people's organization — everybody must be focused and determined to surmount the two most formidable enemies of our republic today — one is poverty and the other is crime and terrorism.

In the modern world, almost all aspects of development and security are interrelated. Agricultural development has a security content because joblessness in the rural areas leads to increased dissidence. Agrarian reform is vital to security because social injustice invites revolutionary fervor. The lack of education leads to irrational violence. Where there is poverty, ignorance, injustice — there is conflict. And where conflict acquires an ideological dimension, we have a problem of national security.

And there are new challenges that arise in the midst of every growing democracy like ours. Political and economic destabilization is fomented by rumor, intrigue, disinformation. Political partisanship becomes an occasion for subverting institutions of governance. Clandestine designs creep into the armed services and the law enforcement agencies. There is a sense of constant fragility that cannot be easily overcome.

But democracy, as we have seen, has its own great defenses. The rule of law, good governance, moral leadership — these foundations continue to stand fast impervious to the insidious agents of destabilization.

And so I commend you, the participants for coming up with this integrative effort. I continue to bear a solid respect for our intelligence agencies. We have been able to prevent a number of near tragedies through timely action on crucial information. We have contributed significantly to the international security through accomplishments such as the pre-emption of the plan to assassinate the pope in 1995. The arrest of the would-be assassins led to the discovery of Oplan Bojinka and the eventual arrest of one of the principals in the world trade center bombing of 1993. And recently, the capture of Fathur Rohman Al-Ghozi continues to unearth leads to the malevolence of the Jemaah Islamiya.

The international dimension of intelligence must be given utmost weight. Our trilateral agreement with Indonesia and Malaysia, our defense alliance with America, our role in the international coalition against terrorism and the whole range of our bilateral and multilateral relations must be funneled into the grand design of our nation's security and survival.

I am glad that participation in the summit is not limited to law enforcement and intelligence agencies, but expands to such sectors as the academe — i was very happy to see, for instance, Dr. Villacorta, Dr. Puno — the business sector — i saw Peter Wallace, I saw Bill Luz — NGOs engaged in national security-related issues such as environmental protection and policy research — I saw Vic here — infrastructure owners and security industry organizations. I am happy to see representatives of these sectors here.

There is a whole new environment within and outside our nation. We have to learn to deal with changes in relationships between and among states, between states and non-state actors and international organizations. Trends in global economics and technology continue to move in complex and dynamic ways. goods, services, capital, people and businesses are continually in flux; and even traditional concepts of the family, faith and governance are being challenged. To all these we must address our minds and energies.

I am aware that four inter-agency meetings have been held to discuss the format of this summit. The eight working panels set up pinpoint the corresponding responsibility of every sector or agency involved. May I acknowledge, with appreciation, the chairs, co-chairs and members of all these panels. Thank you very much for working so hard.

Every Filipino must understand that he is both beneficiary and stakeholder in what we are doing here. This should start off an earnest campaign to make our people pro-active and enthusiastic actors in the security and development process. I trust that such participation will be incorporated in the full spectrum of your concerns.

I am confident that the call of duty will enable you to come up with meaningful, relevant and integrated intelligence programs. and I expect your memorandum of outputs after mid-April when you meet again for the summit proper.

In the meantime, thank you for contributing to this great and important effort.

Maraming salamat at magandang hapon sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the National Intelligence Summit. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230355/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7634&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 50th Golden Anniversary of the Lyceum of the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 50th Golden Anniversary of the Lyceum of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Lyceum Quadrangle, Intramuros, Manila, March 7, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Thank you very much Atty. Laurel, President of the Lyceum of the Philippines.

Chief Justice Davide and Mrs. Davide; Dr. Laurel, Chairman of Lyceum and Mrs. Laurel. I would also like to greet Vice President Laurel and Mrs. Celia Laurel. I would like to thank Dr. Africa for the welcome remarks; and to greet also my Ninang, Mrs. Beth-day Romulo; other members of the Board of Trustees, Mrs. Lorna Laurel, Mr. Avanceña, Vice Governor Peter Laurel, Ambassador Abaquin, Mrs. Sarah Lopez and Bro. Andre Gonzalez; officers, teaching and non-teaching personnel, and students of the Lyceum of the Philippines; awardees and alumni; ladies and gentlemen:

Ako ay nasisiyahan na makabalik muli dito sa Lyceum. I have looked forward to this opportunity to be able to congratulate you all, on the 50th anniversary of this great institution. It is a very great honor for me to be invited by Lyceum, the institution founded by Dr. Jose Laurel.

Yes, the Laurel family are close friends of the Macapagal family. But even more than that, I would like to let the world know what a great influence Dr. Jose laurel played in the way that my father, the late president Diosdado Macapagal, learned to think.

President Jose Laurel was my father's teacher. And my father always taught me that we never take any single piece of action, or any single decision in isolation. It must always be viewed in the context of an organic whole.

Today we call that strategic thinking as opposed to tactical teaching. In my father's time, he called that fundamental thinking as opposed to expedient thinking. And for a young man like my father, who grew up in the barrio, who went to public school in the province, there was not much opportunity to learn strategic thinking, if you were living on hand-to-mouth existence. But when he came to college and studied law, and was able to be under the tutelage of the great thinker Jose P. Laurel, that was when he learned how to do fundamental thinking.

And so every time I remember or every time anyone talks about former, the late President Jose Laurel, I always remember this is the gentleman who introduced fundamental thinking to Diosdado Macapagal, who then passed on that kind of thinking to his daughter, and that is why I have learned also that everything we do must be part of an organic whole. And therefore, even me, in the way I have put together my own vision and program of government, I owe that through my father to the late president Jose P. Laurel.

Dr. Africa recounted many of the nostalgic and memorable experiences he shared between my father's family, the Macapagals, and President Laurel's family, the Laurels of Lyceum. For instance, my father and Dr. Laurels' father, as mentioned by Dr. Sotero Laurel's father, both became Philippine Presidents, and both were, as mentioned by Dr. Africa, part of the historic Belltrade mission. And both showed a genuine appreciation, not only for fundamental thinking, but also for education which they passed on to their children. And Dr. Laurel or the late President Jose Laurel's love for education, in fact, led him to establish the institution called the lyceum.

As some of the old-timers here may recall, especially now that Dr. Africa mentioned it to us, it was a great honor for my father to be conferred the title "university professor" by the Lyceum. This gives me much pride, which I share with you on the occasion of your 50th anniversary, and incidentally, the 111th birthday of the founder of lyceum, President Jose. P. Laurel.

Kilala si Dr. Jose P. Laurel hindi lamang bilang pulitiko, yes, he became President. Minsan naging pangulo ng ating republika. Ngunit marami rin ang nakakaalam ng kanyang marubdob na pag-ibig sa bansang sinilangan, na kanyang ipinamalas hindi lamang sa larangan ng pulitika kundi na rin sa larangan ng edukasyon.

Si Dr. Laurel, kasama rin ni Senator Claro M. Recto, ang may-akda ng Rizal Law. Lahat tayo ay dumadaan sa kursong Rizal. Dahil dito, tayo ay namulat sa kagalingan, kagitingan, at sakripisyo ng ating pambansang bayani.

Kaya, hindi nakakapagtaka kung bakit marami sa inyo, mga Lyceans, ang nakibahagi sa dalawang EDSA noong 1986 at 2001. Bilang isang institusyong itinatag na may diwang makabayan, ang Lyceum ay naging bahagi ng laban sa diktadurya at katiwalian sa pamahalaan. Pinatunayan ninyo, mga Lyceans, ang inyong paninindigan noong 1986 at 2001. At tulad ng iba pang mga kabataang bumubuo ng bagong henerasyon ng mga Pilipino, kayo ay nagtipun-tipon sa EDSA sa loob ng apat na araw upang iparating sa ating mga kababayan na handa kayong ialay ang inyong buhay manumbalik lamang ang kinitil na kalayaan at bumabang moralidad sa pamahalaan.

Kayo ay nandoon at kayo ay parang inspirasyon sa mga makabayaning nagawa rin ng binibigyan nating isang parangal itong hapon ito, si Chief Justice Hilario Davide. Si Chief Justice Davide ang tinatawag nilang Filipino of the year. For the year 2001, ay maraming beses nang nakatanggap ng parangal, maraming beses ako ay naroon nung binibigyan siya ng parangal. Ngunit itong sa mga araw na ito, higit na dapat maalala natin ang kabayanihan ni Chief Justice lalo na ngayon na may mga bumabatikos sa kanya para sa kanilang sariling kapakanan. Itong binibigyan na parangal kay Chief Justice Davide ay isang paalala sa buong Pilipinas at sa buong mundo na kahit na binabatikos ang kanyang kabayanihan ay hindi makalilimutan, at parating lilitaw at magiging isang bituin bilang isang halimbawa sa ating mga susunod na henerasyon. Kaya congratulations once again, Chief Justice Davide for being a Filipino for all seasons. Sabi nga ni Dr. Africa, he played a great role in this most recent chapter of our history.

At ngayon naman itong mga araw na ito, muli kong inaasahan ang pakikipagtulungan ng mga kabataan ng Lyceum at ng bagong henerasyon ng kabataang Pilipino.

Kailangan muli tayong magkapit-bisig sa isang panibagong EDSA, ang pangatlong edsang hindi magtatapos sa ika-apat na araw. Ito ay magiging isang tunay na rebolusyong walang petsang kailangang gunitain. Bagkus, isang rebolusyong ating kakalabanin ng maraming taon, ngunit sana isang dekada na lamang. Isang rebolusyong hindi magsisimula at magtatapos sa EDSA, kundi magsisimula at magtatapos sa mga dampa at malalayong kabukiran ng ating bansa. Isang rebolusyon kung saan ang kaaway ay hindi isang diktadurya o hindi man isang tiwaling pamahalaan kundi ang daantaong-tanikalang suliranin ng kahirapan. At sa pagkakataong ito, hindi lamang bulaklak at rosaryo ang magiging panangga natin kagaya noong 1986, kundi ang taas ng ating talino at tatag ng ating paninindigan.

Sama-sama nating labanan ang kahirapan.

Nguni't hindi tayo maaaring sumugod sa laban ng walang dalang sandata. Naniniwala ako na ang susi sa isang mapayapang pagbabago ay ang pag-usbong ng bagong pag-ibig sa edukasyon ng bagong henerasyon.

Ako ay lubos na naniniwala na ang pagpapalawig ng edukasyon ang siyang magiging pangunahing armas tungo sa mataas na antas ng ating pamumuhay, partikular ang pagbibigay ng atensiyon sa agham at matematika.

Sa ngayon, ang Pilipinas ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino. At tamang-tama na itong araw na ito magbibigay din ng parangal ang Lyceum sa overseas Filipino worker, the great Filipino worker. At ako ay nasisiyahan na malaman na maraming nag-aaral sa Lyceum ay nakakapag-aral dito dahil sa napapadalang hanapbuhay ng ating great Filipino worker mula sa ibang bansa. Mayroong pitong milyong Pilipino na tumitira sa ibang bansa, at sila ay nagpapadala ng pitong bilyong dolyares sa Pilipinas taun-taon.

Iyon pong Kirin beer na itong araw na ito ay dumating ang kanyang investments, kahapon pala dumating sa ating bangko ang kanyang investments. 500 million dollars yon. Napakalaking bagay, pinakamalaking investment sa ating bansa for the year 2001. Iyon pong shell investment sa Malampaya, pinakamalaking investment sa ating kasaysayan ay five billion dollars. Pero taun-taon ang ating overseas Filipinos ay nagpapadala ng seven billion dollars. At dahil sa pinapadala nila, nakakapag-aral ang kabataan sa Lyceum, nakakapagtayo ng mga bahay ang maraming Pilipinong siguro hindi na makakapagtayo sa ibang paraan, nagkakaroon ng mga puhunan para magsimula ng mga maliliit na negosyo sa iba't-ibang lugar ng Pilipinas.

Kaya kung ihahambing natin yong mga maaring nangyari o nagkaroong mangyari ng overseas remittances at ihahambing natin dito sa mga wine-welcome nating ibang investments — kaya sinasabi kong overseas Filipino worker ay hindi lamang tinatawag dapat na overseas Filipino worker kungdi overseas Filipino investor. At itong ating overseas Filipino investor, sila ay nagbibigay ng patunay sa buong mundo tungkol sa kagalingan ng Pilipino, tungkol sa kung ano ang ating competitive advantage bilang isang bansa.

Ang ating competitive advantage ay ang ating human resource skills sa service sectors. Ayon sa iba't-ibang pag-aaral, ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino ang nangunguna bilang knowledge workers sa mundo. Walang makakatalo sa dakilang manggagawang Pilipino kung pag-uusapan ay kahusayan, dedikasyon at katapatan sa trabaho. Alam ito ng buong daigdig, at ito ay ating ipinagmamalaki. Kaya paghagis sa pagmamalaki natin ay yung parangal na ibinibigay itong araw na ito sa overseas Filipino worker.

Nguni't hindi ito dapat magsilbing dahilan upang tayo ay maging kampante na lamang. Huwag nating hayaang mawala ang tiwala at paghanga ng mundo sa dakilang manggagawang Pilipino — maging sa ibang bansa nakatira o dito mismo sa Pilipinas. Dapat nating palakasin ang ating edukasyon tungo sa hinaharap, tulad ng nangyayari dito sa Lyceum.

Kilala ang Lyceum bilang isang unibersidad na magaling sa larangan ng foreign service at law. Maraming opisyaales at kawani ng pamahalaan ang dito nagsipagtapos. At marami sa kanila ay bibigyan ng award itong araw na ito bilang outstanding alumni. Wala rito ngayon, pero hindi ba galing dito si Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte, Jr.? Iyong sa court of appeals, si Justice Amelita Tolentino, hindi ba galing din dito? Si Senator Bobby Barbers, hindi ba galing din dito? At iyong iba-iba pang mga naririto ngayon na maririnig ninyo mamaya ang pangalan kasama ng kanilang pagtitindig upang matanggap ang parangal ng kanilang paaralan.

Hindi ito naging dahilan upang ang Lyceum ay manatiling kampante sa kanyang mga nagawa at nakamit na tagumpay. Ngayon ang buong mundo ay nasa panahong tinatawag na information age, nagkaroon din ng mga pagbabago dito sa Lyceum upang tugunan ang tawag at hamon ng panahon. I am glad to know that the lyceum is in the process of reinventing and reengineering itself.

Isa sa mga pagbabagong napapatupad ng Lyceum ay ang pagtugon sa hamon ng information technology.

The future of the world, the future of the 21st century that our youth will inherit, is truly a new economy spurred by relentless forces such as capital market flows and advances in information and communications technology, at nandoon ang pinakamaraming trabaho. Kanina ako ay naging guest of honor sa inauguration ng Eastwood Cyberpark, at pumasok ako doon sa Eastwood at pumunta ako doon sa isa sa mga maraming call center na naroon, at nilagyan ko ng earphone ang aking sarili at gumaya ako doon sa mga call center operators. Kunyari call center operator doon sa Black and Decker, iyong nagbebenta ng oven toaster, at doon sa scenario may tumawag, may complaint na iyong kanyang toaster ay sira. So tinanong nung operator, "I am Gloria, may I help you?" ganoon. "well I want to complain about my toaster, it's not working so I am calling the calling service or the recall service." may script na binabasa kasi sa computer. "how did you learn about the recall service?" sabi sa kabila, "oh I read it in the newspaper.” okay, “what is your model?” binigay ang model. And so sa pagbabasa, sinabi, “well, we are very sorry about that. So we will now give you refund within so many days and then you can get your claim, your new unit in this particular place in New Jersey.” buong akala nung tumatawag sa Amerika ay tumatawag siya sa Black and Decker sa New Jersey, pero ang tinatawagan niya yung nandito sa Quezon City, sa Libis, sa Eastwood. At libu-libo ang ating mga kabataan na nagtatrabaho sa ganoon, and in the United States there are about seven million people who are employed in that kind of job but the United States is phasing out that kind of job within itself and it is now moving to other places, and the number one favorite place for moving out to is none other than the Philippines, the home of the great Filipino worker because we have two things now that we didn’t necessarily have before, well we have now, yes, the knowledge worker; secondly, we have now the infrastructure.

When I became President, and I gave my State of the Nation Address to Congress, I said, we must bring down the cost of interconnectivity if we want to promote information technology, where the broadband used to cost 30,000 dollars when I first became President now it costs about 8,000 dollars. That is why we have become competitive not only among our knowledge workers, but even in the infrastructure.

Any university operating in this setting will have to keep in step with these challenges and opportunities. Let me therefore congratulate you, the officials of Lyceum, for your reengineering efforts. I understand that you have streamlined your operations. Nalaman ko, halimbawa, na ang inyong enrollment system ay on-line na. Sa pamamagitan ng on-line enrollment system, ang enlisting time ay nababawasan nang husto at mas kakaunting abala ang naidudulot nito sa ating mga mag-aaral.

Binabati ko rin kayo dahil nalaman ko, nabalitaan ang improved I.T. system ng Lyceum ay lalo pang pinalakas sa pamamagitan ng partnership sa pagitan ng Lyceum at Sun Microsystems sa pagturo ng Java training courses, gayundin sa pamamagitan ng mga kursong may kinalaman sa computer science na ginagamit ng I.B.M.-as 400 environment. Kasi yon ang ating kailangan: kailangan natin ng I.T. professionals, ‘yung certified programs for programmers, kasi ‘yun ang marami ang india dati. Ngayon mayroon na tayong hardware, mayroon na tayong broadband, mayroon na tayong Call Centers, mayroon na tayong magagaling na magsalita at sumagot sa telepono, kailangan natin yung mga technicians na gagawa ng mga programs ng web content ng software — iyon ang mga I.T professionals. At salamat sa Lyceum dahil isa kayo sa pangunahing institusyon na naglalagay ng certified program for programmers — itong Java, itong IBM — iyon ang magbibigay ng trabaho sa ating mga kabataan na manggagaling sa Lyceum ‘pag sila ay nag-graduate na.

My dream is a truly interconnected nation. We must strive to build for the Philippines the highest internet penetration rate in our part of Asia. Such an accomplishment will open up new avenues of knowledge and opportunities for our people, particularly the young.

Tunay nga na ang tema ng inyong Golden Jubilee Anniversary na “Focus on the Future” ay lubhang makabuluhan. Ang ating hinaharap ay narito sa I.T. by fine-tuning your curriculum and preparing new courses to ensure relevance, all in the name of competitiveness, you are preparing your students for the 21st century. You are preparing the students not only to become great Filipino workers but also great Filipino entrepreneurs.

Kaya, hindi ako magtataka kung, sa mga susunod na taon, ang Lyceum ay hindi lang makikilala sa foreign service at law kundi pati na rin sa information technology at engineering. Kasi hindi ba sa inyo nanggaling ang topnotcher ng 2001 Electronics and Communication Engineer Licensure Examination?

Mga mag-aaral at opisyaes ng Lyceum, magtulungan tayo sa bagong EDSA sa unang dekada ng siglo beinte uno. Malaki ang aking paniniwala na sa ating walang sawang pagpupunyagi at sa ating patuloy na pananalangin sa maykapal ay makakamtan natin ang minimithing kaunlaran para sa bawa’t Pilipino. Magtulungan tayo para paunlarin ang ating bayan, ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Let us all work together in building a new Philippines. Para naman iyong mga pinaghirapan ng ating mga OFWs, para ang kanilang anak ay makakapag-aral sa Lyceum at makakakuha ng napakagandang edukasyon, lahat nito gawin nating nararapat at bale sa ganoon kung masugpo natin ang problema ng kahirapan sa loob ng isang dekada malaki ang ating maibibigay na pasasalamat sa ating OFWs, sa ating mga kabataan ngayon at sa ating mga institusyon na hindi nagpapaiwan ng panahon, mga institusyon kagaya ng Lyceum of the Philippines.

Happy Golden Anniversary and Thank You.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 50th Golden Anniversary of the Lyceum of the Philippines. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230340/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7633&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the launching ceremonies of the Framework Plan for Women in celebration of International Women's Day

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the launching ceremonies of the Framework Plan for Women in celebration of International Women's Day

[Delivered at the Philippine Sports Arena, Pasig City, March 2, 2002]

Ang kapangyarihan ng kababaihan Pilipino ay napaka-importante sa pangkalahatang kapakanan ng ating tinatawag na human resources. Mahaba na ang ating naabot pero mahaba pa rin ang ating kailangang maabot bago natin masabi na buong-buo na ang kapangyarihan ng ating kababaihan.

Ang problema ng kahirapan sa Pilipinas ay meron pa ring mukha ng kababaihan. Maraming kababaihan ay tuloy pa ring nagdurusa from physical and emotional battery. Kaya ang mga asal ay kailangan pang mapalitan. Ang mga istraktura ng pamayanan at kultura ay kailangan pa ring maisaayos at magkaroon ng pagbabago.

Noong isang taon, nagbigay ako ng instruction sa National Council on the Role of Filipino Women na magsulat ng isang draft framework plan for women kasama yoong mga kasalukuyang patakaran at yoong tinatawag na emerging women's concerns at ating mga panukalang patakaran tungkol sa kababaihan.

Makikita ninyo ang video nitong summary ng sinulat nila. Hindi pa ito ang launching dahil bago ko i-formalize at i-release iyung executive order, meron pa akong ibang gustong kong siguraduhin ayon sa patakaran ng ating pamahalaan.

Ganunpaman, mabuti't meron na tayong isang matatawag na penultimate draft. At kapag mayroon na tayong plano, magkakaroon na ng mas konkretong saligan sa pagplano ng mga ahensya at para sa pag-budget sa mga gender and development project. At dahil may plano, pwedeng magkaroon ng sagot doon sa mga kakulangan sa kasalukuyang gender mainstreaming activities.

Itong bagong plano ay inaasahan natin makapagbibigay ng espesyal na atensyon sa dalawang bagay: una, women's economic empowerment; at pangalawa, protection of women's rights. Sa dalawang importanteng bahaging ito, idinagdag din ng Commission on the Role of Filipino Women ang gender sensitivity sa governance.

Sa planong ito, inaasahan natin na ang pinakamahirap na kababaihan at mga kababaihan sa kanayunan ang pangunahing magkakamit ng benepisyo.

Sa ngayon, isa sa malaking programa ng pamahalaan ay ang para sa kababaihan. Para sa akin, ang economic empowerment para sa kababaihan ay iyung tinatawag na Grameen Banking Strategy o microfinance. Ang ating hangarin ay matulungan ng NCRFW ang NAPC na makamit ng 300,000 kababaihan ang benepisyo sa microfinance taun-taon. Sa ganoon, sa loob ng three-and-a-half years ng kasalukuyang administrasyon, isang milyong kababaihan ang makapasok sa microfinance at magkakaroon ng pagkakataong makapag-hanapbuhay.

Sa pamamagitan ng planong ito, inaasahan din natin na mapaganda ang implementasyon ng mga patakaran na nagtatanggol sa karapatan ng kababaihan sa bagay ng human rights. In other words, through this plan, we shall focus on abused women, violence against women, the protection of the girl-child, and measures to combat trafficking of women and children.

Noong ako ay nagsalita sa United Nations General Assembly, ang sabi ko ay habang hindi natin nasasagot ang pagbibigay ng kapangyarihan at karapatan ng kababaihan, hindi natin masasabi na nasugpo natin ang problema ng kahirapan ng mga bansa.

At sa loob ng isang taon mula noon, may isang malaking pangyayari – ang 9-11. Ang giyera kontra sa terorismo. At isa sa parati kong sinasabi sa buong mundo ay ang laban kontra sa terorismo ay kambal na laban kontra sa kahirapan. Ngunit ngayon, gusto kong idagdag na hindi natin masasabi na nasugpo ang kahirapan kung hindi natin mapapairal ang kapangyarihan at karapatan ng kababaihan. Ang laban kontra sa terorismo, ang laban kontra sa kahirapan ay kambal din ng laban para sa karapatan at kapangyarihan ng kababaihan.

Halimbawa, iyung mga bansa o ang mga pamayanan kung saan mas umiiral ang terorismo, iyon din ang mga lipunan kung saan mas umiiral ang abuso sa kababaihan. Tingnan ninyo ang Afghanistan sa ilalim ng Taliban. Tingnan ninyo ang Abu Sayyaf sa Basilan at pakinggan ninyo ang mga testimonya ng mga kababaihang hostages, nag-testify na sila ay ginahasa ng mga Abu Sayyaf.

Kaya kung pag-uusapan natin ang karapatan ng kababaihan sa Pilipinas, kailangang masugpo ang terorismo ng Abu Sayyaf kung gusto natin mapigil ang panggagahasa sa ating kababaihan sa katimugan.

Ngunit para bang nabaliktad ang mundo. Mayroong nagsasabi na kapag tayo ay humihingi ng tulong sa Amerikano na i-train ang ating sundalo para masugpo natin ang Abu Sayyaf, iyon daw ay kontra-kababaihan. Ang kontra-kababaihan ay ang Abu Sayyaf, hindi ang mga sumusugpo sa Abu Sayyaf.

At para matiyak na kahit na ang mga tumutulong sa atin na sugpuin ang Abu Sayyaf ay tunay na magtatanggol at rerespeto ng karapatan ng kababaihan, ginawa kong tatlo na lang ang miyembro ng Visiting Forces Commission. Sila ay manggagaling sa DFA, DND, at saka DSWD. Ang tanging tungkulin ni Dinky Soliman ng DSWD ay siguraduhin na ang karapatan ng kababaihan ay ginagalang kahit na may visiting forces dito.

Noong araw, according to visiting forces rule, soldiers are not supposed to leave their camps, dahil ayaw natin ng prostitution. Ano ang nangyari? Dinadala naman iyung mga prostitutes sa loob ng kampo. Sabi ko, kaysa ganyan, diretsuhin na natin: the rules and regulations must say that the visiting forces are not allowed to procure the services of prostitutes. So ang patakaran natin ngayon, lantaran. Kung gusto nilang lumabas, pwede silang lumabas basta guided para masigurado na walang prostitutes na pinapasok sa kampo at walang prostitutes na dine-date doon sa labas ng kampo. Iyan ang paraan upang masigurado natin ang proteksyon ng karapatan ng kababaihan na walang eksplorasyon. Ngunit mas importanteng sugpuin natin iyung nanggagahasa sa ating kababaihan – ang mga Abu Sayyaf. Naging bahagi na ng kanilang terorismo ang manggahasa ng ating kababaihan.

Isang importanteng bahagi ng framework plan for women ay ang tungkol sa reproductive rights ng kababaihan. Gusto kong siguraduhin na ang patakaran na nakalagay doon ay sang-ayon sa population policy ng ating kasalukuyang administrasyon.

Ayon sa ating Konstitusyon, importante ang responsible parenthood. Ibig sabihin nito’y dapat pinag-aaralan ng magulang ang tungkulin sa pamilya, sa mga anak, sa isa’t-isa. Bahagi nito ang pagdedesisyon kung ilan ang bilang ng anak na kaya nilang palakihin na may dignidad. Ang kanilang desisyon ay kailangang sang-ayon sa paniniwala ng relihiyon at kultura ng bawa’t mag-asawa.

Iyan ang ating patakaran. Kaya gusto kong siguraduhin na itong mga patakaran na ito ay nakalagay doon, klaro at walang magagawang anumang misinterpretation.

Isang taon mula ng tayo ay huling nagkita, nagkaroon na tayo ng hakbang. At pinapanalangin ko na sa susunod na taon, mararamdaman na ng ating kababaihan ang implementasyon nito para sa gayon makatulong ito sa pagsugpo ng kahirapan at eksploytasyon ng kababaihan. Ito rin ay makakadagdag ng kapangyarihan sa kababaihan sa ating bagong siglo.

Happy International Women's Day sa ating lahat. Thank you.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 79th Commencement Exercises of the Philippine Women's University (PWU)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 79th Commencement Exercises of the Philippine Women's University (PWU)

[Delivered at the PICC Plenary Hall, Roxas Blvd, March 8, 2002]

I am very happy to be here today with the community of the Philippine Women's University, especially on this very important day, the day for women. It is appropriate to begin the celebration of Women's Day by being with the Women's University. And on a personal note, being with the Philippine Women's University on this very important day for women, makes me feel that I am with a woman whom I love very dearly, even up to today beyond her life, my mother the late first lady Evangelina Macaraeg Macapagal, herself an Alumna of Philippine Women's University.

Actually, even I did some studies in PWU, not academic studies but I learned some lessons with the Bayanihan being taught by no less than mommy Urtula, herself. This was when my father was president of the Philippines and there were occasions when, specifically for the king and queen of Thailand, and the Crown Prince and princess of Japan who are now the Emperor and Empress of Japan. My mother decided that the cultural presentations would be done by me, and so I took lessons with Bayanihan, and I was very happy that at that time, I learned much about the repertory of Bayanihan, and the dances that mommy Urtula taught me were new dances that she had just discovered from her research all over the Philippines. And so it made me very familiar with how Bayanihan works, not only by making everybody a skilled dancer, but also by doing research and therefore bringing out many hidden treasures of our culture and making them part now of our public property. I appreciate Bayanihan for all the things that I learned then.

And of course, you my dear graduates, I congratulate our graduates of this year. You are the pride of family and kin. You are the pride of your institution, you are the pride of our nation. And as we have been saying today, today is International Women's Day. Today, the world honors women as the pillar of the home, the workplace and society. As women, our historical struggle is steep in glory and achievement, sacrifice and heroism. But sadly, millions of women around the world still struggle for emancipation and freedom, we must continue to embrace their cause with fervor and zeal.

Until every woman is liberated from the shackles of oppression, ignorance and poverty, there will be no real peace, no real justice, no real progress for mankind.

I sincerely thank the PWU for the Hiyas ng Pamantasan Award presented to me. I humbly accept it as part of the continuing honor bestowed upon my family by this institution.

In his time, my father, the late president Diosdado Macapagal – I believe in this very hall – also received the Conrado Benitez Centenary Heritage Award for being the shining exemplar of the finest virtues, and the noblest tasks that make a man and president of his people, a truly great Filipino.

My mother – that was in this hall for sure, because I still have photographs of that – was awarded in 1992 the Francisca Tirona Benitez Medal of Merit. I am awed by these honors and I thank you with all my heart. After all, as I said earlier, my late mother was a Philwomanian, a graduate of PWU's High School – she was an intern, even her piano was an intern and some of her best friends then became her best friends all throughout her life until the end of her days. She was always proud of her days at the Philippine Women's University.

The values inculcated – diligence, achievement, the quest of good and decency – continue to guide me and my family. These values were nurtured and reinforced in the very halls of the institution of Philippine Women's University.

The hallmarks of achievement are abundant in your great university. As mentioned earlier, yours is the oldest women's university in Asia. And one of its founders was the legendary Francisca Tirona Benitez, a champion of women power. Even in the male dominated early 20th century, she saw the value of education in shoring up women's awareness of their rights. She also founded, not just the PWU, but the civic assembly of women in 1946, the forerunner of the national commission on the role of Filipino women.

The graduates of your institution were molded by the illustrious former senator Helen Benitez. And Tita Helen is the only Filipina who has served as the chairperson of the UN commission on the status of women. And under her stewardship, the Bayanihan Philippine Dance Folk Company which I spoke about, because I had a chance to dance with them or learn to dance from them, again, won the gold temple trophy at the festival of international folklore in Italy, early in February this year.

The Women's University counts among your graduates, national awardees. Dr. Luz Belardo for Science, Dr. Lucrecia Urtula for dance, and of course, our Dr. Lucrecia Kasilag for music and happy that she is still with us today.

PWU was also one of the first proponents of the integration of our various cultural communities. It enabled Christian women to understand Filipino Muslim Culture dating from when the sultan of Sulu. By personal invitation of Francisca Tirona Benitez, sent his daughter Princess Emily Kiram, and her cousin Mrs. Rada, to study at the Philippine Women's University.

Many peace – loving Muslim Filipinas have gone through these halls Among them, Dr. Emily Marohomsar, a peacemaker in her own right. And when I was learning how to dance at the PWU, the daughter of my father's secretary for general services, Tomas Sinsuat, was also friend, who was studying at PWU at that time.

PWU is also a trailblazer in distance education. Enabling many Filipinas to pursue learning without leaving their jobs or homes. It is one of the few universities that require the learning of both academic skills and moral values through its social and civic education courses. You, indeed, have upheld a tradition of excellence that must be sustained and preserved.

I am glad that you have also stepped forward into the information age as mentioned by Dr. Benitez. You have been at the helm of e-Learning , eBusiness and e-Commerce you have developed a system approach to gender and development programs and projects. You have set up a star learning network which puts together modules on governance, leadership and peace and order management. All these are relevant to development, progress, good government to a just and progressive society.

It is my policy to encourage schools to tap information technology to provide more students access to higher learning. This is in line with my commitment to make education more accessible and affordable to the broad masses of our people.

In this light, I take note of your suggestions to hasten accreditation of your Masteral Distance Education courses. The pertinent standards for this are now being hammered out by a panel of experts within the Commission on Higher Education. This panel is coordinating closely with the information technology and e-commerce council, and urge you to team up with the CHED in this effort with common standards and norms we can and we shall create an irreversible impetus for distance learning as a tool for national consolidation and development.

Nevertheless, I am directing the CHED to review your proposals in consultation with all other affected institution of higher learning. I would like CHED to submit to me its findings and recommendations by April, 3rd of this year. Let us do this consultation and consensus so that we can move forward as one, undivided force for education and development.

Education for every Filipino is the key to stability and progress. The underpinnings of a globally competitive workforce are an empowered and literate citizenry. Education will bring comfort, security and peace into our lives. Education will strengthen our democracy. We are promoting various modes of delivering quality and relevant education. We are implementing measures that open new educational opportunities for the poor. We aim for better relevance by strengthening our foundations in science and mathematics. We are improving the physical institutional and social infrastructure that allows information and communications technology to flourish. We shall pursue these aims unswervingly. We cannot relent because to do so will only breed more poverty, social injustice and conflict. The empowerment of Filipino women is vital to the overall quality of our human resources. We have a long way to go before we can truly say that our women are fully empowered. Even as I speak, poverty in the Philippines still has the face of a woman.

Many Filipinas continue to suffer from physical and emotional battery. Values have to be changed. Social and cultural structures have to be unraveled and transformed.

Last year, I instructed the national council on the role of Filipina women to draft a framework plan for women to incorporate existing and the emerging women's concerns. And after this graduation ceremony, I shall launch these plans. It will provide a more concrete basis for agency planning and budgeting on gender and development. It will address the gaps in present gender mainstreaming activities. The plan pays special attention to women's economic empowerment and human rights. These are my two causes as far as women are concerned.

Women economic empowerment in my administration. We want to enroll one million women over the three and a half years that I am President in the micro finance program, so that these women will be able to employ themselves and, therefore, be economically empowered. That is my flagship program for women's economic empowerment. On the matter of women's rights, yes, it is very important that we protect the human rights of women as head of government, head of state, a commander-in-chief of the 16th most populous country in the world. And being a woman head of state, woman head of government and woman commander in chief, it is a great opportunity to be able to promote women's human rights: right against abuse, right against exploitation.

Earlier, Dr. Benitez acknowledged that I have gone all over the world to preach the philosophy, that the battle against terrorism is interlinked with the battle against poverty. Let me add also that in those societies where terrorism is the rule, those societies also have exploitation of women as a primary characteristic and in those countries where democracy is the rule, those are the countries where women's rights are most respected. And therefore, the battle against terrorism, the battle against poverty is also a battle for protecting women's human rights. One reason why I am very adamant that we must defeat the Abu Sayyaf by all constitutional means within our power is because the Abu Sayyaf, being the ultimate terrorists, are also the ultimate abusers of women's rights. The women hostages, one after the other, have become more brave in recent times during this administration. And one by one, they had given us their horror stories of physical rape and abuse that were inflicted on them by the Abu Sayyaf.

And so if we are going to talk about the US soldiers coming here to train and we fear exploitation of women, they're here to prevent exploitation of women by the Abu Sayyaf. They are here to prevent rape and physical violence by the Abu Sayyaf. And while we are at it, we have also made sure that soldiers will also respect the human rights of our Filipino women. That is why the visiting forces commission has become very very small now. From so many members in the previous administrations, there are only three now: Secretary of Foreign Affairs, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of Social Welfare. And that is to make sure that women's human rights are protected even when there is a war, even when there is a partnership among strategy allies, and the rules used to be couched in very very diplomatic language. They used to say that the soldier should be confined within the camp. And I say, whether they are confined or not within the camp doesn't really tell us what you want them to do. Because they can be confined within the camp and bring the women in. So I would rather that they not be confined within the camp necessarily, but I would rather that the rule be very clear that visiting forces are not allowed to procure the services of prostitutes. And that is how we have been open about the rules of the visiting forces in this administration. Cuentas Claras.

Under our very forthright statement of rules, statement of principles, and the program and the plan for women, the very poor women and rural women shall be our primary beneficiaries. We are currently, as I said earlier, pushing for the grameen bank strategy to cover one million women, which means 300,000 very poor women every year. We also hope to improve the implementation of measures that uphold women's human rights. As I mentioned earlier, as an example of today, very graphic, the women raped by the Abu Sayyaf, and the rules against the acquisition of prostitutes, services by soldiers. But we shall also focus on more generally abused women, violence against women, the protection of the girl child, and measures to combat trafficking of women and children. On another horizon, we must recognize child birth and child rearing as vital societal functions. Our framework plan shall propagate awareness of responsible parenthood, which includes awareness of reproductive health issues and advocate that parents should be responsible, meaning, they should determine between themselves how many children they can afford to raise. And having determined how many children they can afford to raise, it is important that their choice of implementing their decision be made in accordance with their religious and cultural beliefs. This, therefore is our general policy regarding women, their economic rights, their human rights and their role in responsible parenthood.

I am very happy to have the opportunity to give these principles today before you, the community of the Philippine Women's University, because this university has been in action, not only in works; a leading promoter of women's rights and opportunities. And I trust that this university through its administration, through its faculty and through its graduates, will continue to promote women's economic and human rights into the 21st century. Graduates, congratulations. I am a very proud to be a part of the PWU family. Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 79th Commencement Exercises of the Philippine Women's University (PWU). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230331/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7632&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Launching Ceremonies of the Framework Plan for Women in Celebration of International Women's Day Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Launching Ceremonies of the Framework Plan for Women in Celebration of International Women's Day

[Delivered at the Philippine Sports Arena, Pasig City, March 9, 2002]

Maraming salamat Chairperson Oyie de Dios.

Ating kaibigan, kaibigan ng mga kababaihan at saka s'ya ang host dito sa ULTRA dahil ULTRA ay nasa DECS, si Secretary Raul Roco; ating host din dahil itong ULTRA ay nasa Ppasig at siya ay magandang halimbawa ng kababaihang leader, si Mayor Soledad Eusebio; isa pang kababaihan na nag-aalaga ng manggagawa, hindi lamang ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino kung hindi na rin iyung mga manggagawa sa buong mundo dahil s'ya ay Secretary of Labor at President ng International Labor Organization, si Pat Sto. Tomas; kaibigan ng mga kababaihang nasa kanayunan dahil ang trabaho n'ya ay taun-taon isigurado na dalawang daang libong ektarya ay mamumudmod sa mga magsasaka, si Secretary of DAR Nani Braganza; kung kababaihan ang namumuno sa pag-aalaga ng manggagawa sa pribadong sektor, kababaihan din ang namumuno sa pag-aalaga ng mga manggagawang nasa gobyerno, si Chairperson ng Civil Service, si Karina Constantino-David; at iyung ating kasama ngayon na tumutulong sa atin sa mga bagay ng edukasyon sa Malacañang ay si Presidential Assistant Mona Valisno, kababaihan din; parang Senatorial Proclamation ito, bawat pangalan may sariling pangkat. Okay. Tapos, siguro naman ito mayroon ding sarili n'yang mga magpapalakpak, 'yung organizer nitong National Women's Day, si Commissioner Myrna Yao; at itong ULTRA — tayo ay nasa loob ng DepEd — pero iyung ULTRA mismo nagpapatakbo ay 'yung Sports Commission. Eto babae rin, si Commissioner Cynthia Carrion; other commissioners of the NCRFW; Excellencies of the Diplomatic Corps; other government officials; distinguished guests; mga kababaihan at mga nagmamahal sa kababaihan.

Ang kapangyarihan ng kababaihang Pilipino ay napaka-importante sa pangkalahatang kapakanan ng ating tinatawag na human resources. Mahaba na ang ating naabot pero mahaba pa rin ang ating kailangan maabot bago natin masabi na buong-buo na ang kapangyarihan ng ating kababaihan.

Habang tayo ay nandito, nagkukwentuhan, ang problema ng kahirapan sa Pilipinas ay meron pa ring mukha ng kababaihan. Maraming kababaihan ay tuloy pa ring nagdudusa from physical and emotional battery. Kaya ang mga asal ay kailangan pang mapalitan. Ang mga estruktura ng pamayanan at kultura ay kailangan pa rin maisaayos at magkaroon ng pagbabago.

At gaya ng sabi kanina ni Sabsy Palanca, Ang ating Master of Mistress of Ceremonies, noong isang taon nagbigay ako ng instruction sa National Council on the Role of Filipino Women na magsulat ng isang draft framework plan for women na maisasama dito 'yung mga kasalukuyang patakaran at 'yung tinatawag na emerging women's concerns at ating mga panukalang patakaran tungkol sa kababaihan.

Itong araw na ito, pagkatapos ng aking pagsasalita, makikita ninyo ang video nitong summary ng sinulat nila. Hindi ko pa sasabihin na ito ay launching dahil bago ko i-formalize at i-release iyung Executive Order ay meron pang ibang gusto kong isigurado na talagang sang-ayon sa patakaran ng ating pamahalaan.

Ganun pa man, mabuti na meron na tayong isang matatawag nating penultimate draft. Iyung final draft bago 'yung final formal plan mismo. Dahil pag tayo ay mayroon ng plano magkakaroon ng mas kongkretong saligan para sa pagplano ng mga ahensya at para pag-budget doon sa gender and development budget. At dahil may plano ay pwedeng magkaroon ng sagot doon sa mga kakulangan ng kasalukuyang gender mainstreaming activities. Itong bagong plano ay inaasahan natin na magbibigay ng espesyal na atensyon doon sa dalawang bagay na binanggit ko noong isang taon, na mula pa noong ako ay nasa DTI hanggang senado ay aking ipinaglalaman. Dalawa 'yon. Isa, iyung women's economic empowerment at isa iyung protection of women's rights. At 'yon na nga ang dalawang importanteng bahagi at dinagdag din ng Commission on Role of Filipino Women 'yung gender sensitivity sa governance.

Ang inaasahan natin na sa planong ito, iyung pinakamahirap na kababaihan at iyung mga kababaihan sa kanayunan ay magiging pangunahing makakakamit ng benepisyo ng ating plano. Halimbawa sa ngayon, isa sa malaking programa ng pamahalaan sa kababaihan. In fact, para sa akin, para sa economic empowerment iyung binanggit kong tangi doon sa State of the Nation Address noong nakaraang taon para sa kababaihan ay iyung tinatawag na Grameen Banking Strategy o microfinance. At ang ating hangarin na sana matulungan ng NCRFW ang NAPC na makamit 'yun ay taun-taon tatlong-daang libong kababaihan ay makakakuha ng benepisyo sa microfinance. Sa ganun, sa matapos ang ating three-and-a-half years ng kasalukuyang administrasyon, isang milyong kababaihan ay makakapasok sa microfinance at magkakaroon ng pagkakataon nang sarili nilang hanapbuhay.

Sa pamamagitan ng planong ito, inaasahan din natin na mapapaganda ang implementasyon ng mga patakaran na nagtatanggol ng karapatan ng kababaihan sa bagay ng human rights. In other words, through this plan we shall focus on abused women, violence against women, the protection of the girl-child and measures to combat trafficking of women and children.

Noong ako ay nagsalita sa United Nations General Assembly — ako 'yung last speaker nila. I spoke on the last day of the general assembly — sinabi ko, bilang head of state, head of government at commander-in-chief na babae ng panglabing-anim na pinaka-malaking bansa ng buong mundo, ang sinasabi ko, habang hindi natin nasasagot ang kapangyarihan at karapatan ng kababaihan, hindi natin masasabi na nasugpo natin ang problema ng kahirapan ng mga bansa.

At ngayon mula noong isang taon hanggang ngayon, may isang malaking pangyayari. 'Yung 9-11, iyung giyera kontra sa terorismo. At isang parati kong sinasabi sa buong mundo ay 'yung laban kontra sa terorismo ay kambal na laban kontra sa kahirapan. Ngunit ngayon gusto kong idagdag dahil gaya ng sabi ko hindi natin masasabi na nasugpo natin ang kahirapan kung hindi natin mapairal ang kapangyarihan at karapatan ng kababaihan. Ang laban kontra sa terorismo, ang laban kontra sa kahirapan ay kambal din ng laban para sa karapatan at kapangyarihan ng kababaihan.

Halimbawa, iyung mga bansa kung... Or 'yung mga pamayanan kung saan mas umiiral ang terorismo, iyon din ang mga lipunan kung saan mas umiiral ang abuso sa kababaihan. Tingnan n'yo 'yung Afghanistan sa ilalim ng Taliban. Tingnan n'yo 'yung Abu Sayyaf sa Basilan at pakinggan n'yo 'yung testigo pagkatapos ng testigo ng mga kababaihang hostages nag-testify na sila ay ginahasa ng mga Abu Sayyaf.

Kaya kung pag-uusapan natin ang karapatan ng kababaihan sa Pilipinas, sa ating katimugan kailangang masugpo ang terorismo ng Abu Sayyaf kung gusto natin mapigil ang panggagahasa sa ating kababaihan sa ating katimugan

Kaya parang nababaliktad iyung mundo, pag may nagsasabi na pag tayo ay humihingi ng tulong ng Amerikano mag-training sa ating sundalo para mas masugpo natin ang Abu Sayyaf, iyon daw ay kontra-kababaihan. Ang kontra-kababaihan ay ang Abu Sayyaf, hindi 'yung mga nagsusugpo sa Abu Sayyaf.

At para masigurado na kahit na 'yung mga tumutulong sa atin magsugpo sa Abu Sayyaf ay sila rin ay magtatanggol at magrespeto ng karapatan ng kababaihan. Iyung Visiting Forces Commission na noong araw ang dami-daming miyembro ng commission. Ako ay naniniwala mas madaming miyembro, mas walang pupunta sa meeting, mas hindi uubra. Kaya ginawa kong tatlo na lang ang miyembro na nanggagaling sa gobyerno — DFA, DND at saka DSWD. Bakit nandoon si Dinky Soliman kasama ni Tito Guingona at ni Angie Reyes. Ang tanging pinakatangkulin ni Dinky Soliman ay siguraduhin na ang karapatan ng kababaihan ay ginagalang kahit na may Visiting Forces dito.

Noong araw, iyung visiting forces rule sabi nila, the soldiers are not supposed to leave their camps. Anong dahilan doon? Supposed to be dahil ayaw natin ng prostitution. Pero kung hindi mo talaga sasabihin ng lantaran ang layunin mo ay di ano ang nangyayari? Dinadala iyung mga prostitute sa loob ng kampo. Eh 'di sabi ko, kaysa 'yan ang ilalagay natin diretsohan na natin, the rules and regulations must say that the visiting forces are not allowed to procure the services of prostitution. Iyon ang ating patakaran ngayon, lantaran. Kaya kung gusto nilang lumabas, pwede silang lumabas basta guided ang kanilang entertainment para masigurado na walang prostitutes na pinapasok sa kampo at walang prostitutes na dine-date doon sa labas ng kampo. Iyan ang paraan kung papaano masigurado natin ang pagproteksyon ng karapatan ng kababaihan na walang eksploytasyon. Ngunit mas importante sugpuin natin iyung nanggagahasa sa ating kababaihan. Maliban sa ating mga common criminals, iyung mga Abu Sayyaf na naging bahagi na ng kanilang terorismo manggahasa sa ating kababaihan.

Isang importanteng bahagi ng framework plan for women na gusto kong basahin muna ng mabuti bago ko ilabas o i-promulgate 'yung Executive Order, ay 'yung tungkol sa reproductive rights ng kababaihan. Dahil gusto kong isigurado na ang patakaran na nakalagay doon ay in letter and in spirit ay sang-ayon sa population policy ng ating kasalukuyang administrasyon.

Ano itong patakaran na ito. Ang ating patakaran tungkol sa populasyon ay nanggagaling sa ating constitution. Ayon sa ating konstitusyon, importante ang responsible parenthood. Iyan ang pinanggagalingan ng ating population policy. Ano ang ibig sabihin ng responsible parenthood. Siyempre, dapat nag-aaral ang mga magulang tungkol sa kanilang mga tungkulin sa pamilya, sa mga anak, sa isa't-isa. At bahagi ng pag-aaral ng kanilang tungkulin ay kailangan sa kanilang pag-aaral ay magdesisyon sila ng tama kung ilan ang mga anak na kaya nilang palakihin na may dignidad. At pag nagdesisyon na itong responsableng mga magulang kung ilan ang pwedeng anak nilang pwede mapalaki sa paraang may dignidad. Ang paraan kung papano nila gagawin ang implementasyon ng kanilang desisyon ay kailangan sang-ayon sa paniniwala ng relihiyon at kultura ng bawat mag-asawa. 'Yan ang ating patakaran. Kaya gusto kong isigurado na itong mga patakaran na ito ay nakalagay doon, klaro at walang maggagawa ng anumang masasabi nating misinterpretation. Besides, maraming nagtatanong anong population policy. Ito ay magandang lugar kung saan nila pwedeng mahanap ang ating sagot.

Kaya ako ay nasisiyahan na nandito tayo muli mula noong isang taon hanggang itong taon nagkaroon tayo ng hakbang. Dahil walang framework plan ngayon merong framework plan. At sana sa susunod na taon, ano ang ating maaasahan sa isa't-isa. Sana sa susunod na taon, itong framework plan ay ginagawa ng implementasyon at nararamdaman na ng ating kababaihan lalo na iyung ating kababaihan sa mga naghihirap na pamayanan para sa ganun, sana ang ating framework plan ay makakatulong sa pagkasugpo ng kahirapan, sa pagkasugpo ng eksploytasyon ng kababaihan, at sa pangdagdag ng kapangyarihan ng kababaihan sa ating bagong siglo.

Happy International Women's day sa ating lahat.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Launching Ceremonies of the Framework Plan for Women in Celebration of International Women's Day. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230306/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7631&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Opening Session of the 2002 Consultative Group Meeting for the Philippines

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Opening Session of the 2002 Consultative Group Meeting for the Philippines

[Delivered at the Convention Hall, Holiday Inn Resort Hotel, Clark Special Economic Zone, Angeles City, Pampanga, March 11, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Romulo.

Secretary Camacho and the other Philippine participants in this Consultative Group Meeting; Mr. Pulley and the other members of the O-D-A committee; friends from Pampanga; Ladies and Gentlemen:

I would like to welcome the representatives of the International Donor Community, our partners in development, to the Philippines and to this conference. We are honored to host this meeting — the Philippines that is — for the second time. Thank you for your support and enduring faith in our country.

When I became President last year, I said that we want to win the battle against poverty within the decade.

Our vision of eradicating poverty within the decade is anchored on a comprehensive medium-term Philippine development plan. This plan revolves around four major components.

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. We believe that this philosophy will create more jobs in the sectors and areas that count most to ease the burden of the poor.

The second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. This will bring economic development to the rural areas, where most of the poor live.

The third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. This will bring immediate relief to the longest-sufferers in the fringes of society.

The fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

We started implementing our development plan even before the document was printed.

We have been guided by real, visible and measurable targets, most of which are contained in my first state of the nation address before Congress last year.

Allow me to mention a few accomplishments.

Economic growth last year created more than two million jobs, reducing both unemployment and underemployment, and exceeding the targets in our plan.

While the economies of most of our neighbors suffered declines last year, as mentioned by Mr. Pulley, ours posted a 3.4 percent growth in GDP and of 3.7 percent growth in GNP. Our GDP growth surpassed all expectations, including our own. We actually posted one of the highest output growth rates in east and Southeast Asia.

Inflation was contained at 6.1 percent last year, very close to the lower end of our target. And inflation for February this year was at 3.4 percent, the lowest in two years.

Interest rates have gone down to their lowest in 15 years, and they can be expected to trigger an increase in economic activities. The peso has also stabilized relative to the dollar.

The budget deficit was limited to a 147 billion pesos. While pursuing our priorities and without sacrificing our core values, which include job creation, agricultural modernization, housing, and education, our message is clear — government will keep the deficit within reasonable range.

I targeted 20 billion pesos a year for the implementation of the agriculture and fisheries modernization act; but in actuality more than 28 billion has been spent so far.

I targeted security of land tenure to a 150,000 urban poor families and a 100,000 rural farming families; and they have already been granted that. More than 34,000 low-salaried workers have already been given financial assistance for their housing needs.

We have already identified the more than 1,600 barangays where we will construct school buildings so that all barangays will have a school by 2004.

We have exceeded our target for health insurance coverage for the urban poor by more than 85 percent.

We have moved towards greater transparency in awarding contracts. These have to be bidden out rather than negotiated. We have computerized the bidding in public works. We have exceeded the target set for the number of agencies to be registered under the electronic procurement system. The result from all these — honest and faster contract awards.

We have infused in government, to a great degree, common sense, discipline, and accountability in management and public service.

Civil society is in loop. Private sector groups have set up procurement watch, which has been sanctioned to check the integrity of government purchases. The report card survey project periodically measures public attitudes toward the delivery of services. Tax watch monitors the internal revenue service. The volunteers against crime and corruption monitors the transactions of the department of public works and highways.

We have stabilized the domestic political situation while continuing to mop up residual problems of law and order. We are putting in an additional 200 million pesos into an effort to bolster our capability against kidnapping. We will set up more operational teams exclusively focused in this threat. We shall back up these teams with better surveillance equipment.

Some sectors are trying to create an impression, quite erroneous, that the government is being wishy-washy in dealing with the political posturings of former President Estrada, who is under trial by the graft court.

I want to firmly dispel any impression that the government is engaged in any strategy of appeasement or compromise on this matter.

While I have said that the decision on any pending issue before the court is up to the court to decide, this does not mean that the executive will take a passive stance against any attempt to deliberately undermine the court, subvert allegiance to it, or impede its rightful duties.

My duty as president is to defend the constitution, and this extends to the defense of the great powers of government — the executive, judiciary and the legislature. We will not stand by while any or all of these institutions are under threat. The judiciary, in particular, has ample means to ward off nuisances and legalistic posturings, but when there is a brazen attempt to destroy the credibility and functionality of any court of justice — this calls for the concerted action by all institutions of democratic government; and for that matter, all the citizens of the democratic system.

Both the Supreme Court and the leaders of the legislature have called upon the former president to confine his cause or struggle within the ambit of the court. I have joined them in this call.

The presidency will not stand aside in the face of insidious machinations to take the struggle out of the courtroom and try to evolve it into a conspiracy to foment public disorder and undermine the people's allegiance to the constitution and the system of justice.

The defense of the constitution and the rule of law are non-negotiable. These cannot be the stuff of popularity or partisan contests.

All subterranean conspiracies shall stand down, or face the full retribution of constitutional authority.

On the other horizon, the decisiveness by which we shall continue to enforce the rule of law is only matched by our consistency and unswerving determination to keep the economy on track.

But we have much, much more to do to enable the poor to catch up. The wealth gap must be closed. Growth statistics are meaningless to the jobless. Low inflation is irrelevant to the penniless. A reduced budget deficit cannot be an argument to butter up the morale of hungry people.

With this pressing concern in mind, we chose “Matapat na Pamamahala, Tugon sa Kahirapan” or “Winning the War Against Poverty through Good Governance” as the theme of this year's consultative group meeting as it was the theme of our EDSA anniversary celebrations.

“Matapat na Pamamahala” is loosely translated as “Good Governance” but it means much more. It means caring, being accountable and being open and transparent. It connotes loyalty, honesty, and being true to one's office.

“Matapat na Pamamahala” is the key to the door of broader prosperity. Without it, even the best-laid development plan is doomed to fail. But with “Matapat na Pamamahala,” government will devote its entire being, spirit and resource to deliver the poor from the clutches of poverty.

Yet, we have no illusions about the gigantic challenge ahead. All leaders from three continents I have consulted over the past year are one in saying that resolving poverty needs the combined resources of the entire planet to succeed. It needs the combined efforts of all the well-meaning governments and institutions of the world. And it brooks no delay.

A global alliance can be forged to wage war against poverty. And we should forge this alliance just as we forged an alliance against the scourge of terrorism.

I thank you all for being there to help us as we navigated our economy from troubled seas to calmer waters last year. I trust that you will continue to be by our side as we proceed our country through buffeting storms and uncertainties that have characterized the world economy.

We have used the official development assistance your governments and institutions have extended to help effect key reforms, and to finance the budget deficit and major infrastructure and human development investments. In all these, I assure you that we are spending on the right things and living within our means.

We are unlocking key bottlenecks that have hampered the use of o-d-a in the past year. This is what I did when I was at the helm of the department of social welfare and development before I became president, and this is what I am doing now for the entire government.

We are integrating process and action more sharply. We are meeting with project managers as often as we can. We are monitoring their prompt implementation of our decisions; and we are working under concrete time frames of compliance.

We need more legislation to unlock some bottlenecks. We will continue to work with congress to clear the track forward.

All systems are moving forward. We know where we are headed and we are trying to mark the milestones as we painstakingly traverse them. Our vehicle is in good running condition and judging from what Mr. Pulley said in his welcome remarks, I hope you believe that we have a competent driver behind the steering wheel. But we need all the extra fuel we can stock to go the full distance.

I trust that you will continue to extend us the much needed assistance, the extra fuel for the journey's continuity, so that we can reach our goal of poverty-free Philippines and contribute to a poverty-free world within the decade.

On this note, let me thank you once again for the privilege of welcoming.

Mabuhay and may we all meet success in this meeting.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Opening Session of the 2002 Consultative Group Meeting for the Philippines. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230254/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7630&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during her visit at Commonwealth, Quezon City

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During her visit at Commonwealth, Quezon City

[Delivered at the Commonwealth, Quezon City, March 15, 2002]

Maraming salamat Congressman Chuck Mathay, Congressman ng Commonwealth.

At babanggitin ko ang dating konsehal dahil ang dami kong babatiin dito na dating konsehal ng Quezon City: batiin ko si Senator Francis Pangilinan, dating konsehal ng Quezon City. At dati rin Chairman sa Council sa U.P. kagaya ni Ginoong Gonzalo Bongolan, ang pangulo ng HGC na gumastos ng magkano, 300,000 million pesos para itong palengkeng ito ay matayo para sa taumbayan ng Commonwealth; mga kasapi ng Cabinet, yung ating chairman ng HUDCC, konsehal din ng Quezon City, taga-U.P. rin dati kasama ni Francis at saka ni Gonzalo, si Mike Defensor; ang ating namamahala sa lahat ng bagay upang labanan diretsohan ang kahirapan, si Secretary Ging Deles; yung ating mga kasapi ng Quezon City Council sa pamumuno ng ating acting Mayor Herbert Bautista — si Herbert po ay acting mayor dahil si Mayor Sonny Belmonte ay may official trip ngayon doon po sa China, sa Shanghai; yung ating ibang mga government officials na narito kasama na doon si Percy Chavez na siya ang inyong kuya, siya ang chairman ng Commission on the Urban Poor at yung inyong police director dito, si General Thor itong aking ginagamit na uniporme ay uniporme ito ni General Thor dahil kung naalala n'yo nung January 20 sinabi ko na gumagawa siya ng programa nang out-of-work, out-of-school-youth emergency employment so siya ay narito hindi lang sa kapayapaan kung hindi yung ating mga gang ay gagawin niyang work gang. Yung ating mga barangay chairmen led by Chairman Felicito Balmocina at saka ni Chairwoman Pecson; kayo, ang napakaraming Peoples' Organizations, at yung ating mga religious groups na narito; yung mga nakatanggap ng mga sertipikato; mga kaibigan:

Magandang umaga sa inyong lahat. Nandito na naman tayo, magkasama. Salamat sa limang libong dumalo dito sa ating pagdiriwang itong umagang ito.

May nagtanong sa akin kanina kung bakit daw paborito ko itong Commonwealth pagdating sa paglunsad ng iba't-ibang proyekto, katulad nitong napakamodernong Commonwealth Market-Mall na ating ini-inaugurate itong araw na ito.

Ang sagot ko ay hindi naman sa paborito ko kundi mabibilis lamang kayong kumilos pagdating sa pag-aayos ng inyong mga kailangan. Masisipag ang inyong mga organisasyon at mga pinunong lokal kaya madali ninyong nakakamit ang inyong mga hinihiling.

Kaya, binibigyan ko kayo ng kaukulang pansin dahil gusto ko na makita ng mga ibang may pangangailangan tulad ninyo kung papaano ninyo pinapatupad ang inyong mga proyekto. Gusto kong malaman ng iba nating mga kababayan kung gaano kahalaga ang pagsasamahan at pagtutulungan para makuha ang inyong mga kagustuhan.

Kanina yung ilang kinatawan ng Peoples' organization ay nandito para magbigay ng deklarasyon ng suporta sa inyong lingkod at sa ating pamahalaan. Sabi nga ni Ging Deles biro n'yo yan yung mga nag-away-away dati ay nagkasama-sama na ngayon pagkatapos ng isang taon. Kinukwento ko nga kay Senator Francis Pangilinan ang Chairman ng Housing sa Senado nung ako ay pumupunta dito kapag ang kausap ko ay yung isang grupo na dumalo sa Edsa 3 nandoon nag-rally, yung mga tiga-Edsa 2, taksil sabi nila. Pag punta ko naman para makipag-usap doon sa mga P.O. na nandoon sa Edsa 2 nandoon Edsa 3 nagra-rally 'Erap pa rin' sabi nila. Pero pagkatapos ng isang taon na talagang inupuan ni Ging, ni Percy yung mga inyong mga kinatawan na kapitan mga local officials sa Quezon City ngayon pagkatapos ng isang taon halos ay nagkakaisa kayong lahat. Maraming salamat sa inyo.

Kami naman na nasa pamahalaan ay ginagawa ang lahat upang matugunan agad ang inyong mga kailangan. Halimbawa, sa pabahay na masugid nating ipinatutupad hindi lamang dito sa Commonwealth kundi sa buong bansa, pinaiksi ang application processes at binawasan ang mga signatories. Sa madaling salita, pinabilis at pinagaan ang proseso para sa inyong kaginhawaan.

Alam po n'yo na dati yung low-cost housing para mabuo lahat ng papeles bago simula iniisip ng project proponent hanggang makapagtayo ng tahanan dalawang taon at kalahati ang proseso. Ngayon hinati na at hindi lang hinati ginawa ng anim na buwan na lamang para mas mabilis.

Ang tangi nating hangarin ay ang inyong masigasig na pagsulong at pagsunod sa mga kinakailangan para makamit natin agad ang inyong mga kahilingan sama-sama o indibidwal man.

Ang sabi ko nga, hindi kayo ang problema. Hindi ang squatters ang problema. Hindi ang maralitang taga-lunsod ang problema. Kasama kayo sa paghahanap ng solusyon sa problema.

Halimbawa po kung bakit sinasabi ko kayo sa solusyon di ba nandito si Ginoong Perez ng Payatas. Narinig ko ang pangalan niya kanina. Nung nandoon ako sa Payatas nung January 16 hindi ba isang malaking problema kung papaano yung mga titulo ay mabuo dahil may maraming mga pekeng titulo diyan na biglang lumilitaw. Tatlo ang nagki-claim sa isang lupa. Sabi Ginoong Perez ideklara na lang lahat bilang government land na binebenta. Tapos noon kung sino ang manalo sa korte eh ibalik ang pera ng pamahalaan doon at least nabili na ng mga taumbayan ang payatas yung kanilang lupa. Galing sa kanya yung solusyon na yon.

Itong Commonwealth market-mall naman ay bahagi ng National Government Center Urban Renewal Program na sinimulan ni dating Pangulong Corazon Aquino at Fidel Ramos. Nung panahon ni Tita Cory siya ang nagdeklara nitong National Government Center. Nung panahon ni Pangulong Ramos inumpisahan niya itong palengke ito. Nung 1999 tinigil ang construction dahil tinigil ang pag-release ng pondo. Panahon na lamang ni President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo nailabas muli ang pondo kaya natapos itong palengkeng ito. Kaya na-kumpleto ngayon sa ating administrasyon. Ito ay para bigyan ng karagdagang kabuhayan ang mga nakatira sa paligid nito, kabilang ang mga housing beneficiaries na kailangan ng karagdagang kita para mabayaran ang iyong housing amortizations.

Kadalasan, ang mga pangunahing hinihiling para sa mga pabahay ay tubig at kuryente. Pero dito sa inyo, hindi lamang tubig at kuryente ang aming ibinigay, may kasama pang palengke!

Ang market-mall na ito ay tinatayang magiging sentro ng kalakalan sa parteng ito ng kalakhang maynila. Magpapaluwag din ito ng traffic dahil ang mga nagtitinda ay hindi na kailangang magbenta sa tabing kalsada.

Sa mga nakapuwesto ngayon, gusto kong ipaalam sa inyo, una sa lahat, ayon kay ginoong bongolan, yang mga palengke dito, magkano ang upa? 70 pesos, dito 10 pesos to 20 pesos lamang. At hindi lamang 'yon, mayroon pa kayong isang buwan na libre hanggang abril para magtinda ng walang bayad. Ito ay para maka-adjust kayong mabuti sa inyong bagong palengke.

At yung unang bayad ninyo ay ia-apply sa miscellaneous fee ng table stalls sa inyong goodwill bilang karagdagan tulong sa inyo. 'Di ba 'pag nagpapa-goodwill kailangang may goodwill downpayment? 'Yung unang bayad ninyo ide-deduct na yon sa goodwill.

At tulad ng itinakdang patakaran ng Home Guaranty Corporation, yung nagtayo nito, ang balanse ng goodwill para sa regular stalls, katulad din ng table stalls, ay pati yon hulugan, hindi agad-agad babayaran sa loob ng dalawang taon, hulugan at walang interes.

Gagawin ding isang malawakang transport terminal ang harapan ng inyong palengke para sa maginhawang pagbaba at pagsakay ng lahat ng mamimili, maski galing pa sila sa Montalban o Novaliches. Dahil nandiyan ang terminal, di dito mamimili.

Kaya naman inaanyayahan ko ang lahat ng mga wholesalers na magbagsak ng kanilang mga paninda dito para makilala ang Commonwealth market bilang isang regional market at hindi lang karaniwang palengkeng lokal.

Binabati ko naman ang pamunuan ng Quezon City — si Herbert, yung acting mayor, yung ating dalawang konsehal na narito, si Congressman — sa pagpapagawa ng tulay na bakal na mag-uugnay sa Commonwealth market mula sa Manggahan. Alam ba ho ninyo yun, yung tulay na bakal? Mura yun at puwede pang ilipat. Kaya yung mga ibang mga humihingi sa akin ng catwalk, sabi ko, gayahin n'yo ang ginagawa ni Sonny Belmonte, yung tulay na bakal, mas mura iyon, nalilipat pa.

Binabati ko rin sila sa sa pagpapa-aspalto ng transport terminal, at sa pagbubukas ng island sa harap ng inyong palengke. Binabati ko rin ang lahat ng mga vendor associations, federations, people's organizations at NGO's sa inyong pakikipag-tulungan sa pamunuan ng HUDCC, si Mike yon, ng HGC at ng pagpapatakbo ng palengkeng ito, para matupad ang mithiing pabahay at hanapbuhay sa nakararaming pamilya ng mga vendors at iba pang mga beneficiaries.

Pinag-aralan pa rin naming mabuti kung ano pang tulong ang puwedeng maibigay sa inyo, kabilang nang mga kakailanganin ninyong puhunan.

Ilan pa sa mga makikinabang sa makabagong palengkeng ito ay ang mga extension at outreach livelihood projects, katulad ng pananahi, paggawa ng walis, dustpan, handicraft, folding bed, at iba pang cottage industries. Makikinabang din dito ang mga terminal, at mga baggage boys, at mga kargador.

Sa araw na ito ay nasaksihan din natin ang pamamahagi ng may tatlong libong beneficiary sa certificates of title reservation, at certificate of lot assignments at certificate of lot entitlements sa ilalim ng proyektong pabahay sa ating pamahalaan.

Sa ganoon, habang binibilisan ng kongreso, habang linalakad ni Senator Pangilinan at saka ni Congressman Mathay na ma-deklara na ng Kongreso na pwede nang ibenta sa tuluyan itong lupa sa inyo, meron na kayong katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan ng inyong mga tahanan. Ang ibig sabihin nun ngayon pa man, hindi na kayo squatters sa sariling bayan.

Ang mga benepisaryong ito ay kabilang sa may 85 na Homeowners Associations dito. Malaki ang nagawa ng mga asosasyong ito sa pag-aayos ng mga kailangan ng proyekto. Kaya naman, hinihiling ko sa mga associations sa ibang lugar na tularan ang magandang halimbawa ng mga Homeowners Associations dito sa Commonwealth.

Gusto ko lamang bigyang-diin na ang pagkakaloob ng mga proyektong ito sa pabahay ay nakasalalay sa ilang mga alituntunin at patakaran na dapat sundin ng pamahalaan at ng mga benepisaryo.

Ang ginagawa nating pamamahagi ay isa lamang sa mga mahahalagang proseso para sa lubusang magmay-ari ang mga proyektong pabahay na ito. Dahil kamakailan lamang ay namahagi na rin tayo dito ng pabahay sa may 2,000 pang ibang benepisaryo, lumalabas na 5,000 nang taga-Commonwealth ang nakinabang na sa ating proyektong pabahay simula nung ako ay nakaupo bilang pangulo.

Sa puntong ito ay tinatawagan ko ang DPWH na pabilisin ang land acquisition ng ilan pang mga properties na kabilang dito sa National Government Center. Tinatawagan ko din ang National Housing Authority ayon sa ilalim ni Mike Defensor, na di ba ang deputy don si Jopet. Hindi, HUDCC ka ba? Konsehal din ng Quezon City, na i-facilitate ang NGC East Project Trusteeship.

Nang si Chuck ay konsehal pa, hindi ba pinopondohan yung mga administrative expenses para matuluyan yung mga survey, paggawa ng titulo. Eh, ngayon ay nagbibigay din naman ako five million pesos to defray the expenses for the titling activities to facilitate the awarding of land titles to the beneficiaries of the NGC-east working group. Mike, sa iyo ko ibibigay.

At pinapaalala ko sa mga kinauukulang ahensya na dapat mapirmahan ko na yung proklamasyon ng payatas sa loob ng anim na linggo.

Sa mga People's Organizations sa NGC-East, hinihiling ko na lalo ninyong palalakasin ang inyong pagsasamahan dito dahil ang proyektong ito ay in full swing na, with the community master plan and the Code of Policy being worked on.

Gusto ko ring ipaalam sa inyo na noong huling Cabinet meeting noong nakaraang Martes, ay itinalaga ko ang National Anti-Poverty Commission o NAPC bilang lead inter-agency sa binubuong Committee for Demolition and Relocation. Kabilang sa mga gagawin ng komiteng ito ay ang pagpapagawa ng emergency shelter para doon sa mga maapektuhan ng demolition at relocation. Pero yung dito, wala naman maapektuhan na dito ginagamit ko lang itong pagkakataon para maikuwento sa telebisyon dahil may mga ibang lugar, halimbawa, kung tayo ang magtatayo ng train ay yung papabilisin natin yung train patungong Bulacan, patungong Cark, patungong Calabarzon, patungong Batangas Port para kahit na saan kayo nakatira, kahit na saan magtrabaho puwede dahil mabilis ang train, ay may malilipat doon. Yung dadaanan ng riles, yun ang pinag-uusapan kong ililipat, hindi kayo. Kayo meron na kayong certificate eh, so hindi kayo yon.

Inatasan ko na rin ang DILG na gumawa ng imbentaryo ng government lands na maaaring gamitin para sa housing at iba pang mga proyekto ng pamahalaan. Kasi basta lupa ng gobyerno at hindi ginagamit sa mga bagay — kagaya ng riles, ibebenta na natin sa mga nakatira doon.

Ang pamamahagi ng pabahay, sa mga maralitang taga-lungsod, yan ay isa lamang katibayan ng aking pagsisikap na mabigyan ng social bias ang development programs ng ating pamahalaan.

Sa aking paglilibot sa urban poor areas kahit noong ako ay hindi pa presidente, palaging sinasabi ng mga maralitang tagalungsod na ang pangunahing kailangan ay katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan. Ang tawag doon sa ingles ay shelter security.

Ito ang dahilan kung bakit gusto ko na may 150,000 families na mag-graduate sa pagiging squatter bawa't taon. Natupad natin ito noong nakaraang taon, at tutuparin natin ito ulit ngayong taon.

Yung 2,000 na namumudmod nung isang taon, bahagi yon sa 150,000 for the year 2001; yung 3,000 na nakatanggap ngayon bahagi naman kayo sa 150,000 target for year 2002 kaya buena mano kayo.

Ating tinatayo rin taun-taon ang 100,000 units for low cost housing at 50,000 units for socialized housing para doon sa mga pinakamahirap sa lahat.

Alam ko na kung kaya n'yo rin lang at hanggang maiiwasan, ayaw ninyong maging squatter. Pero alam ko rin na napakahirap na makakuha ng lupa lalo na ng bahay sa kalunsuran dahil sa kataasan ng presyo ng lupa dito. Kaya nauunawaan ko ang pangarap ng bawa't tao rito na magkaroon ng disente at tiyak na tahanan.

Alam niyo yong aking tatay, yong yumaong pangulong Diosdado Macapagal, maralitang taga-nayon siya lumaki dahil anak siya ng magsasaka na nagsasaka sa lupang hindi sila ang may-ari. Tapos nung siya ay nag-aral sa Maynila, dahil naging valedictorian sa probinsya nakapag-aral sa Maynila, natira sa kanyang mga kamag-anak doon sa bandang Dagupan, sa estero. Sa Maynila, mula sa maralitang taga-nayon, naging maralitang taga-lungsod dahil squatter din siya doon sa bandang Tondo. Kaya yong tatay ko, pinamana niya sa akin yong damdamin na pinapaliwanag niya yong kahirapan na nakatira sa mga slum area. Kaya alang-alang sa paalala sa kanya, ako'y naging senador, vice president. Sa magandang pangalang puhunang iniwan niya sa akin, ito ang aking maiaalay sa aking tatay: naramdaman na maging maralitang taga-nayon at maralitang taga-lungsod, na yong mga naranasan niya na kahirapan ay sana magkaroon ng kaginhawahan yong mga maralitang taga-lungsod sa bagong henerasyon.

At gaya ng sabi ko, gaya nang kayo nga ay hindi na kayo squatter sa inyong mga lugar, nawa'y dumating ang panahon na wala ng Pilipinong iskwater sa kanilang sariling lugar.

Ang pabahay at ang paglalagay ng mga karapatang pangangailangan nito, tulad ng livelihood projects, ay kaugnay sa ilang prinsipyong nagsisilbing gabay sa anti-poverty program ng aking administrasyon.

Unang-una, hindi sapat ang pag-unlad kung hindi nito mapapabuti ang kalagayan ng ating mga kababayan, lalung-lalo na ang nakararaming mahihirap. Sana, umangat nang tuluyan ang ating ekonomiya; nguni't dapat lamang na sa pag-angat ng ating ekonomiya, aangat din ang buhay ng ating mahihirap.

At dapat makinabang higit sa batas ang mga dukha. Ang sinabing "there must be a social bias in our economic development plan," yon ang sinabi ko doon sa medium-term plan; yon ang sinabi ko sa SONA sa Kongreso nung isang taon nung nandoon sila Chuck Mathay sa opening ng session. Ibig sabihin noon, ang ating pangunahing layunin ay kung paano makakatakas ang maralita sa kahirapan, at ito ay dapat isa-alang-alang sa alinmang programang pang-kaunlaran ng ating pamahalaan.

Importante rin ang People Power at people's participation sa paghahanap ng solusyon sa problema. Yun ay tawag na institutionalized consultation with the people. Tulad nang nasabi ko na, hindi kayo ang problema, kasama kayo sa paghahanap ng solusyon sa problema. Kagaya nung panukala ni ginoong Ely Perez doon sa Payatas, kayo ang nakahanap ng solusyon. Kaya sa loob ng anim na Linggo, lalabas na yung dokumento para sa proklamasyon ngayon.

Ang pabahay ay isa sa mga pangangailangan ng bawa't tao. Yon nga ang sabi rin ni Senator Francis Pangilinan sa kanyang pagbati kanina, at tulong-tulong nating tutugunan ito.

Kaya mga kaibigan, mga kapatid, mga kapwa Pilipino, salamat at patnubayan nawa tayo ng poong maykapal. Suportahan nnyo ang inyong administrasyon. Kailangan ko po kayo.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during her visit at Commonwealth, Quezon City. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230245/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7629&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the oathtaking ceremonies with Presidential Anti-Graft Corruption Chairman Dario Rama and Bureau of Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo Speech
of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines

During the oathtaking ceremonies with Presidential Anti-Graft Corruption Chairman Dario Rama and Bureau of Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo

[Delivered at the Reception Hall, Malacañang, March 18, 2002]

Good morning.

I would like to congratulate our new Presidential Anti-Graft Chairman, Dario Rama, and our new Bureau of Customs head, Antonio Bernardo, for accepting the challenge I have given them: be at the vanguard, together with Commissioner Rene Bañez, of our government's war against graft and corruption.

This fight against corruption is one of the principal thrusts of the government. Indeed, one might say, fate has thrust such a goal upon me.

My late father President Diosdado Macapagal was known as the incorruptible, and I must continue the work he started decades ago. Also, Edsa 2 which catapulted me into this office was all about People Power against corruption, a historic fight against graft in the highest levels of government. I cannot but follow this Edsa spirit, this courage and determination to fight corruption.

We do not have to go over statistics on how huge a problem corruption is for our country. Some say it has pervaded every nook and cranny of our bureaucracy, so much so that it eats up a big chunk of taxpayers' money and businessmen's expenses.

Many adult Filipinos have, sometime in their lives, an actual encounter with corruption. The tong for some real or fabricated traffic violation. The fee for the swift issuance of a document for an importation or a business permit. The 10 percent or even more paid for a government contract. Protection money for illegal numbers games.

Corruption is one of the major obstacles to reducing poverty, the overarching goal of my administration. It reduces government resources for alleviating the plight of the poor, and instead finances the luxuries of an unscrupulous rich. Because it is an additional cost to business, it not only weakens our companies' competitiveness. It even makes goods and services the poor need more expensive.

As soon as I took over, I launched this fight against corruption — starting with my family and top officials. I issued a proclamation prohibiting agencies of the government from doing business with my kin. I have no cronies or drinking buddies. Malacanang's transactions are transparent.

I instructed my entire government to formulate and institute anti-corruption mechanisms, among them the setting up of an open, internet-based procurement system for government supplies and the reduction of signatures in regulatory activities, which have been a fertile field for graft.

But this is only the start. I am instructing the new PAGC Chairman Rama to submit in a month's time the commission's concrete program to fight graft and corruption. The same instruction is for Commissioner Bernardo for the Bureau of Customs. Commissioner Bañez submitted his program long ago, and has been carrying it out, resulting in achieving internal revenue collections higher than target, as acknowledged by the international credit risk agencies that have upgraded the Philippines' rating. I congratulate him and urge him to continue his work, which, impressive as it is so far, still has additional potential for optimization.

We need not just studies, but actual results. Corrupt officials must be identified, then immediately suspended, and charges filed in court. I need results in a few months' time. Our people are even clamoring that we have to catch big fish.

Corruption is so clearly a problem that ordinary citizens and even students have organized NGO's to fight corruption. Representative of one such NGO — cleverly named “walang ku-corrupt” — are with us today. I applaud their efforts. It is not only civil servants who have the duty to fight corruption. It is the duty of all our citizens. The help they extend to our officials and agencies fighting corruption will be invaluable.

I want our government to be remembered as a successful anti-graft administration. And I expect the PACG to be at the vanguard of such a war on corruption, and the bureau of customs and the Bureau of Internal Revenue as shining models for victory against graft.

Our nation has tarried so long in taking on this bull of corruption by its horns. Let us clean up government once and for all. We owe this to the future of our children. Tungkulin natin ito sa dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the oathtaking ceremonies with Presidential Anti-Graft Corruption Chairman Dario Rama and Bureau of Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230237/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7628&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 64th Commencement Exercise of the Tiburcio Tangcinco Memorial Institute of Science and Technology

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 64th Commencement Exercise of the Tiburcio Tangcinco Memorial Institute of Science and Technology

[Delivered at the Calbayog City, Samar, March 20, 2002]

Maraming salamat Dr. Mona Valisno, my Presidential Assistant for Education.

Puwede na ho kayong umupo.

Una sa lahat, allow me to greet the Governor of province Samar, Governor Milagros Tan; your Congressman, who invited me to be in this occasion, Congressman Uy; the Mayor of Calbayog city, Mayor Sarmiento. And I would also like to say that with me today is Presidential Adviser on job creation Cito Lorenzo.

I am happy to be here once again in Calbayog City para mag-bati sa ating mga graduating students at mapag-usapan natin ang kinabukasan ninyo, kinabukasan ng Calbayog. Kinabukasan din ng buong Samar. At kaya sa ganito ay ako'y nasisiyahan na batiin kayong lahat pati na rin yung mga officials ng inyong paaralan under the leadership of Dr. Caillo, the President.

Sa ating ekonomiya, sa ating 21st century, alam ko na 'pag kayo ay nagga-graduate ang pangunahing kailangang malaman ninyo ay saan kaya yung mga trabaho ngayon. So yon ang ating kailangang gawin. At gusto ko lamang ipahayag sa inyo yung iba't-ibang mga ginagawa ng ating pamahalaan para sa Calbayog at saka sa Samar para sa ganoon ay yung trabaho ay mas dumadami dito sa inyong lugar.

Unang-una, gaya ng sabi ko noon sa State-of-the-Nation Address nung ako ay naging pangulo at nagsalita sa mga Congressmen — nandoon nga si Congress Uy narinig niya yung aking diskurso — sinabi ko na ang pangunahing hamon ng ating bansa ay ang masugpo ang problema ng kahirapan sa loob ng isang dekada. Itong mga problema ay nandoon nung araw pa, henerasyon pa nung ang aking tatay, the late president Diosdado Macapagal, ay naging pangulo yon din ang sinabi niya — pangunahing trabaho at kung papaano masugpo ang kahirapan.

Speaking of my father, although many of you don't know him anymore except maybe reading a page or two about him in the history books, gusto ko lamang malaman ninyo kung gaano kamahal ni Diosdado Macapagal ang Samar.

Yung inyong pantalan ng Calbayog yun ang nagbigay nun ay si Diosdado Macapagal nung siya ay pangulo. At nung siya ay tumakbo pang re-eleksyon kahit na yung kanyang kalaban ay husband ng isang waray ay nanalo pa rin siya dito sa Samar kaya mahal din ng Samar si Diosdado Macapagal.

At nung ako ay naging senador ay parang kagaya ng tatay ko minahal ko rin ang Samar at buong mga bayan ng Samar ay sinikap kong tulungan at dito yung inyong Niaga Park. Niaga ba ang pangalan noon? Yon ho ay nanggaling sa aking countrywide development fund.

Ngayon na ako ay pangulo di kailangan hindi lamang yung mga park-park ang tinutulong kung hindi papaano nga masugpo ang problema ng kahirapan.

Number one is jobs. Kaya sabi ko kay Secretary Cito Lorenzo — kaya kasama ko siya dahil siya ang adviser for jobs creation — sabi ko on the occasion of my visiting Calbayog for the graduation day of Tiburcio Tancinco Memorial Institute of Science and Technology, let us have a jobs fair para yung mga estudyanteng na ga-graduate ay malaman kung saan ang mga availability ng trabaho.

Kaya nandiyan sa labas may jobs fair; and I have here a partial report of the jobs fair. There are several participating recruitment agencies. Meron for overseas, may 7 overseas recruitment agencies na nandito ngayon nagpa-participate sa jobs fair at may dalawang local recruiting agencies — one is cal energy based in Ormoc city dahil sila yung gumagawa ng ating energy projects doon sa Tangonan geo-thermal, and then may job opening, at saka yung Shining Star Distributor. And as of 9 o' clock there were 558 registered applicants. Well, I'm not surprised kasi 500 ang ating graduation students ngayon ano. But I'm happy to let you know that here in the jobs fair there are 1,934 job vacancies.

So, I hope that there will be a matching between the job vacancies and what are the jobs you feel you can do, graduating students of this wonderful institution.

Let me say, let talk about the other job opportunities that we would like to have even outside of this jobs fair. Number one nga is the jobs for because the way to fight poverty in the 21st century is to promote of system of free enterprise where jobs are created by investments. Yon ang unang-una.

Pangalawa, we want to modernize agriculture, and by modernizing agriculture we would like to create one million jobs in agriculture. Dito sa Calbayog ang ating modernization program ay nandiyan sa ating palay because Calbayog has 1,000 irrigated hectares and we want to put hybrid rice there. The hybrid rice that I was able to get as assistance from china when i made my state visit to china. This 1,000 hectares is what we are preparing for under our hybrid rice program also under Cito Lorenzo, our presidential adviser for job creation, to include 1,000 farmers in the hybrid rice program. So ito ay magdadagdag ng trabaho sa 1,000 farmers.

Bago kami pumunta dito nagkaroon ng meeting si Secretary Cito Lorenzo at saka si Mayor Sarmiento para nga mapag-usapan yung mga kung papaano lalawak ang trabaho sa Calbayog.

Aside from the hybrid, pangalawang bahagi sa agricultural modernization ay yung isda, yung tinapa. Kasi sabi nga nila that ah, no meron fresh fish at merong tinapa. Speaking first about the fresh fish, what we are doing, what we are working for is to help Calbayog market your fish to supermarkets in metro manila for better prices.

Ngayon yung smoked fish, yung tinapa sabi ni mayor, Calbayog has the best tinapa in the whole country. But even if the product is good, alam n'yo to be able to market packaging is as important as the product itself, and you need the technology to improve the marketing, the packaging so that your delicious tinapa can be brought to other parts, to manila and other parts of the country or even for export. And so for this purpose, Secretary Lorenzo will coordinate with department of science and technology and the markets for your tinapa. Sana dumami ang trabaho ninyo doon.

Also for agricultural modernization there is coffee. Robusta has been tested and it is good for Calbayog. And you would like to do for Calbayog what we have been able to do for the cooperatives there in Sulu kasi sa Sulu malawak yung kanilang mga coffee at nabebenta nila. And doon nga may giyera dito wala di mas lalo madali dapat dito di ba. Here you have the land but you do not have the market. And financing is also needed. So Secretary Lorenzo will link up Calbayog with nestle and the Manila Coffee Retailers Association — kasama na doon yung mga ano nga pangalan nung, Starbucks, so that way hopefully Starbucks will be carrying Calbayog Robusta.

Also for agricultural modernization we have vegetables. Right now there is an on-going negotiation with makro — alam n'yo itong makro ano — for the supply of vegetables to the through the help of the Philippine Business for Social Progress. Siguro kilala n'yo yung Philippine Business for Social Progress dito Leyte although maybe not such in Calbayog. Kasi yung Philippine Business for Social Progress sila ay may malaking-malaking program sa Maqueda bay — yung Maqueda bay revival at saka yung pagtutulong doon sa mga ilang mga communities sa Maqueda bay to revive the water and also to give alternative livelihood to the fishermen of Maqueda bay ang gumagawa niyan yung PBSP. Kaya para dito sa inyo sa Calbayog ang tulong na ginagawa ninyo ay kung papaano makabenta ng vegetables ng Calbayog sa makro. So yon ang sana mangyaring yon, na one day nagsha-shopping ang mga kaibigan n'yo doon sa Metro Manila makikita nila vegetables from Calbayog from Samar.

But this still needs further investigation regarding logistics and product quality because vegetables are perishable so we have to overcome that perishability. But it is also good to know that an Australian company based in Melbourne has signified the intention of providing assistance in the production of vegetables. And the initial project will be that of young corn. So inaasahan natin na ang Calbayog ay puwede ring makinabang doon.

Isa pang produkto sa modernization of agriculture ay yung bananas. Ten tons of bananas for banana chips can be produced and Cito Lorenzo will be linking up your city with banana chip exporters because we have a good export industry for banana chips.

And finally in the modernization of agriculture, ang Samar ay probinsya ng niyog. I'm sure many of you who are graduating here come from coconut families. Kaya yan ang kinabukasan ng samar: kung papaano ma-modernize ang coconut industry — kung papaano yung mga coconut farmers 'pag mahina ang presyo ng coconut ay pwede magkaroon ng pandagdag na income. At ako'y nasisiyahan na meron na tayong kinabukasan dito dahil sa wakas after 15 years magagamit na natin yung proceeds ng coconut levy.

Ako ay nasisiyahan na ngayon ang gobyerno ang siyang nagpapatakbo ng united coconut planters bank. The united coconut planters bank is the manager through several layers of corporations of the coconut levy. While the principal of the coconut levy and its ownership is under litigation in the supreme and the Sandiganbayan ay meron na tayong kapangyarihan gamitin yung bunga. And so hopefully in a month or two we will be able to declare dividends. Well, we don't call them dividends, some of the funds available from the coconut levy and they will be used for the good of the coconut industry — for the good of the coconut farmers and therefore for the good of the province of Samar.

And in the meantime because your school is very important, we have to provide for the continuing education — the human resource development for your school. I am very happy that today as part of your graduation present I am bringing three million pesos from the president's social fund for the rehabilitation and renovation of this socio-cultural center. Kaya lang I would like to advise your president kung pwedeng one million lang ang gamitin dito tapos two million magamit sa ibang bagay kagaya halimbawa ng computers at saka broadband facilities — gamitin niya iyon sa ganoon yung ating mga estudyante dito sa napaka-importanteng paaralan ay handa sa 21st century, handa makakuha kaagad ng trabaho at handang ang probinsya ng samar ay umangat mula sa kahirapan sa wakas.

Once again, congressman Uy thank you very much for inviting me to this graduation as you invited me before to the city fiesta of Calbayog when you were a city mayor. And I would like to thank also Mayor Sarmiento for all the homework that was done before I could come here so that he can work on the plans to be done here, and my very efficient presidential assistant for Eastern Visayas Victor Domingo will help to follow-through on all of these projects for the beautiful city of Calbayog.

And so I shall end my congratulatory message to you today, and before the graduation diplomas are distributed to you I shall first distribute and give to your president the ... Check for your beautiful school.

Congratulations. Maupay nga aga ha iyo tanan.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 64th Commencement Exercise of the Tiburcio Tancinco Memorial Institute of Science and Technology. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230230/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7627&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the conference of Multinational Companies (The Wallace Business Forum)
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the conference of Multinational Companies(The Wallace Business Forum)

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, March 21, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Romulo.

Other Cabinet members and Philippines government officials; Mr. Peter Wallace; the movers and shakers of the business, financial and banking communities; excellencies of the diplomatic corps and heads of international organizations; Ladies and Gentlemen:

Thank you for coming to this gathering and welcome to Malacañang. Our meeting — and the fact that it is being held here in Malacañang — I believe, signifies continuing partnership and commitment to shared goals — stability, confidence, progress.

We have all gone through a difficult period not only here in the Philippines but all over the world. Just over a year ago our institutions in the Philippines of governance stood on the brink before the situation was rescued by a reassertion of People Power. Our economy was buffeted by domestic uncertainties, then by a global slowdown.

Two factors were particularly important in helping us weather the extended period of difficulty.

One was the constant flow of remittances from Filipino workers overseas. Those remittances helped to offset some amount of capital outflow from the economy and boost our international reserves to the robust situation in which it is now, despite our decline in exports.

The other was the steadfastness of investments in the country. Those of you in this room today, and the enterprises you represent, kept faith in The capacity of Filipinos to sort out things and to bring our country back to the path of progress. We appreciate your faith in the Philippines.

On our part we, the one-year old government, have done our best to manage the crisis, and to prepare to bring about better times ahead. We averted the recession that swept through most of our partner economies. We kept to our fiscal targets by enforcing discipline down the line. Our capital markets have rebounded, responding to the leadership and management this government has delivered.

I don't need to go through the details of what we have done in the past year because all of you have kept a very close watch on every indicator of our market's performance. And we all know, as Peter presented in his presentation, that there are formidable challenges ahead. We all know that we have to avoid pitfalls. We all know that there are parts of the economy that we have to strengthen. We all know that we must continue to do reforms required to build our competitiveness as the global economy undergoes revitalization.

But let me take this opportunity to assure you that we have our noses to the wheel, so to speak. Despite the characteristic noises generated in the political sphere, our economic managers are keeping a tight focus on the reforms that need to be undertaken.

In my State of the Nation message to Congress last year — and many of you listened to that quite intently — I said that to create jobs, we will attract investments. To attract investments, we will attend to macroeconomic measures and concerns.

Furthermore, I said that in addressing macro concerns, we will focus on long-term structural issues. We started with the reform of the power sector, and this year we are privatizing the state-owned power transmission company. Having passed the power sector reform law and its implementing rules and regulations after a ten-year wait, now we are turning to other basics like infrastructure.

In focusing on infrastructure, I also said in my State of the Nation Address last year that we want to harness the private sector via the build-operate-and-transfer expanded law. Our priorities include telecommunications facilities for high-speed productivity at low cost, roads to target tourist destinations especially in the Visayas and Northern Luzon, infrastructure for the modernization of agriculture especially in Mindanao and Southern Luzon, mass transport infrastructure for Metro Manila, and commuter and transport systems to disperse communities towards Subic-Clark and Calabarzon.

I appreciate the presentation made by Peter today and the advance comments made in various details of the surveys that have been made among the multinational companies.

It is my practice to listen carefully to specific points raised by businessmen just as I listen to specific points raised by the poor.

We respect the rule of law, just as you do in most of the countries represented here. Thus, with regard to mining and related issues, we respect the role of the supreme court on the suits involving the mining act and the indigenous peoples rights act. I place my complete faith in the Supreme Court to resolve these issues with wisdom and patriotism.

In the meantime, let me reiterate also what I said in my State of the Nation Address about our growth sectors of the 21st century.

I have said over and over again that what we are promoting are the fast-growing industries where high-value jobs are most plentiful. One of them is information and communications technology or ICT. We realize that it is our English literacy in addition to our aptitude and skills that give us a competitive edge in ICT.

To prepare our youth to continue the Philippine tradition of producing knowledge workers — as already indicated in the presentation of Peter — we are upgrading mathematics, science, and English teaching in basic education.

Also, I am asking the secretary of finance to study the feasibility of removing taxes and duties on computers to speed up people-access to information technology.

Aside from ICT we also have the competitive edge in tourism — as again mentioned in Peter's presentation — in the natural wonders of our country and the natural warmth of our people. And as I indicated earlier, we hope that the private sector infrastructure investors will supplement us in our efforts to provide roads to those wonders and the means to take the tourists there.

We have been developing a Philippine position for the new round of the World Trade Organization which will characterize the world of the 21st century in this first decade. The new round is billed as a development round. For the Philippines, mainstreaming trade into the wider development agenda of addressing poverty is a central consideration to reaching a country position. To help frame Philippine negotiating options, we are identifying products and services, first, where we are currently competitive; second, where we are not currently competitive but necessary conditions can be developed to make us competitive; third, where we are currently not competitive and cannot be competitive but must be given sufficient transition time for social and equity reasons; and, fourth, where we are not competitive at all and these products and services can be traded off for reciprocal concessions.

The development of the Philippine position looks, it's supposed to look at possible incentives to offset comparative disadvantages. I am asking our economic managers to work on this plan with greater urgency. NEDA, at this point, should be leading this study, though some of you have expressed discomfort over what is perceived as over centralization of decision-making At the NEDA. I believe, however, your discomfort is not about decision-making regarding the relative competitiveness of our economic sectors, rather I can perceive it is about the approval process for contracts worth more than 50 million pesos. If you recall, in a much-applauded announcement early in my presidency, I devolved the final authority for approving contracts worth 50 million pesos and above from the President to the NEDA board to remove a source of graft in Malacañang. Now lately, backed up by the cabinet, we are further devolving this approval process back to the cabinet secretaries except for specific contracts required by law to be approved at a level higher than the department head.

I hope this administrative order to be signed soon will address your concerns about over centralization of decision-making at the NEDA.

I appreciate your sincere concern for making our economy more efficient and our governance more responsive. I encourage you to have more regular meetings with especially the Secretary of Trade and Industry, who is the one in charge of making sure that your concerns are met — even regarding peace and order, he can be the one to put you together with our peace and order authorities so that you can do your specific planning for that concern though we have been doing it with some degree of success I believe, with the Filipino-Chinese community. These dialogues are designed for meaningful feedback from, and continuing interaction with the foreign chambers of commerce.

All our efforts at fostering economic growth will be meaningless unless we are able to bring immediate relief to the 40 percent of our population trapped in poverty. And I am committed to bring about the conditions that will enable our country to win the battle against poverty within the decade. Such conditions should be sustainable and rooted in broader popular access to productivity and value creation.

You, the business community, are the real experts in the creation of value. There can be no real headway gained in the war against poverty unless we improve our economy's capacity for value creation.

There are those who have tried to politicize poverty by trying to impart a subliminal message that the solution to poverty lies in government dole-outs and subsidies. We do not condone a culture of dependence which impairs popular empowerment, and destroys initiative and innovation.

And there are others who hope to convert our impoverished communities into breeding grounds for discontent, rage, dissidence, even terrorism. This is even a worse enemy because it leads to social disintegration.

The train of propaganda and violence that follows poverty is heard and seen all over the world. But in the coldness of reason, we know that poverty is mainly the consequence of limited access to productive opportunities. And only by expanding these opportunities may poverty be reduced, and finally defeated.

As I said in the beginning of this speech, investments play a key role in creating these opportunities. Enterprises, whether small or large, such as the ones you represent in this country, are valued allies in our battle against poverty. In this awareness, we are prepared to work hard in order to reduce the costs, as well as the risks, of doing business in this country.

We will continue to work on the peace and order situation. We will continue to push our good governance culture. We will continue to cut graft through shaving opportunities for it. We will continue to move people, resources and processes that promote good government. We will continue to clean up the regulatory mill by harnessing honest executives and lessening, if not removing all trigger points for stealing.

We resolve to remove graft as a source of uncertainty and unpredictability in investment decisions. We are determined to cut down the waste of scarce public resources and increase public investments.

In my view, good governance rests on three pillars. First, a sound moral foundation to guide our leadership at all levels. Second, a philosophy of transparency in all government actions. Third, an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

We must exorcise the culture of corruption that delays the maturation of democracy.

Improvements in the quality of corporate governance will not only help diminish the culture of corruption, it will also make our enterprises more efficient and reduce risks of failure, as we have seen in the case of Enron.

Multinational enterprises here in the Philippines are active in the formation of a responsible corporate governance culture in this country, guided by the benchmarks in managerial excellence set all over the world.

By and large, the companies you belong to set good examples of corporate citizenship. Represented in this room today are some of the most reliable corporate taxpayers in the country. And i must congratulate you all for that.

Beyond all these, however, I should like to call on you to expand your corporate social responsibility programs.

These programs will build stronger bridges between workplaces and communities. They will lead the way forward in improving our overall capacity to generate value.

Efficient enterprise does not only improve private profitability. It benefits the larger society. This is a message we must clearly deliver and deliver well if we are to develop a modern productive culture for our people because in the end, after all that's said and done, that modern productive culture is what will make your businesses continue to be profitable and become even more profitable and it is what will make our country finally win the battle against poverty with your participation.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the conference of Multinational Companies(The Wallace Business Forum). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230219/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7626&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 105th Founding Anniversary of the Philippine Army

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 105th Founding Anniversary of the Philippine Army

[Delivered at the Gen. Tirso Fajardo Bldg. (HPA Grandstand) Fort Bonifacio, Makati City, March 22, 2002]

Mayor Freddie Tinga and the other local government officials; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

Mga sundalo, binabati ko kayong lahat mga magigiting na kawal ng Philippine Army sa ating 105th Anniversary.

And I salute our awardees on this occasion. Our awardees are this year's models of the great Filipino soldier. Models of the best tradition of the army. You and the rest of our army do our nation proud for your courage, conscience and patriotism.

I also salute the 20 officers confirmed last week by the Commission on Appointments. Six of the generals and five of the colonels are from the army. I appointed you, i chose you to be generals and colonels because i believe in your qualities of military leadership. Congratulations to you all!

Today is also the 105th Anniversary of the Philippine Presidency. In the Tejeros convention where General Emilio Aguinaldo formally constituted the revolutionary army of the Philippines, he was also declared President of the Revolutionary Forces and the Republic. And today as Commander-in-Chief, I share with you the historical meaning and legacy of this moment.

Fourteen months ago, the AFP Chief of Staff, who came from the army, brought with him the whole Armed Forces of the Philippines to deal the final blow against plunder and the loss of moral ascendancy of a presidency that could no longer govern.

Then as now, the fortunes of the presidency and the army are closely interlinked. It is a bond that is forged in a common vision — the vision of a strong democratic nation. It is a good message for our people that you have for your anniversary theme, and I quote "At your service for freedom and democracy across the land." End quote.

This quote declares the army's undying recognition of the people as the masters of the command. It reaffirms the AFP's primary mission to preserve freedom, uphold democracy and protect our nation's sovereignty and integrity. Indeed in our nation's history we have seen that freedom and democracy enable development, while authoritarianism and dictatorship sabotage development and the battle against poverty.

To win the battle against poverty we must have security, both internal and external, for which the army plays a crucial role. You bear the brunt in the fight against insurgency, rebellion and terrorism. In this, you have displayed the highest degree of valor and gallantry in defense of our territory and sovereignty, constitution and flag. You have shown that the Philippines is the home of the great Filipino soldier.

The 227 officers and enlisted personnel wounded or killed in action against the Abu Sayaff from January 2001 up to this day are a painful testimony to your greatness and your willingness to pay the highest price for our national security.

But we do not want to sacrifice more of our brave men and women, and yet the war must be fought. This is our commitment to our people and to the international world. We will put an end to these terrorists soon with the assistance of our allies.

Balikatan is addressing part of the training and equipment needs to match your valor and stamina. Courage, we need not learn from others, you have a surfeit of that. But tactical and operational training are needed to transform courage into sure victory.

At this juncture, I would take up exercise Balikatan 2-1. In the beginning, there were understandably questions and apprehensions regarding the participation of Americans in exercise Balikatan. Even at that time where the issue of the American participation was being debated, I saw and was convinced of the need for American assistance to enhance the effectiveness of the armed forces of the Philippines in its fight against the terrorist in Basilan thus, I decided without much hesitation.

Our fight against the Abu Sayyaf in Basilan is beginning to bear fruit. Our troops are hot on the heels of terrorists aided by sophisticated intelligence gathering. Equally encouraging is the warm acceptance by the peace loving peoples of Basilan and Zamboanga of the American presence. They, who are the ones directly affected by the scourge of terrorism look forward with confidence to the day when this scourge is finally stamped out. And we shall win with superior moral and now superior physical resources.

We shall uphold before the world the finest tradition of soldiery that lives in the army and the other major services. We have to push forward with greater vigor and force until terrorism is destroyed and can no longer rise from the ashes.

And now that the Balikatan 2-1 is running in the middle of its course as in previous Balikatans under the visiting forces agreement, your superiors together with our counterparts in the united states armed forces are brainstorming on the curriculum of the next Balikatans.

Because the curriculum of every Balikatan is usually planned and agreed on a year in advance, the originally envisioned Bbalikatan exercises for 2002 were planned and agreed on long before September 11. And therefore, to my mind that original curriculum, that original content became less relevant after September 11. And i instructed that the content be modified to emphasize the skills needed in the international war against terrorism, the result was Balikatan 2-1.

We must continue re-examining the content of future Balikatans to make sure that they conform more and more to the fight against terrorism and increasingly to the fight against the twin of terrorism, the fight against poverty.

Now, I'm beginning to receive feelers from the people especially of Basilan regarding the possibility of enhancing community development assistance in the u.s. Participation in exercise Balikatan. This is in order to help them recover soon from the destruction and stagnation which terrorism has wrought on them for so long.

I am keeping an open mind on the matter. Offhand, I see no serious objection against the proposition for expanding the assistance to community development for after all our effort at restoring peace in Basilan is not the end. It is in fact just the beginning of a more arduous and sustained effort of bringing development to the province, of reducing poverty which as i have repeatedly said is the twin of terrorism.

I await the recommendation of my advisers but in the meantime on a matter of strategic policy let me say that i welcome the thought the next modification of the Balikatan curriculum should emphasize civic action. This is important to strengthen the physical and psychological parameters of the community caught in the vortex of combat operations.

In the war against terrorism, we cannot be half-hearted or reluctant to move forward, strategic decisiveness is important. To hesitate now could doom our chances of permanent success. A shallow victory will doom our nation to greater instability and drive our people to deeper poverty and despair.

But let me assure the army and the whole nation that no matter how many more Balikatans there will be after more than a dozen Balikatans there had been under the visiting forces agreement, as long as I am president, not only the constitution but also the self respect of the Filipino soldier will always serve as the parameters and guidelines of Balikatan.

The American soldiers shall not engage the enemy except in a clear-cut scenario of exercising the human right of self-defense. The American soldiers will train and will be trained under our mutual training template through our chain of command. Our battles have not been exclusively against armed aggressors. You, the great Filipino soldiers have also fought ignorance and poverty. As mentioned by General De los Reyes, you have built many useful things for development. You have built dams and electrical installations in conflict-ridden localities. For instance, in the Lanao del Sur-North Cotabato area alone you have constructed or rehabilitated more than a hundred school buildings during my administration. I congratulate the engineering brigades for building these schools in which soldiers sometimes even serve as temporary teachers.

There are 1,600 Barangays that still have no schools serving them and i would like to repeat my instruction that the engineering brigades should participate in the building of these schools. And I would like to clarify my instruction that because we don't have to pay extra salary to those who are building these schools, the project costs of these schools should be no more than 200,000 pesos per classroom in these Barangays.

In strengthening our political institutions peace remains our preferred option. I have suspended the peace panels but we have not given up on negotiations. The ceasefire agreement between the government and the MILF still holds. Back channels are being used to move the MILF peace process faster. Back channels are also open to the communist party of the Philippines based on sincerity and genuine national interest. I am pursuing the mode of back channeling to try to achieve final agreement at the soonest possible time.

Only yesterday, almost 500 members of the local communist movement, the ram and the MNLF were formally granted amnesty. This has brought the total number of amnesty grantees of various persuasions to 16,000 since 1986. At this point, about 2,600 more have manifested an interest in availing of our amnesty program.

But let not the olive branch we hold before the enemy be rebuffed with gunfire. Waging peace must not be perceived as cowardice. The army and all the AFP are there to guarantee the peace with sacrifice and valor. This is our commitment — to stand for peace without flinching, without letting down our guard.

When peace is gained, we secure it. We will not let the sacrifices of the AFP go to naught. Development shall succeed conflict. In Mindanao, the re-envigorated ARMM has prepared an integrated and realistic development plan that will fast-track the march of regional progress in Muslim Mindanao. Let us all support it.

Basilan has its own accelerated development plan to reduce poverty and deter the spread of terrorism. Balikatan plays a role in this campaign of peace and development which shall be pursued to its logical end. Those who fight for peace and progress should themselves savor the fruits of what they have fought for.

A year ago, on army day, i increased the gratuities of soldiers wounded or killed in action. I also signed a law exempting your allowances from taxes. Now, we must find a way to facilitate pension payments. But the increase of your basic pay is of greatest concern to me. Heroes must have decent salaries, thus, we are working hard for legislation to increase the pay of AFP personnel.

I have also asked the secretary of the budget to infuse the RSBS with a 200-million peso one-time contribution to serve as additional seed money for our soldiers' pensions. So that the day will come when increasingly the soldiers' pension can come from earnings of the pension funds. And when this day comes the three billion pesos that every year we allocate from the general appropriations act for pensions can be freed and can thus be used to finance the upgrading of our soldiers' salaries.

Housing is another concern. Less than 3,000 officers, enlisted men and beneficiaries of soldiers killed in action have been accommodated in off-base housing projects. Another 1,000 or so have availed of Pag-ibig benefits. About 2,000 units served as on-base homes.

These numbers are far too low for the 13,500 army personnel applying for off-base housing and the more than 3,000 waiting to be housed on-base.

HUDCC chairman Mike Defensor has provided the cabinet with a list of public housing projects from the past that had become white elephants because to build them was not commensurate to... To the cost to build them was not commensurate to what the lowly Filipino worker could afford. We are redoing the installment scheme to allow low income workers to pay for them and at the same time comply with COA requirements for floor prices.

I would like to ask Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes to make sure that the soldiers get first crack at these housing units already available even as we speak. I would also like him to oversee the complete staff work for proclaiming eleven identified portions of military reservation as soldiers' housing sites.

I am also directing the AFP housing board's actions on applications for the AFP OVAI in Fort Bonifacio. It was my late father, President Diosdado Macapagal, who set aside land in then Fort Mckinley for an AFP officers' village and an enlisted men's village. And as president I would like to be able to make sure that his work will not go uncompleted.

And you, dear soldiers carry on with your dedicated service to our people for freedom, for democracy, for Philippine progress.

Lagi ninyong isipin ang kahalagahan ng inyong misyon tungo sa kapayapaan ng ating bansa at sa kaunlaran ng ating mga kababayan. Lagi ninyong maala-ala sana na kailangan kayo ng kapwa nating pilipino, at kailangan kayo ng panguluhan, kailangan kayo ng ating bansa.

And so on this day after 105 years of a glorious tradition, dear soldiers as your commander-in-chief, may I give you a message of thanks from all the Filipino people. And from them to you, mabuhay ang sundalong Pilipino!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 105th Founding Anniversary of the Philippine Army. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230209/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7625&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during El Shaddai's Eucharistic Celebration

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During El Shaddai's Eucharistic Celebration

[Delivered at the AMVEL Business Park, Sucat Road, San Dionisio, Paranaque, March 24, 2002]

Maraming salamat. Thank you.

Maraming salamat, Brother Mike. Sister Belen; — pwede na hong maupo iyong may mga upuan — Secretary Mike Defensor na narito rin; Chairman ng Social Security System, Bernardino Aves; ating mga iba't ibang mga panauhin; my brothers and sisters na anak ni Yahweh El Shaddai.

Ang linggo ng mga palaspas ay nagsisilbing paalaala sa ating lahat ng pagsalubong ng bayang Herusalem kay Hesukristo, ang ating Panginoon at tagapagligtas.

Pinagdiriwang natin ito taun-taon sapagkat tulad din noon, naalala natin, isinasaalang-alang natin sa kanya magpasahanggang ngayon ang ating kaligtasan at ang pagtugon niya sa ating mga suliranin.

At talagang maraming suliranin ang ating bayan, humigit kumulang sa labing walong taon ang lumipas mula ng magsimula ang mabuting gawain ni Yahweh El Shaddai sa barangay Sto. Niño dito sa Paranaque sa pamumuno ng ating punong-lingkod, ang ating servant leader na si Bro. Mike Velarde. Noong panahong iyon — sabi ko nga, “Brother Mike, dito mo ba sinimula?” “hindi,” sabi niya. “banda riyan, malapit sa airport.” Lilang daang tao lamang ang dumalo noon sa lingguhang gawain na ngayo’y bumubunga na sa mga milyong-milyong kasapi sa iba’t ibang dako ng mundo.

At brothers and sisters, para sa akin malaking karangalan kasi 18 years ago, nagsimula itong napakagandang gawain na sinimulan ni Brother Mike on the 9th year... Nine years ago, ako ay nakasama na dito sa El Shaddai. Kaya ganoon katagal na ang ating pakikisama. Ngayon itong taong ito, inimbata ako ni Brother Mike na dumalo dito, makipag-misa, makipag-overnight sa Easter Sunday. Gaya nang ginagawa ko, every Easter Sunday dito kasama ninyo, unless ako ay out-of-town. Eh, itong taong ito, inimbata ho ako doon sa Limasawa this coming Sunday. Kasi iyong First mass in the Philippines was held on Easter Sunday in Limasawa four centuries ago. Kaya sabi ko kay Brother Mike, hindi ako makakapunta sa Easter Sunday dahil nangako naman ako sa ating mga kapatid sa Limasawa na makikisimba ako doon ng Easter Sunday. “pwede ba, Brother Mike, kahit na hindi naman overnight iyong usual Palm Sunday Mass, doon na lang ako pupunta sa anticipated mass n’yo on the Saturday night before Palm Sunday?” Eh, alam naman natin in the Lord there are no coincidences. Talagang gusto ng Lord na itong gabi, itong araw na ito ako dadalo, dahil itong araw na ito ang paglipat natin dito sa lugar na ito. At ang lipat ay nataon sa Linggo ng mga palaspas at alam ko, palagay ko na ito ay upang salubugin natin ang pagbalik ng mabuting gawain ni El Shaddai dito sa Paranaque.

Ang ginagawang “Palm Sunday Family Appointment with El Shaddai Walk of Faith, Love and Unity” ay isang katibayan ng ating paniniwala sa kapangyarihan ng pananalig, pag-ibig at pagkakaisa.

At ako po ay hindi ho ako nawawalaan ng pananalig at pananampalataya na gaya ng sabi ng kanta natin pagkatapos ng communion: let them see Christ in me. Ako ay hindi nawawala ng pananalig na kayo, ako, tayo isa’t isa, we will see Christ in one another.

Nananalig tayo bilang mga anak ng Diyos na ang bawat isa sa atin ay may layunin na dapat gampanan para sa kaluwalhatian niya at ng kanyang kaharian. Nananalig din tayo bilang mga pilipino na may mabuti at magandang tadhanang inilaan ang diyos para sa ating bansa at mga kababayan. At gaya rin ng kanta natin pagkatapos ng communion: Lord you are faithful. Iyon ho ay hindi nawawala sa aking paniniwala.

Mga kababayan, nananalangin tayo bilang mga anak ng Diyos at bilang mga Pilipino na mag-ibigan at magkaisa na tayong lahat upang maisulong natin ang ating bansa tungo sa kaunlaran, kapayapaan at kadakilaan.

Ngayong umaga, tulad ng lagi, bilang inyong kapatid kay Yahweh El Shaddai at kaisa for the last 19 years sa gawaing ito, binabati ko kayong lahat, si Brother Mike, si Sister Belen, lahat ng mga manggagawa sa ubasang ito — isang masaya, maluwalhati at mahiwagang Linggo ng mga palaspas.

Lagi ko po sinasama kayong lahat sa aking mga panalangin, at lagi kayong nasa puso at isipan ko sa pamamahala ng ating bansa. Naway pagpalain tayong lahat ni Yahweh El Shaddai.

Kanina po, nung ako ay nagdarasal pagkatapos ng communion at kinakanta natin yung let them see Christ in me, sabi ko, “Lord, sino iyong them?” Una sa lahat siyempre ang ating mga kapatid dito sa gawain. Tapos sabi ko, “Lord, meron pa ba?” Sabi niya, “meron,” kasi pinaalala niya sa akin, sa aking pagninilay na pag ako’y nagpupunta sa iba’t ibang mga urban poor communities marami akong nakikitang mga out-of- school youth, mga kabataang hindi nakakapag-aral. At itong mga kabataang hindi nakakapag-aral ay masyadong naaaliw sa mga bawal na droga. Kaya ang umabot sa akin sa aking pagninilaw ay kung gusto natin makita nitong mga out-of- school youth ang mukha ni Kristo ay kailangan ay bigyan natin sila ng ibang paraan sa buhay para hindi ang bawal na gamot ang maglilibang sa kanila.

Meron hong gawain ang pamahalaan ng inyong lingkod, ating pamahalaan mula noong last summer na ginawa in a small way sa ating out-of-school youth. Nung tatay ko, si Diosdado Macapagal ay Pangulo ng Pilipinas, gumawa siya ng programa na tinatawag nilang emergency employment. In fact, iyong emergency employment ng tatay ko nakapagtayo ng mga maraming kalsada kagaya nung kalsada sa... Na lumiligid sa Sampaloc lake, sa San Pablo City, o iyong kalsada na doon sa bundok mula sa San Carlos City hanggang ngayon sa Bacolod City. Noong araw maliliit na kalsada, ngayon sementadong mga kalsada. Ngunit sa ngayong mga panahon, marami tayong ibang mga pinaggagastusan. Housing, halimbawa at iba pang mga kailangan ng ating mga mamamayan. Murang gamot na inaangkat natin para hindi kayo — lalo na iyong mga mahihirap ay hindi mahal ang bibilhin — kung bibilhin ang gamot sa mga government hospitals. Kaya meron konti na lang ang naiiwan para sa sinasabing emergency employment.

Ngunit ang umabot sa aking mensahe, mula kay Kristo na pinagdidiriwang natin ang simula ng kanyang sakripisyo nung Palm Sunday, ay kung gusto natin na makita ng ating out-of- school youth ang mukha ni Kristo dapat palawakin iyong emergency employment program para sa ating out-of- school youth sa urban poor communities.

Ito po ang aking balak gawi, gawing mas malawak itong program itong summer na magsisimula. At ang hinihingi ko po sa inyo ay panalangin po ninyo na ito po ay magtatagumpay sa ganoon ang napakaraming kabataan na parang nawawala sa landas dahil naaaliw at natutukso ng bawal na gamot ay makakabalik muli sa piling ng ating mahal na Hesukristo.

Maraming salamat at advance Happy Easter sa inyong lahat!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Message during El Shaddai’s Eucharistic Celebration. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230134/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7624&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Philippine Military Academy (PMA) “Banyuhay” Class of 2002
Commencement Exercises Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Philippine Military Academy (PMA) “Banyuhay” Class of 2002 Commencement Exercises

[Delivered at the Fajardo Grandstand, Ford Del Pilar, Baguio City, March 24, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Reyes for your very kind introduction.

Troop commander give ‘Tikas Pahinga.’

Senator Rodolfo Biazon, former PMA Superintendent; General Diomedio Villanueva; Major General Rufo de Veyra and the other officials of the Philippine Military Academy; Chairman Carlos Agustin and the other alumni of PMA; major service commanders; Congressman Maurice Domogan and Mayor Bernardo Vergara and the other officials of Baguio; Governor Raul Molintas and the other officials of Benguet; the other officers of the Armed Forces of the Philippines; members of the diplomatic corps; other Presidential Appointees who are here; distinguished guests; Ladies and Gentlemen:

Isang mainit na pagbati muli ang aking pinapa-abot ngayon naman sa isang daan at tatlumpu’t-walong kasapi ng class ‘Banyuhay’ sa inyong pagtatapos ngayon. At buong lugod ko kayong tinatanggap nang pormal sa hukbong Sandatahan ng Pilipinas. Binabati ko rin ang inyong mga pamilya na napaka-enthusiastic kanina sa pag-palakpak sa inyo dahil sila ang nagsikap upang maitaguyod ang pag-aaral ninyo dito sa napakagaling na eskwelahan ang Philippine Military Academy.

Yung pangalan ng inyong klase ay kaiba-iba. Kasi hindi karaniwang salita sa Tagalog. Your class name ‘Banyuhay’ comes from bagong anyo ng buhay, which means therefore a new form of life — it heralds your coming into the new century.

There are many dimensions of change that we must face in this new century. There is a change in the substance and style of governance under my leadership. There is a change in the character of the PMA over the last decade. For instance, now PMA has female cadets and graduates. PMA has produced a female topnotcher, and this year PMA produced a female Tarzan of the class. And this year PMA has produced a new method of privilege for the goat. And for his very unusual expression of his privilege I am going I understand he has been dying to go to the Southernmost part of the Philippines. So I’m asking General Villanueva to send him immediately to Lantawan in Basilan.

Many changes indeed, and speaking of Lantawan, speaking of Basilan, there is also a change in the way we are fighting war. There is a change in the way we are fighting poverty. There is a change in the way we are conducting war and waging the peace. All these changes are sweeping the political, social and economic landscape. In all these, the Filipino soldier is involved, both as participant and vanguard.

You must be involved in good governance, in propagating and exemplifying the values of honesty, duty and conscience throughout the entire breadth of the military and civil service.

Your must lead in the fight against poverty, by tempering the martial role of the soldier with the will and compassion to fight ignorance, disease and social injustice.

You must be warriors and peacemakers, steely fighters in meeting enemy fire, and at the same time agents of national reconciliation and solidarity in waging a just and honorable peace with former foes.

These myriad roles play a profound challenge upon the intellectual, moral and spiritual resources of the Filipino soldier.

I am confident, however, that the academy has prepared you well for these roles. I have faith in your versatility and courage to fight and win the battles in the horizon, whether these be in the field of fire or in the building of our nation.

There is more to the Filipino soldier's role in this century especially after September 11 that we must all deeply understand. It is the reality that in war and in peace, we are faced with the growing challenge of fighting alongside international allies.

The war against terrorism and poverty is the most vivid example of this. We see this in Basilan, and we must see that it is much, much more than a shooting war. It is a joining of soldiers for peace, for rebuilding communities, for strengthening the bridges of understanding and common ideals.

The war against terrorism has molded the world's soldiery into one. Today, the name of the game is multilateral coalitions.

As the U.S. mops up the Al Qaeda in Afghanistan, British and European forces have moved in for peacekeeping. And what used to be a lonely fight for us in Southern Philippines became a global fight since September 11, and now we are joined by American forces in training and civic action. We are also joined by Malaysian and Indonesian intelligence in combating terrorism and other transnational crimes in our common seas.

The byword today is inter-operability. This is necessary because of the transient and rapidly shifting threat of terrorism. Terrorism is a transnational threat that needs transnational counteraction. As terrorism moves from place to place, we must move to consolidate with our allies. This is the only way we can achieve meaningful if not permanent victory.

You, the graduates of class 2002, are now thrust into this new paradigm of war, and I trust that you will carry out your mission accordingly. Doctrines have to be changed and refined in this new millennium. The spirit and substance of operational manuals have to be revised in line with the transnational imperatives of conflict management and development.

I have already instructed the armed forces to work on this. We must have a military that can shake off the conservative values of the past and be more forward-looking, proactive and infused with a global outlook.

This global involvement and outlook does not mean a diminution of sovereignty or constitutional integrity. The armed forces is a constitutional instrument. It defends democracy and protects human rights. It holds unconditional allegiance to civilian authority and to the unity of command. It adheres to a code of discipline and absolute fealty to the constitution.

There are those who sweepingly accuse that our joint military training exercises in Basilan have been occasioned by violations of human rights.

This sweeping accusation is an insult to our armed forces and our allies, it is an insult to our people. Our soldiers have sacrificed so much by holding their fire to keep civilians from harm's way. They had been ambushed while doing civic action work, while bringing food and medicine to hapless communities. They had been shot in the middle of humanitarian missions.

The worst violator of human rights in the world is not soldiers, it is terrorism. The enemy is not our Filipino soldiers, the enemy is terrorism. In the fight against terrorism, more than 200 officers and enlisted personnel had been wounded or killed in action since January 2001. And I consider it the height of misrepresentation for anyone to characterize the great Filipino soldier as a violator of human rights when so many of our soldiers have made the supreme sacrifice of death to protect our people from terrorism.

Looking ahead, the 21st century is a new world dominated, not just by this war against terrorism but even beyond that, even when we have been able to win the battle against terrorism this new world will be dominated by technology and the knowledge economy. The internet has irreversibly changed the way we do business, work, think, live and play. Advances in I.C.T. have unleashed forces that create both perils and opportunities for us.

To tap the opportunities, we must uphold our economic philosophy of transparency and free enterprise to be globally competitive. To avoid the perils we must extend our opportunities to the rural countryside through a socially equitable modernized agricultural sector. And we must give a social bias for the disadvantaged to balance our economic development.

And to protect the opportunities and reduce the security hazards, we shall rely on the armed forces and our police forces to remain steadfast in your mission.

In the past few years, PMayers have become I.C.T.-ready. Your curriculum already incorporates I.C.T. courses. It is my policy to encourage schools to tap information and communications technology to prepare students, including and especially PMayers, for the future. You must be always keeping a broad perspective of the nation and the world.

But even as we embrace myriad changes and complexities of modern life, our aspirations as a nation are steadfast — peace and justice, freedom and progress. Even as we enter a millennium of change, the soldier's mission is unchanged — it is the defense of our flag, our constitution and everything that we, as one nation hold dear. Every PMayer is expected to be true to this creed.

“Integrity, Courage and Loyalty” — these are what you have pledged to follow. They have been instilled in your minds and hearts from the very first day in the academy. These words have moved PMayers to win countless battles and make the supreme sacrifice when necessary. These words inspired our soldiers to remove dictatorial rule in 1986, and then again to turn away from plunderous leadership in 2001.

“Integrity, Courage and Loyalty” — these words have made the academy truly a cradle of heroes deserving of the monument that was unveiled today.

We know of countless examples of PMayers who sacrificed treasure and honor in the face of battle, fierce in combat but gentle in peace. I trust that you, the graduates of batch 2002, will be like these heroes before you. These heroes are the treasures of our nation.

The willingness to fight for what is right, the discipline to stay on course and the steel to overcome the enemy, the will to wage peace all take root from the ability to discern good from evil.

Ultimately, this is what the academy teaches every PMayer. This is what it has taught for the last 104 years. For the PMA is not merely a school for weaponry and military strategy, it is a bedrock of character and values. It is a bastion of human excellence, a symbol of Filipino heroism in all its forms. A covenant to liberty and a training ground for the great Filipino soldier.

I have no doubts about class Banyuhay's determination to serve. As I said earlier, the class goat who hails from the north wants to see action in our southernmost provinces. And the only female member of the top ten, who is from Baliwag, from Bulacan has a muslim mother and desires to serve her fellow Muslims. Such expressions of human courage and preparedness are heartwarming, heartwarming to our people.

All of you are expected to show utmost commitment in performing your tasks in support of our strategy for peace and progress — security, socio-economic development and political stability through dialogue and consensus.

I have said on countless occasions that poverty is our worst enemy. The fight against terrorists is also a fight against poverty, so is the fight against injustice and ignorance. So is our campaign for high moral standards in society, and our quest for good governance. These are weapons to defeat poverty.

It is now class Banyuhay's turn to show that you can live up to the exacting legacy that past generations of PMayers have built.

You had been given a great gift, a chance to work for peace and justice, freedom and development. I trust that you will use it well. That your will will be that you will not simply walk in the shadow of heroes. But instead that you will live to be heroes yourselves.

My warmest congratulations to everyone who received awards of distinction today. We especially expect you to gather more awards in the future. And to all the members of class Banyuhay my best wishes. And let me say that the battlefield awaits you. But more important, the people you must serve await you.

But before I send you to your battlefield, where for our goat it will be Lantawan in Basilan. Actually that's not a reward, actually that's punishment for giving us a surprise. That surprised even your superintendent and the secretary of national defense. So except for the goat, I have a message for everyone else, and that is, in keeping with tradition, in observance of the time honored tradition of the Philippine Military Academy, and on the occasion of my official visit to the academy I, Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, President of the Republic of the Philippines and Commander-in-Chief Armed Forces of the Philippines hereby pardon all outstanding punishment of the cadet corps as of this day.

Let me sign this except for the fellow we are sending to Lantawan immediately.

Class of 2002, we thank you for choosing to become professional soldiers. Go to your battlefields. Go also to your civic action. Go to your fight against poverty. Go and serve the people.

Congratulations, good luck and thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Philippine Military Academy (PMA) "Banyuhay" Class of 2002 Commencement Exercises. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230159/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7623&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Opening Program of the 4th Mindanao Food Congress

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Opening Program of the 4th Mindanao Food Congress

[Delivered at the Grand Caprice, Limketkai Center Cagayan de Oro City, Misamis Oriental, April 3, 2002]

Daghang salamat sa ating Secretary of Agriculture nga kaamo sab magbinisaya kay ang iyang asawa nag-gikan sa Bohol, Secretary Leony Montemayor.

And I would like to thank Mayor Emano for his generous words. Salamat mayor na sa wakas aking-akin na ikaw. Atong halangdon governor, Governor Calingin, Governor sa Misamis Oriental ug governor ...; Ang aton nga regional chairman, RDC for region 10, Governor Ocampos; ang mayor gikan sa akong lunsod, Mayor Franklin Quijano sa Iligan; ug ang akong congressman sa akong distrito dito sa Lanao del Norte, Abdullah Dimaporo; Congressman Nereus Acosta, Son of Bukidnon; Monsignor Monsanto, who was with us during the hard times when Dongkoy was not yet aking-akin. Joji, congratulations once again for hosting this. And I would like to acknowledge the members of the Cabinet who are here with us aside from Leony Montemayor; Son of Bukidnon, of region 10, Cito Lorenzo; Presidential Adviser for Modernization of Agriculture, Lito Sarmiento, also Son of Mindanao; Jess Dureza ang akong Presidential Assistant for Mindanao; and the leaders of this Congress, Mr. Andot of the Chamber of Agriculture, Food and Fisheries Industry of Northern Mindanao; Atty. Montalban of the cattle raisers, who when I was a new Senator hosted me in his lovely ranch in the backyard of Bukidnon; kaninyong tanan mga kaigsuonan, maayong buntag.

Gusto ko unta magbinisaya sa akong diskurso murag sa akong diskurso niaging tuig sa Butuan sa Mindanao Congress. Apan ingon ug atong mga organizers karon naa diyes porsiyento nga nagikan sa Manila ug naa pa kita ang atong mga VIP guests from other countries busa ingon nila na importante mu-ingles ako sa akong diskurso. And so with your indulgence — I feel very awkward because everytime I come to Mindanao my mind goes to thinking in binisaya. But here I will speak in english for the benefit of our Manila-based visitors, our foreign VIP guests and also for the national audience that is listening to what I will have to say about agricultural and food policy.

First of all, thank you very much for inviting me here once again. This is my second meeting for the Mindanao Food Congress, and in fact, Joji said that she was afraid I wouldn't be able to make it. At first, I wasn't going to be able to make it, but thank goodness re-arrangements were done because this is a very important meeting. Because as Monsignor Monsanto said in his prayer, getting enough food is a day-to-day challenge to most Filipino families.

I would like to acknowledge also Mr. Jeff Nash, the Deputy Chief of the growth with equity in Mindanao project. And he is the reason why we are speaking in English. But aside from USAid.

Actually, our administration has been spending more public resources than any previous administration to stabilize the food supply. 26 billion pesos — right, Leony? — went to agricultural modernization in the year 2001 — unprecedented in the entire history of the Philippines. And we are doing this because we want to stabilize food supply especially of staples, especially of rice. And we are doing this in a setting where we are affected year by year by the vagaries of the global market. And to me, agriculture policy actually should be more of a social policy rather than economic policy. I will confess, if I'm spending 26 billion pesos on agricultural modernization, it is not so much because of food security because we can buy food from anywhere in the world, it is because as our farmers and our fisherfolk suffer from price instabilities and other sources of uncompetitiveness then our economy and social fabric also suffer.

But your Congress does not simply underscore the importance of food. It also underscores the importance of Mindanao in the national food agenda. Mindanao is the food basket of our country, producing 40 percent of our food supply. Our focus is here on food and we will not be distracted.

But Mindanao could assume a much, much larger role in food supply if it were not for problems of law and order. Our land of promise sadly is also a land of conflict. And we must always strive for peace so that the promise will be fulfilled.

With peace, more farms can be tilled, more bounties from the sea can be harvested, more crops can be reaped and sold. Then we can talk about the dream of having food on every table for every Filipino family. I therefore wish to set the keynote of this congress by bearing a message of peace, stability and progress amid the diversity and vibrance of this region.

This message carries a reaffirmation to finish off the threat of terrorism in Basilan and elsewhere. To uphold the law against criminality and do enforce the necessary measures to enable enterprise, productivity and livelihood.

I also reaffirm my commitment to peace, development and inter-faith solidarity. And I call on all armed groups in the region to join me in a quest of peace that is just, honorable and enduring. We need peace to uplift our people and empower our communities. We need peace for progress. We need peace to fight poverty and destitution.

I addressed your congress last year, just one month after I assumed the presidency. In that event, I laid before you some of the programs we intended to undertake and are now undertaking to realize our dream of making Mindanao the country's food basket.

One of these programs — in fact, the main program for agriculture — is agriculture and fisheries modernization founded on social equity. This program as I said with 26 billion pesos spent for it last year is now in full swing not only in Mindanao but all over the country.

The spirit of achievement is high. One proof of this is the completion under the leadership of Secretary Montemayor and the Son of Cagayan de Oro, Jess Paras, the head of NIA — one of the achievements is the completion of Mal-mar dam, which after more than a decade of waiting and waiting was finally inaugurated last September 22 and is now irrigating more than 5,000 hectares.

In Mindanao, agriculture and fisheries modernization takes the form of irrigation projects like the one of Mal-mar and the smaller ones as well, farm-to-market roads and post-harvest facilities, as well as capability building. A flagship program in our agricultural modernization is the hybrid rice program, a result of my state visit to China last year. Jobs creation Secretary Cito Lorenzo, Son of region 10, is introducing the very productive Chinese hybrid to 50,000 hectares this April and May. And the 50,000 hectares all over the country that will be exposed now to this hybrid 37,000 hectares will be planted in Mindanao — 37,000 out of 50,000. 37,000 Mindanao farmers in irrigated land are being trained, seeds and inputs are being prepared for them, soils will be analyzed for them, and they will get 10,000 pesos per hectare financing from the Landbank thru Quedancor. This means a total of 370 million pesos to be lent to Mindanao farmers this April and May.

And from the agriculture modernization budget, 450 million pesos of the 26 billion pesos is being put into this program.

Hybrid farmers who started last season — they were the pilot — produced 7.5 to 9.3 metric tons of palay per hectare compared to the old 3.5 to 4.3 metric tons produced when they were not yet using the hybrid seed. And with this increase in their hybrid they earned 35,000 pesos to 43,000 pesos profit, net profit per hectare at 9 pesos and 50 centavos per kilogram of palay per 115-day crop. Indeed, this will revolutionize agriculture in our country.

And this is a concrete example of agricultural modernization in action, moving with energy under — may I brag a little — the Arroyo administration.

And this should serve as a response also to your resolution to improve utilization of agricultural inputs and to access competitively-priced farm inputs. The hybrid rice program addresses soil analysis. The soil will be analyzed so just the right amount of fertilizer and curative agents will be used, therefore, nothing will be wasted. Because if you don't have soil analysis you might put more fertilizer than needed and the inputs becomes more expensive than needed. And therefore, let this serve as an example to foster more efficient use of agricultural inputs to other commodity sectors.

This program of the hybrid should also serve as a response to your resolution to enhance the credit accessibility of the farmers in Mindanao. The hybrid rice financing program took 22 days from conception to execution. The credit program, as I said earlier, will originate from the land bank through Quedancor. And as I said earlier, the money will be made available to accredited farmer-borrowers this month and next month.

How? Farmers are organized into groups up to 15, where leaders will be chosen and incentivized to collect the money loaned to them.

Now, for the fisheries. Under the fisheries modernization program, there is also 250 million pesos available to fisherfolk for the handline vessel financing at 500,000 pesos per. And the first 50 million pesos is readily drawable today.

For coffee, the Jolo coffee project is an example in Sulu, it leveraged the commitments for the local government internal revenue allotment to cooperative coffee ventures to supply Nestle.

Earlier, Mayor Emano said, he was so surprised because he has not been able to help me in the past election especially this last one for my candidates lost, what? 12 to 1, awful. But I am not a vindictive person. And the Jolo example is another one. Because the project is in the town of Parang where the mayor is Mayor Loong and I had asked his brother Ben Loong not to run for regional vice governor against my candidate Governor Mutilan of Lanao del Sur. But — and he was in the middle of this loan — he still defied me. He still ran, anyway. The loan still continued anyway — 38 million pesos. So, therefore, what is more important is not politics. What is more important is agricultural modernization.

Politics, modernization rather than politics, and I say the same for the coconut industry. For coconut, I am happy to point out that the government is now in control of the United Coconut Planters Bank. This bank through several layers of corporations is the manager of the Coconut Levy Fund. And while the principal of the fund is still under litigation, this bank through those layers of corporations may now manage the fruits of the fund soon and we will be able to use this fund soon for the coconut industry. And I would like to thank the church, especially a great Archbishop from Mindanao, Archbishop Capalla of Davao, for helping this come about. And as a result of his work I have instructed that the first fruits of the coconut levy fund should go to microfinancing for our coconut farmers.

At the same time, I would like to appeal to private banks, and I am hereby instructing the government financial institutions to accelerate restructuring for the individual farmers and food corporations who now want to renew accessing credit especially now that interest rates are at their historic lows.

Last night, one of the senators told me he must congratulate the Central Bank because the interest rate is at its lowest in history. I said, "wait a minute. Yes, we congratulate the Central Bank but the Central Bank could not have provided such low interest rates alone because interest rates are market-determined." The reason why interest rates went that low is because our government controlled our budget deficit and therefore controlled and reduced our borrowing from the domestic market. Because if we had let our deficit go out of control or gone beyond the ceiling then we would have had to borrow — competed with you, the businessmen — and the interest rate would have gone up.

Now, in response to your resolution to expand the utilization of advances in science and technology through an effective extension program, the hybrid rice project will utilize extension work. Also, under the leadership of Secretary Montemayor the guidelines for genetically-modified organisms were approved in principle at the cabinet level yesterday.

Now, in the cattle sector. I would like to address the friends and associates of my host in that wonderful overnight stay I had in Quezon, Bukidnon, 1992. Ten years ago.

In the cattle sector, we need to replenish the cattle population and help nurture the growth of the beef sector. Thus, I instructed very early this year — yes, last January when I went to Masbate. And as a result of my consultation with the Masbate Cattle Industry — I instructed the secretary of DENR, Sonny Alvarez and Secretary of DAR, Secretary Braganza to decrease the pasture lease rate of cattle from 250 pesos per hectare — where the last supposed pro-poor administration made it — to 40 pesos per hectare in our administration. Also, to decrease the cattle to hectare-ratio from one-is-to-one to one-is-to-six. And this policy is now in place retroactive to January 1st 2002.

When it was announced that I was coming to Cagayan de Oro, my friends from Cagayan de Oro — I had a few of them. Very few of them I realized in the last elections. But now that Dongkoy is with me, I have many more friends again. Anyway, my few friends from Cagayan de Oro heard on CDO radio that the newscasters were wondering what pasalubong am I bringing when I come. Well, Dongkoy already told this a lot of them, and I have just mentioned my pasalubong for the farmers and cattle raisers and fishermen of Mindanao, in general. But for Cagayan de Oro, in particular — well, under my guidance Land bank lent 287 million pesos for Bulua barangay for the construction of the west bound integrated jeepney and bus terminal market.

And I would like to congratulate Mayor Dongkoy for his foresight in proposing this project, because you're gonna be a very busy transient place when all of these roads in Mindanao are finished. But I'd like to congratulate him for finishing it in record time, and people who've seen it said the quality is indeed impressive. There is also, as mentioned by Dongkoy, in the pipeline a Land Bank financing for 400 million pesos for the construction of the Cagayan de Oro diversion road and cargo bridge. Also, as Dongkoy mentioned, the 140 million-peso Phividec International Container Port is now ongoing — dollar — is ongoing. Started construction last February, two weeks ago. The contract was awarded last February, it will be operational in 2004. Not to mention the 100 million of the Cagayan de Oro port project. So this will be major gateways to improve an efficient movement of inbound and outbound cargo including the food sector. And so I am not surprised that Mayor Emano said that no administration before mine has ever provided such a big pasalubong to the city of Cagayan de Oro.

Well, I talked about Mayor Emano, who said he wasn't able to help in the last election. And I talked about Mayor Loong, who also did not help in the last election. Well, Ben Loong lost, so that's already his... Enough punishment but I would like to say though — before anybody thinks that they can just defy me and then get all the support they need — that we do things on the basis of merit. And sa tinuod naga maayo ako kay Mayor Emano niadtong piliay tungod kay dugay na na kauban kami sa tabang diri sa Misamis Oriental. Niadto pa ako usa pa ka Undersecretary sa Trade and Industry kauban ni Nimfa Albania, ang atong Regional Director diri niadtong plano sa DTI masugdan gihapon ang Phividec Industrial Estate. Ingon ni then Governor Emano nga nano, how can he allow that when that development is anti-people. Because everytime a project is set up, the people who are living there are moved from one place to another and they were being herded around like cattle. Sa ako nahimo undersecretary, ni istorya mi and therefore I also said, in the national government, we cannot proceed with the development of the industrial estate unless we have a permanent resettlement site for the people who are being dislocated. So, dongkoy ug ako nahimo higala. Ug sa ako nahimo senador ako ang nahimo iyang guest of honor sa katapusan sa inauguration sa permanent relocation site sa mga dislocated didto sa Phividec busa niaging piliay gyud. You can understand ngano ako nagamahay kan Mayor Rmano. apan karon, ok dili na niya nakalimtan ang among panumpa.

Anyway, all of these infrastructure are also... Should also serve as response to your resolution urging the government to accelerate infrastructure development in Mindanao.

And aside from what I mentioned these are just prototypes of our increased absorptive capacity. With increased absorptive capacity by the government of the credits and grants coming from official development assistance and improved tracking of projects, we will get better at infrastructure delivery. The military corps of engineers is helping. They are constructing slow-moving infrastructure projects in difficult areas like Basilan. I would like to encourage private sector participation here in the form of build-operate-and-transfer infrastructure projects.

Related also to your congress resolution to transform the sea transport industry and improve the agricultural marketing and logistics system in mindanao, I am instructing the Philippine Ports Authority and Leony Montemayor to come up with a program on logistics cost reduction steps which will have an impact on the logistics cost to the market. I understand that PPA manager Al Cusi has already been talking to Ito Carlos of the Mindanao Business Community but so far impasse — no result, no solution. And so I need to give a deadline. So I'd like to ask Leony to come in and make sure that this logistics cost reduction will be implemented this coming May 1st.

Speaking of inbound cargo, we are all concerned about agricultural smuggling. This is being addressed with the Appointment of Customs Collector Antonio Bernardo. I empowered him to make Customs a showcase in the fight against graft and corruption in the same way that we are achieving visible results with BIR Commissioner Rene Banez.

I am also empowering certain Cabinet members to act as my Cabinet officers for regional development or cord. This is a very successful system during the administration of President Cory Aquino, and I would like to revive this. And I am hereby appointing Cito Lorenzo as cord for region 9. Region 9, Western Visayas, (SIC) because he is the grandson of Don Pablo Lorenzo of Zamboanga City. Vice President Tito Guingona as cord for region 10 and CARAGA, but to be assisted in region 10 by Cito and in CARAGA by DOTC Secretary Bebot Alvarez. I am appointing Bebot Alvarez, son of Davao del Norte as cord for Region 11. And I am Secretary Sim Datumanong, son of Maguindanao as cord for ARMM and Region 12, to be assisted in ARMM by DND Secretary Angie Reyes because we cannot have development unless we have peace.

In response to your resolution urging the government to enhance the competitiveness of the Philippine canned tuna exports in the European union through the removal of discriminatory tariff barriers, I would like to let you know that DTI Secretary Mar Roxas is focusing efforts to negotiate not only with the European union but also with the United States for zero tariff.

Last night, I gave a very nice little dinner for Senator Inouye of Hawaii and Senator Stevens of Alaska, who are great friends of the Philippines. And they said that they'll make sure, their work is to make sure that President Bush complies with the promises that he made to me when I visited Washington. Well I said, "that's great, senators. You know, his promises from the U.S. government alone not including the U.S. business amounts to 2 billion dollars." "oops!" They said. Yah, because one billion dollars of that includes market access because their zero tariff law is in congress. And I told them that we especially want canned tuna to be able to enjoy zero tariff in the U.S. and that's a special mission that Senator Inouye and Senator Stevens will work for when they go to senate this coming session.

The DTI is also focusing on tropical fruit market access to Australia, Taiwan and the U.S., and the reduction of tariffs of these exports to South Korea and China.

On your resolution requesting that Mindanao be declared the halal production base in the Philippines — I am directing the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Trade and Industry, and the Southern Philippines Development Authority under my former DTI colleague Sam Ampatuan, as well as the Department of Health to submit their joint recommendation on this matter, including an action plan to effectively implement the proposal. The food trade with the Islamic world would be mutually beneficial, economically and politically.

Sam Ampatuan was working on this when he was the head. I made him the head first of the Office of Muslim Affairs but when I found out that SPDA has so many development projects and I need DTI experience for that I moved him to SPDA but I am therefore asking him to... And I am transferring the function of the halal administration from OMA where he was — and I put it there because he was there — to SPDA where he is. And therefore he is very familiar with DTI, and I'm sure that there's going to be a lot of progress under his leadership.

All these spell out the realization that agriculture especially in Mindanao and the rural sector, alongside with information and communications technology and tourism, and the other service sectors all play a critical role in our quest to win the battle against poverty within the decade. I said in my state of the nation address that we should try to create one million jobs in agriculture by 2004. But I'm happy to say that according to national census office during this past year, we already created almost 800,000 jobs in agriculture. And we are still moving forward.

So, Mindanao, I am here not only to support you in your quest to be the Philippines' food basket, I am here because I want the people of Mindanao to feel the blessings of employment and development. Dayon Mindanao atong isla nga manindot kaayo. Dayon sa alang sa kauswagan. And let us have peace and development in our beautiful island of Mindanao.

Daghang salamat kaninyong tanan

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Opening Program of the 4th Mindanao Food Congress. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230124/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7654&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 2nd Commencement Exercises of the Ramon Magsaysay Technological University (RMTU)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 2nd Commencement Exercises of the Ramon Magsaysay Technological University (RMTU)

[Delivered in Iba, Zambales, April 4, 2002]

Maraming salamat Governor Vic Magsaysay sa inyong pagpakilala sa akin. At maraming salamat din dahil day and night nagtrabaho iyong mga inhenhero ng probinsiya para magawa itong perimeter fence at access road ng Magsaysay Technological University. At sabi ni Vic, iyong Administration Building ay naghihintay ng tulong kaya alang-alang sa hinihingi ni Vic Magsaysay — pakinggan nyo ako pms — maglalagay tayo ng p4 million para tumulong sa pagkompleto ng Administration Building.

Batiin ko rin ang ating mga kagalang-galang na Congressmen, ang Congressman ng inyong distrito, si Congressman Ruben Torres. Si Congressman Ruben Torres ay iyong aming campaign manager noong 1995, noong ako ay naging number one senator sa buong bansa kaya malaki ang pasasalamat ko sa kanya hanggang ngayon. At ngayon siya ay Congressman, napakahalaga ang kanyang papel na ginaganap hindi lamang dito sa iba kung hindi sa buong pilipinas dahil inaasahan natin siya na magtatanggol sa ating Securitization Law. Na pag napasa iyong Securitization Law na iyon ay marami doon sa mga hinahawakan ng mga bangko na non-performing assets ay magiging pera muli at sa ganoon makapopondo sa marami nating mga projects lalung-lalo na iyong mga housing project para sa mga working class. At siguro ang mga graduating students ng iba nitong eskuwelahan ito ay magkakaroon ng pakinabang doon pag dumami ang pondo para sa low-cost housing ng mga working people.

Binabati ko rin iyong congressman sa kabila, si Congressman Bong Gordon na bagamat ang iba campus ay hindi niya sakop, maraming estudyante dito ay sakop ng kanyang distrito. Kaya tumutulong din siya dito sa eskuwelahan, halimbawa, mayroon siyang 67 scholars dito sa Ramon Magsaysay Technological University. At dahil sa kanyang mga nag-aaral dito na mga constituents, naglagay siya doon sa Republic Act 9162 ng p3 million dagdag sa budget ng RMTU.

Binabati ko ang iba't-ibang mga opisyaes ng lalawigan ng Zambales na galing pa sila, ang dami-dami, lalung-lalo si mayor ng iba, Mayor Danilo Palmoreras. At siyempre si President Rosete at lahat ng mga opisyaes ng Ramon Magsaysay Technological University. At siyempre naman iyong ating mga estudyanteng magga-graduate itong araw na ito. Lalo na iyong kanilang mga magulang.

Gusto ko rin ipakilala at ipagmalaki ang isang Pilipino nakaganap ng napakagandang tagumpay sa ibang bansa, sa isang community, kung saan kaunting-kaunti lamang ang pilipino, siya ang bagong punong bayan ng City of Davis, California, Dr. Ruth Uy Monzon at itong araw na ito ay hindi lamang graduation ang ating ginaganap, mayroon din tayong dalawa pang ipinagdiriwang. Iyong isa ay dahil gusto ko na kayong mga estudyante ay habang kaya magkasigurado na may trabaho pagka graduate ninyo. Ako ay nagdala ng isang jobs fair para sa ganoon ay puwede kayong maghanap ng trabaho ngayon pa lang itong araw na ito. Kayo ay 981 na graduates at doon sa jobs fair na ito, 416 ang nag-register para maghanap ng trabaho. At 31 doon sa inyo ay hired on the spot. Mayroon 200 na i-interbiyuhin pa dahil mayroon tayong walong kompanyang Pilipino at limang overseas companies na nandiyan sa jobs fair para sa ganoon ay kayo ay magkakaroon ng magandang pagkakataon na magkaroon ng employment kaagad. Para naman doon sa gustong mag-self employment, nandiyan din iyong TLRC, iyong Technological Livelihood and Resource Center at mayroon 35 sa inyo nag sign-up at magkakaroon ng kaunting puhunan at training para sa inyong sariling negosyo. Iyon ay isa sa mga programa natin para sa ganoon titiyakin natin ang hanapbuhay sa ating mga nanggagaling sa mga eskuwelahan.

Pero itong araw na ito kaya nandito si General Rey Berroya, nasaan siya, nasa labas. Oh nandiyan pala si General Boysie Braganza, Division Commander na nag-aalaga ng inyong kapayapaan dito sa Zambales, hanggang sa Pangasinan, hanggang sa Aurora. Pero nandiyan sa labas si General Rey Berroya, ang Regional Director ng Philippine National Police. Dahil gusto ko na iyong mga pulis ay hindi lamang nanghuhuli ng mga kriminal at drug addict, gusto ko na tumulong sila sa ating mga out-of-school, out-of-work urban poor youth na magkaroon ng emergency employment ng sa ganoon mas kaunti ang huhulihing drug addict kung may employment maging ang ating mga out-of-school-youth. Kaya itong-ito ang mga ginagawa natin itong araw na ito, ang ating tema, “trabaho, trabaho, trabaho.” trabaho sa mga nagtatapos kagaya ninyo, trabaho sa mga hindi kasing palad ninyo at hindi makakapagpatuloy ng kanilang pag-aaral.

And so today, I would like to congratulate the graduates of Ramon Magsaysay Technological University. And I would like to thank the students, the faculty, the administration and the staff of the RMTU for actively addressing the development agenda of the Arroyo administration.

I have repeatedly said that our development agenda revolves around the vision of winning the battle against poverty within the decade. This battle consists of four components:

First, promote free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century wherein our competitive advantage is the great Filipino worker. And therefore, our competitive advantage lies in the human resource intensive, skills intensive service sectors like information and communications technology and tourism.

Second, modernize agriculture founded on social equity.

Third, have a sectoral and social bias in our economic development plan.

Fourth, improve moral standard in government and society.

Now regarding the first item about information and communication technology. I congratulate RMTU. I'm glad to learn that you have successfully integrated ICT education in all your curricular programs.

And I am glad that under the build-operate-and-transfer scheme, incidentally which I authored when I was senator, RMTU installed an internet system servicing the needs of the students, the faculty and the administration. Accessing information through the internet has been made an integral part of the different courses offered by this university. And I understand that the students pay reasonable internet fees every semester. And that faculty and staff pursuing graduate studies in progressive universities, the distance education make use of the internet at minimal cost.

Napakagaling na itong malayong eskuwelahan ay up-to-date sa information and communication technology. Congratulations doon.

Regarding tourism, tamang-tama. Alam nyo noong ako ay Undersecretary of Trade and Industry pa more than ten years ago, sinimula ko iyong tinatawag nilang West Central Luzon Development Program, supposed to be Zambales, Bataan at Western Pampanga. Tapos noong ako ay pumunta na sa executive, tinuloy ng mga kasamahan ko sa Department of Trade and Industry pero in-expand nila. Tinawag nila iyong W-Corridor. Kasi iyong shape ng area ay parang w. Iyong unang slant na ganoon, iyon 'yong West Central Luzon. At iyon an nandoon pa, iyon nga ay Zambales, Subic, Bataan at Western Pampanga. Iyon namang umaakyat muli, kasi ganoon ang W, hindi ba tapos mayroon sa gitna, iyong sa gitna ganoon naman ay from Western Pampanga aakyat ng Luisita, at saka Clark, baba sa Clark, baba sa Bulacan, iyan ang industrial corridor. Tapos iyong right side ng W is Bulacan going up to Nueva Ecija, iyan ang ating agricultural corridor. Ngayon pinaliwanag ko iyong agriculture, pinaliwanag iyong industry nandoon iyong left kung saan iyong Zambales, iyong West Central Luzon, ayon sa master plan na iyon, ang West Central Luzon ay para sa tourism. Kaya bagay na bagay na dito sa Ramon Magsaysay Technological University mayroon kayong turismo, atensiyon sa turismo.

Tourism, the experts say, in tourism, our competitive advantage is eco-tourism and beach tourism. Bagay na bagay sa Zambales. Kasi iyong eco-tourism ay iyong trekking umaabot sa Mt. Pinatubo at iyong beach tourism ay iyong ating mga beaches all the way from Iba down to Subic.

Alam nyo noong ako ay bata pa, just a little bit older than you, as a young married woman, kasi pag-graduate ko nag-asawa ako kaagad. I used to go surfing in Iba, Zambales. Ewan ko kung nandoon pa iyon inyong surf spot ngayon. Pero ibang mga lugar kagaya ng Siargao doon sa Mindanao at saka iyong Baler kung saan nagsi-surfing din noong ako ay young matron ay naging tourist destination na. Kaya inaasahan ko na sa tourism master plan ay iyong mga ganoong ginagawa ko ng bata ako ay magawa ng napakaraming turista dito sa Iba, dito sa Zambales.

On agricultural modernization founded on social equity. Gusto natin sa agricultural modernization na iyong mga state universities and colleges, gaya ng RMTU, iyong kanilang research ay dapat hindi masayang sa mga Ivory Tower Research na iyong findings ay doon lamang sa library shelf mananatili. Gusto natin ay iyon magagamit sa ating agricultural modernization.

First of all, let me say that I am glad that in RMTU, that we are working on agricultural modernization as well.

Una sa lahat, dito sa Zambales, okay, yes, ang number one na ating pag-asa dito ay tourism. Kasi to begin with, mayroon ng maraming turistang nagpupunta sa Subic. Kailangan mayroon silang side tours to the north, sa mga beaches at saka sa Mt. Pinatubo trekking. Ngunit mayroon din kayong natural resource sa agriculture at iyon ang inyong mga mangga. Matagal na iyong mangga ng Zambales ay kilala. Pero kung titingnan natin, kaninong mangga ang talagang pumupunta sa ibang bansa. Iyong mangga ng Guimaras. Bakit? Dahil ginamit nila iyong science and technology para patayin iyong mga langaw sa Guimaras, para iyong mga bagong seeds, mga bagong varieties at saka iyong soil. Kaya napakaimportante na research based ang paglawak ng isang produkto ng agrikultura. Kaya importante na itong eskuwelahan ninyo ay gamitin ang kanyang research upang sa ganoon ay magkaroon tayo nga ng tuloy tuloy at sustenableng produksiyon at palengke ng mangga ng Zambales.

Doon nga kay Congressman Bong Gordon, iyon pinapanukala rin talaga niya na dapat magkaroon ng research and development program para sa mango industry, sa ganoon ay gumanda iyong production ng Zambales mangoes, maging competitive sa international market. Kaya inaasahan ko na dito sa RMTU ay lumawak at umiral ang mango related research.

I would also like to let you know that the promotion of the use of hybrid rice is the flagship program of the research and development component of the agricultural and fisheries modernization program under our administration. But it is not the only crop that we must do research on. For instance, Bicol is known for abaca, but it seems that Leyte overtook Bicol in this crop. So therefore, it is time to modernize the Bicol abaca industry. And under our agricultural and fisheries modernization program, research and development are supposed to be integrated. Research and development in the state universities and colleges are supposed to solve the needs of agricultural modernization under a unified command. And that is why that here, therefore, the RMTU should, just as I told the Partido State University in Bicol, that they must concentrate on doing research to stop the disease of the Bicol abaca that is making Leyte overtake Bicol in abaca whereas Bicol was the traditional source of abaca, the same thing here, RMTU should concentrate on developing the productivity of the mango industry because after all, the mango industry in Zambales is much older than the mango industry of Guimaras.

Kaya ako ay nasisiyahan na magkaroon ng pagkakataon na makipag-ugnayan sa inyo mga estudyante ng RMTU. Sa ganoon napag-uusapan natin ang kinabukasan ng ating bansa at ang inyong papel doon sa ating kinabukasan.

Nawa, na iyong mga graduate students ng RMTU ay doon, iyong 31 na may trabaho na; iyong 36 na nag-sign-up sa self employment, congratulations dahil mayroon na kayong magagawa kaagad. At iyong 200 na interviewees sa jobs fair, sana pumasa kayong lahat sa inyong interview.

At pag kayo ay nagtagumpay na, huwag naman ninyong kalilimutan na mayroon tayong out-of-school-youth na kung puwede ay matulungan din makahanap ng trabaho.

Kaya ako'y nasisiyahan itong araw na ito, bukas birthday ko, kaya sabi ko I will spend these two days in my home region of Region III. Kinukuwento ko nga kay Governor Vic Magsaysay ang aking observation ay, ang Region III hindi masyadong nag-iisip bilang isang region. Kung tignan nyo iyong Ilocos Region, they think as one. Iyong Bicol region, they think as one. Ilonggo region, Region VI, they think as one. Iyong Mindanao, they think as one. Iyong Visayan, they think as one. Dito, we think a long language lines. Iyong Pampanga at saka kalahati ng Tarlac, we think as one Kapampangan. Iyong Bataan at saka iyong Southern Zambales, tagalog. Iyong Northern Zambales, you join the north. Tapos iyong Nueva Ecija at Bulacan sarili din dahil sila ay tagalog. Iba-iba ang languages natin sa ating region. Ngunit tayo ay isang region dahil isa tayong ekonomiya. Iyang W Corridor na iyan makikita nyo napaka-complementary ang ating region kung talagang mag-iisip tayo bilang isang region. Kaya iniisip ko na ako, birthday ko bukas, today and tomorrow – kanina nagsimula ako sa Clark dahil i-inaugurate iyong United Parcel Service , courier service, this is the biggest parcel service in the world. Three hundred million dollars iyong investment na iyon. At gusto natin na iyong Clark at Subic maging isa lamang iyon. Kaya gagawa tayo ng Clark-Subic road para iyan ang gitna ng W Corridor at hanggang sa Luisita. Tatlo iyan. It will be a triangle. Pero dito nga sa Zambales, klarong-klaro sa agri cultural modernization, mangga, pero sa overall, turismo. And why not? Zambales has the natural wonders and Zambales has the natural warmth of the people.

Kaya, whether kayo ay magtatrabaho abroad o doon sa Subic-Clark o doon sa sariling negosyo o sa turismo o magtatanim at mag-i-improve ng ating mga mangga at magti-trade ng ating mga mangga. Sana magtagumpay kayo dahil ang tagumpay ninyo ay tagumpay ng ating bansa. At pag kayo ay nandiyan na nagtatrabaho, kayo na ang mamamayan ng ating ekonomiya. Sana tulungan nyo ako, kailangan ko ang inyong tulong para umangat ang ating bansa.

Maraming salamat. Congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 2nd Commencement Exercises of the Ramon Magsaysay Technological University (RMTU). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230112/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7653&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during her 55th Birthday Celebration and the Opening of the President Diosdado Macapagal Highway
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During her 55th Birthday Celebration and the Opening of the President Diosdado Macapagal Highway

[Delivered at the Le Pavillon, Reclamation Center, Pasay City, April 5, 2002]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Romulo, sa iyong pagpakilala.

At sa inyong lahat mga kaibigan, maraming salamat sa inyong pagsasama sa aking birthday celebration nitong araw na ito. Maari na kayong maupo.

Alam ho ninyo kanina pa sa pampanga sinasabi ko ang regalo ko sa sarili ko wala akong diskurso kasi sa katotohanan hindi ako mahilig magdiskurso. Pero pabayaang lang ho ninyo dahil na ako'y magpasalamat na lamang sa lahat ng mga gumawa ng kung anu-ano para itong aking birthday ay maging mahalaga sa aking mga pinakamamahal sa aking trabaho, iyong mahihirap ng ating bansa.

Kanina po nagsimula ako ng misa doon sa Lubao dahil every year nagmimisa po ako sa birthday ko doon po sa Lubao, at pagkatapos noon po ay nagpunta sa dalawang resettlement site ng mga biktima ng Mt. Pinatubo — isa gawa ng private sector at iyong iba gawa ng pamahalaan. At itong araw na ito ako ay nasisiyahan na 25 pamilya na naging biktima ng Mt. Pinatubo ay naging may-ari na ng kanilang sariling tahanan. Ito po ay bahagi ng ating gustong mangyari sa ating pamahalaan: na taun-taon may 300,000 pamilyang magkakaroon ng tahanan. Ang gusto natin ay 150,000 families na tinatawag na squatter ay magkakaroon ng pagkakataon na magmay-ari ng lupang tinitirikan nila. At iyon po ay nakamit na natin iyong target na iyon para sa taong ito sa nakaraang taong 2001; at gusto rin natin na meron iyong mga nagta-trabaho na 100,000 na housing, at inaasahan po natin na iyong kongreso sa madaling panahon ay mapasa iyong securitization law at yung asset management law para iyong mga bangko ay magkaroon ng liquidity muli na magpahiram ng pautang sa mga manggagawa; at para sa 50,000 mga pamilya naman, gusto natin na magkaroon ng tahanan iyong mga pinakamahihirap sa ating bansa.

Pagkatapos po ng pagpunta ko sa resettlement area ay nagpunta po ako sa isang barangay ng bayan kong Lubao sa barangay San Roque, Dau at ako po ay nagtanim doon ng palay kasama ng mga magsasaka ng barangay na iyon, at ang itanim po namin ay iyong hybrid rice. Iyong hybrid rice po ay magbibigay ng 35,000 pesos na net income per hectare doon sa mga magsasaka na magtatanim nito sa irrigated areas. Ito ho ay tulong na nanggagaling sa ating pagbisita doon po sa China, 50,000 hectares po ang ating target for this planting season April at 80,000 ang target sa planting season sa October. Kaya po iyon ang ating ginawa kanina para maipahayag itong ating isang programa na napakaimportante sa ating modernization ng agrikultura.

At ngayong hapon sa ating modernization ng agrikultura, isa doon sa mga ginawa natin ngayon ay iyong in-inaugurate natin by remote control iyong isang irrigation project sa malayong lugar doon sa Sogod sa Southern Leyte. At yun po sa walong milyong piso ay labindalawang libong pamilya, di ba? Labindalawang libong magsasaka ... Ay ektarya ... Ay 112 na mga magsasaka ay makikinabang dahil nga kung wala kang irrigation ay hindi ka puwedeng magtanim nitong mga bagong klaseng mga bigas o mga palay. Ngayon ho ay isang napakaimportanteng ginagawa natin sa iba't ibang mga barangay ng buong Pilipinas.

At pinag-uusapan natin iyong barangay, kanina rin ay nagkaroon tayo ng lighting doon sa isang barangay ng Lobo sa Batangas — isang malayong-malayong bayan ng batangas kasi na sa kabila ng bundok ng Batangas City — at ito ay dahil gusto rin nating ipahayag na sa ating State-of-the-Nation-Address sinabi natin na araw-araw gusto natin ng apat na barangay ay nagkakaroon ng kuryente. At kanina para mapatunay iyong apat na barangay araw-araw ay magkakaroon ng kuryente ay iyong union ng cooperatives sa buong Pilipinas ay nagkaroon na ng kanilang oathtaking dito, at habang nago-oathtaking sila binulong sa akin ni Father Francisco Silva na itong mga union na ito, itong federation na ito ay nagsisigurado ng 1,000 linemen para maglagay ng ilaw sa Lanao del Sur.

Kawawa naman iyong Lanao del Sur iyon Lake Lanao ang pinanggagalingan ng kuryente ng Mindanao, pero iyong mga bayan ng Lanao del Sur ay walang kuryente ilang dekada na. Kaya iyong mga naging biktima ng walang karapatan noon in justice ay ginagawan natin na sanang maayos ngayon.

Iyon ang ilang sa mga ginagawa, at kanina naman ay iyon na nga kanina ay meron din tayong in-inaugurate na mga tulay — ito iyong president's bridge program. Kaya dahil 55 years old ako ngayon — ewan ko kung bakit inaanunsyo ang edad ko — ay 55 iyong mga tulay na tinapos, iyong president's bridge program. At sa ibabaw noon meron pang mga tulay, iyong Salam bridge programs para doon sa mga kapatid natin sa Muslim areas. Ito ho ay mga tulong sa mga malalayo na barangay, at alam naman natin na doon sa bandang Sulu, Tawi-tawi ay nagkakaroon tayo ... Ay hindi, sa sulu at saka doon sa basilan na nagkakaroon tayo ng labanan ay hindi lang at ang sinasabi ko parati ang laban kontra sa kahirapan ay kakambal ng laban kontra sa terorismo. Eh baka akala naman ng lahat na naglalagay na lamang tayo ng project doon sa mga may giyera — eh di maggiyera na lang tayo para lagyan ng project, baka sabihin iyon. Hindi lang iyon, nagbibigay din tayo ng gantimpala sa mga lugar na mapayapa — sa mga community na sinisikap nila na maganda ang buhay ng kanilang mamamayan.

Kaya itong nakikita ninyong display dito iyan ay tulay sa Tawi-tawi. Tawi-tawi, sila ay nasugpo na nila ang Abu Sayyaf sa Tawi-tawi kaya itong tulay ay gantimpala — 71 milyon pesos iyang tulay na iyan — para sa mamamayan ng Tawi-tawi para naman mabigyan natin ng pansin na doon sa mundong malayo sa Southwestern Philippines na maraming giyera ay may mga lugar na mapayapa at dapat bigyan natin ng gantimpala kung ang mamamayan mismo ang naglalagay ng kapayapaan sa kanilang lugar, Gusto natin na ang ating mamamayan ay magkaroon ng murang pagamot at gamot. Kaya iyong gamot ay ito si Honeygirl nagbigay ng mga gamot, pero donation iyon, para sa birthday ko, pero sa pang-araw-araw meron nang gamot na kalahating presyo na mahahanap natin sa mga government hospitals — 25 kinds of medicines commonly bought by the poor but we can find in 75 government hospitals. At iyong pagamot naman nagpapasalamat ako sa mga rotarians, sa St. Luke's dahil sila ay nagbibigay ng libreng operasyon sa kidney, sa puso — iyong mga umakyat dito para magbigay ng pagpapasalamat pero iyon ay dahil birthday ko . Pero sa mga araw-araw ay nagmumudmod tayo ng health insurance para lahat ng mahihirap sana, magsisimula sa urban area, ay magkaroon ng sustento or subsidio mula sa gobyerno pag sila nagpapagamot.

Itong ginagawa natin ngayon ay mga simbolo ng talagang pangkalahatang, mas malawakang gusto nating gawin na diretsong lingkod sa mahihirap.

Iyong ating mga rotarians na nagpapasalamat ako dahil ang ginawa nila ay in-adopt nila iyong manggahan sa Ricardo Ismael. Iyon ho ay isang tinatawag nilang squatter area, mahaba iyon at ito naman ay bibigyan natin. Although in-adopt nila for community projects, itong mga nakatira doon sa parating nilulubog na lugar ng manggahan ay sa wakas — dahil inaayos natin iyong problema ng reloasyon — ay magkakaroon ng flood control. At sana sa loob ng ilang taon hindi na sila magkakasakit o magkakaroon ng hirap na buhay dahil parating hanggang dito iyong tubig taun-taon tuwing nagkakaroon ng flood season.

Ito at mga ibang ginagawa itong araw na ito, sabi ko nga kay Manny Sanchez, ilista mo nga ang lahat ng mga regalang ito pero hindi rin niya malista sa dami ng mga nagdadagdag ng regalo hindi na maka-catch up. Kaya sinasabi ko na lamang na iyong ginagawa natin itong araw na ito ay simbolo lamang ng malawakang programa laban sa kahirapan.

Pero higit sa lahat, mga kaibigan, kung gusto nating labanan ang kahirapan, itong ginagawa natin itong araw na ito ay mga examples ng ating direct benefits sa pro-poor. Pero gaya ng sabi ko sa State-of-the-Nation-Address apat ang ating bahagi ng paglaban sa kahirapan. Iyong isa nga iyong direct intervention, iyong mga halimbawa ng mga binibigay natin ngayon. Pero iyong unang-una sa lahat doon ay iyong ... At iyong isa iyong modernisasyon ng agrikultura na ginawa ko doon sa pampang bilang halimbawa dahil karamihan ng ating mga mahihirap ay nasa kanayunan. Pero higit sa lahat kung gusto nating sugpuin ang kahirapan sa isang paraan na sustainable, ang sagot doon at trabaho, trabaho, trabaho.

Kaya ako'y nagpapasalamat doon sa mga namumuhunan sa ating bansa dahil sila nagbibigay ng trabaho.

Kahapon 300 million dollars ang investment ng U.P.S. at kahapon ay dumating din ang napakagandang birthday gift sa akin kahit na hindi sadya. Noong araw itong mga iba't ibang international credit rating agencies sabi ay negative ang ating credit and investment worthiness. Iyong una iyong Fische ilang buwan nakaraan sinabi nila, okay stable na dahil sa liderato ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. Ngayon tapos nung January iyong moody's sinabi nilang stable na dahil nagugulat tayo na kaya pala ni Macapagal-Arroyo iyong kanyang mga target ng budget deficit. At ngayon iyong pangatlo iyong standard & poor sabi niya stable na ang ekonomiya ng Pilipinas, pero lahat sila sinasabi dahil sa liderato ni Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Birthday ko naman hayaan niyong magyabang ako kasi kung hindi ako magyayabang lahat na lang batikos ng batikos, at lahat na lang pinupuntirya iyong mga kakulangan.

Pero itong mga rating na ito sabi nila, ano iyon sa makakain? Malaking bagay iyon sa makakain dahil ang credit rating ang importante para tayo ay magkaroon ng puhunan sa Pilipinas, at ang puhunan ang importante para sa trabaho, at ang trabaho ang pinakaimportante sa lahat para masugpo ang kahirapan ng ating bansa.

Noon pong ako ay naupo bilang pangulo 11.3 percent ang ating ating unemployment. Ngayon po ay bumaba sa 10.3 percent dahil itong isang taong nakaraan one million, 500 na mamamayan ay nagkaroon ng trabaho. Ngunit iyong 10.3 percent hindi ako kuntento doon, napakarami pa rin ang walang trabaho. Siguro mga tatlong milyon pa rin o apat na milyon ang walang trabaho. Kaya ang hinihingi ko sa inyong lahat magtulungan tayo para itong mga walang trabaho ay magkaroon ng trabaho.

Binanggit ko kung papano natin nasusugpo ang kahirapan sa ating programa: una, naghahanap ng trabaho; pangalawa, modernisasyon ng agrikultura; pangatlo, iyong mga handog deretso sa hirap para maramdaman kaagad sana ang biyaya ng pagmamahal ng pampahalaan. Ngunit pang-apat ay iyong good governance, matapat na pamamahala.

Kaya noong nagkaroon tayo ng celebration ng Edsa 1 and 2 sabi natin ang matapat na pamamahala ang siyang sagot sa kahirapan. Kaya mga kaibigan, samahan niyo ako na maging matapat ang ating pamahalaan. Samahan niyo ako na masugpo natin ang kahirapan at magbigay ng magandang buhay sa ating minamahal na mga kababayan.

Minamahal ko kayong lahat. Maraming salamat po.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during her 55th Birthday Celebration and the Opening of the President Diosdado Macapagal Highway. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230100/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7651&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Veterans General Assembly

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Veterans General Assembly

[Delivered at the Bulwagang Francisco Balagtas, Folk Arts Theater, Pasay City, April 6, 2002]

Maraming salamat po.

Maraming salamat kay Secretary Angelo Reyes sa inyong pagpakilala sa inyong lingkod.

At gusto kong batiin din ang iba't-ibang panauhin na narito: yung ating mga Congressmen na tumutulong sa mga beterano, si Congressman Bong Gordon at saka si Congressman Joey Solis; pati na rin yung iba't-ibang elected officials na narito itong araw na ito. At siyempre binabati ko at nagpapasalamat ako sa napakagandang kanyang pananalita na pag-welcome sa inyong lingkod, at pagpahayag ng suporta ng mga beterano at kanilang mga sons and daughters sa inyong lingkod, si President Emmanuel de Ocampo pati na rin si Mrs. De Ocampo. Yung ating pangulo ng Association of Generals and Flag Officers, Sin General Ernesto Gidaya and former Ambassador; at lahat kayo, mga kaibigan, mga officials ng Veterans Federation, mga veterans, kanilang mga anak, kanilang mga naiwan dito sa mundo:

Isang mainit na pagbati ang pinapaabot ko sa inyong lahat, mga bayaning nagtanggol ng ating kalayaan! Karangalan kong masama kayo muli, kagaya ng isang taon, ang mga nagpakita ng hindi matatawarang tapang at galing upang patuloy na matamasa ng inyong mga anak, mga apo, mga kaibigan, at mga kababayan ang kalayaan.

Ginagalak ko ring makasamang muli ang inyong mga kaanak na silang nagpapanatiling buhay sa kadakilaan ng ating mga beterano.

Sa alinmang digmaan, sa spanish-american war, sa pangalawang digmaang pandaigdig, sa Korean war, maging sa Vietnam war, pinakita ng pilipino ang kanyang pagmamahal sa kalayaan.

Alam ko ito sapagka't, gaya ng sabi ni President de Ocampo, kaanak din ako ng beterano. Sa kabila ng aking tatay na sinabi ni President de Ocampo, ang aking tiyuhin na si Angel Macapagal ay beteranong nakasama sa Death March at nung siya ay nandoon sa Death March, nung dumaan yung Death March — kasi yung Death March ay mula sa bataang hanggang sa Capas, dumadaan ng Lubao — pagdaan niya sa Lubao ay uhaw siya so alam niya yung mga poso sa Lubao, pumunta sa isang poso sa tabi ng kalsada, nahalata niyang walang guwardiyang hapon na nagbabantay sa kanya sa pag-iinom doon sa poso, nakatakas siya tuloy at maraming kasama niya na nakakita sa kanya at sumunod at nakatakas doon sa Lubao sa Pampanga. Yung aking tiyuhin na si Angel Macapagal ay upang makuha niya yung mga benepisyo ng Veterans' benefits sa Amerika ay sa huling mga taon ng kanyang buhay doon na siya nakatira sa Amerika at soon siya namatay. Yung aking yumaong ama naman na si dating pangulong Diosdado Macapagal, gaya ng sabi ni President de Ocampo, ay beterano din; siya ay naging finance officer ng isang guerilla unit. At doon nga sa kanyang pagtatrabaho bilang finance officer ng guerilla unit, dun niya nakuha yung bansag na "Macapagal, the incorruptible" dahil sa matapat niyang paghawak ng pera ng mga guerilla.

Kung minsan — alam niyo ito higit sa lahat dahil kayo ay lumaban para sa ating bansa — alam niyo na kung minsan kailangang makipaghamok upang matamasa ang katahimikan. Ang lahing Pilipino ay hindi kukulangin sa mga taong handang mag-alay ng buhay upang ipagtanggol ang ating karapatang mamuhay at malaya.

Mahigit limampung taon na ang nakalipas matapos ang World War II at mahigit tatlumpong taon na ang nakalipas mula nang huling humarap sa digmaan ang ating mga beterano, kayo.

At mula noon hanggang ngayon nag-iba ang ating mundo. Ang mga dating kaaway natin ay mga malapit na kakampi ngayon. Halimbawa, kung titingnan natin ang Pilipinas 100 years ago, sino yung kalaban natin? Yung mga Amerikano. Sa ilang araw nga ay pupunta ako dun sa Bbatangas para pagdiriwang yung end of the Philippine-American war — ibig sabihin noon 100 years ago, ang Amerikano ang ating kalaban nung isang siglong nakaraan. Eh ngayon sila naman — ang amerikanong kalaban natin isang siglong nakaraan ay naging kaakibat natin nung Second World War, kaakibat ninyo — at ngayon naman ay kabalikat natin sa ating pakikipaglaban sa terorista.

Nung Second World War naman nung Amerikano'y ating kasama, kaakibat sino naman ang kalaban natin? Yung mga hapon — sila ang kaaway natin noong World War II. Pero ngayon sila ang nagbibigay sa atin ng pinakamalaking official development assistance upang mapagtuloy natin ang mga proyektong pang-kaunlaran.

Iba na rin ang mukha ng pandidigma ngayon. Iba ang mukha ng kaaway. Noon, Amerika nung Philippine-American War; hapon nung World War II; pero ngayon hindi na mga bansa ang ating kaaway kundi nga ang mga teroristang nariyan sa iba't-ibang bansa at naghahasik ng lagim kagaya ng doon sa katimugan ng ating mismong bansa. Sa Basilan at meron ding ilan sa Sulu, ang ating mga kawal ay tinutulungan ng mga Amerikanong sundalo sa pamamagitan ng programang Balikatan 2-1 upang tugisin at magapi na ang mga walang kaluluwang teroristang ito.

Ang balikatan ay isang ehersisyo ng pakikipagtulungan sa pagsasanay at ang lahat ng kasali dito, maging Pilipino man o Amerikano, ay may matututunan mula sa isa't-isa.

Ang pakikipagtulungan ng mga Amerikano ay hindi nahuhulugang minamaliit natin ang husay at tapang ng sundalong Pilipino. Hindi matatawaran ang galing at tapang ng ating mga sundalo. Napakita na ninyong mga beterano ng ilang beses at patuloy na ipinakikita ng ating mga sundalo ngayon ang katapangang ito.

Hindi natin kailangang humiram ng tapang mula sa anumang lahi. Ang kanilang tapang ay nararapat bagayan, kaya lamang, ng armas na siyang ipinahihiram at itinuturo sa atin sa Balikatan ng mga Amerikano. Umaasa akong mauubos na ang Abu Sayyaf at kung ano pa mang grupo ng terorista dito dahil sa ating pagtutulungan. Tapang natin, kagamitan nila, yun ang magandang kumbinasyon.

Ang laban sa terorismo ay bahagi ng pakikihamok sa ating pinakamatinding kaaway, at yun ay ang kahirapan. Ang pagkikipaglaban sa terorismo ay pakikipaglaban din sa kahirapan. Kaya't tungkulin ng lahat na Pilipino na makidigma sa kahirapan upang tuluy-tuloy nating matamasa ang kalayaang ipinaglalaman ninyo noon.

Kahit umiba na ang larangan ng pakikidigma ngayon, ang pinakita ng mga beteranong katulad ninyo ay siya pa ring pamantayan ng katapangan at katapatan ng buong bansa.

Hindi malilimutan ng bansa ang tapang ng kawal Pilipino sa battle of Balantang, raid of Muntinlupa, Liberation of Los Baños at iba pang mga pakikihamok. Hindi malilimutan dapat ang mga pangalan tulad ng Peralta — yung hero doon sa Capiz na siyang naging Angie Reyes ng aking tatay, the late President Diosdado Macapagal — hindi dapat nakalilimutan sina Kangleon, si Marking na may ginawang sine pa ang kanyang buhay, si Alejo Santos, si Lazo-Bueno — kaya tinatanong ko kay Binibining Lazo, “ikaw ba ay beterano o daughter?” Sabi niya, “tourism,” pero nandito siya bilang anak ng beterano. Adevosos, si Terry Adevosos na siya ang operations man ng politika ng aking tatay hanggang naging pangulo — yung kagalingan ni Adevosos sa operations ng giyera ganon din kagaling sa operations ng politika kaya naging pangulo yung aking tatay. At nung yung aking tatay ay naging pangulo at napakaraming walang trabahong naabutan niya, gumawa siya ng emergency employment program, namahala doon ay dalawang beteranong kilalang-kilala — una nga yung over-all administrator ay si Terry Adevosos at yung kanyang deputy naman ay si Emmanuel de Ocampo na siyang namumuno ng Veterans Federation ngayon.

Sa ating pakikidigma sa karukhaan, nananawagan ako sa mga kababayan natin na magpakita ng tapang at pagmamahal sa bayan na tulad ng ipinakita ninyo. Ipinagtanggol ninyo ang ating kalayaan, tungkulin naman ng henerasyon namin, henerasyon ngayon at mga sumusunod pang henerasyon na alagaan ang kalayaang ito at payabungin ang mga adhikaing sinimulan ninyo.

Sa ganitong paraan lamang maipapakita ng henerasyong ito at ng mga susunod pang henerasyon ang kanilang pasasalamat at paggalang sa ating mga beterano.

Pagpapasalamat at pagpapatuloy sa mga dakilang layunin ng mga beterano ang dahilan upang ganapin natin taun-taon ang pagdiriwang ng Veterans Week.

Subali't ang pagpupugay sa inyong kadakilaan ay hindi lamang sa pamamagitan ng salita kungdi dapat maging sa (gawa). Kaya nga nung panahon ng tatay ko, yung Veterans Bank — na nandito ngayon si General de Ocampo at si Romy Roxas nagpapakabo yung Veterans Hospital mga panahong yun — lalo ng yung Veterans Bank yun ho ay pet project ng aking tatay, at noon matagal nang nakaraan ay bumagsak yung bangkong yun. At nung panahon siguro, panginoon na rin ang may gusto, nung tinalakay kung anong gagawin sa Veterans Bank, nagkataon na dalawang anak ni Diosdado Macapagal na nagtayo ng Veterans Bank ay nakaupo sa Central Bank — si Boboy Macapagal, kinakatawan ng Department of Finance, at si Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, kinakatawan ng Board of Investments, eh ano pang maboboto ng ibang members ng monetary board kung dalawang anak ni Macapagal ay nagpanukala na dapat buhayin muli ang Veterans bank? Kaya ako ay nasisiyahan na buhay na buhay na naman ang Veterans bank.

Ngayon naman at ako'y naging pangulo na, pinagsisikapan kong tuparin ang sinasaad ng Republic Act 7696 na taasan ng limangdaang piso ang inyong buwanang pensyon hanggang ito'y umabot sa kabuuang limang libo buwan-buwan. Binabanggit noon yung mga beteranong naging bahagi ng administration ng aking tatay, siguro kung naaalala ninyo ang naging senate author ng batas na ito ay si Bert Romulo, ngayon siyang aking executive secretary.

Naalala ko si Bert Romulo nung unang nagkakampanya ako para senador 1992 saan man kami pupunta sa kampanya may veterans group na nagsasalubong sa kanya. Yun ang kanyang pinaka-campaign managers, yung Veterans group. Sabi ko, "Bert, inggit na inggit ako sa iyo yung mga beterano pinagkakampanya ka." Kaya ngayon nasisiyahan ako na sinabi ni President Emmanuel de Ocampo na ako rin kinikilala ninyo bilang isa sa inyo.

Ang pagkumpleto ng pagbayad ng tinaas na pensyon ng mga beterano ay magsisimula sa hulyo ng taong ito.

Hindi ko rin nakalimutang ungkatin ang problema ng mga beterano noong ako'y dumalaw sa Amerika noong Nobyembre 2001. Kasama ko noon sina Colonel de Ocampo pati si General Gidaya. 'Di ba magkasama tayo noon? Nakipag-usap kami iba't-ibang opisyal ng pamahalaan, binaggit ko ito sa aming pag-uusap ni Presidente Bush yung hinahangad nating equity rights. Alam ko yun kasi biro niyo ang aking uncle na kailangang matira sa Amerika para kumuha ng veterans benefits iniwan niya yung kanyang maybahay dito sa Pilipinas, kaya talagang nilakad ho namin yun sa Amerika at sinabi ko kay President Bush, sinabi ko rin sa mga namumuno ng Veterans Affairs Office — at puwedeng ikuwento sa inyo ni General Reyes, ni Colonel de Ocampo saka ni General Gidaya kung gaano ko tinarayan yung mga Amerikano nung ayaw pa nilang mag-commit na tutulong sa ating Veterans Equity Bill. Kasi the day before my meeting with President Bush nag-courtesy call lahat ng mga agencies niya na may kinalaman doon sa aking ia-agenda kay President Bush kaya doon pinag-usapan yung mga nitty-gritty para pagdating kay Bush ay na-resolve na lahat. Kaya yung sa ... Kaya nung ako ay umupo naman ng final meeting ko kasama ni Condoleezza Rice bago yung meeting kay President Bush mismo, sabi ni Condoleezza sa akin sa ingles, "dinig ko na meron kayong matinding sinabi dun sa ating mga veterans officials," kasi kilalang-kilala pala sa National Security Council at sa White House yung pinagtaray ko sa kinabubuti ng ating mga Veterans doon sa mga officials ng Veterans Affairs nila.

Kamakailan lang ay humingi rin tayo ng tulong sa dalawang amerikanong senador na dumalaw dito, si Senator Inouye at si Senator Stevens, itong dalawa ay beterano sa Philippine theater — American veterans na naglaban dito — at kaya naman tinanggap nila nang magaan yung hiningi natin na sana mapadali ang pagpasa ng batas tungkol sa equity ng mga Filipino Veterans ng World War II.

Alam niyo mula nung aking pagbisita kay President Bush maraming mga officials ng Amerika ay pumupunta rito sunud-sunod, parang follow-thru nung aming pinag-usapan noong ako ay nagpunta sa aking pagbisita sa kanya. At ako ay nasisiyahan na yung isa sa mga darating ditong naka-schedule ay yung namumuno ng Veterans Affairs ng Amerika, si Ginoong Principe. Siguro naman, sabi ko kay Angie, hindi naman yon ay siguro magtatapang na pupunta dito kung hindi maganda ang kanyang balak sabihin sa atin. So umasa tayo siguro at magdasal tayo na pagdating ng namumuno ng Veterans Affairs Office ng Amerika dito ay maganda ang kanyang ibabalita sa atin mula sa administrasyong ng Amerika.

Noong huli tayong magkasama ay inutos ko na rin sa Philippine Veterans Affairs Office na ayusin na ang pamamalakad upang mapabilis ang pagbayad ng pensyon ninyo. Maraming reporma ang ipinatupad ng PVAO, kasama na ang paglilinis ng listahan ng mga beterano, upang maalis ang hindi nararapat sa listahang ito. Maganda ang ginawa, maganda ang reporma, ngunit sa nakita ko ngayon ay mukhang kulang pa rin kasi ilang porsyento ang maiimpok natin sa paglinis ng listahan? Ten percent at the most.

Pero nung ako ay pangulo na kasi naalala niyo January ako'y naging pangulo, April 6 nag-usap din tayo, or hindi, basta nung araw mga April 8 yata, tapos nung pinalinis ko nga yung listahan, between then and now isa pa ring aking na-diskubre talagang kulang ang pondo. Ang kakulangan ng pondo para bayaran lahat ng mga arrears ay humihigit-kumulang 15 billion pesos kaya pala napaka-delayed ang bayad ng mga maraming beterano — yun pa lang utang na aking minana 15 billion pesos in arrears. So hindi yun malilinis lamang sa paglinis ng listahan. Kaya inatasan ko na si Secretary Reyes, beterano rin — hindi ng World War II kasi bata pa siya — beterano at bayani ng Mindanao War at ng Edsa 2, inatasan ko siya na makipag-ugnay sa Department of Finance at sa Kongreso — pinag-uusapan nga namin ni Bong Gordon ito doon sa Subic nung the night before my birthday, at si Congressman Dumpit din although wala siya rito ay siya rin ay matinding pinag-aaralan ang paghanap ng solusyong ito. Kaya sabi ni Angie itong April 9 ay tatalakayin sa ating Cabinet.

On April 9, yun ay Bataan Day, Veteran's day rin ninyo yon. Gaganapin natin ang Cabinet meeting sa Bataan alang-alang sa beterano ng Pilipinas, at ang priority agenda item ay kung papano natin hanapan ng solusyon itong malaking pagkukulang — 15 to 18 billion — ng pondo para mabayaran yung mga arrears ng Veterans benefits. Kaya iniimbita namin si Colonel de Ocampo na dumalo sa Cabinet meeting na yon bilang isang resource person para paghanap ng solusyon ng arrears ng Veterans benefits.

Ang aking mensahe sa henerasyon ko at sa mga bata pang henerasyon, sikapin natin na ang pagmamahal natin sa ating bayan ay maging kasing-tindi ng pagmamahal na inalay ng ating mga beterano. Sikapin nating ipakita ang pagmamahal na ito sa paggalang sa ating mga beterano, at sa pagtutulongan mataguyod ang adhikain ng mga beterano para sa kalayaan, kapayapaan at kaunlaran.

Higit sa lahat, pag-ibayuhin natin ang ating pagsisikap upang magapi na ang problema ng kahirapan, ang pangunahing salot sa ating lipunan ngayon. Sa ganitong paraan lamang masasabi ng mga nakababatang pilipino na karapat-dapat sila sa mga inialay ng ating mga beterano.

Kaya muli kayo, ating mga Veterans sa ating Veterans week, mabuhay mula sa sambayanang nagpapasalamat.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA'S Speech during the Veterans General Assembly. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230051/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7650&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Commemoration of Araw ng Kagitingan

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Commemoration of Araw ng Kagitingan

[Delivered at the Dambana ng Kagitingan, Mt. Samat Shrine, Pilar, Bataan, April 9, 2002]

Thank you very much, Secretary Reyes.

Our other appointive officials of the Philippine government; Ambassador Ricciardone and our friends from America — and I would like to welcome those veterans who came here all the way from the U.S. to celebrate this day with us; Ambassador Ara and our friends from Japan; Governor Roman and the other officials and citizens of the province of Bataan — the province which is number one in human development index and I congratulate them again for this achievement; Colonel de Ocampo and our other beloved veterans and their sons and daughters; other members of the diplomatic corps; other distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

At ‘yung ating mga turista na narito. Mas marami ang ating crowd ngayon keysa noong isang taon dahil sa intinde ko marami ay mga turista nanggaling sa iba’t ibang lugar. At narinig ko kay Governor Roman na ‘yung resorts ng Bataan ay fully booked itong buong summer. Ibig sabihin noon umuobra ‘yung ating holiday economics.

I am honored to be once again one with you on this hallowed ground. History lives in this place. The soldiers who died here continue to steer the pulse of our republic by their courage and heroism.

The fall of Bataan involved three nations that are today’s partners for peace, development and security. From mortal combat in these mountains and fields, we have now converged into an alliance against poverty and terrorism for progress and prosperity in this part of the world.

The lessons of war always break into lessons of peace. From destruction, we build new ramparts of freedom, democracy and progress. From enmity and prejudice, we build bonds of understanding, cooperation and solidarity. From hatred, we build compassion, justice and shared human excellence.

We are honored by the presence of our American allies. We have shared battles and struggles across decades, and today we stand shoulder to shoulder in yet another historic fight, the fight against terrorism.

We are also gratified by the presence of our Japanese friends. We were enemies during the second World War, but today Japan is the Philippines’ foremost ally in our war against poverty because it is by far our biggest source of official development assistance.

The twin wars against terrorism and poverty are a struggle that may even be more formidable than the wars of the past. And we cannot relent until we finish the enemy, decisively and permanently.

We pay homage to those soldiers who fought not only in Bataan but also in Corregidor and the other battlegrounds of the Philippine campaign during the second World War. We likewise honor today all our heroes and veterans of other campaigns: Vietnam; Korea; battles in our own land against insurgency and secessionism; today’s war against the global threat of terror.

Our heroes have given the ultimate sacrifice that many of us have never been asked to give. But many of us have been touched by the cruelty and anguish of war. Some of us are numbed by the loss — a spouse, a brother or sister, a relative or friend.

Those of us who are never called to give the supreme sacrifice like our soldiers, feel a gratitude that can never be fully expressed. For the soldier fights so that we can live normal lives, advance the prosperity of our own families, govern ourselves effectively, speak freely and achieve our destiny as a nation and people.

Bataan has become a symbol of the greatest and noblest suffering our people have ever known. After Bataan fell on April 9, 1942, all its American and Filipino survivors were marched from various points in this province to the train station in San Fernando, Pampanga. Among those who were in that March was my father's brother, Angel Macapagal. Thousands of American and Filipino soldiers perished in this Death March. The others were racked with fever, malaria, dysentery and untold hunger.

When they reached San Fernando, the men of Bataan were packed into box cars for the four-hour train ride to Capas, Tarlac. Thousands more died during that trip. At Capas, they were made to march the last seven kilometers to Camp O'Donnell. Many of those who survived the 105-kilometer journey from Bataan to Tarlac would die of hunger and illness at the camp, which subsequently became their burial ground.

Let us never forget. Let not our children forget the cost of war and the price we have to pay for it. We implore the almighty to guide us so we shall never again pay such a price as we paid in Bataan.

We, of the present generation, should know of these steep sacrifices and be inspired by them. And being inspired, we should look forward to the challenges of the future. Our vision is to ensure a better life and a brighter future for our people. The sacrifices of the past should not be in vain. They must be the leaven in which we shape the destiny of succeeding generations.

Even as I speak — as mentioned by Ambassador Ricciardone — Filipino and American soldiers are engaged in training exercises against a common enemy in Basilan. The Balikatan exercises are geared towards rooting out terrorists wherever they may hide, in darkness or daylight. Once again, Filipino and American soldiers are working side by side to make the world a safer place for all of us. And in this fight, Japan is equally our partner.

On this same platform last year, I said that poverty is the worst enemy, and asked you, our dear veterans to help us wage the war against poverty. The fight against terrorists is also a fight against poverty. So, I once again ask you to help us wage this relentless war. For even in your advanced years, you are our living examples of patriotism and nation-building.

But as much as we need the help of our veterans, they and their dependents need our own so that they can live out their lives in dignity. To the present generation then I ask of you, let us care for the veterans to show our debt of gratitude for their sacrifices.

My administration will continue to serve the welfare of our veterans as part of our overall programs to fight poverty and improve on past services. I am deeply aware of the concerns of the veterans, my father having been an underground financial officer of the guerrilla movement during the second world war. We shall continue to pay attention to the concerns of our veterans and greater attention than in the past. I cannot allow our soldiery, past and present, to be left behind in the wayside of national progress.

The Philippine veterans affairs office or PVAO has — under our instruction — renewed its drive to serve the veterans better and improve their general welfare.

Its priority is simple and straightforward — reduce red tape and remove the bottlenecks to efficient service. The PVAO has embarked on an information technology enhancement program. Its key result areas are the following:

* a veterans website to be launched today, which will enable the veterans to determine immediately the status of your claims from anywhere in the world and to communicate instantly to the PVAO their complaints and suggestions.

- * a document tracking system using bar coding technology to pinpoint delays in processing, prevent document losses, and uphold the first come-first serve rules in claims processing.
- * a document imaging system to preserve vital records of veterans and facilitate the search and retrieval of these documents when needed.
- * a document storage management system to organize and properly store records.
- * a single, authoritative veterans id based on the submission, validation and authentication of baseline documents.
- * and finally, a reengineering of the claims of the transaction process to simplify procedures and speed up paperwork.

This program will be fully operational within six months. This will hasten the cleaning up of the pensioners' list so that our limited funds can be directed to the genuine veterans and their families.

To solve the problem of delayed, misplaced or illegally encashed pension checks, PVAO has shifted from the postal system to the bank remittance program as its mode of distributing pensions.

The 'Biyaya Agad' program has been launched to allow the immediate processing of old-age pension for the surviving spouses of veteran pensioners, as well as the payment of burial assistance for them.

The integrity of the pension system is PVAO's first step to enable veterans welfare. Then it will move on to the broader programs of social amelioration.

For instance, the Veterans Memorial Medical Center has solved the shortage in the supply of medicine by purchasing equivalent and alternative drugs from other pharmaceutical companies and changing some of its procurement policies.

The PVAO assures us that it will move on to other areas as we build its resource base. We need to do this — build the resource base of PVAO because the arrearages in veterans' benefits that I inherited amounts to about 20 billion pesos and still counting. How to raise this amount to cover the arrearages is a major challenge that needs the joint effort of Congress, the Executive, and the veterans themselves.

I am instructing Secretary Angelo Reyes to pursue his idea of the commercial development of the golf course area of the Veterans hospital, developing it not as a golf course but as a commercial center to raise funds for paying the arrearages.

Our Congressmen, who are concerned with veterans welfare have also suggested other ways of raising funds, like selling our prime properties in Japan to fund the arrearages. And I have also agreed with this in principle, and I ask Secretary Camacho, who is in-charge of raising funds to take care of the sale of our properties in Japan.

I have also suggested to the Philippine Veterans Bank that in behalf of the veterans community, they should enter into a compromise plan with the navy for the development of the area that the veterans and the navy are disputing in Fort Bonifacio. And I have here Admiral Hingco listening, and I am instructing Admiral Hingco to also join the veterans bank in the joint development of this area for the benefit of both funding the veterans arrearages and the modernization of the navy. All these ideas and other ideas will be the subject matter of our cabinet meeting today to be held right after this ceremony. Itong Cabinet meeting na ito'y gaganapin dito mismo sa bataan, ang pugad ng kagitingan. At itong Cabinet meeting na ito ay dedekado sa dakilang beteranong filipino.

We must do all these for our veterans because we can never truly enjoy the blessings of peace and appreciate the value of human life unless we recall the sacrifices of war.

Our task is to develop the habits of thought and of action that our veterans became known for in order to achieve our national goals — discipline, fortitude, a tough spirit to stretch the limits of human capacity.

On this day then, let us honor the sacrifices of our war veterans by rededicating ourselves to the task of creating a brighter future for our country.

Let us all work together, and harder than ever, to win the battles against poverty and terrorism; to win the struggles for democracy, independence and freedom.

May the Almighty bless once more this hallowed ground. And all of us, may we all bow our heads in obedience to his supreme will for peace, harmony and the good of all mankind.

Mabuhay ang ating mga beterano! Mabuhay ang dakilang Pilipinas!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Commemoration of Araw ng Kagitingan. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230040/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7649&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 55th Commencement Exercises of the Manuel Enverga University

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 55th Commencement Exercises of the Manuel Enverga University

[Delivered in Lucena City, Quezon, April 10, 2002]

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Puwede na kayong umupo.

Maraming salamat Governor Enverga sa inyong pagpakilala sa akin. At maraming salamat sa maraming beses na inimbata ninyo ako dito sa Enverga University.

Matagal na akong pumupunta rito, Senador pa ako. Pero siyempre nagpapalit yung mga estudyante so always for the first time nakikilala na naman tayo.

Binabati ko rin si President Laurel ng University Foundation. At bilang patunay na akoy hindi isang stranger eto nga retrato namin nung isang pagbisita ko dito nung akoy senador pa.

Binabati ko lahat ng mga teachers na narito. At nandito rin yung ating kasama mula sa malacañang, si Presidential Adviser for Southern Tagalog, si PA Cesar Sarino na narito, at saka si Presidential Assistant for Education, si Mona Valisno na narito rin.

Kanina nakita ko tumatakbo dito sa Isle kasama ni Governor Enverga si Vice Governor Talabong kaya binabati ko rin siya. Actually hindi sila nahuli, tayo ang nag-umpisa ng maaga kasi nakita ko sa program two o'clock dapat itong graduation, one o'clock tayo nagsimula.

Kaya mabuti na lang yung parating handa at parating ahead of time kasi yon ay isang hamon ng darating na century: how to be there ahead of the others.

Alam niyo si Governor Enverga kung bakit nga ilang beses ng inimbata ako sa eskwelahan nila, dahil iyong aming tatay, pinapaalala niya sa akin ngayon, ay magkasama sa Kongreso. Alam ko iyon eh na magkasama sila sa kongreso pero mayroon pang sinabi si Willy na sila ay halos seatmate dahil iyong sitting arrangement sa kongreso noon ay alphabetical order — iyong P at saka iyong Q magkasunod, iyong Congressman from Pampanga at saka iyong Congressman from Quezon magkatabi tuloy. Kaya ako, bagamat nanggagaling sa Pampanga ay malapit ako dito sa Quezon.

And so today, my dear students, I congratulate our graduates as I commend the administrators and staff of the Enverga University for your continued zeal and commitment in the pursuit of academic excellence and social relevance. In this region, academic excellence and social relevance, you are all partners, our partners for national progress.

On this day, you, the graduates, leave your university lectures behind. You will now be the speakers and authors of our nation's future. The key lesson of any commencement is that the world is now in your hands. The future becomes your responsibility. You can no longer lean upon your teachers for hints or answers. You have to step forth on your own.

As you line up your sights on the professional horizon, there are several things you must keep in mind.

Iyong isa, gusto man natin o hindi, almost all our national concerns have become globalized. In today's marketplace, ideas, discoveries, technology, money, and human resources move quickly from one country to another. Competition is keen, we must constantly keep up with others.

Also, we must all realize, you must realize, that the key to progress is information and communications technology which is the primary vehicle of the world today. Everyday, we must be able to cope with new ways of organizing and utilizing information so that we can keep up with the demands of growth, stability, and survival. Those who cannot keep up will fall along the wayside.

We live in a rapid stream of perpetual change. This means we must keep on training ourselves, chasing knowledge, learning multiple jobs and dealing with complex problems. It is an awesome challenge and responsibility and it never relents. In line with these imperatives, we need to provide all filipinos with quality and relevant education. We need an empowered and literate citizenry. We need to create more opportunities for employment and wealth, which translate to higher sustained economic growth.

Our victory against poverty depends on productivity enabled by education. We must stop the vicious system of one generation inheriting the poverty of a previous one and passing it on to succeeding generations. The task begins in our schools. Our goal is for every Filipino to find gainful employment.

Noong ako ay naging presidente, ang dinatnan kong unemployment rate ay 11.3 percent. Pagkatapos ng isang taong pagka-presidente ko, itong unemployment rate ay bumaba sa 10.3 percent dahil nadagdagan ng trabaho para sa isang milyon at kalahating pilipino.

Ngunit ang 10.3 percent unemployment rate ay mataas pa rin. At ang napakataas na unemployment rate ay nandoon sa metro manila — halos 20 percent, kaya maraming dissatisfied ngayon sa metro manila. Kailangan pa tayong maghanap ng trabaho para sa dalawang milyon at kalahati pang pilipino pagdating ng 2004, or going into 2004. And to do this, we will vigorously pursue employment generation, employment preservation, employment enhancement and employment facilitation.

Employment generation, this means creating new opportunities in the labor market through four components of our medium-term Philippine development plan to fight poverty.

The first component of our medium-term Philippine development plan to fight poverty is a philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. Under this philosophy, the way to fight poverty is to create jobs.

To create jobs, we must attract investments.

To attract investments, we must attend to macro-measures and concerns. We are attending, we must attend to basics like infrastructure. Our priorities include telecommunications facilities, roads, infrastructure for the modernization of agriculture and mass transport infrastructure. This will create engineering and other jobs in construction, telecommunications and transport.

Kaya nakita ko may mga engineering dito, 'di ba, sa linyang ito? So i hope you will find those jobs because we are promoting infrastructure.

We will further explore labor-intensive activities in infrastructure development. Kasi may infrastructure na capital-intensive, may infrastructure na labor-intensive ang pag-construct. Kaya sabi ko kay Secretary Datumanong, dapat labor-intensive ang ating mga methods.

Also, in pursuing the philosophy of free enterprise to create jobs, we are designing policies to develop our capital market. We will set up a secondary housing mortgage market, an asset management company, and a provident fund for overseas Filipinos. This will create jobs in the financial sector.

And, indeed, in Metro Manila — kasi nagdadala ako ng jobs fair tuwing mayroon akong graduation ceremony — doon sa Metro Manila, our jobs fair for graduating students are producing many jobs in the financial sector.

Preparing our growth sectors for the future enables us to tap the opportunities of the 21st century to create jobs. We are promoting fast growing industries where high value jobs are most plentiful. One of them, as i said earlier, is information and communications technology or ICT. And I am glad that we have in this row, right, information technology graduating students.

Our English literacy and the aptitude and skills of our great Filipino workers give us a competitive edge in ICT. Filipino workers are ranked number one in the field of ICT in the world today — number one among knowledge workers. And we will continue to develop the skills of our knowledge workers to meet the needs of the ICT sector where high value postings are most plentiful.

Let me give you examples: even now, there are already many jobs available in ICT. The lowest paying job in ICT, the simplest job, is the job for call center agents. But these call center agents, many of them earn a starting salary of P15,000 at iyan ang pinaka-simple pa sa ICT. Then we go to the most sophisticated jobs in software development where analysts say we and India are the two countries which will most likely be the centers of software development in ICT in this coming decade.

We are one of two developing countries as the likely world centers for software development in this decade kaya doon tayo pinaghahanap ng trabaho.

And to prepare our youth to be the next generation of knowledge workers, we are upgrading math and science teaching in basic education, and also increasing the number of teachers to improve the quality of instruction. This creates jobs for teachers, 20,000 new items this year, especially in math and science. And I see in this row, we have our education graduates.

To improve the quality of education as required by the new economy, we are also increasing the number of textbooks per student. This creates jobs in the paper and printing industry.

Aside from ICT, we also have the competitive edge in tourism, in the natural wonders of our country and the natural warmth of our people. We are promoting tourism as a key employment generator.

I understand that here in Lucena where you are lucky you already have a hotel — ano iyon, Queen Margaret hotel ba ang tawag doon? Eh, doon nga sa Legaspi, may mt. Mayon sila wala naman silang hotel. Kailangan talaga ang hotel para sa tourism. And I understand there are other hotels coming up as well, so these are jobs that will be made available to you.

Yesterday in Bataan, i learned that the resorts in Bataan are fully booked for the summer. Our holiday economics is working, and I hope it is the same in Quezon province.

Kanina, nandoon kami ni Governor Enverga sa Bondoc Peninsula. Sabi nung anak ng Mayor ng Buenavista, thank you for letting the government employees have the option of working four days a week, ten hours a day. Now, I am so sunburned because I am always with my father going out for weekend vacations. Kaya talagang umuubra iyong holiday economics kahit na nagbabatikos iyong mga tao sa akin.

Aside from the philosophy of free enterprise, the second component of our medium-term Philippine development plan to fight poverty is agricultural modernization founded on social equity. We expect agricultural modernization to generate one million new jobs.

The third component of our fight against poverty is a social bias in our development plan. This will create further job opportunities such as in the construction of mass housing. Taun-taon, magtatayo ng isandaang libong tirahan para sa mga manggagawa at limampung libong pabahay para sa higit na maralita. Kaya mayroon tayong employment opportunities sa construction sa housing industry. At mayroon tayong espesyal na proyekto para sa mga kabataang maralita ng mga lungsod na hindi na makakapag-aral ngunit wala pa silang trabaho — iyong out-of-school youth — ito ay iyong emergency employment program. Maaari silang magtagpi ng bubong, mag-ayos ng railing, mag-guwardiya ng eskuwelahan sa kanilang barangay, maglinis ng kalsada o estero o iba pang emergency employment. Pero kayo, hindi kayo mage-emergency employment dahil kayo ay mayroong pinag-aralan, at inaasahan natin na tayo ay magkakaroon ng paraan na kayo ay may trabaho.

Ten point three percent ang unemployment rate, mahirap iyon, marami iyon, at inaasahan natin na sa loob ng apat na taon tatlong taon, dalawang taon, sana bumaba ito. Pero, in the meantime, hahanap tayo ng trabaho kailangan kahit saan mahanap, pilipinas o ibang bansa. Hindi natin patakaran iyong nage-export ng labor pero kinikilala natin na kung may demand sa ibang lugar para sa labor natin, ipaghanda natin iyong ating mga estudyante para qualified sila sa opportunities na iyon. Kaya nasisiyahan ako dito sa mga nakaputi natin, itong ating mga marine sciences, itong ating mga sea engineers and merchant marines, dahil isang malaking trabaho sa human resource intensive, skills intensive service sector ay iyong ating sea farer professionals.

At isa rin, dahil iyong mga nag-practice ng population planning nung last generation, ngayon matatanda na iyong population na iyon — they're an aging population, kulang naman sila sa population of the productive age dahil nag-family planning nga eh, bumaba iyong birth rate — kulang tuloy ng mga nurses na mag-aalaga sa mga matatanda. So, therefore, there is again that other employment opportunity. And I congratulate Enverga University dahil sa darating na school year, kayo ay magkakaroon na ng bachelor of science in nursing para dadami pa lalo ang trabaho ng ating kabataan ng lalawigan ng Quezon.

Hindi lamang iyon, sabi ni Willy, itong Bachelor of Science kasi four years iyan, ay naku, pagkatapos na ng four years dami niyong trabahong opportunities sa iba't ibang lugar ng mundo, and I hope by four years pati dito sa Pilipinas.

Pero mayroon din mga short term courses, sabi ni Willy, iyong caregivers. Kaya ito, hindi natin patakaran na magbenta ng labor sa ibang bansa pero kung mayroong nagha-hire, patakaran natin na i-qualify ang ating labor force sa mga opportunities na iyon.

Dapat ngang magkaroon tayo ng bagong sistema din ng pag-aasikaso ng basura. Patakaran din iyon. Kaya ngayon pinapairal natin ang recycling at zero waste management gaya ng sinimulaan na sa smokey mountain at sinisimulan na sa montalban sa rizal. So this kind of environmental management ay nagbibigay din ng trabaho. Eto nakita ko, opening of bachelor of environmental science sa June 2002. Sana makakapag-aral din ang mga estudyante dito ng yun na nga, environmental management of waste. At iyon ay isang malaking employment opportunity rin sa darating na panahon dahil sa ating increasing urbanization.

Whether in the urban areas or in the countryside, we will make Microfinance a cornerstone in our fight against poverty. Ang ibig sabihin nito, maliliit na paluwagan para sa maliliit na negosyo — self-employment. Kaya kung balak natin na magbigay ng paluwagan sa tatlong daang libong kababaihan bawat taon, ibig sabihin nito ay trabaho para sa tatlong daang libo bawat taon. Itong micro financing, iyong negosyo ay maliit, you do not hire others — ikaw lang. Parang ikaw ay isang seamstress na nagtatanggap ng orders o manikurista na nagho-home service o gumagawa ka ng fishball — iyong ikaw lang — ganoon kaliit. So you don't hire others, but you employ yourself. Iyan ang isang malaking ginagamit nating patakaran din for employment.

Kaya itong araw na ito ay nagdala ako ng jobs fair din dito sa inyong graduation. At gusto kong ipahayag so far ang resulta: mayroon kayong 145 na nag-register para sa jobs fair, iyong anim ay na-hire na, at may siyam na nag-register sa TLRC para nga dito sa microfinance. Itong jobs fair ay ongoing pa rin at ito itutuloy after today, tuloy pa rin ito doon sa public employment service office ng DOLE dito sa Lucena.

Ngayon, iba pang programa natin na nagbibigay ng trabaho. Wala pang kuryente ang marami nating barangay kaya araw-araw nagkakabit tayo ng kuryente sa apat na barangay, four barangays a day until the end of my term in 2004. Ito ay nagbibigay rin ng trabaho maging sa construction at maging din sa mga bagong pagkakataon na nagbibigay ng isang pamayanan na may kuryente na. Halimbawa, ôpag walang kuryente, walang irrigation; pero ôpag may kuryente, puwedeng mag-irrigate, puwedeng maglagay ng storage facilities, puwedeng magbigay ng dagdag na trabaho.

We will intensify efforts to promote small and medium enterprises, or SME's, especially in the countryside. Ito rin ay magbibigay ng trabaho dahil labor intensive ang mga SME's. Ang kaibahan ng Micro at saka SME, iyong SME maliit ang puhunan pero nagha-hire kayo ng iba; iyong Micro, maliit ang puhunan at ikaw, it's for you as a one-man team or a mom-and-pop-operation.

Maliban sa free enterprise, agricultural modernization at social bias, the fourth component of our national agenda is improving moral standards and the rule of law. How? We must strengthen justice and the enforcement of law and order. This provides job opportunities for lawyers and law enforcers.

Last December, for instance, we hired 1,700 new policemen, college graduates lahat; and this year, we are, hiring 4,000 more new policemen.

To attain our full potential as a nation, we are coming to terms with the fundamental issues in Mindanao. In Mindanao, there is war because there has been much economic exclusion in Mindanao, especially against our muslim brothers. Thus, even as we wage war in Mindanao, we must address the cause of war. We must reverse the economic exclusion of our muslim brothers and bring economic development to them. This means jobs in Mindanao, especially in muslim Mindanao. Bakit ko sinasabi ito sa inyo, taga Quezon kayo? Dahil maraming pumupunta sa Mindanao para sa job opportunities.

Iyong aking lolo, the late Juan Macaraeg, siya ay naging engineer dito sa quezon, sa Lucena kaya ang nanay ko ay nag-aral dito sa lucena, sa kindergarten. Pero pagkatapos noon, siya ay nakakuha ng trabaho bilang manager ng Sta. Clara Lumber doon sa Mindanao. Kaya, from Quezon, lumipat sila ng Mindanao.

Iyon muli ang ginagawa natin: kung gusto nating maiwasan ang giyera pa, kailangan iyong development. Kaya there will be opportunities in mindanao for the more adventurous of our graduates, even here from Quezon.

Aside from employment generation, our labor policy consists of employment preservation, employment enhancement and employment facilitation.

Employment preservation means pro-active dispute interventions, making the cost of doing business in the country more competitive, and forging multilateral and bilateral labor agreements and arrangements for overseas employment. Gaya ng sabi ko, iyong nurses, iyong seamen, ang information technology.

Employment enhancement means improving worker competency — kagaya nung gagawin ng TLRC — productivity and work values. We can do this through better work conditions, remuneration and welfare programs.

Employment facilitation means developing and improving access of Filipino workers to employment opportunities and alternatives. It also means providing stop gap measures for those who are not prepared for the demands of the labor market.

Kaya iyong peso — iyong public service employment office, iyong nag-organize ng jobs fair niyo — iyon ay bahagi doon. It also includes the expansion and enhancement of the philippine job network. Mayroon dito sa inyong jobs fair iyong Jobnet so you can look for a job on the internet. And as I said, we do jobs fairs like the one we are doing now here in your university, it also includes the provision of vocational guidance and employment counselling. All these are facets of job facilitation.

Kaya kung nahihirapan kayo na maghanap ng trabaho — and I will not be surprised if many of you will have difficulties in finding jobs — then you will go to peso for job counselling. Pero talaga ang hint ko sa inyo, ang trabaho ay nandoon sa information technology.

All these are what we try to do so that as you graduate, you will have a good chance to land a job and have a good future.

And so today, I welcome you graduates of Enverga University, to the world of the working Filipino, the world of the great Filipino worker.

At sana gamitin ninyo ang inyong mga talino para sa ikabubuti ng lahat hindi lamang para sa inyong sarili — although, karapatan ninyo iyon, siyempre dapat ikinabubuti ninyo, hanapbuhay ang hanapin ninyo — pero sa ibabaw noon, sana kapag kayo ay nagtatrabaho na, tulungan ninyo ako sa pagpapaunlad ng sambayanang Pilipino.

Congratulations at maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 55th Commencement Exercises of the Manuel Enverga University. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230034/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7648&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 50th Commencement Exercises of the Central Luzon State Colleges (CLSU)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 50th Commencement Exercises of the Central Luzon State Colleges (CLSU)

[Delivered in Muñoz, Nueva Ecija, April 11, 2002]

Ako ay nasisiyahan na makapiling kong muli ang CLSU community lalo na ngayong nakaharap ang ating bansa sa dalawang dakilang hamon: ang kahirapan ng maraming mamamayan at ang hindi maiwasang globilisasyon. At bilang sagot sa mga hamong ito, kailangan nating bigyang diin ang napakaselang pangangailangan para sa kaunlaran ng agrikultura at kanayunan.

Tungkulin nating iangat ang antas ng produksyon at sektor ng pagsasaka hindi lamang upang magkaroon ng sapat na pagkain kundi upang magkaroon ng kakayahang makipagkumpetensiya ang ating mga produktong ini-export.

Sa ganitong paraan lamang natin makakayang palakasin ang ating market economy sa kabukiran. Una, iangat ang kalagayang pangkabuhayan ng nakararaming taumbayan na umaasa sa agrikultura. Pangalawa, makawala sa pressure na gustuhin man natin o hindi, nariyan na ang globilisasyon.

Ang mga tinukoy kong hamon at gawain ang dahilan kung bakit ang aking administrasyon ay naglalaan ng sapat na atensiyon at enerhiya sa pagbuo ng trabaho sa sektor ng agrikultura at pamayanan kasama ang modernisasyon ng agrikultiiri-nakasalalay social equity lalo na sa sektor ng pagkain.

Nasisiyahan ako dahil sa maikling panahon, nagsisimula na nating makamtan ang mga importanteng inroad, kagaya ng certified seeds, hybrid rice, at job fairs. Ngunit ito ay isang malawakang trabaho. At hindi ito magagawa ng pamahalaan nang nag-iisa.

Kaya nagpapasalamat ako sa CLSU. Ginawa ng CLSU ang mga unang hakbang para suportahan ang mga programang inumpisahan natin. Sa paglaban natin sa kahirapan, ang unang kailangan ay ang pagkakaroon ng trabaho. Binabati ko ang CLSU dahil mula noong birthday ko noong April 5 hanggang ngayong araw na ito, nagsagawa ng tuloy-tuloy na job fairs ang CLSU.

Ang pangalawang kailangan natin sa paglaban sa kahirapan ay modernisasyon ng agrikultura na nakasalalay sa social equity dahil nasa kanayunan ang marami sa ating mga mahihirap.

Nasisiyahan din ako sa kooperasyon ng CLSU sa Philrice para maging sentro ng hybrid rice production. Magsisimula ito sa Mayo sa isang daan at limampung hektarya ng lupa ng CLSU. Ang lupaing ito ay kikita ng P50,000 bawat hektarya o P7.5 milyon bawat cropping, o P15 milyon bawat taon na makakadagdag sa pangangailangang pinansyal ng CLSU at magbibigay rin dito ng isang libong trabaho.

Isa itong magandang halimbawa at modelo ng sariling sikap para sa ibang state colleges and universities. Kaya inatasan ko si CHED Chair Ester Garcia na bigyan ng instruksyon ang lahat ng mga state colleges and universities na gamitin ang kanilang mgaland grant at gayahin ang magandang halimbawa ng CLSU.

Ang aking panawagan ay para sa sama-samang pagsisikap mula sa lahat ng sector—gobyerno, industriya, akademya at kabataan. Kayong mga magtatapos ngayong 2002, dapat na magsikap tayong lahat na maitayo ang ating ekonomiya at bansa, lalo na't ang CLSU ang nangungunang institusyon sa edukasyong pagsasaka sa ating bansa.

Ang panawagan ko sa mga magsisipagtapos ay ialay ang inyong mga sarili upang maitayong muli ang lakas ng sektor ng agrikultura at pamayanan.

Naiintindihan nating kailangan ninyong isaisip ang inyong mga karera, ang kasiguruhang magkakaroon kayo ng trabaho para sa inyo at sa inyong pamilya.

Ngunit bilang Pilipino, hinihiling ko sa inyong mga graduating students na bigyan ng espesyal na konsiderasyon ang pagpasok sa mga karerang magbibigay ng kontribusyon lalo na sa mga sektor ng agrikultura at pamayanan.

Mapapalad kayong mga magtatapos sa pagkakaroon ng pribelehiyong tumanggap ng edukasyon mula sa isang nangungunang institusyon tulad ng CLSU na kilalang-kilala sa kahusayan lalo na sa agrikultura at teknolohiyang pangsakahan.

Kinikilala ng CHED ang CLSU bilang center of excellence sa agricultural at fisheries education. May reputasyon ang CLSU sa pagiging topnotcher sa agricultural engineering board examination ang mga nagtatapos. Gayundin sa licensure examination para sa veterinary science and medicine. Kayo ang nanguna noong 1998, 2000 at 2001.

Maraming estudyante ng CLSU ang nanalo na ng mga awards tulad ng Ten Outstanding Students of the Philippines at Ten Outstanding Marketing Students. Mula noong 1984, sa 34 na outing sa rodeo competition na nilahukan ng rodeo team ng CLSU sa ibat ibang bahagi ng bansa, 27 championship ang kanilang natamo. Ang CLSU rin ang lumikha ng maraming leader sa edukasyon mula sa mga nagtapos at nagtuturo. May labing-anim na ring nagtapos sa CLSU ang naging pangulo ng state colleges and universities kabilang na si Dr. Undan ng CLSU.

Lumikha na rin ng iba pang mga katangi-tanging lider sa ibat ibang larang ang CLSU na pinatunayan ng tatlong TOYM award; tatlong outstanding engineers; tatlong TOWNS outstanding women in the nation's service; isang Pantas award mula sa PCARD bilang outstanding administrator sa katauhan ni Dr. Bataviata; anim na award sa fisheries research; isang award sa animal science research; at isang award sa agricultural journalism. As an adviser of the Metro Bank Foundation, I know that your faculty members are formidable. Some had been selected as Metrobank's most outstanding teachers. These teachers from CLSU have consistently carried the torch of effective and durable mentoring. Your president himself was a recipient of such national award as most outstanding agricultural engineer, most outstanding research administrator, the one holding the most outstanding Asian engineering achievement. You are blessed with leadership and excellence with all this, you deserve unrelenting support. Ang galing-galing talaga ng CLSU.

I am very proud that my family is a part of CLSU. CLSU evokes memories of my father. It was during my father's presidency that this institution was elevated from a college to a university.

Like many of the students and graduates of CLSU, my father was born in a nipa hut in a rural barrio in Central Luzon. He descended from a humble tenant who tilled three fourth of a hectare of riceland that did not belong to them. My father, when he was in elementary school, suffered real hunger and deprivation as a child. He was the only man with truly peasant origins to rise to the position of presidency. And I am very proud of this.

To achieve the goals of addressing poverty, a poverty that he experienced first hand in his childhood, my father resolved to bring the country into a new era through a number of simple but meaningful mission. Among these were the attainment of self-sufficiency in the staple food of our people, mainly rice and corn. He, likewise, launched a bold but well formulated socio-economic program, the first medium term development plan of our country, to put our country on the road to prosperity.

To a large extent, the conditions of his time helped the conversion of Central Luzon Agricultural College to a university. This, in turn, spurred his programs of social amelioration which are indelibly etched in the socio-economic landscape of this region. Today, CLSU has become a leading state university in agricultural education, engineering, veterinary medicine, agri-business and entrepreneurship, as well as in environmental and ecological conservation. You have a campus that harbors, values state-of-the-art research and development facilities. It is a wellspring of knowledge and social responsibility.

Speaking of social responsibility, at labas na ito sa mundo ng akademya, gusto kong bigyang pansin ang halaga ng applied research and technology. Ang produktibidad at efficiency ng ating mga kababayan ay naiiwan na ng ating mga kapitbahay sa Asya, Tsina, Vietnam, at Malaysia. Isa sa mga batayang paraan kung paano tayo makakahabol ay ang pagpapakilala at pagsasanay sa ating mga maliliit na magsasaka ng mga bagong teknolohiya.

Lubos kong pinagmamalaki na nabigyang-pansin ng CLSU ang pag-unlad sa pamamagitan ng tuloy-tuloy na applied technologies, ang pakikipag-ugnayan sa mga pandaigdigang programang magtuturo ng ibat ibang teknolohiya na pupwedeng gamitin sa Pilipinas. Halimbawa, ang relasyon ng CLSU sa Tsina na pinagkukunan natin ng rice technology, hindi lamang ng hybrid rice, kundi maging ng rice agricultural machinery. Ang relasyon din natin sa Israel na pinanggagalingan ng greenhouse technology.

Today, I am proclaiming a 20-hectare area in the CLSU reservation to be used for employees' housing and construction of dormitories for students. This is part of the continuing effort to strengthen the institutional and human resources of your university. This is indispensable to the sustained development and progress of your region. Sama-sama nating labanan ang kahirapan, ngunit hindi tayo maaaring sumugod sa laban nang walang dalang sandata. Naniniwala ako na ang susi sa isang mapayapang pagbabago ay ang pag-usbong ng bagong pag-ibig sa edukasyon ng bagong henerasyon. Ako ay lubos na naniniwala na ang pagpapalawig ng edukasyon ang siya nating magiging armas tungo sa mataas na antas ng ating pamumuhay partikular na ang pagbibigay ng atensiyon dito sa sciences, kasama ang agricultural science and engineering.

Sa ngayon, ang Pilipinas ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Filipino, kasama rito ang dakilang manggagawang magsasaka.

Mayroon talaga tayong competitive advantage sa ating human resource, skills intensive service sectors. Gamitin natin ang kaalaman n gating service sectors—math, science, engineering, information technology—nang maging mas dakila pa an gating magsasaka.

Ayon sa ibat ibang pag-aaral, ang dakilang manggagawang Filipino ang; nangunguna bilang knowledge worker sa mundo. Walang nakakataio sa dakilang manggagawang Filipino kung pag-uusapan ang kahusayan, dedikasyon at katapatan sa trabaho. Alam ito ng buong daigdig, at ito ay ating maipagmamalaki. Huwag nating iwanang walang sandata ang mga magsasaka upang magkaroon din ng kadakilaan at masabi ring nangunguna sila sa mga dakilang magsasaka sa buong mundo. Dapat magsilbing dahilan ito upang tayo ay lalong magsikap. Huwag tayong maging kampante na lamang, Huwag nating hayaang mawala ang tiwala at paghanga ng mundo sa dakilang manggagawang Filipino. Gamitin natin ang ating natutunan dito para patunayan ding ang magsasakang Filipino ay dakilang magsasakang Filipino na kaya ang hamon ng buong mundo. Dapat nating palakasin ang edukasyon tungo sa hinaharap.

Sa aking mga minamahal na nagsisipagtapos, sa gitna ng panganib ng bagong digmaan, ng terorismo at ng globilisasyon, ang pambihirang pag-angat ng sektor ng agrikultura ay siyang dapat magsilbing inspirasyon sa ating lahat upang pagsikapang makamit ang ating mga pangarap para sa ating bayan. Magtulungan tayo sa panibagong EDSA, ang bagong kilusan sa unang dekada ng siglo beinte uno, ang EDSA ang susugpo sa kahirapan. Malaki ang aking paniniwala na sa ating walang sawang pagpupunyagi at sa ating patuloy na panalangin sa Poong Maykapal ay makamtan din natin ang minimithing kaunlaran para sa bawat Filipino. Patuloy nating pagtibayin at palakasin ang ating pagkakaisa upang mas marami pa tayong makamit na tagumpay sa hinaharap. Magtulungan tayo para paunlarin ang ating bayan, ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Filipino na dapat tahanan din ng dakilang manggagawang magsasaka.

Kaya sa inyong mga graduating students, congratulations. Kailangan ko kayo para umunlad ang ating pagsasaka, umunlad ang ating bansa at masugpo natin ang kahirapan sa ating bansa.

Maraming salamat at good luck sa inyong lahat.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

Speech of President Arroyo during the 50th Commencement Exercises of the Central Luzon State University (CLSU)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 50th Commencement Exercises of the Central Luzon State University (CLSU)

[Delivered at the CLSU Campus, Muñoz, Nueva Ecija, April 11, 2002]

Maraming salamat, Dr. Undan sa inyong pagpakilala, sa inyong imbitasyon at sa Golden Grain Award na binigay n'yo sa akin.

Chairman ng CHED, Dr. Garcia; ating mga cabinet officials — Secretary Lorenzo, Secretary Diaz, Secretary Valisno; ang President Emeritus ng CLSU, si former President ng University, si President Battad; at ibat-ibang mga CLSU Board of Regents, Administration at Faculty; at ibang officials ng number one rice-producing province — pangu-nguna ni Governor Tommy Josen; 'yung isang Outstanding Alumnus ng CLSU, si Mayor Nestor Alvarez; 'yung kanyang congressman, si Congressman Violago; ang Chairperson ng PCSO, si Honeygirl Singson, na kasama ko rin ngayong araw na ito; ating mga graduates — graduating students pala. Hindi pa kayo naglilipat ng inyong tassle; kanilang mga magulang; mga alumni, magandang umaga sa inyong lahat. At congratulations sa ating mga graduating students.

Ako ay nasisiyahan na makapiling kong muli — pagkatapos nang maraming beses na napunta rito — ang CLSU community, lalo na ngayon na ang ating bansa ay hinaharap nang dalawang dakilang hamon: ang isa ay 'yung kahirapan ng marami nating taumbayan; at 'yung pangalawa 'yung hinding maiwasang globalisasyon.

Kailangan nating bigyan diin ang napakaselang pangangailangan para sa kaunlaran ng agrikultura at kanayunan bilang sagot natin sa mga hamon na ito dahil ito ay mag-aapekto sa malaking bahagi ng ating mga pamayanang taga-bukid na nasa ilalim pa rin ng poverty line. Ang trabaho ay iangat ang nibel ng produktibidad at pagkabisa ng ating sektor ng pansasaka upang makamit natin ang sapat na pagkain at kayang makipagkompetensya para sa ating produktong ine-export. Sa paraang ganito lamang makakaya natin palakasin ang ating market economy sa kabukiran, at unang iangat ang kondisyon ng pangkabuhayan ng nakararami sa ating taumbayan na umaasa sa agrikultura. At pangalawa, makaraos sa pressure nang gusto natin o hindi nandiyan na ang globalisasyon.

Ang mga tinukoy kong hamon at gawain ang dahilan kung bakit ang aking administrasyon ay nagbigay, nagbibigay ng malaking atensyon at enerhiya sa pagbuo ng trabaho sa sektor ng agrikultura at pamayanan kasama ng modernisasyon ng agrikulturang nakagabay sa social equity, nakasandal sa social equity umpisa sa mga batayang sektor ng pagkain.

Nasisiyahan ako na sa maikling panahon nakakamit na natin ang mga importanteng in road kagaya ng certified seeds, hybrid rice, job fair, ngunit malaki ang trabaho, at ang pamahalaan ay hindi makakagawa ng trabahong nag-iisa. 'Yung national government hindi niya kaya itong trabahong nag-iisa. Kaya ako ay nagpapasalamat sa clsu na ginawan ng clsu ang unang mga hakbang para suportahan ang mga programang inumpisahan natin.

Sa paglaban natin kontra sa kahirapan, ang unang kailangan ay magkaroon ng trabaho. Kaya binabati ko ang clsu dahil mula noong birthday ko noong april 5 hanggang itong araw na ito, ang clsu ay nag-host ng jobs fair. Itong araw na ito sa pagka-intinde ko, ang ating mga graduates ay bumibilang ng 793 ngunit ang jobs fair ay naglikas ng trabaho — 877. So, ibig sabihin noon kung 'yung ating mga graduates ay tatanggapin n'yo ang mga trabahong inaalok sa into sa jobs fair, lahat kayo ay may trabaho. Zero unemployment rate ang graduating students ng clsu.

Sa paglaban natin kontra sa kahirapan, ang pangalawang kailangan — pagkatapos ng trabaho — ay ang modernisasyon ng agrikultura sandal sa social equity dahil ang nakararami sa ating mahihirap ay nasa kanayunan. Ako rin ay nasisiyahan sa kooperasyon ng clsu sa philrice na maging sentro ng hybrid rice production. Ito ay magsisimula itong mayo para sa isangdaan at limampung hektarya ng lupa ng CLSU. Itong hectarage na ito na gagamitin ng CLSU para sa hybrid rice production ay makakaganansya ng 50,000 pesos bawat hektarya o 7.5 million pesos bawat cropping o 15 million pesos bawat taon, na magdadagdag para sa mga pansalaping pangangailangan ng CLSU at lilikha ng isang libong trabaho dito. Ito ay modelo ng sariling sikap at halimbawa para sa ibang state colleges and universities kaya inaatasan ko si Ched Ester Garcia na bigyan ng instruction ang lahat ng state colleges and state universities, sabihin sa kanila ‘yung ibang state colleges and universities na gamitin ang kanilang mga land grant para gayahin ang magandang halimbawa ng CLSU.

Talagang ang panawagan ay para sa sama-samang pagsisikap mula sa lahat ng sektor — gobyerno, industriya, akademya at kabataan, kayo, mga graduate ng taong 2002. All of us should rally around the great work na itayo muli ang ating ekonomiya at bansa. Lalo na, dahil ang CLSU ay isang nangungunang institusyon sa edukasyong pansasaka sa ating bansa. Ang panawagan ay para kayong mga nagtatapos ay sana ialay ninyo ang inyong sarili na itayo muli ang lakas ng ating mga sektor ng agrikultura at pamayanan.

Naiintindihan din natin, oo kailangan ipairal ninyo ang inyong mga karera na ang pangunahing layunin ay magkaroon ng siguradong trabaho para sa inyo at inyong mga pamilya. Ngunit bilang Pilipino, hinihiling ko sa inyo, kailangan ko kayo mga graduating students na magbigay ng espesyal na konsiderasyon na pumasok sa mga larangan ng karera na magbibigay ng kontribusyon lalo na sa mga sektor ng agrikultura at pamayanan.

Kayong mga nagtatapos ay mapalad na nagkaroon ng pribilehiyong tumanggap ng edukasyon mula sa isang nangungunang institusyon kagaya ng CLSU na kilalang-kilala sa kanyang sukat ng kagalingan lalo na sa agrikultura at teknolohiyang pansasaka.

Ang CLSU ay kinilala bilang center of excellence sa agricultural and fisheries education ng CHED. Ang mga nagtatapos sa CLSU ay may reputasyon na nagiging topnotcher sa Agricultural Engineering Board examination. Ang mga nagtatapos din sa CLSU ay nagiging topnotcher rin ng licensure examinations para sa Veterinary Science and Medicine. Kayo ay nagwagi noong 1998, year 2000 at 2001.

Ang mga estudyante ng CLSU ay nanalo na ng maraming award kagaya ng ten outstanding students of the Philippines at kagaya ng ten outstanding marketing students.

Ang Rodeo Team ng CLSU ay nanalo na sa dalawampu’t pitong championships sa rodeo competition sa buong-buong mga ibat-ibang bahagi ng bansa sa inyong tatlungpu’t apat na outing mula noong 1984.

At ang CLSU lumikha ng maraming lider sa edukasyon mula sa mga nagtatapos at nagtuturo, lalo na ‘yung mga labing-anim na naging mga pangulo ng state universities and colleges na taga-CLSU lahat at kabilang na rito ay si Dr. Undan ng CLSU.

Ang CLSU ay lumikha na rin ng iba pang mga katangi-tanging lider sa iba’t-ibang larangan na pinatunayan ng tatlong TOYM award, tatlong Outstanding Engineer, tatlong towns — ‘yung Outstanding Women in the Nation Service, isang pantas award mula sa PCARRD bilang Outstanding Administrator — si Dr. Battad yata ‘yon noong panahon niya, anim na award sa Fisheries Research, isang award sa Animal Science Research, isang award sa Agricultural Journalism. Kaya ang galing-galing ng CLSU. And I’m very proud of my family is a part of CLSU.

CLSU evokes memories of my father. It was during his time that this institution was elevated from a college to a university. Like many of the students and graduates of CLSU, my father was born in a nipa hut in a rural barrio in Central Luzon. He descended from a humble tenant who tilled three-fourths of a hectare of rice land that did not belong to them. My father when he was in elementary school suffered real hunger and deprivation as a child. He was the only man with truly peasant origins to rise to the position of presidency, and I am very proud of this.

To achieve the goal of addressing poverty, a poverty that he experienced first hand in his childhood, my father resolved to bring the country into a new era through a number of simple but meaningful missions. Among these were the attainment of self-sufficiency in the staple food of our people, mainly rice and corn. He likewise launched a bold but well-formulated socioeconomic program, the first medium-term development plan of our country, to put our country on the road to prosperity.

To a large extent, the conditions of his time helped the conversion of central Luzon agricultural college to a university. This in turn spurred his programs of social amelioration which are indelibly etched in the socioeconomic landscape of this region.

Today, CLSU has become a leading state university in agricultural education, engineering, veterinary medicine, agribusiness and entrepreneurship, as well as in environmental and ecological conservation. You have a campus that harbors various state-of-the-art research and development facilities. It is a wellspring of knowledge and social responsibility.

Speaking of social responsibility, lampas sa mundo ng akademya, gusto kong tumawag ng pansin sa halaga ng larangan ng applied research and technology. Ang produktibidad at efficiency ng ating mga magsasaka ay di hamak naiwan ng ating mga kapitbahay sa asya, tsina, vietnam, malaysia. Isa sa mga batayang paraan kung papano makakahabol tayo ay sa pamamagitan ng pagpapakilala at pagsasanay sa ating mga maliliit na magsasaka sa mga mas bagong teknolohiya. Lubos kong pinagmamalaki na bigyang pansin na ang clsu ay tuloy-tuloy na tinatayo ang kanyang pag-uunlad ng applied technologies ang kanyang programang nakikipag-ugnay sa pangmundong pinanggagalingan ng iba't-ibang teknolohiyang pwedeng gamitin sa pilipinas.

Halimbawa, 'yung relasyon ng clsu sa tsina na pinanggagalingan natin ng rice technology. Hindi lamang 'yung hybrid rice kungdi na rin 'yung rice agricultural machinery. 'Yung relasyon din niya sa israel na pinanggagalingan ng greenhouse technology.

At, as an adviser in the Metrobank foundation, I know that your faculty members are formidable. Some have been selected as Metrobank's most outstanding teachers. These teachers from CLSU have consistently carried the torch of effective and durable mentoring.

Your president himself was a recipient of such national awards as most outstanding agricultural engineer, most outstanding research administrator, the one holding the most outstanding asean engineering achievement. You are blessed with leadership and excellence.

With all these, you deserve unremitting support. And so, I'm indeed very grateful that you are all here today. Today, I am proclaiming a 20-hectare area in the CLSU reservation to be used for employee housing and construction of dormitories for students. This is part of the continuing effort to strengthen the institutional and human resources of your university. This is indispensable to the sustained development and progress of your region.

Sama-sama nating labanan ang kahirapan. Nguni't hindi tayo maaaring sumugod sa laban nang walang dalang sandata. Naniniwala ako na ang susi sa isang mapayapang pagbabago ay ang pag-usbong ng bagong pag-ibig sa edukasyon ng bagong henerasyon.

Ako ay lubos na naniniwala na ang pagpapalawig ng edukasyon ang siyang magiging pangunahing armas tungo sa mataas na antas ng ating pamumuhay, partikular ang pagbibigay ng atensiyon dito sa sciences kasama ng agricultural science and engineering.

Sa ngayon, ang pilipinas ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang pilipino, ang kasama nito ay ang dakilang manggagawang magsasaka. Talagang mayroon tayong competitive advantage sa ating human resource skills intensive service sectors. Gamitin natin ang kaalaman ng ating service sectors math, science, engineering, information technology sa maging mas dakila pa ang ating magsasaka. Ayon sa iba't-ibang pag-aaral, ang dakilang manggagawang pilipino ang nangunguna bilang knowledge workers sa mundo. Walang nakakatalo sa dakilang manggagawang pilipino kung ang pag-uusapan ay kahusayan, dedikasyon at katapatan sa trabaho. Alam ito ng buong daigdig, at ito ay ating ipinagmamalaki. Huwag nating iwanan na bigyan ng sandata ang magsasaka na magkaroon ng kadakilaan at masabi rin nangunguna sa mga dakilang magsasaka ng buong mundo.

Ito ay dapat magsilbing dahilan na tayo ay magsikap. Huwag tayo maging kampante na lamang. Huwag nating hayaang mawala ang tiwala at paghanga ng mundo sa dakilang manggagawang pilipino. Gamitin natin ang ating natutunan dito para ipatunay din na ang magsasakang pilipino ay dakilang magsasakang pilipino na kaya ang hamon ng buong mundo. Dapat nating palakasin ang edukasyon tungo sa hinaharap.

Sa aking mga minamahal na nagsisipagtapos, sa gitna ng mga panganib ng bagong digmaan sa terorismo at ng globalisasyon, ang pambihirang pag-angat ng sektor ng agrikultura ay siyang dapat magsilbing inspirasyon sa ating lahat para pagsikapang makamit ang ating mga pangarap para sa ating bayan.

Magtulungan tayo sa panibagong edsa, ang bagong kilusan sa unang dekada ng siglo beinte-uno, ang edsang susugpo sa kahirapan.

Malaki ang aking paniniwala na sa ating walang sawang pagpupunyagi at sa ating patuloy na panalangin sa poong maykapal ay makakamtan din natin ang minimithing kaunlaran para sa bawa't pilipino. Patuloy nating pagtibayin at palakasin ang ating pagkakaisa upang mas marami pa tayong makamit na tagumpay sa hinaharap.

Magtulungan tayo para paunlarin ang ating bayan, ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang pilipino na dapat tahanan din ng dakilang manggagawang magsasaka. Kaya kayong mga graduating students, congratulations! At gusto kong sabihin sa inyo, kailangan ko kayo para ganun umunlad ang ating pansasaka, umunlad ang ating bansa at masugpo natin ang kahirapan ng ating bansa.

Maraming salamat at good luck sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 50th Commencement Exercises of the Central Luzon State University (CLSU). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412231228/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7647&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Socialist International (SI) Asia-Pacific Committee Meeting

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Socialist International (SI) Asia-Pacific Committee Meeting

[Delivered at the PICC, Roxas Blvd., Manila, April 12, 2002]

Thank you very much, Mr. Ayala. Other leaders of the Socialist International, ladies and gentlemen.

First of all, welcome to the Philippines. And secondly, thank you for being our partners in fighting poverty.

The Socialist International has been a living part of our contemporary history. The nations governed by social democrat parties in Europe were among the first to lend unequivocal support to the accession of President Cory Aquino after the edsa revolution in 1986.

In more recent times, Bert Gonzales, who is now one of my Cabinet advisers, worked with socialist democrats within the foreign ministries of Spain and France as the Philippines was sinking into a political crisis in early 2000.

At that time, I was Vice President, and I had the opportunity — as mentioned by Mr. Ayala — to meet with him, the secretary general,

In London. This was before we had another EDSA revolution that brought my administration to where it is today.

My sincerest thanks to the leaders of the Socialist International for your abiding faith and support. I'm glad you are here in the Philippines. God must have inspired you to hold your meeting here at a time when we need to address burning issues in regional security, the harmony and solidarity of nations, and the future of democracy.

A major facet of the war against terrorism is being played out in our corner of the world. The Philippines is home to a minority of Muslims, but when viewed within ASEAN, we are home

To the most vibrant Christian minority of Southeast Asia. But when it comes to the fight against terrorism, we have unity in diversity. We have an agreement with Malaysia and Indonesia to join hands in depriving terrorists access or sanctuary in our common seas and the islands around them. This is in the context of an ASEAN declaration against terrorism, and also in the context of an even larger APEC declaration.

Enveloped in these alliances is the participation of American troops in training exercises so that our soldiers will be better equipped and better trained to fight the Abu Sayyaf threat in Southern Philippines. We are one with America and the international coalition to fight terrorism in any and all of the theaters of conflict. This is our policy and we shall not relent in its pursuit.

On the other horizon, the Philippines is blessed with a deeply rooted culture of peace. As president, I cannot allow a fratricidal war against our own people. The Asian way is more of peace than war. And in the pursuit of peace, I am supported by the social democrats in the Philippines, and even the social democrats in other parts of the world.

Norway and Sweden are helping in our peace negotiations with the revolutionary left. Our reaching out to these countries for support comes from the fact that the PDSP, a coalition partner of my government, is a member of the Socialist International. And through the PDSP, I have channeled my appeals for international support for peace in the Philippines and our region. And we had been greatly supported by Bert's counterparts in Northern Europe.

We've also reached out to the Islamic countries in shaping the paths of peace in Mindanao. The organization of the Islamic conference or OIC, was instrumental in the success of the 4-year negotiations for peace with the Moro National Liberation Front. And at present, Malaysia is a very welcome facilitator of our ongoing peace negotiations with the Moro Islamic liberation front.

And peace, I believe is gaining ground.

Over 16,000 rebel returnees have already been granted amnesty and are on their way to becoming reintegrated with mainstream society.

We will defeat terrorism, but we will not allow a religious war to happen in our region. We will join hands with America and the Islamic world to win the peace in the end for our people, for the people of ASEAN, for the people of all mankind.

The socialist democrats will be our enduring partner. Even as I speak, you are active in organizing inter-faith dialogues. Our social democrats in the Philippines are active in organizing inter-faith dialogues in Mindanao as part of our bid to isolate religious extremism from the mainstream Muslim and Christian communities.

The country needs peace to uplift the Filipino people and empower the communities. We need peace for progress, and we need peace to fight poverty and destitution. With peace, more farms can be tilled, more bounties from the sea can be harvested, more crops can be reaped and sold.

Our fight against terrorism is part of our broader goal to fight poverty. Our vision of eradicating poverty within the decade is anchored on a comprehensive development plan that revolves around four major components:

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate

To the 21st century. We believe that this philosophy is the one that will create jobs especially in the neediest sector and areas, and will ease the burden of the poor;

The second component is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. This will bring economic development to the rural areas, where most of our poor live. This will also enable the poor to be participants and not mere beneficiaries of the development process;

The third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. We hope that this will bring immediate relief to the longest-suffering sectors living in the fringes of society;

The fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society. Because we need high moral standards to be the foundation for good governance.

We have been guided by real, visible and measurable targets, most of which were highlighted in my first State of the Nation Address to Congress last July.

Economic growth in 2001 created a million-and-a-half jobs in the Philippines, reducing both the unemployment and underemployment rates, and cushioning the negative impact of last year's global slowdown.

We pumped in an unprecedented 28 billion pesos for our agricultural modernization program to strengthen the social equity of our farmers and fisherfolk. We granted security of land tenure to a 150,000 urban poor families and 100,000 rural farm families. More than 34,000 low-salaried workers have already been given financial assistance for their housing needs.

We have identified more than 1,600 villages — we call them barangays — that are not served by any school buildings. By 2004, we hope to have school buildings in these barangays.

We've also stabilized the prices of prime commodities which make up the bulk of the market basket of the poor. The price of rice has been stable during my administration. We have also set up more than a thousand rolling stores all over the poor areas of our country to enable the poor access to even lower priced rice.

We have embarked on a program to enroll half a million individuals from the urban poor in the national health insurance program to give them access to affordable quality health services. But we have almost doubled that target. We have exceeded our target for health insurance coverage for the urban poor by more than 85 percent, and we have cut the prices of common medicines bought by the poor by one-half.

We are implementing the Grameen bank strategy for micro-financing, and we would like to cover at least 300,000 women every year.

We are also taking steps to safeguard our natural resources. A sustainable forest management program has been adopted to protect, develop and conserve our forests.

We are infusing common sense, discipline, accountability and integrity in governance, based on three principles: first, a sound moral foundation to guide our leadership at all levels; second, a philosophy of transparency in all government transactions; and third, an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

My government's obligation to the Filipino people is not a mere promise of a better life, it is a vision stated in specific terms and in terms of that vision, I would like to see a government being able to bring about an environment that puts food on the table, that create jobs, that provides relevant education, that gives shelter

To the neediest sectors.

Poverty is the primary enemy. There is more evil in being hungry, ignorant, sick and suffering from injustice. It is the duty of every free nation to work, to fight this evil in the world.

We are all affected by terrorism. We must all work together to wipe it out. We all recognize that poverty feeds terrorism. We must extend our present coalition for peace into a coalition for prosperity, and mount an earnest program for poverty eradication and economic development.

Until the underlying forces that make our poor vulnerable to exploitation are neutralized, the peoples of the world will never be able to live free of the dual scourge of poverty and terrorism. We are all in this together. We must act together, now.

Seeing you here gives me great hope and deeper faith that we will prevail. So to our dear friends, our brothers in the socialist international, thank you again for coming to our country. And thank you for your contributions to our peace and security, and for being with us in the struggle for democracy and human dignity.

Mabuhay! And God bless us all.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Socialist International (SI) Asia-Pacific Committee Meeting. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230019/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7646&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 23rd Commencement Exercises of the Philippine National Police Academy (PNPA)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 23rd Commencement Exercises of the Philippine National Police Academy (PNPA)

[Delivered at the Camp General Mariano N. Castañeda, Silang, Cavite, April 15, 2002]

Maraming salamat, Secretary Lina sa iyung napakagandang pagpakilala at sa iyung pagpahayag ng mga naabot na ng ating administrasyon at sa iyung paghingil na tayo'y magkaisa upang matuloy ang ating laban kontra sa kahirapan na matagumpay.

Cadet First Captain, please give 'tikas pahinga'.

Kagalang-galang na Pangalawang Pangulo ng Pilipinas, Vice President Teofisto T. Guingona; ang ating PNP Chief, si General Leandro Mendoza; ang deputy director General ng PNP, si General Ebdane; ang ating pangulo ng Public Safety College, si General Ramsey Ocampo; ang ating namumuno ng PNPA, si General Alejandro Gutierrez. Ay! Tama; at 'yung ibang mga officials nitong paaralan na ito; si Governor Maliksi; si Congressman Abaya; si Presidential Adviser Sarino; si Punongbayan Napoleon Beratio; at iba-ibang mga officials ng lalawigan ng Cavite at ng bayan ng silang; mga magulang ng ating mga nagtatapos itong araw na ito; ating mga bagong police officers; ladies and gentlemen.

Isang malaking pagbati ang pinapa-abot ko sa lahat ng mga nagtapos sa class 'sinag-laya' ng PNP Academy. Congratulations! Sa inyong lahat.

Ang panahon ng pagtatapos ay panahon ng pagpapasalamat. Unang-una, nagpapasalamat tayo sa inyong mga magulang, guro at administrador. At ako naman ay nagpapasalamat na kayo mga graduating students pinili ninyo maglingkod sa ating bansa bilang police professionals. Susubaybayan ko ang inyong mga karera dahil ngayon ako ang inyong commander-in-chief. Inaasahan ko na kayong mga bagong pulis, tayong mga naglilingkod sa pamahalaan, at lahat tayong pilipino ay magtutulung-tulongan upang magapi ang kahirapan, masugpo ang kriminalidad, at makamit ang katahimikan sa buong bansa.

Oh! By the way, I would like to acknowledge also Lt. Gen. Gregorio Camiling, representing the armed forces of the Philippines.

We are all proud of you. And now, we expect much of you. We expect you to fight criminality with all your might within the law. But we also expect you to show temperance, restraint and courage in the face of provocation and danger. We expect you to wield the iron hand of the law, but we also expect you to wield it in full respect for human rights. We expect from you loyalty, reform and achievement. We expect these to be the hallmark of your work as police professionals.

You have all the reason to have faith in yourselves that you will meet these expectations. You have all the reason in the world to be happy with your achievements in school, especially the six recipients of our awards for academic excellence. Your entry into the ranks of police officers will reinforce our efforts to build a competent, efficient and truly professional police force.

I believe that you have role models in PNP Chief Larry Mendoza and the other police officers who are here on this stage today. Because I have seen in my administration that they produce results quietly and professionally. In the face of steep constraints their morale is enduring. I thank them and I congratulate them, and I look forward to your maintaining and even surpassing their standards graduates of Sinag-Laya class 2002.

Half of our awardees today are women. This is a good sign of gender equality in your academy. And I am instructing General Mendoza to make sure that the women are not streamed mostly to administrative jobs. I want the women in the police to be in operations and intelligence. Like everyone in your ranks I am sure are policewomen are capable of the toughest jobs in the streets.

Maalaala ko tuloy iyung isang lumang television series, iyung “Charlie’s Angels.” Doon sa simula ng program — ngayon, alam ko na may Charlie’s Angels, si... Sino nga ba ‘yon? Sina Cameron Diaz. Pero nung panahon namin sina Farrah Fawcett — ‘yung opening ng programa may nagsasabing, “once upon a time there were three little girls, and they graduated from the police academy.” Pagkatapos may mga scenes pinapakita, si Farrah Fawcett tinatambakan ng paper work sa kaniyang mesa. ‘Yung isa naman ay pinapakita na tinutulangan ‘yung mga batang maliit na tumawid ng kalsada. Ibig sabihin noon pag-graduate nila binigyan sila nang mga routinary jobs. Pero pagkatapos naman sabi ng boses, “but I took them away from all that. And now, they work for me.” Pagkatapos, ‘yung episode ay tungkol sa mga kanilang trabaho laban sa mga kriminal. Kaya ‘yon ay para bang pinapakita na nung panahong ‘yon ay meron pang prejudice sa mga babaeng pulis.

Ngayon, sa ating armed forces, the women now are quite visible in combat duty, and I hope to see the same in the police. We need more women not only in the office but out there in the streets. Not only to direct traffic but to fight criminals. I want this to happen so that the women will have more opportunities to become heroes and leaders. Maybe this batch with three honor students among women will someday have a woman lead the Philippine National Police. But I don’t want to wait for this batch before I see another woman police general. At hindi lang ‘yung mga kababaihan ang gusto kong lumabas sa opisina at pumunta sa lansangan. I believe that if we are to fight crime more effectively there should be less office work and more operations work. There should be more policemen out in the streets than in the headquarters.

And in police work alliances are important, and we must strive to expand and deepen them. The police officer’s job entails maximum exposure to almost all sectors of society. Together with these sectors much work remains to be done:

We must root out terrorism. And to do this, we must work with the international community;

We must return the reputation of manila and the Philippines as a welcoming and safe place in which to live and do business; We must increase the benefits from our new global relevance and engagement after years of being isolated and adrift.

Gaya nang sabi ni joey lina, dati-dati ang ating rating sa buong mundo ay negative. Ngayon, stable na. Let us maximize the benefits of this new rating.

Dear graduates of sinag-laya class 2002, from the first day that you are commissioned as a police officer — which is today — you become a leader and an agent of change in the community. Therefore, you have the duty not only to fight crime, but also to prevent crime. You have the duty to set an example, and you have the duty to help the public resolve problems.

Because of these multiple duties of police officers, I instructed the police during there anniversary to take the lead in playing... In organizing visible, sustained outreach and emergency employment programs particularly for out-of-school, out-of-work urban poor youth. The police is doing this now in the central police district under the national capital region under the leadership of district Director General Tor; in Baguio City under the leadership of regional Director General Aliño; in Iba, Zambales and Cabanatuan City under the leadership of Regional Director General Berroya; and in the Southern Tagalog towns and cities bordering on Metro Manila under the leadership of Regional Director General Reyes, who is here with us today. I hope many graduates of PNPA will be a part of this effort because you are young like the young that we want to employ and keep out of harm’s way among the out-of-school youth. Sabi nga ni General Mendoza ngayon gagawin niya itong nationwide program for the urban poor out-of-school youth.

Students of sinag-laya class 2002, your graduation is significant because you symbolize our goal to sustain our long-term program to professionalize the PNP. Last year, I instructed General Ramsey Ocampo to put together a new curriculum for PNPA. I remember that there was a proposal that I should instruct new buildings and facilities to be put up. I said, “no.” Before the physical infrastructure, first the mental infrastructure. If we are going to put new physical facilities it must be before laboratory equipment so that we can use forensics to fight crime better.

Last year, too I asked General Mendoza to hire new personnel, and he did. 1,700 new personnel all college graduates. They made their first appearance in mall assignments last Christmas. And I believe last Christmas was a very peaceful Christmas for those doing their Christmas shopping in the malls. And, now this year, he is hiring some more.

We are increasing the quality and quantity of our training programs including those promoting effective community relations. Aside from the new curriculum for PNPA, I also instructed the Public Safety College to add a specialization course on crime investigation and detection to be subsidized by PAGCOR.

My recent visit to London early this year also resulted in the commitment by Prime Minister Tony Blair for Scotland Yard to help the PNP build up the skills and capacity to fight kidnapping and other organized crimes. General Fianza has just returned from London where he and the Scotland yard officials worked out the details of this curriculum, and soon this training program will be implemented. I have also asked him to make a formal proposal to the Hong Kong police for a similar training.

Police duties require special technical and physical skills as well as versatility in human relations. It also requires impeccability of personal conduct and supreme courage under fire. Police duty could range from the most menial jobs — like Farrah Fawcett’s job there in the beginning of Charlie’s Angels — or also what many policemen consider very menial like clearing the streets of illegal vendors or raiding jueteng joints. Then it goes on the other side to the most extreme challenges such as running gun battles with the most tenacious criminal syndicates.

Many of our police officers have died and more are called to the frontline. I know the steep sacrifices you will be called upon to take, and I would like to commend you for your readiness to rise to the call of duty.

In return last year, I was able to get a supplemental budget from Congress — and I thank congress and Abaya, and other Congressmen for being so kind — to finally carry out a new salary scale for the police. And this year, congress further provided an additional budget. Thus, as police officers, you the graduates of sinag-laya class 2002, will be enjoying an upgraded salary scale equal to that of teachers in public schools.

I also know the difficulties you have hurdled in this academy, but you must consider these as mere samples of what you will actually encounter on the job. Now is your chance to live up to the PNPA’s motto: “to learn today, to lead tomorrow.”

But if you are to lead, you must by now have a clear idea of the tools you need — not just your talents and your skills, but the moral imperatives of your work.

Today, as I was giving out diplomas, your class goat, using his traditional prerogative to do something unusual ask me if I would pardon the 15 of your batch — who are not with you graduating today — because they are still being metted out discipline for going AWOL. And I told him, “well, let me think about it. Because first and foremost, the most important thing that one must learn in the PNP and in the AFP for that matter is discipline.”

The discipline required of the uniformed services is much greater than the discipline required of any other occupation. Sabi ko nga parati, kung ikaw ay medyo rebelde siguro doon ka sa U.P. mag-apply. Huwag sa PMA o huwag sa PNP academy. Dahil sa U.P.. ang tanging sandata ay utak, pero sa PNP, sa PMA, sa militar, sa pulis may sandatang nakakapatay ng tao — the firearms themselves. That is why there must be a culture of discipline, unquestioning discipline to go with your mental ang physical training.

‘Yung doon sa ‘charge of the light brigade’, yung sinabing “theirs is not to reason why, theirs is but to do or die” — iyan talaga ang simbolo ng discipline, ng kultura ng uniformed services.

Ang tanging order na puwede niyong tanggihan ay ‘yon lamang order na labag sa batas. Kung labag sa wisdom o labag sa opinyon o labag sa inyong policing pinaniniwalaan, hindi puwedeng maglabag sa order. Yours is not to reason why except when it is totally and probably against the law.

Kaya pinapairal natin ang disiplina. Itong labing lima na hindi pa nagga-graduate, magga-graduate sila sa hunyo, pagkatapos silang maglingkod ng kanilang mga punishment na kasalukuyang ginaganap.

And let me share with you what my father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal told me about priorities in public service. He said, “it must be god first, that’s morality; then country, these are the wise policies; and family last.” This means that your job is not to use law enforcement as a means for self-aggrandizement for you and your family.

A public servant’s family must be self-effacing rather than self-aggrandizing, and this goes for the police as well. Keep your family out of your work. Because you’ve another kind of family in your work environment. This is with respect to the dramatic rise of the number of civic, religious and non-governmental organizations supporting the PNP, they are your family in your work.

The individual behavior of the police officer in the street makes or breaks the public perception of the entire organization. The interface of the police officer and the ordinary citizen is the most critical component of police credibility.

The basic image of a dignified, honest, courteous but firm and incorruptible police officer is the key to success in law enforcement.

I trust that you — sinag-laya class 2002 — will live up to this image, because I trust in your sense of duty. I believe in the great Filipino police officer.

I believe in the great Filipino worker. Whether in government service or in the private sector; whether in industries or in the farms or in the information technology call centers; whether in police uniform or in the utility worker’s t-shirt. The great Filipino worker is a pillar of excellence imbued with a strong sense of sacrifice, discipline and professionalism.

You have my unrelenting faith and my commitment to push our common quest forward. In cooperation with all the pillars of the criminal justice system, we must strengthen the rule of law permanently throughout the republic.

Your task will be difficult and full of pitfalls, but you must not abandon it. Mustering a supreme sense of duty, and strengthened by the unity and support of the police and the institutions of good government, help me bring justice, law and order, and public safety in all corners of the land.

Yes, your chosen career is difficult, the sacrifices are steep. But when people see the law in the hands of credible enforcers, people will obey and respect the law. I have faith that you will hold the line of courage and integrity.

You have been trained to fight the lawless. But beyond that you have also been trained to keep the peace in the community — to settle conflicts, prevent abuse and uphold the system of justice.

In your chosen career, know that there is no gauge of excellence but achievement. There is no overlord but the people. In serving the people, you must exemplify the general principles of public service and good governance.

Many times I have outlined what I believe are the three pillars of good governance: first, a sound moral foundation to guide leadership at all levels, including the level of police officers; second, a philosophy of transparency in all government transactions, including police work; third, an ethic of effective implementation by the bureaucracy, including the police force. These must be the pillars that must strengthen the PNP and for that matter the BFP, the BJMP, the PNPA, the PPSC and all other institutions of law enforcement and public safety.

Sa pagtulongan ng lahat, malaki ang pag-asang darating na ang liwanag ng ating kinabukasan.

Ang aking pangarap para sa ating kinabukasan ay sana masugpo natin ang kahirapan ng ating bansa sa loob ng isang dekada. Upang makamit ito, ang ating programa ng gobyerno ay may apat na bahagi: una, ipairal ang free enterprise na bagay sa siglo beinte-uno dahil ito ang magpapadami ng trabaho; pangalawa, i-modernize ang ating agrikultura sandal sa social equity na nakararami sa ating mga mahihirap ay nasa kanayunan; pangatlo, kampiyan ang mga sektor ng kapuspalad sa ating plano ng kaunlaran; at pang-apat, i-angat ang sukat ng moralidad sa gobyerno at sa lipunan.

The public safety profession is needed in all these four aspects of our medium-term Philippine Development Plan. We need public safety to bring about the investments that will produce jobs. We need public safety in the countryside so that farmers will not be afraid. We need the police to do community relations work that serve the poor directly. We need the police to carry out the rule of law if we want to raise standards of morality in government and in society.

And as leaders in public safety, I ask you, help me. Share my vision for the community we serve. And if I may suggest, a change in your motto. I think it should be — “to learn today, to serve tomorrow.”

Congratulations! And thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 23rd Commencement Exercises of the Philippine National Police Academy (PNPA). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412230008/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7645&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Commemoration of the Centennial Celebration of the end of the Philippine-American War

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Commemoration of the Centennial Celebration of the end of the Philippine-American War

[Delivered at the Laurel Park, Batangas Provincial Capitol, Batangas City, Batangas, April 16, 2002]

Maraming salamat sa anak ng Batangas City, na isa sa aking mga napakaraming na-appoint na bilang kasapi ng aking gabinete, Secretary Nani Perez.

Sino pa ang inappoint sa aking Cabinet? Binanggit kanina ni Joe Villegas si Secretary Ed Ermita at pati nga ‘yung chief ng ating Philippine National Police ay anak din ng Batangas province, si Larry Mendoza. Meron akong nawalang Cabinet member galing sa Batangas si Secretary Renato Corona. Kaya lang ngayon naman siya ay Justice ng Supreme Court, anak din ng Batangas.

Batiin ko muna ‘yung ating iba’t-ibang mga officials ng lalawigan ng Batangas na narito ngayon: unang-una ang ama ng Batangas, si Governor Dodo Mandanas; at ang ating host dito sa lungsod ng Batangas City, si Mayor Eddie Dimacuha; si Vice Governor Peter Laurel; at ‘yung Congresswoman ng pinanggalingan ni General Malvar, si Congresswoman Vicky Reyes.

Batiin ko rin ‘yung mga kasapi ng Malvar family na napakarami sa kanila ay hindi lamang anak at apo ng isang bayani kung hindi para sa aking personal ay marami sa kanila ay naging bahagi na rin ng aking buhay at buhay ng aking pamilya. Una sa lahat, nandiyan si Dra. Isabel Malvar-Villegas, ang naiwang anak ni General Malvar. Noong ho ako ay nag-aaral sa Assumption, siya po ang dentista ng aming eskwelahan kaya taun-taon, semester-semester i-examine niya ako. Salamat Dra. Villegas na buo pa rin ang aking mga ngipin. Pero nung ako ay gradeschool, alam ho n’yo — ay, siguro ‘yung aking mga Cabinet members at ‘yung ibang mga officials nagugulat sila kung bakit gustong-gusto kong magbiyahe sa buong Pilipinas at kung bakit kilalang-kilala ko kung nasaan ang lahat ng mga lugar ng Pilipinas. In other words kung bakit ako napakagaling sa Geography — nung ako ay grade five ‘yung aking geography teacher ay si Ms. Malvar, si Aurora Malvar. At noong ako ay naging college na ‘yung aking teacher sa Logic ay si Ms. Aurora Malvar na naging Sister Anunciata, kaya siya ay malaking bahagi din sa aking buhay. Kaya hanggang ngayon, Sister, mahal ko pa rin ang geography at maraming nagsasabi ay very logical ako, salamat sa iyong tinuro sa akin.

Noon namang ako ay nagtrabaho sa administration ni President Cory Aquino, doon ko naman nakilala ‘yung asawa nung namamahala ng Hacienda Luisita at nagulat ako na siya pala ay apo rin ni General Malvar, eto ay si Natty Malvar-Mendoza. At pagkatapos ‘yung kanyang anak ay ngayon kasalukuyang punong-lunsod ng Tarlac City, si Mayor Aro Mendoza. Saan si mayor? At noong ang tatay ko naman po ay pangulo at kahit na natapos na siya ng pagka-pangulo, nung naging presidente ng Constitutional Convention at kahit pagkatapos noon nung lumalaban ang aking tatay kasama ng iba’t-ibang mga bagong bayani naman ng ating bansa nung panahon ng martial law, isa sa kanyang mga matatalik na gabay ay walang iba kung hindi ang ating nagsalita kanina, si Joe Malvar-Villegas. Nung ako naman ay naging ekonomista at nagturo ng economics sa ating mga kabataan, tinuturo ko sa kanila ‘yung mga libro ni Dr. Bernie Villegas. At nung ako naman ay naging isang politician nakilala ko dito sa Batangas si Board member Mike Malvar. Kaya ang dami-daming mga Malvar na naging bahagi ng aking buhay, bahagi ng buhay ng tatay ko, ganun na rin buhay ng Batangas at ng ating bansa.

At gusto kong batiin lahat ng mga taga-Batangas na nagbibigay-galang ngayon sa pagtapos ng Philippine-American War at sa kabayanihan ni General Malvar, 'yung iba't-ibang mga mayors. At gusto kong batiin yung ating magaling na mag-tagalog, 'yung Son-in-Law ng Pilipinas, 'yung Labor Attache ng United States, si Ginoong Rick Nelson, kaya Tagalog ang aking pagbati sa'yo. Sa inyong lahat, mga kababayan:

Magandang hapon sa inyo. At ako ay nasisiyahan na kasama kayo, mga kababayan, lalong-lalo na ang mga Batangueno, sa makasaysayang araw na ito.

Malaking karangalan para sa akin na nandito sa Centennial ng pagtapos ng Philippine-American War, kagaya ng sabi ni Joe Villegas, ay 100 years ago 'yung tatay ko, si Diosdado Macapagal, bilang Pangulo ay nagdalo din sa Centenary ni General Miguel Malvar.

Gaya ng nakita natin sa napakagandang eksenang pinakita ng mga estudyante, sabi ko nga kay Governor Mandanas, "ang galing-galing ng ating eksena dito. Ang ganda ng script, napakalalim, at parang poeta yung tagalog." Tinatanong ko, "eto ba ay minanang script o may nagkaroon ng paligsahan at sinulat rin ng mga bata, kabataan dito?" At 'yung kanilang pag-emote malinaw na malinaw. Kaya ang dami nating natuto dito sa tinuro sa atin nitong mga anak natin ng Batangas — itong mga tiga-Sto. Nino Formation and Science High School Theater Art Organization. Nilarawan nila sa atin na dito sa inyong lalawigan isandaang taon nang nakaraan, pormal na nagwakas ang Filipino-American War kung saan, gaya nang nakita natin, sumikat si Heneral Miguel Malvar.

Matatandaan natin na idineklara ni Heneral Emilio Aguinaldo ang ating kalayaan noong Hunyo 12, 1898, at tinatag naman ang unang Rrepublika ng Pilipinas Enero 23, 1899. Dalawang linggo matapos ang inagurasyon ng ating Republika sa Malolos, Bulacan kung saan — bago noon sa Tejeros Convention ay hinalal si Aguinaldo bilang Pangulo ng Pilipinas — ay sumiklab ang Filipino-American War noong Pebrero 4 ng 1899.

Ang pagkakadakip kay Heneral Aguinaldo sa Ppalanan, Isabela ay naganap naman noong March 23rd 1901, at noong nangyari 'yon ang naghudyat ng katapusan ng unang Republika ng Pilipinas daw, ngunit mayroon din namang ilan pang mga heneral na ipinagpatuloy ang pakikipaglaban.

At simula noon, sumunod na Hulyo 13, 1901, si Heneral Malvar na ang namuno sa kanila, sa mga heneral na nagpatuloy ng laban. Si Heneral Mmalvar ang humawak ng political at military control ng ating Republika. At sa loob ng mahigit na isang taon, ang Batanguenong heneral ay magiting na nakipaglaban sa Mt. Makiling at mga bundok ng Batangas. Sa bandang huli, sa headquarters ni General Franklin J. Bell sa lipa noong April 16, 1902, nagtapos ang Filipino-American War.

Ngayon, sabi nga ni Joe, sana ma-deklara kong Second President si General Miguel Malvar. Tinanong ko kay Nani Perez, ang aking Secretary of Justice, "nasa kapangyarihan ko ba yon?" Sabi ni Nani, "gusto mo, kahit na gaano mo kagusto gawin 'yon, ang pangulo ay hindi makaka-deklara ng isa bilang pangulo. 'Yon ay kailangan matupad muna sa batas." Kaya kailangan siguro sa Kongreso natin ilagay ang ating pag-asa na mangyari yuon.

Ngunit habang hinihintay natin 'yon, sa pagninilay natin tungkol sa Philippine-American War, nakikita natin na ang ating mga bayani at iba pang magigiting na Pilipino ay nagpakita ng pagmamahal sa kanilang bansa sa iba't-ibang paraan maging sa panahon ng digmaan o kapayapaan. Sa pagninilay rin natin tungkol sa naturang giyera, nakikita natin ang pagkabayani ni Heneral Miguel Malvar, na matatawag natin na "Man of Action." At sa nakita natin kanina, si General Malvar ay ipinanganak sa isang masasabing de Buena Pamilya. Siya ay napanganak sa Sto. Tomas, Batangas noong September 27, 1865. Nani, 'di ba birthday mo rin 'yon? Kaya pala ginagawa nang holiday 'yung birthday ni Nani birthday pala ni General Malvar. Anyway, pinili ni Heneral Malvar na iwan ang maginhawang pamumuhay upang ipaglaban ang bagong Republika ng Pilipinas.

Maliwanag ang mensaheng pinaabot ng ating pagdiriwang sa araw na ito. Ibig sabihin nito ay hindi tayo dapat maging mahina ang loob sa pagharap ng ating mga problema. Kung tayo man ay mabigo sa una, hindi tayo dapat kaagad sumuko, bagkus, alamin natin kung saan tayo nagkamali at lalong magsumikap upang makamit ang tagumpay.

Ang kabanata ng ating kasaysayang ginugunita ngayon ay tinubos ng buhay at dugo ng ating mga ninuno. Dapat ay magsilbing inspirasyon ito sa atin sa pagtubos sa ating mga kababayan mula sa kahirapan. Magiging madali ito sapagka't hindi na tayong kinakailangang magbuwis ng buhay at dugo. Ang kailangan lamang ay tayo ay magkaisa, magtutulongan at magsikap ng husto upang mabigyan ng magandang kinabukasan ang sambayanang Pilipino.

Magandang lugar ang Batangas kung sasabihin 'yon kasi hindi lamang ang Batangas ay siyang naglikas, naglikha kay General Malvar, Batangas din, gaya ng sabi ni Governor Mandanas, ay number one ngayon sa investments sa buong bansa.

Tulad ni Heneral Malvar, inaasahan kong hindi susuko ang mga Batangueno ngayon sa laban kontra sa kahirapan lalo na nanalo kayo. Mabuti pa nga kayo haming sa ibang bahagi ng Pilipinas. Inaasahan kong magsisilbing magandang halimbawa ang inyong magandang samahan, malasakit at kadakilaan upang maging matagumpay ang ating paglaban sa kahirapan.

Patuloy tayong nagpapatupad ng mga proyekto sa Batangas na nagpapaangat ng buhay sa mga taga-Batangas, mga taga-Calabarzon, at buong sambayanan. Isa na rito na tinalakay sa ating Cabinet meeting kanina ay ang Batangas International Port na inaasahan nating magbigay ng mas maraming trabaho sa mga dakilang manggagawa ng Batangas, maging sa mga dakilang manggagawa ng ibang bahagi ng Calabarzon. Itong Batangas Port kung magbibilang tayo ng limang pinaka-importanteng proyekto ng Macapagal-Arroyo administrasyon, ang Batangas Port ay isa na dito sa pinakamahalagang proyekto natin. Itong pantalang ito ay siyang flagship project ng Calabarzon na sinimulan ng Department of Trade and Industry noong ako ay undersecretary ng naturang department. Kanina nga, noong ako ay pumapasok diyan sa provincial capitol tinanong ni Governor Mandanas sa akin, "ito ba ang first time n'yo pumasok sa provincial capitol?" Sabi ko, "first time bilang pangulo." Ngunit noong ako'y undersecretary ay parati ako ay narito dahil nga 'yung Calabarzon project at dahil flagship ng Calabarzon ay yung Batangas Port noong pa ako ay undersecretary.

Alam niyo, itong Calabarzon ang isang pinamagandang halimbawa kung bakit maganda 'yung CORD system (Cabinet Official for Regional Development) na ginawa ni President Cory Aquino, dahil ang kinuha niyang CORD para sa Region IV ay 'yung Secretary of Trade and Industry na si Secretary Joe Concepcion. At nanggaling sa pagka-CORD ng DTI doon nanggaling 'yung Calabarzon, at ako bilang Undersecretary for Planning, ako ang naging namamahala sa mga planning ng Calabarzon, kaya parati akong narito.

'Yung sa planning ng Calabarzon siyempre may industriya kailangan naman ng pantalan — alangan naman doon pa sa Manila dadalhin 'yung mga produkto ng Batangas. Maraming kandidatong International Port sa masterplan ng Calabarzon, ngunit dahil si Nani Perez ang Secretary of Transportation noong panahong 'yon, nanalo ang Batangas Port Project, kaya Batangas Port ang naging port ng Calabarzon. Kaya lang noong naging presidente ako, nagulat ako na hindi pa pala nagsisimula ang construction ng international port mismo. Biro niyo, Undersecretary of Trade and Industry pa ako noong nagsimula ang proyektong ito — 1989. Pagkatapos naging Senador ako, dalawang beses, pagkatapos naging Bise-Presidente, pagkatapos naging Presidente hindi pa pala nagsisimula ang construction ng international port. Kaya kung gaano kalapit ang malvar sa pamilya Macapagal, kung gaano kalapit ang mga Batangueno sa administrasyon sa daming Batangueno sa ating gabinete, pinilit ko na hanapin lahat ng mga bottleneck, at pinilit na maasikaso sila. At sa wakas, noong unang Anibersaryo ng Edsa 2, noong January 16 ay nagsimula ang construction. At malaking karangalan para sa akin na ako ang nag-groundbreaking sa proyektong napakaimportante sa buhay ko at sa ating administrasyon.

Ang Batangas port ay isa sa ating mga pangunahing paraan kung papano natin masasagot ang mga hamon ng bagong siglo.

Kanina pinaliwanag na ni Governor Mandanas sa ating Cabinet meeting 'yung iba't-iba pang mga importanteng proyekto ng Batangas at Calabarzon para umiral na nga nang tuluyan itong rehiyon na ito lalung-lalo na sa pagpasok sa 21st century.

Kung tutuusin, malaki na ang ipinagbago ng ating mundo sa loob ng nakaraang isandaang taon mula nung natapos 'yung Philippine-American War. Noon dati nating kaaway ay ngayon naman malapit nating kakampi.

Bagama't ang amerikano ang ating kalaban noong isang siglo na nakaraan, naging kakampi naman natin sila sa Second World War. 'Yung kalaban naman natin nung Second World War, yung mga hapon, silang kalaban natin noong Second World War, sila naman ang nagbibigay sa atin ngayon ng pinakamalaking official development assistance upang mapagpatuloy natin ang mga proyektong pang-kaunlaran. In fact, iyang construction ng Batangas port, ang pera diyan ay nangagaling sa Japanese government.

Kaya iba ang kalaban pero iba rin ang mukha ng kaaway at pandirigma ngayon. Hindi na mga bansa ang ating kalaban kundi mga teroristang naghahasik ng lagim, kagaya sa katimugang bahagi mismo ng ating bansa, lalo na sa Basilan.

Ang mga Amerikano ngayon ay ating kaakibat sa paglaban sa terorismo sa ating lupain. Sa pamamagitan ng ginagawa nating Balikatan exercises, ang mga sundalong Pilipino at Amerikano ngayon ay nagsasanay upang sugpuin ang mga terorista.

Sa halip na magpamalas na kung sinong mas magaling, ang lahat ng kasali dito sa Balikatan ay may matututunan mula sa isa't-isa. Ang pakikipagtulungan ng mga Amerikano ay hindi ibig sabihin na minamaliit natin ang husay at tapang ng sundalong Pilipino. Napakita na ng ating mga sundalo at pinuno, tulad ni Heneral Malvar, ang katapangan nito noong digmaang Pilipino-Amerikano. Hanggang ngayon matapang pa rin sila. Ngayon naman ay sinusubukan natin kung papaano ang pinagsamang katapangan ng Pilipino at kagamitan ng mga Amerikano ay magagamit ng wasto upang wakasan ang karahasan ng mga terorista sa katimugan ng ating bansa.

Ang kambal na pagdirigma sa terorismo at kahirapan ang pinakamabigat na hamon sa atin ngayon. Ang pakikipaglaban sa terorismo ay pakikipaglaban din sa kahirapan. Kaya tamang-tama, 'yung apo ni Heneral Malvar na si Dr. Villegas ay isa sa pinakamagaling na ekonomista ng ating bansa dahil ngayon hindi Amerikano ang kalaban natin kungdi ang kahirapan. Kaya tungkulin nating lahat na makidigma sa kahirapan upang tuluy-tuloy nating matamasa ang kalayaang ipinaglaban ng ating mga rebolusyonaryo noon.

Hanggang sa kanyang kamatayan noong October 13, 1911, hindi nawawaglit sa isip ni Heneral Malvar ang kagalingan at kapakanan ng kanyang mga kababayan. Ang kanyang huling bilin sa kanyang mga anak ay ito, and may I quote. He said, "you should respect and love those who have, but more so, much more the poor," sabi ni Heneral Malvar.

Sa ating pakikidigma sa karukhaan ngayon, magpakita rin tayo ng tapang at pagmamahal sa bayan na tulad ng ipinakita ni Heneral Malvar at ng kanyang mga kapwa rebolusyonaryo. Ipinagtanggol nila ang ating kalayaan noon, kaya tungkulin naman ng ating henerasyon na alagaan ang kalayaang ito, kasama na ang kalayaan mula sa mapang-aping kahirapan at karahasan ng terorismo.

Kung hindi tayo magkakaisa at magtutulungan ngayon upang magtagumpay sa labang ito, magiging bale-wala ang mga ipinaglaban ng ating mga ninuno. At dahil si Heneral Malvar at ang kanyang mga kapwa Batangueno ang nagpakitang-gilas noon upang ipakita ang tagal at tapang at tibay ng loob ng pilipino, inaasahan kong muling mangunguna kayong mga taga-Batangas upang magapi ang ating problema ng kahirapan. Ito na marahil ang pinakamagandang parangal na mabibigay natin sa mga adhikain ni Heneral Malvar at iba pang mga magigiting na bayaning Pilipino.

Kaya itong araw na ito ako ay nasisiyahan na kung si Heneral Malvar ay pinagpatuloy ang laban kahit na sabi na bumagsak na ang republika nung napreso si Aguinaldo. Kahit na tayo ay nahirapan sa mundo noong nakaraang taon, ang Batangas pa rin ay number one sa investments. Kaya gaya ni General Malvar, tinutuloy ng Batangas 'yung laban kontra sa kahirapan.

At bilang pagpatuloy ng paggalang at pagwakas, kanina pinakita ni Dr. Villegas, Bernie Villegas, 'yung mensahe na binigay sa inyo nung aking tatay, nung 100th Birth Anniversary ni General Malvar at sa paumanhin ho ninyo magtatapos ako sa pamamagitan ng babasahin 'yung mensahe ni Diosdado Macapagal bilang parangal kay Heneral Miguel Malvar. Sabi niya:

“The Philippine revolution spawned a number of courageous generals who led our country in its glorious fight for freedom. Among the bravest and most patriotic was General Miguel Malvar of Batangas. Long after Aguinaldo’s capture General Malvar carried on the fight against the American forces convinced of the justice of the cause for which the revolution stood. But a stout heart alone, he realized could avail him little against the superior force of the enemy. In fact, he had to fight not only against the american forces but also against sickness and starvation which stalked his units. “I am giving up,” he told General Bell to whom he finally surrendered, “Only because my soldiers and my own family who have fought side by side with me all these months are suffering from hunger and all kinds of hardships.” For his frankness, his dignity, his unusual courage and firmness of character, General Malvar won the admiration of the American General. He lived long enough to know the glory of being proclaimed everywhere he went as one of the greatest Filipinos who ever lived. The first one who offered the strongest armed resistance against the Americans. Truly, General Malvar has become our country’s symbol of courageous resistance against foreign domination.”

Kaya ngayon itong araw na ito mga Batangueno, ginagalang natin ang ating alaala tungkol kay Heneral Miguel Malvar. At itong araw na ito sabihin natin sa kanya na nandoon nanunuod sa ating palatuntunan ngayon sa kanyang pangalan lalabanan natin ang bagong kaaway ng ating bansa ang problema ng kahirapan.

Maraming salamat at Happy End of the Philippine-American War sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the Commemoration of the Centennial Celebration of the End of the Philippine-American War. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225958/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7644&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the National Congress on Youth Development

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the National Congress on Youth Development

[Delivered at the Golden Bay Hotel, Roxas Blvd., Manila, April 17, 2002]

Maraming salamat, Julius sa iyung pagpakilala sa akin. At maraming salamat din sa iyung pag-imbata sa akin dito sa inyong meeting.

Batiin ko muna iyung iba't-ibang mga official na 'yung ilan — kasi maraming-maraming naging official pagkatapos. Pero iyung mga nandito, at least man lang sa entablado — iyung aking bagong kapartido, si Vice Mayor Herbert Bautista, salamat; si Edward Balanag na Executive Director; si Vice Governor Mon Lakbain ng Zambales; 'yung aking kaibigan na si Bobit Carlos — nandoon nakaupo — Mayor ng Valenzuela; si Mayor Eva Guillegue — kumusta 'yung ating, ano? Kumusta 'yung mga high-breed rice natin doon ngayon? Very good! My project kami; marami tayong mga konsehal dito pero batiin ko 'yung pangulo ng Councilors' League ng Palawan, si Councilor Rowena Acosta. At 'yung aking kandidato noong nakaraang halalan, si Greg Alcera; nandito rin si Assemblyman Pijuan — taga-Cavite, 'no?; Nandito rin 'yung — siguro magiging kaugnay ninyo sa pagtatrabaho kung tayo ay magiging magka-partner, ang aking Presidential Liaison for Political Affairs, si Secretary Joey Rufino.

At kung kayo 'yung kabataang barangay a generation ago, 'yung inyong equivalent naman ngayon ay 'yung SK. At kaya naman 'yung inyong equivalent, 'yung equivalent ni Julius ay si Richard Nalupta.

Iba't-ibang mga nandito sa inyong Kabataang Barangay Alumni Association Convention, magandang hapon sa inyong lahat. At isang malaking karangalan na ako'y narito kasama ninyo.

Alam po niyo, ito ay wala naman talaga nasa aking appointment book. Ito ay rinigrets noong simula. Tapos, tinawagan ko 'yung aking Appointment Secretary at sabi ko, pupunta ako doon sa... Katunayan, ang aking... Usually, ang aking mga appointments na public appointment ay ten o'clock to three o'clock, dahil three o'clock to seven o'clock, ang ginagawa ko ay mga desk work. Pero ito, kaya napuno na tuloy ngayon ang appointments ko noong ten to three. So, sabi ng aking Appointment Secretary — actually, hindi na ini-schedule 'yon at sumagot na nga ng declining the invitation — so, papayag ba kayo it will eat up into your desk work time? I said, "oo".

Maraming nagtaka kung bakit — kahit na 'yung aking Appointments Committee ay tinanggihan itong invitation — ako ay tinanggap ko pa. At meron pang nagsabi sa akin, "bakit mo tinanggap? 'Di mo ba alam 95 percent diyan ay nasa EDSA 3." eh, sabi ko, "ngunit ako ay pangulo ng EDSA 2 at EDSA 3."

Kaya kung iniimbata niyo ako rito, narito ako. Kung iniimbata niyo ako, ibig sabihin handa kayo, bukas kayo sa unity and reconciliation. At ako naman ay gaya nga, bilang pangulo ng EDSA 2 at EDSA 3, pangulo ng buong Pilipinas, I also give you the olive branch of peace and reconciliation.

Kasi, sayang naman ang talent ng Kabataang Barangay Alumni kung gagamitin lang sa pag-aaway at paghahati ng ating bansa. Lalong mas mahalaga kung inyong mga talento at kasanayan ay magagamit para ipagkaisa, magkaisa ang ating bansa. Kaya ako ay narito, unang-unang humingi ng tulong ninyo sa aking pamahalaan.

Binabati ko ang pamunuan at mga miyembro ng Kabataang Barangay Alumni Association sa inyong matagumpay na paglulunsad ng "National Congress on Youth Development" na ito. Nasisiyahan akong malaman na bagama't marami tayong hamong hinaharap ngayon, at bagama't kayo ay one generation away from being kabataan leaders, aktibo pa rin kayo upang tumulong at palakasin ang pagkakaisa at pagsulong ng ating sambayanan.

Ang ilang araw ng kongresong ito ay maituturing na malaking hakbang tungo sa isang masigla at pinalakas na sektor ng kabataan dahil noong panahon n'yo, kayo talaga ang tunay na pag-asa ng ating bayan. Ngayon pa rin, ang ating kabataan ay tunay na pag-asa ng ating bayan. Kaya dahil ang inyong pakay ay youth development, ibig sabihin noon, kung ano 'yung mga karanasan at dunong na nakuha ninyo noong panahon ninyo, gusto niyong ipasa sa susunod na henerasyon, napakaganda 'yon. Ipasa din niyo para tutulong sa pamahalaan, hindi para labanan ang pamahalaan.

This congress is a big step towards a more vibrant and empowered youth. 'Yung Kabataan Barangay, kayo na Kabataang Barangay is no stranger to the field of politics and public service, and because of this exposure you can become beacons for generations to come. Kaya nandito sila Ritchie, susunod na henerasyon.

This gathering also imparts an abundance of hope, that an immense pool of talent and resolve is on hand as we advance to a more peaceful, progressive and confident future.

From this hope flows the strength to confront and overcome challenges. Hope gives the tenacity of spirit to reach for the best, the noblest, the most sublime of human aspirations.

But hope alone, without the substance of deeds, cannot meaningfully alter or improve the human condition. Hope must equally be transmitted into the realm of decisive action and resolute initiative.

When my administration took the reigns of governance more than a year ago, I said that we must conquer poverty within the decade. We have been resolute in achieving this goal, even as the nation has been buffeted by stiff political and economic challenges. And even as the war on terrorism moves forward, the war on poverty must be the overarching war.

I said when I became president, na dapat tayo'y ambisyoso para sa ating bansa. At masugpo natin ang problema ng kahirapan sa loob ng isang dekada. At sinabi ko doon sa aking State of the Nation Address noong isang taon, meron kayong mga alumni doon, di ba? Si Congressman Erise at saka si Congressman Teodoro. Sinabi ko na 'yung ating laban kontra sa kahirapan doon sa medium-term Philippine development plan ng inyong lingkod, administrasyon ay may apat na bahagi:

* una, sa pag-iiral ng sistema ng ekonomiya sa bagong siglo. Ang unang paraan kung papaano nilalabanan ang kahirapan ay trabaho. Magkaroon ng trabaho ang taong bayan at para magkaroon ng trabaho, kailangang magkaroon ng investments. At para magkaroon ng investments, kailangang magkaroon ng magandang macro-economic environment.

* pangalawa, dahil nakararami sa ating mga mahihirap ay nasa kanayunan, kailangan ng agricultural modernization founded on social equity. Kayo 'yung ginawa nating eksperimento sa banay-banay, 'yan ay isa sa mga pinaka-importanteng gawain sa ating medium-term Philippine development plan. At ako'y nasisiyahan na malaman na ang punongbayan pala noon, 'yung partner pala ng administrasyon sa pag-modernize ng agrikultura, sa prototype, sa experiment ay walang iba kung hindi isang kasapi ng kabataang barangay.

* 'yung pangatlo ay 'yung direktong mga programang nakakatulong sa mga mahihirap.

* at 'yung pang-apat, umiiral dapat ang sukat ng moralidad sa ating gobyerno at sa ating lipunan.

Marami tayong mga programang ipinapatupad ngayon upang maiangat ang kabuhayan ng ating mga kababayang mahihirap at matulungan 'yung mga disadvantaged sectors ng lipunan at bahagi dito sa mga special sectors ay 'yung kabataan.

At ano ang ating ibig gawin para sa kabataan? Unang-una, edukasyon, sapagkat dapat nating bigyan ng kaalaman at kakayahan ang mga kabataan upang sa kanilang paglaki sila ay maging responsableng mamamayan na kayang buhayin ang kanilang mga sarili. Pagkatapos, layunin natin na magkaroon ng trabaho ang mga estudyante pag sila ay nagtapos na, at ang pagbibigay ng panandaliang trabaho sa mga kabataang hindi nag-aaral. Layunin din natin ang pag-sisiguro na ang ating mga kabataan ay hindi malululong sa droga o ibinabawal na gamot nang hindi mapariwa ang kanilang kinabukasan.

Ang mga kailangang edukasyon ay binanggit ko rin sa aking State of the Nation Address noong nakaraang taon. Ayon sa Department of Education, kasalukuyang binibigyan ng karagdagang pagsasanay ang mahigit na labing dalawang libong teachers mula sa Regions two, seven, nine, ten, CARAGA bilang bahagi ng ating pag-sisikap na mabigyan ng mataas na antas ng edukasyon ang ating mag-aaral. Kasabay nito, naglunsad na din ng Curriculum Reform Summit upang pag-aralan at pag-pasiyahan ang kinakailangang reporma sa curriculum ng ating mga eskwelahan.

Kasi, kung tayo ay magiging competitive sa siglo beinte uno, ito ang siglo ng information and communication technology. Sa tertiary education, kailangan matutunan ng ICT. at kailangan natin 'yung maraming mga magagandang pagkakataon ang naghihintay sa mga certified programmers. 'Yung dumadaan sa certification program for programmers. Hindi ibig sabihin, 'yung mga computer courses ng diploma mills. At sa basic education, kailangan palakasin ang science at mathematics. 'Yan ang ating programa tungkol sa edukasyon.

Pinagtitibay na rin natin ang mga paraan upang magpagawa ng low-cost science equipment, kasi nga science and math importante at mga instructional materials para magamit ng ating mga guro at estudyante. Ating pinag-huhusay ang replication at duplication ng mga computer-based teaching modules bilang instructional materials para sa agham at matematika na siyang ating diin ngayon.

Gayon din, nakahanda na ang mahigit sa 1.4 billion pesos na pambili ng humigit sa tatlongput- tatlong milyong libro na bahagi ng ating programa upang makamit ang 1:1 student-textbook ratio para sa mga nasa grades 1 to 4, at 1st and 2nd year high school pagsapit ng hunyo ng susunod na taon.

Bukod dito, naghahanda tayo ng supplemental budget na nagkakahalaga ng 1.5 billion pesos para sa karagdagang mga guro at kanilang dagdag na pasahod. Ikinagagalak ko ring sabihin na na-aprubahan na ng ating kongreso ang 1.98 billion pesos para sa dalawampung libong bagong posisyon sa ating mga public schools sa darating na schoolyear. Kasabay nito ay tinutukan natin ang programa na may isang paaralan sa bawat barangay.

Tungkol naman sa youth employment, mayroong mga programang ipinatutupad ngayon ang Department of Labor and Employment hinggil dito. Una kong babangitin ang Special Program for the Employment of Students or S-P-E-S.

Sa ngayon, higit sa isang daan at pitong libong job vacancies na ang na-solicit sa ilalim ng programang ito. At halos isang daan at dalawampung libong mga aplikanteng estudyante at mga dropouts, mahigit sa walongpu't- walong libong kabataan na ang nabigyan ng trabaho sa ngayon.

Nariyan din ang Work Appreciation Program or W-A-P. Meron ding Career Guidance Program at ang Working Youth Center na ating itinatag upang ma-organisa at mapalakas ang kakayahan ng mga youth organizations at ng mga miyembro nito sa ibat-ibang bahagi ng ating kapuluan.

Pinagtitibay din natin ngayon ang mga programa na tumutulong sa mga out-of-school youth o O-S-Y. Sa ilalim ng "Sulong Dunong para sa Kabataan," tinutulungan din ng DSWD ang mga O-S-Y sa pamamagitan ng Weekend Youth Brigade, Education and Support Service, livelihood assistance, practical skills development. Mayroon din tayong emergency employment program para sa ating mga O-S-Y na pinamahalaan ng DILG.

At ako mismo — dahil nakita ko 'tong mga programang ito para sa kabataan, sa out-of-school youth mukhang mga lalaki ang nagkakaroon ng pagkakataon — kaya ang ginawa ko ay ako mula sa Malakanyang kasama ng PNP community relations ay nagtatatag ng emergency employment program for female out-of-school youth sa urban areas.

Halimbawa, noong isang araw, nagsimula tayo ng programa for about 373 out-of-school youth doon sa Commonwealth Avenue Barangay. Noong isang araw naman ay 400 — 400 yata. Tama. — more para sa ating mga out-of-school youth naman sa barangay ng west. Noong isang araw naman, para sa mga out-of-school youth ng Muntinlupa. Kahapon, para sa out-of-school youth ng Barangay Balete sa Batangas City at saka sa Rosario Town ng Batangas. At kanina — kakagaling ko lang bago ako pumunta rito — sa pag-launching ng out-of-school youth emergency employment programs sa kababaihan ng... Doon sa Nuebe de Pebrero at Pleasant View ng Mandaluyong City. Ito ay ako mismo ang nagla-launch under my direction at pinopondohan ko, gaya ng mga lugar kagaya ng sa Quezon City dinadagdagan nila Mayor Sonny Belmonte. Ay, ‘di ba nandoon tayo, Herbert?

Sa ganitong paraan, nabibigyan ang ating mga out-of-school youth ng kagyat na trabaho habang natutulungan nila ang kanilang komunidad. Mayroon silang pinagkakakitaan, nakakaiwas pa sila nang pagkaka-sangkot sa bisyo at masamang gawain.

Kadalasan kasi ay hindi naman talaga kagustuhan ng ating kabataan na masangkot sa bisyo o tiwaling gawain. Kaya lang, dahil sa kawalaan ng oportunidad upang mapagbuti ang kanilang katayuan sa buhay, nahihila sila sa paggamit ng ipinagbabawal na gamot.

Alam nating lahat na ang salot ng droga ay isa sa pinakamalaking hamon na hinaharap hindi lamang ng ating kabataan kungdi ng buong lipunan. Dahil sa napakalaking pera na nakukuha sa mga sindikato at bigtime pushers, patuloy na humahanap ng pamaraan ang mga sindikatong ito upang mapanatili ang kanilang mga organisasyon.

Noong nakaraang taon, nilagdaan ko rin ang letter of instruction number one na nag-atas sa lahat ng mga ahensiya ng pamahalaan na makilahok sa National Anti-Drug Program of Action o NADPA. Nilalayan nitong pagdaupin ang mga sibil na sektor at gobyerno sa isang all-out sustained anti-drug campaign sa buong bansa.

Mula noong Enero hanggang Nobyembre sa nakaraang taon, ang mga ginawang anti-drug operations ng ating kapulisan ay nakapagsamsam ng droga at mga drug paraphernalia na nagkakahalaga mahigit sa 3.5 billion pesos. Their catch was bigger than ever before. Not because the drug problem is bigger than ever before but because the enforcement is stronger than ever before.

Mahigit isang libo’t limang daang kilo ng shabu ang nakumpiska ng mga operatiba ng PNP at AFP. Ang lahat ng ito ay patunay lamang na hindi titigil ang ating administrasyon upang masiguro ang kapakanan ng taong bayan lalo na ng ating kabataan. Ngunit alam kong marami pa tayong kailangang gawin at kailangan ko ang inyong tulong.

You hold in your hands the capability and the knowledge of how best to empower our youth and enable our youth to become productive citizens and responsive leaders.

Together, let us explore the frontiers of reforms so that democracy and its blessings can decisively revitalize our society and create a stronger nation through our youth.

Again, I congratulate you all, and I thank you from the bottom of my heart for agreeing to make me a part of you. Now, I want you to be a part of me.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the National Congress on Youth Development. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225940/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7643&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Manila Overseas Press Club (MOPC) “President’s Night” Speech
of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines

During the Manila Overseas Press Club (MOPC) “President’s Night”

[Delivered at the Fiesta Pavilion, Manila Hotel, April 18, 2002]

Thank you very much. Thank you very much Tony Lopez, president of the MOPC.

I would also like to greet Dong Puno, the vice president and the other officials on the table: Eric Canoy — is Exequiel Garcia here? Okay — Exequiel Garcia, Cip Roxas, Mr. Yabut, Chito Villanueva, the governors of the Manila Overseas Press Club; I see here that Kiko Pangilinan is here tonight. Oh, there you are. Hi! Kiko; the few cabinet members who are here tonight headed by acting Press Secretary Yongyong Afable — sorry to the others who aren’t here because they are still in — one set is in a cabinet oversight committee on internal security meeting and another set is in a National Anti-Crime Commission meeting. So maybe if they are done they’ll catch up. But if they are not done I’ll just give them a copy of my speech in the next cabinet meeting; other government officials who are here; members of the MOPC; ladies and gentlemen:

I’m very glad to be here again with you tonight. As Tony said, it’s an annual ritual so it is my obligation as president to be here with you tonight. I did this chore for the first time as president last year. Though as vice president I had the chance to do it twice.

Between last year’s ritual and tonight’s a cataclysmic event occurred and that was September 11. And since then a new era was born, born out of that single day — an era that is fraught with peril yet filled with opportunity. Time and again, history has shown that crisis brings its share of opportunity. Today, the world confronts two great foes — terrorism and poverty.

And the message I have given the leaders of the world, from the first time I spoke about this in November in Hong Kong at the world economic forum, to the United Nations, to the United Kingdom, to the World Economic Forum in New York I have said that the fight against poverty and the fight against terrorism are closely interlinked with each other. This is not to say that poverty is the cause of terrorism. Osama Bin Laden is not a poor man.

It is evil, not poverty that causes terrorism. But poverty and the sense of powerlessness that poverty brings are the fodder that provide the spawning grounds where terrorism can more easily spread its evil ideology. So if we must defeat terrorism, we must defeat poverty with equal resolve and fervor. But whether terrorism is there or not we must defeat poverty that is our more fundamental war.

The war against terrorism, though it started with the attack on the world trade center and the Pentagon is not an American War. It is a war that must be waged by all civilized and free societies. Because of this war we have seen relations between former adversaries complete their evolution into friendships — Japan, Russia, Germany have become allies of the United States. Pakistan has likewise become a vital partner of the United States in the war on terrorism. The events of 9-11 provided the impetus also for the Philippines and the United States to reinvigorate a historic relationship. Today the United States stands with the Philippines as a friend and ally in the fight against terrorism and poverty. The United States bolstered its support for our common cause during my visit to Washington last November by committing to the Philippines military and economic assistance, and market access amounting to 2 billion U.S. dollars.

This renewed level of cooperation, friendship and understanding between both our nations conforms to what I said in my state of the nation address last July, two months before September 11. I declared even then that we will enhance our relations with the United States.

The advent of this year's balikatan military exercises contrived a loud debate. Concerns had been raised about nationalism and sovereignty, about wider American involvement in what is seen as a Philippine war. Yes, this is our war and our soldiers are fighting with all their might. Yet, they must fight with superior technical support, one that we could not give them because we have never provided the funds for modernization. But one that was offered by an old friend and ally — the United States of America.

The Philippines did not need to join the war on terrorism; it was already in that war in the southwestern part of the islands. The Philippines could not have done otherwise than renew its commitment to fight terrorism in a wider field in the wake of September 11.

This is a fight between tolerance and bigotry, between reason and fanaticism, between law and anarchy, between justice and murder pretending to be just. In that fight, there is no other side to choose but one where the civilized nations of the world — long-time allies and former enemies — had chosen to stand united.

What we were fighting in isolation in southwestern Philippines is now a common fight. It is regrettable that it took a tragedy to bring the community of nations together, but it did. Now with U.S. anti-terrorism technical assistance to the Philippines, I believe it is the beginning of the end of terrorists in southwestern Philippines and the beginning of a new day in our quest for economic prosperity for our citizens.

Our policy vision for the new and reinvigorated relationship with the United States responds to realities that characterize our international and regional environment.

The first reality of this environment is that china — and I acknowledge the ambassador from the people's republic of china, who is here with us tonight — China, Japan and the U.S. and their relationships will be the determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of East Asia. And let me say, in this fight against terrorism they are all strong allies of one another.

Another reality is that overseas Filipinos, one-third of whom are in the United States, will continue to play a critical role in the country's economic and social stability.

Let me talk about the role of the U.S. and its allies but basically the role of the U.S. itself in the security situation of our region and the world. By virtue of its dominant military and economic power, the United States will continue to be an important factor in the affairs of our region and our nation. The Philippines has had enduring historical, cultural and economic ties with the United States. The last century saw in particular the close partnership between the Philippines and the United States, one which was redefined with the closure of the military bases in 1992, but one, which is being redefined once again after September 11.

I would like to see the blossoming of Philippine-U.S. relations that is responsive to the new realities of the 21st century, which is a world of globalization, a world of rapid technology change, and a world of great conjunction between security and development.

And I am pleased that the Philippines and the U.S. have agreed to embark on broad security cooperation to address issues not only of global terrorism, but also of the illegal narcotics trade, human trafficking and other transnational crimes. And despite the domestic problems that it sometimes causes, the military alliance with the United States is a strategic asset for the Philippines.

How do we give structural and operational meaning to this new relationship between the Philippines and the United States? In the war against terror, our two countries and nations across the world support the U.N. Security council resolution against terrorism. We support, in fact, we have signed the U.N. conventions on terrorist financing and terrorist bombing. We participate in the negotiations leading to the comprehensive United Nations convention on terrorism, and we are cutting the supply of arms to terrorists through the United Nations small arms and light weapons process.

The Philippines continues to be an active partner of the international counter-terrorist coalition. We work closely with the U.S., Indonesia, and soon, Jordan on intelligence and security matters concerning terrorism. We made available our airspace and air facilities when required as transits or staging points during the war that led to the fall of the Taliban government. We contribute logistical support in accordance with our commitments made at the Japan-led U.N. conference on the rehabilitation of Afghanistan. And, it is part of our role in this international coalition that we have stepped up our offensive against the terrorist Abu Sayyaf group. And we will be working with the technical support of the United States — department of the treasury, in particular — to prevent the flow of funds to terrorist groups.

Our strategic partnership translated in today's terms find expression in Balikatan 02-01. We can describe the current Philippine-U.S. alliance as a moral partnership. Beyond formal treaties, there is in all of us a deep moral purpose that is more powerful than any legal instrument. It is our belief that evil must not be allowed to rule even one inch of this earth.

The Philippines and the United States have stood shoulder-to-shoulder in the past. We have been allies against forces that threatened humanity. And we are allies in the present global effort to ensure human security.

The fight against terrorism, however, should not be the single defining factor of our relationship. The other facet of our relationship, its socioeconomic aspect, must be addressed with as much vigor.

The fact that the Abu Sayyaf, who once freely roamed the entire southwestern Philippines, have ended up with their last stand in Basilan — the province with the lowest human development index in our country — reminds us of how closely national security and economic prosperity are intertwined.

In this context, I welcome the call made by president George Bush last march 22nd during the international conference for financing for development in Mexico for a new compact for development defined by greater accountability for rich and poor nations alike. This call echoes an initiative I proposed before the delegates of the 16th East Asian economic summit in Hong Kong way back last October. There I said, that just as a coalition has been formed to eradicate terrorism, a coalition must also be formed to lift the global economy out of its lethargy.

In the international centers of Hong Kong, Washington, London and New York, I have called on developed nations such as the United States to recognize their duty to open markets, transfer resources and reform international institutions.

The accelerated access for our mangoes and the encouraging response to our campaign, which includes a letter from me to president bush, for our canned tuna are all part of the compliance to the commitments made by president bush in our joint communique during my visit to Washington last November.

The Philippines must harness its relations with the United States to realize our goals. In the area of bilateral trade, we must seek fair trade, one that opens the U.S. markets to our products and one that will enhance our development. And after Monterey, it is once again politically correct to assert that trade must be coupled with aid.

The new era of Philippine American relations must also see an increasing role for Filipino Americans. The Philippines must strengthen its links with them even as these Filipino- Americans assert their presence in American society. One-third of our overseas Filipinos live in the U.S., but they send two-thirds of the overseas remittances to the Philippines. And I welcome the initiative of vice-president Guingona to establish OFW bonds to serve as a mechanism to facilitate the investments of our overseas Filipinos totaling 6 billion dollars even with last year's difficulties investment in the economic development of their mother country. This way we can also entice them to return upon their retirement to a more prosperous nation.

We must also look for ways to strengthen and unify Filipino associations in the United States. Just as the American Jewish community has developed into a network of organizations that influence policy in the middle east, just as the Korean Americans were able to mobilize public opinion when Korean businessmen were assaulted in Los Angeles and Brooklyn sometime ago, the Filipino Americans can similarly take the lead, and more so because of our shared history and experience.

And we must not forget our veterans — the living legacies of the freedoms we now enjoy. We will ensure that they receive the recognition and benefits that they deserve. Thus, I welcome the long-awaited white house signal on Philippine veterans' rights that veterans affairs secretary principe conveyed when he visited the Philippines a few days ago.

Lastly, we are addressing the stark reminders of our cold war partnership with the United States — the hazardous wastes in the former U.S. facilities and the plight of the amerasians. The U.S. secretary of state Colin Powell responded positively on the issue of hazardous waste, and it is now up to our DENR officials to pursue the agreement. The plight of the amerasians is being attended to by our pro-Filipino U.S. congressmen and senators.

These are what characterize the new era of Philippine American relations. This new era was born out of crisis but holds its share of opportunities. And judging from the surveys the Filipino people welcome the presence and the continued engagement of the United States. But our new relationship must be defined by maturity as opposed to sentimentality. And together, the Philippines, the U.S. must bring the benefits of development to all.

Therefore, let us all move into a new era of stronger but more equitable partnership with the United States — a relationship that I firmly believe promises to bring a measure of security and stability to our world.

I thank the MOPC for giving me this opportunity to speak on this tonight. I was telling Tony Lopez that I was a few minutes late because up to the very moment that I stood up to change my clothes I was still working on the speech. It started as a discussion of Balikatan, and then it expanded into the relationship between the U.S. and the Philippines. So this is the first time I am speaking about the comprehensive aspects of our relationship with the U.S., and I hope I have defined them. We have the strategic relationship. We have the security relationship. We have the economic relationship. And we have the relationship that is engendered by the presence of millions of Filipino Americans in the U.S. We have the relationship born about by the fight against terrorism. But this is an opportunity that we are seizing to bring about a stronger relationship in the fight against poverty.

I hope that the MOPC, I hope that the media, domestic and more so foreign, will cover our fight against poverty with the same interest that it covers the fight against terrorism.

Truly, sometimes when I look at the newspapers and I see pictures of American soldiers brushing their teeth, sleeping in a hammock, playing basketball, I figure out, I wish this picture were a picture of something we did for instance today in Manggahan, sa floodway in Lupang Arenda, where after 14 years since 1988, we were able to resolve the social issues that prevented the flood dike from being built. A dike that could have stopped the flooding all around the Rizal and Pasig and Taguig part of lake Laguna where it not for the fact that there were a lot of people who were against it. I took the trouble of finding out why they are against it. And we took the trouble for 3 months to talk patiently with the people who were opposing it to look for a solution, a win-win solution and today the signed agreement presenting the win-win solution was presented to me.

These are I think as important facets in the fight against poverty as what we see in Basilan. And I wish that we could have something as dramatic as a battle, as a running battle with regard to the fight against poverty. But having become president, knowing the political process as Washington Sycip says, I just have to accept the fact that headlines are made by exciting things and controversial things, whereas the things that matter, the things that we have to plod on in order to fight poverty are things that you must persevere in.

Indeed, there is a battle against terrorism, but there is a greater battle against poverty though they are twins of one another. But I know that though you find the war against terrorism more exciting with respect to the Philippine American relationship, I hope that you will also respect that there is in this relationship something even deeper, something even longer lasting and that is the fight against poverty.

Therefore, I ask you, the foreign media to have the same interest if you will. And I ask you at the very least to have the same sympathy for the battle against poverty because in the end that is what is going to make the rest of the 21st century a free world, a world where the foreign media and the local media can continue to ply their trade in freedom, and can continue to be listened to and to be talked to by the leaders of any nation.

So, tonight once again I thank you for allowing me to be here, to be with you — not allowing me — requiring me to be with you. And until next year, I hope that when we speak together, when we're together here next year we would have been able to defeat the scourge of terrorism. But more than that I hope that we would have been able to achieve tangible results so that people will be happier and the media will be more interested in the war against poverty.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Manila Overseas Press Club (MOPC) "President's Night". Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225929/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7641&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the First Asian Regional Forum of the Global Parliamentarians on Habitat

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the First Asian Regional Forum of the Global Parliamentarians on Habitat

[Delivered at the Century Park Sheraton Hotel, Pasay City, Metro Manila, April 24, 2002]

Senate President Drilon; Speaker de Venecia; Senator Biazon; Senator Noli de Castro; Secretary Michael Defensor; Secretary Sonny Alvarez; Congressman Nograles; Congressman Nieva; Congressman Espinosa; Congressman Gonzalez; Congressman Solis; Honorable Noda; Members of the Diplomatic Corps; delegates to the First Asian Regional Forum of the Global Parliamentarians on Habitat; other distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

Almost two years ago, we were gathered here for a similar conference, the Third Global Forum of the Global Parliamentarians for Habitat. The Philippines hosted this from July 25th to July 28th in the year 2000. Senate President Drilon was a speaker and I was the keynote speaker then, as the second highest official of the government.

Now, after a peaceful transition last year, I'm here again before you, this time as the 14th president of our republic. Allow me, therefore, to welcome you in this new capacity, and to offer to you once again the renowned hospitality of our people.

This gathering is armed with renewed commitment and hope to address one of the most challenging issues of our time – providing adequate shelter for all.

The Philippine chaired the Asian Regional Council in year 2000, under the leadership of Senator Rodolfo Biazon, and we are very proud of that. At that time, the Philippines committed to convene its first meeting; so today, the Philippines is making good our commitment. We are glad that you have come in the spirit of commonality and civic duty amidst a scenario of global unpeace and anxiety.

I, therefore, take the opportunity to convey my sincere congratulations of the prime movers of this forum, particularly the officers of the council and member-countries.

Here, we aim to formally approve a body of statutes to guide the council in its future work. This is well and good. For a definite framework prevents the council's work from drifting here and there, and therefore drifting into oblivion.

We are here to make the council's presence felt in the Fourth Global Meeting of the Forum in Berlin this year. I am, indeed, elated that Asia will be heard as one potent voice in that very significant meeting.

We all remember with pride when the champions of shelter and sustainable human settlements gathered in Istanbul in June of 1996, under the auspices of the United Nations, to forge a blueprint for action.

This conference, known as Habitat II, was attended by representatives from 171 nations and 579 cities. They were all fired by a common idealism to provide decent homes to their peoples.

This idealism inspired many from all sectors and many personalities worldwide to lend a helping hand. The most famous symbol is former President of the United States, Jimmy Carter, who is often seen dipping his hand in sand and gravel to build homes for those in need all over the world, including the Philippines.

The Philippines is committed to the ideals of Habitat. We are doing our own building and repairs, not only of the physical ramparts of our nation, but of its social fabric.

When I assumed the presidency last year, I said that our country must be bold in our national ambitions and seek to win the battle against poverty within the decade. I told our parliamentarians – and many of them are here today – during my first State of the Nation Address last year, that to succeed in our battle our Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan calls for four components: first, the promotion of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; second, agricultural modernization founded on social equity; third, a sectoral and social bias in our economic development plan; and fourth, improving moral standards in government and in society.

Housing for the poor is an essential element of the third component – the sectoral and social bias. I also appreciate the insight of Senator Biazon about agricultural deterioration leading to urban blight. Thus, even the second component, – agricultural modernization founded on social equity should improve habitat in the urban areas. In accordance with our stress on housing, we are endeavoring to implement at last the Comprehensive and Integrated Shelter Financing Act sponsored by no less than our esteemed Asian leader of the Global Parliamentarians for Habitat, Senator Rodolfo Biazon.

My administration has adopted the Biazon law as our policy and regulatory framework for housing. To facilitate its implementation, we have simplified housing relations. We are shaping what we hope will be a sustainable housing finance system. This sustainable housing finance system will be enabled by the Special Purpose Bill as well as the Securitization Law – which Senate President Drilon and Speaker de Venecia said will both be passed before session ends this June.

We are accelerating assistance to the informal sector. We have set for ourselves the goal of empowering 150,000 urban poor families a year to own the land they occupy following the principles of Hernando de Soto; and we are building 100,000 houses a year for the working class that would require P20 B in budget every year, and 50,000 houses a year for the poorest of the poor, which would require about P2.5 B. These three goals together provide shelter security for 300,000 families a year. I'm gratified that this aggregate goal was accomplished in my administration's first year. I hope that we will be as successful or maybe even more successful in the succeeding years of my term.

For our pro-active targeting of beneficiaries, we focus on the most vulnerable communities. We provide priority assistance to those in danger zones such as river banks, creeks, and other flood-prone areas, including those in the right-of-way of government infrastructure projects. For instance, we are going to build a railroad from Manila to Subic-Clark, from Manila to CALABARZON-New Batangas Port, around Mindanao and other parts of the Philippines. But even as the Speaker and his colleagues in Congress have been working to assist our railroad officials to acquire the financing already, now together with the local governments like the government of Bulacan – where much of the railroad to the north will go – we are already working on the relocation of the informal settlers who are living in the right-of-way areas. We also prioritize our assistance to informal settlers who are in threat of demolition arising from court orders.

The housing authority has also accredited new technologies for building houses at lower cost. Just yesterday in Bulacan, I saw a house made of bamboo built by 500 people for P18,000. I think that is going to go a long way in spreading the budget for housing among the poor as a halfway house for those that we have to relocate because of the CAMANAVA flooding, the northrail, etc.

Because we inherited unoccupied housing units from previous administrations, the National Housing Authority is selling these unoccupied housing units at discounted prices. Aside from fast-tracking the distribution of lands to urban poor families we are seeking to improve access to credit. Right now, the cost of borrowing is at its lowest point in Philippine economic history. Not because we have interest rate control but because prudent budget management, prudent monetary management, prudent macroeconomic policies have brought interest rates down as well as the exchange rate down. Usually, to stabilize the exchange rate, you have to raise the interest rate. Usually, to bring down the interest rate, you have to sacrifice the exchange rate. But we are an economy that can keep stable its exchange rate and bring down its interest rates. That, indeed, is macroeconomic stability. I believe that's one big reason why the international credit agencies have upgraded the Philippines' credit rating from negative to stable.

As I mentioned earlier, with simplified housing regulations and greatly reduced processing time, and to assure security of tenure, we have started proclaiming alienable and disposable areas for housing and shelter purposes. But to be sure, there are still millions of Filipinos who remain squatters in their own country. I would like that within this decade, this unfortunate situation will no longer be so.

Let me also point out that in providing the housing needs, the policy of my administration is to ensure that the basic necessities such as water, electricity and sanitation facilities are also present.

In many cases, we have been able to provide proximate livelihood opportunities – markets, schools, roads and bridges, and other infrastructure needs of the community.

Thus, I am glad that you have underscored all of these things. I'm also glad that this forum underscores the role of civil society. When bureaucrats and legislators, saddled with pressing national concerns slow down, civil society can provide the momentum to carry on.

Civil engagement remains an important conduit in the implementation of the Habitat II Agenda. This sector is a strong pillar for capacity-building, resource-generation and community rearmament. Although it is time that elected officials represent the majority of the people, civil society represents community's conscience. Hence, its voice must be heard in policy making, decision-making, a service delivery.

We have certainly made some headway in achieving our goals, especially in empowering the poor to buy the land they occupy. But like many of your governments, we need to continually keep abreast with the latest developments in the shelter sector so that we could be more responsive to the needs of our peoples. This forum will, I am sure, provide this opportunity for our further enlightenment, and we are grateful for it.

The confluence of events has allowed our paths to cross once again to find new meaning to the commitment made two years ago – finding adequate housing and sustainable human settlements for all.

The collateral problems that impact upon this task are sometimes overwhelming and seemingly intractable. Some of these are urban unemployment, rural to city migration, environmental problems, even the plight of women in the cities, and mass transportation.

These only emphasize that shelter cannot be the exclusive task of the executive. Parliaments are indispensable in designing appropriate legislation, many times in support of government policies, but once in a brilliant while, even in designing the policies themselves. Far-reaching benefits are more readily attainable with the fusion of both executive and parliamentary efforts. There is no doubt that your presence here today signifies this partnership in bearing the burden and responsibility of the future.

The dream lives on. As we look forward to the agenda of this meeting, it is a great opportunity to recharge the deep sense of resolve that propelled our energies two years ago.

We must draw upon our common achievements to move forward. Even as the world is beset with constraints, and while conflict rages in some places, we must win the fight for shelter. This is part of the quest of human dignity. This is vital to harmony, peace, and mankind's solidarity.

Let us again join hands firmly so our peoples can rightfully say that yes, there is a hope for a better life in the 21st century.

Thank you and welcome to the Philippines.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

Speech of President Arroyo during the National Press Club's Gridiron Night

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the National Press Club's Gridiron Night

[Delivered at the Fiesta Pavilion, Manila Hotel, April 30, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Yong-Yong Afable.

Officers and members of the National Press Club led by Louie Logarta; officials of the Philippine government; other distinguished journalists and media practitioners; mga mahal kong kababayan; ladies and gentlemen:

I am pleased to pretend to be happy to join you tonight. Actually, I hate going to things like this. But I am sure that unlike me, you are genuinely happy that I am here because you do need me to make hakot for you. Not hakot the crowd but hakot those who will buy the tickets to this dinner — because those are two different things. Because — you notice how many empty tables there are? — they bought seats but they are not interested in coming.

Paying guests like this are paying for the tickets not because they like me, it's just that the National Press Club after all these years now knows who are the usual milking cows. the government agencies who are afraid the press will be mean to them if they don't buy a table, or those who want to be promoted and therefore, they need a good press to advocate for them when promotion time comes. And the business groups who are afraid the government will be mean to them if they don't buy a table in an affair where the president is the guest of honor.

Well, you know who they are. You know who to sell tickets to because this is such a long-standing tradition — the Gridiron. The Gridiron stems from a time-honored tradition of reminding Presidents of the power of the press — as if the Presidents' need to be reminded. I know I don't need to be reminded. I am reminded every day when I read the papers, I'm reminded every night when I watch television. So I'm like those milking cows of the government and the private sector who buy your tables. I know you'll hit me even if I come, but you will hit me even more if I don't come. So I have to come. So, here I am.

Let me congratulate National Press Club president Louie Logarta and the National Press Club board of directors for hosting tonight's Gridiron dinner.

You have managed to continue a tradition and a media institution — the tradition and the institution are a great dinner and a great skit. But traditionally, both are... Well, no... Traditionally, the dinner is tasty but traditionally the skit is tasteless. I am sure tonight's dinner and tonight's skit will be in accordance with the tradition. In other words, I am sure the food will be good but the skit will be bad I say good food — because I like to be on the good side of Don Emilio Yap — and I say bad skit anyway, because no matter what i'll say I'll be on the bad side of Louie Logarta's paper anyway. So, I might as well tell the truth about my judgment.

And I understand tickets are more expensive this year. On the other hand, I understand that you have not raised your fees for the writers, the director and the producer of the skit. What a shame doing it just before Labor Day at that. The Secretary of Labor should look into this.

But what I enjoy about Gridirons is that rather than professionals, you get amateurs from among your own to star in the show. Sure, they get to be boring that's why you have tickets sold out but tables empty, because they're boring. But they're not boring for me. Not for me because I've loved to watch plays and movies whether they're Broadway class, Hollywood class or class play class when I was still small, I was so stage struck. I'm still small, so I'm still stage struck.

And as far as I'm concerned, even if your captive audience, rather the staff of your captive audience — see, they don't come so they just give out the tickets they bought to their staff — even if the audience is bored, our actors will enliven my evening as far as I'm concerned with their spontaneity, their expected lapses, the inevitable misquotes and the sense of innocence just like my cabinet members. But actually, my cabinet members are not so innocent. They're getting wise to the ways of the world. Look, tonight there's no single cabinet member here in this hall. See, how wise they are — they have better things to do with their time.

But on my part, because I have to be here and I like plays anyway, I look forward to the performance of the cast. This cast, just like my presidency, doesn't have to be great, just good. Or, some of you might even say, just like my presidency, this cast doesn't even have to be good basta makaraos lang, maka-survive lang.

Many members of the cast, in fact, are responsible for the bad press that Malacañang is now having. But I forgive them. To err is journalism; to forgive is presidential.

Speaking of the Presidency, I understand Louie Logarta is running for reelection on May 5th. I shall not wish him luck because I might be accused of electioneering; also, because actually I do not wish him luck. I understand Louie is running against two other contenders — both from the Manila Bulletin. Remember what I said about wanting to be always on the good side of don Emilio? Now you know where my sympathies lie.

I understand there have been some intramural wars among the officers and directors of the National Press Club. Well and good. Will you believe me if I say that this is part of our media strategy to promote internal wars within the press? And will you believe me if I say that this is a responsibility that I entrusted to Angie Reyes? Remember he was the only cabinet member who was here, who was in the press club last year during the Gridiron. Now, even he is not here, not because he was plotting all your internal wars among you, but because he found out that cabinet members don't really come. So he has better things to do with his time so, he is not here either.

They say that Malacañang is a snake pit. But from what I have observed all throughout my public career of the NPC, the National Press Club is also a snake pit. And I guess, Malacañang is a snake pit, the press club is snake pit, now we know why Bobi Tiglao decided to leave for awhile. He couldn't stand the hissing. Imagine two snake pits, (laughter) having to live there, Malacañang na nga, media pa. Kawawa naman si Bobi Tiglao talaga.

In fact, most presidents have trepidations about the gridiron skit, even my cabinet you can see. But as for me, I have none. Maybe because last year the jokes were more on my predecessor than on me. Remember, that was the night before his arrest? But I think this year the jokes will be more on me, because one year is plenty of time to collect ridicule-worthy material about me. Maybe it will also be the night before my arrest. Anyway, I know how to take jokes at my expense. Really, I do. If you don't believe me, tatarayan ko kayo.

Filipinos have a great sense of humor. Our gross national humor is arguably the highest in the world. I should mention this in my next state of the nation address. It sounds good, even if it's irrelevant to the fight against terrorism and poverty. Anyway, we can always have a debate. Which is more relevant, the gross national humor or the gross national product? Or maybe, which is less relevant to poverty?

So, you can see I'm in a state of denial. I'm denying that you don't like me. I'm denying that I'm worried about what you'll say about me. So, in my state of denial, I'm pretending to be more worried about what you have to say about the katzenjammer twins, I mean, the Alvarez twins — Sonny and Bebot. I'm worried about what you have to say about Lito Camacho whether he's mama's boy, wife's boy, daughter's boy, sister's boy. I'm worried about what you have to say about Dick Gordon, "Wow Philippines" or "kiss me kate."

I'm worried about how you will portray your own Noel "burnout" Cabrera. Look, even he is not here now — actually, he's on vacation in the U.S. he needs a vacation because of his burnout. Or Bobi "scholar" Tiglao or Rafael Paeng "two-hundred peso bill" Buenaventura.

And is it true that you will portray Bobby Romulo as the real Secretary of Foreign Affairs? And how true is the rumor that your skit will portray Hernando Perez as the lover boy — the lover boy of Batangas that is.

But please don't be too hard on my cabinet. I am protective of my cabinet members — I only wish they were also quick enough to be protective of me. You can see, they've made me face you alone. They do that all the time, they make me face the world alone.

The fact is life in government is like going through a gridiron script. You get ridiculed for your mistakes, and you get jibes about your accomplishments. But we, as public officials must take all these things in stride even if we feel so pikon. Okay lang ang mataray, huwag lang pikon. Anong diperensya? Ang taray, external; ang pikon internal. I'm always going to explain — madalas naririnig ko sa T.V. set 'pag nanonood ako ng news na sinabi ng beat reporter na napikon na naman si President Arroyo. Actually, hindi ako napipikon, mataray lang ako talaga. I have very even tempered, always mataray. But I have not internalized my katarayan, it's just a reflex action. It's not a deliberate expression of my true message.

Somebody told me that there is a growing effort in the media to play up the good news. Wow! He could have fooled me. I still see very few items that seem to go against the tradition of reporting the seedy part of the day. But I do hope indeed there are reformists. I wish they would start with the newspaper of the NPC president. Hopeless case? Nagbigay na ako ng one million sa National Press Club, ganun pa rin sila.. sige na nga, I'll settle for improving the direction and the acting in the Gridiron skit.

But I really appreciate the good news — about personal heroism, values, human worth and community triumphs. Sometimes we tend to gloss over these things even if they are the real stuff of nationhood.

I see no reason why a good provincial story should not make page one, or a good metro report land on premium space. Let's give credit to the small-town mayor who helped us recover Jeffrey Schilling, or the hometown entrepreneur from San Rafael, Bulacan who developed a 15,000-peso core shelter for calamity victims. Let's give credit to the people, they deserve a break.

By all means, let the media take down the spotty woodwork. God knows there are many underperforming public servants and there are many lousy programs. But let the battle focus on issues, on policy, on principles. We need relief from personal attacks so that the issues will surface in clear light.

Yes, get to the heart of a controversial policy. Analyze a bad piece of legislation, a bad proclamation. But do it with fervor and a genuine penchant for chronology and detail. Investigative journalism is one of the grindstones of policy. Done professionally, it promotes public interest.

Sometime this year, the national press club will celebrate its 50th year. Your golden anniversary will be a good time to reflect on the enduring relations between government and the press. Much of this relationship has involved golden moments, like EDSA 1 and EDSA 2. You are among those who led, and the people followed.

So, sometime this year, on the occasion of your golden anniversary, I would like to be able to invite you to a different kind of Gridiron — a skit put up by the Malacañang staff and the Cabinet Secretaries. We will lampoon the media and the members of the journalistic profession.

The script will be written by Acting Press Secretary Yong-Yong Afable, with emotional flourishes by senior presidential consultant Dante Ang. And Dodi Limcaoco will take care of the miscues. It will be a showdown between government, the good and the press, the bad.

I would like Vice President Tito Guingona to head the production, with Romulo prompting him from the sidelines — not Bert Romulo but Bobby Romulo.

What are some of the themes and sub-themes of the Malacañang skit? Act one: envelopmental journalism; act two: why everybody wants to be a columnist; act three: how to be a publisher without really trying; act four: the ac-dc syndrome; and act five: the kuryente school of newswriting.

I hope you will have an enjoyable evening rin as enjoyable as the evening I hope I will have tonight. If you see the few government officials who are here tonight crying — the way I cried when I saw ‘bagong buwan’ — you can be sure it’s both tears of joy and tears of pain. Because, I guess I would rather cry than walk out. I hope you have good reviews tomorrow. But if not, blame the lighting.

As for me, of course I’ll blame you. But more than that, I’ll thank you. I’ll thank you for the warmth, the camaraderie and the laughter. So, break a leg!

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the National Press Club’s Gridiron Night. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225904/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7636&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Housing Conference of the Philippine Government Employees Association (PGEA)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Housing Conference of the Philippine Government Employees Association (PGEA)

[Delivered at the Heroes Hall, Malacañang, April 30, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Mike Defensor sa iyung pagpapakilala sa akin. At maraming salamat dahil masunurin ka, bumibilis ang ating housing program.

Binibining Ocampo, ang ating National President ng PGEA; Ginoong Minoto, ang namumuno sa Social Ministry ng Couples for Christ; Deputy Executive Secretary Tale; Winston Garcia, pangulo ng GSIS; Romero Quimbo, ang namumuno ng Pag-IBIG — ‘di ba Pag-IBIG ‘yon? — at Dr. Ponciano Jeres, ang vice president ng PGEA; mga delegado sa komperensiya ng housing needs ng government employees; other government officials; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

Magandang hapon sa aking mga kapwang naglilingkod sa ating bayan.

Binabati ko ang Philippine Government Employees Association sa pagsasagawa ng pagpupulong na ito tungkol sa pabahay para sa mga kawani ng pamahalaan. Kayo ang huwarang Government Employees Association. Kasi hindi niyo sinisikap ibagsak ang gobyernong pinanggagalingan ng inyong hanapbuhay. Ang ginagawa ninyo ay maghanap ng paraan upang lumawak ang biyaya ng inyong mga kasapi, kagaya ng ginagawa ninyo itong araw na ito. Kaya sa aking malaking paghanga sa inyo, inimbata ko kayong gawin itong pulong sa tahanan ng pilipinas, sa tahanan ng gobyerno, sa tahanan ninyo, ang Malacañang Palace.

Kinikilala ko ang Philippine Government Employees Association bilang tunay na kinatawan ng dakilang manggagawa sa gobyerno. Kayo ay patunay na ang mga manggagawa ng pamahalaan ay patuloy na nagsisilbi hindi lamang sa mga pangangailangan ng publiko kung hindi maging sa mga kasamahan ninyo sa pamahalaan.

Sa aking State of the Nation Address noong isang taon sinabi ko, na layunin ng pamahalaan magkaroon ng tahanan ang sanlibong manggagawa taun-taon. Ang ginagawa ninyo ngayon ay malaking tulong upang makamit natin ang layuning ito. Kaya naman binibigyan natin ito ngayon ng matamang atensyon.

Dapat lamang na tugunan ang pangangailangan ng pabahay ng lahat ng manggagawang pilipino, pribado man o publiko.

Alam kong gustong-gusto ninyong mapabilis ang serbisyo ng pabahay at masigurado na abot-kaya ito ng bawa’t empleyado. Sa ngayon, malaking porsiyento ng ating mga kawani ay nabibilang — gaya ng sabi ni Ms. Ocampo — sa lower salary grade na rank-and-file. ang mga ito, kung hindi man nangungupahan ay nakitira sa mga kamag-anak — at gaya ng sabi ni Ms. Ocampo — iba pa nga ay nakatira sa squatter area.

Ang pangangailangan sa pabahay ay isa rin sa prayoridad na isyu ng mga manggagawa sa pamahalaan na inilahad noong nakaraang disyembre 4 and 5 — gaya ng sabi ni Ms. Ocampo — sa National Convention of Government Employees sa PICC. Kaya naman, gaya din ng sabi niya, sumang-ayon agad ako sa pgea na kailangang pabilisan natin ang programang pabahay para sa mga kawani ng gobyerno.

Inaasahan ko na ang komperensiyang ito ay magsisilbing pagtulungan natin liwanagin at tugunan ang mga isyu at pangangailangan ninyo sa pabahay.

Kaya inaatasan ko ang HUDCC, Pag-IBIG at GSIS na ibigay ang lahat ng suporta hindi lamang sa tagumpay ng conference na ito kundi sa pagkakaroon ng kongkretong resulta ng mga susunod pa ninyong hakbangin.

Nasisiyahan ako na nandito si Winston Mismo — hindi ko tuloy nakilala. pumayat sa kanyang isang taong trabaho sa GSIS — Kaya Winston, dahil bihira tayong magkasama, makinig kang mabuti sa aking mga instructions, at sundan mo ako:

Number One, I am directing GSIS to work with PGEA to facilitate the access of government employees to affordable housing programs and provide sources of funds. Facilitate is the operative word here. Meaning, I don't want red tape. Meaning, I don't want the GSIS to dictate and limit the number of designs the government workers want to adopt. The rules for lending should only revolve around the amount of the housing loan, not the kind of housing because that should be the prerogative of the individual government employee. In fact, if an employee wants a more expensive model than the loan provides for so be it, as long as the employee is willing to finance the difference from other sources.

Also, when I had the last commission meeting of the Presidential Commission on Mass Housing before I abolished it, when we saw that the amount of money that GSIS is actually spending for housing is quite small compared to verbal commitments, and when we examined why — one excuse was given, that because GSIS does it through conduits — private banks and because many private banks are quite conservative due, among other things, to the red tape which has been reduced, and also because of their bad experience during the Asian crisis and also the 2001 crisis, they're quite reluctant to lend out their money as long as they still have many non-performing assets. But I said, well, that's because they have their own obligations to their stockholders. But in that meeting I said, if the private sector is still reluctant then expand your conduits to include Pag-ibig itself as a conduit.

So I'm reminding you, Winston, that Pag-IBIG should be a conduit and I think when Pag-IBIG is made a conduit then the money will go out faster to our government employees. okay? good.

Now on HUDCC — ah eto si Mike Parati kong nakikita naman kaya lang I'll just make public the instruction so that you'll be happy — I believe, Mike that the government employees want to identify a land area for Presidential Proclamation to be developed and declared as a housing site for government employees. So I am endorsing this request of PGEA to implement a housing project for low-salaried government employees to be incorporated in the preparation of a masterplan for the lungsod silangan area. Eh 'yon ang kanilang ano... request, 'yon ang ini-endorso ko. kaya lang gusto kong malaman, meron bang masterplan 'yung lungsod silangan area? so meron 'yon. ayun, may mga cases, kasi ang iniisip ko, kung wala naman talaga 'yung masterplan, kung marami 'yung sabit, this is one fall back.

Earlier, I instructed the DOJ to start transferring Bilibid Prison from Muntinlupa to the military reservation in Tanay. But in case your master plan doesn't push through — and we have to know that in a few month's time — one option is for that portion of the military reservation that was supposed to be for the Bilibid, we can reallocate it to government housing, but we need a decision soon on that because we also cannot hold the DOJ hanging. so no need of this. Okay. Good, no need of this. Kasi kung hindi ipapalipat ko na naman sana 'yung preso from Tanay to Fort Magsaysay instead. Ang naiisip ko lang kasi Fort has plenty of land. Iniisip ko lang kasi kawawa naman 'yung mga pamilya ng mga preso if they have to go all the way to Fort Magsaysay. So if you have your land then at least we don't have to do that, and DOJ can continue working on transferring Bilibid to Tanay which is much easier for their families to visit. Okay.

Ngayon sa Pag-IBIG: I am instructing the Pag-IBIG to allocate the unoccupied housing units available for disposition under the rent-to-own scheme to PGEA members.

Ngayon hindi ibig sabihin may quota kayo, ha. Because the PGEA does it on a "first come-first served" basis. So while Pag-ibig cannot allocate a quota to PGEA because of the "first come-first served" basis, what Pag-ibig should do is to provide PGEA regularly with the list of available rent-to-own units on a weekly basis. O, puwede raw I-prioritize. meaning, if two applications arrive, other things being equal, ‘yung government employee ang mauuna — ‘yan ang ibig sabihin ng prioritizing.

Kaya iyon namang mga PGEA, dapat dumalo kayo sa briefing ng rent-to-own tuwing sabado sa Atrium building sa Makati, kasi doon parati ina-update ‘yung availability.

Ngayon GSIS, National Home Mortgage Finance and hgc should adopt the rent or lease-to-own scheme of Pag-ibig and extend this to government employees.

And subject to COA rules, I am approving the GSIS proposal that instead of selling foreclosed residential properties, GSIS should sell its abandoned housing units at discounted amounts to its members. I understand GSIS has identified 3,000 abandoned units which it took out from developers. So please confer with the commission on audit at the soonest possible time to work out how this can be done without being construed as violating the law.

Ang official government conduit or representative to COA is the DBM. So I would suggest, Winston that you work with Emi Boncodin to work with the chairman of COA regarding this.

One of the achievements of this administration is that we have reduced interest rates to an all-time low. We achieved this through fiscal discipline that kept our budget deficit down to a 147 billion. But this all-time low in treasury bill rates should translate into lower interest rates for the consumers and the Filipino families. I have appealed to the banking sector to translate their lower borrowing rates to lower lending rates. Sa private sector banks makakaapila lamang ako because this is a free enterprise society and I cannot impose on them what interest rate they will charge, but the public sector financial institutions are under the president of the Philippines, and I am telling them they must set the example. Thus, I am instructing all the government lending agencies, particularly the GSIS, to exercise modern financial management that will reduce your lending rate for housing loans. I won’t tell you how much because you have to exercise your financial management, but certainly the rates you are charging now are the rates that were being charged when interest rates were very high. But interest rates are low now and the consumer, the lowly worker, including the government worker should be able to feel the blessings of our fiscal program.

I understand that GSIS is also planning to extend a restoration loan to member-buyers at an average of a 100,000 to 150,000. Well, if this is possible without sacrificing the goal of reducing interest rates then go ahead. But this is my advise and prioritization instruction — rather than spreading your administration over so many programs, I think you should concentrate on providing the basic, the housing itself. Let us target the whole housing sector, including GSIS a 100,000 housing for the workers including government workers. and if we provide that, never mind the other side programs. That’s the most important thing, let us focus on the basics. So this is my instruction for GSIS — mabuti nandito si Winston, paminsan-minsan nakikita ko siya.

So this is what I believe will help us to achieve our targets for this year and thereby reduce poverty even among our government employees.

Sa inyo naman sa PGEA meron akong hihingiin. sinabi ko na gusto ko na magkaroon ng good governance, and on my first working day — the first Monday I was President — I defined the pillars of good governance: moral ascendancy in the leadership — that’s my instruction to myself; an ethic of transparency in all government actions — kaya sina Emi Boncodin, the cabinet members, they have to work on the systems; the third is an ethic of effective implementation by the bureaucracy at all levels — kayo ‘yon. ‘yon ang hinihingi ko sa inyo.

At dahil dito — mabuti nandito si Joe Tale baka makatulong ‘yung kanyang organization din — ilang beses ko na sinasabi publicly that to promote an ethic of effective implementation I want values formation, programs to be revived in the various government agencies, but not necessarily conducted by the head of the government agencies.

I have told the various evangelical groups, Catholic Charismatic, Couples for Christ, kung sino bang gumawa ng values formation, ang kausap niyo ay ang PGEA.

Kaya 'yon, what the government would like to do for you is to give you housing and other benefits to improve your standard of living; what the government asks from you is good governance and an ethic of effective implementation in the bureaucracy. and we are empowering you to work out those programs yourselves, kasi malaki ang tiwala ko sa PGEA.

Muli, mga kaakibat kong nagtatrabaho sa gobyerno, congratulations dito sa inyong housing agency. at sana itong mga instruction na binigay ko sa ating mga housing and related government agencies ay masunod nang mabuti dahil pinag-isipan ko itong mga instructions na ito dahil ito ang makakabuti at makakapabilis sa housing program para sa ating mga manggagawa.

Maraming salamat at good luck sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Housing Conference of the Philippine Government Employees Association (PGEA). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225915/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=7640&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Labor Day celebration Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Labor Day celebration

[Delivered at the Araneta Coliseum, Quezon City, May 1, 2002]

Nasisiyahan ako nang matanggap ko ang tripartite declaration mula kina Tito Carlos, Pat Sto. Tomas, at Atty. Mendoza. Iyan ang magiging laman ng ating pag-uusap nitong hapon. Iyong pinirmahan nila bilang kinatawan ng manggagawa, namumuhunan, at pamahalaan ay isang pangako na tayong lahat na narito ay magtrabaho, magsasama upang ipairal ang trabahong disente.

Nakapaloob sa dokumento na ibinigaysa akin kanina ang gusto nating makamit sa maikling panahon, ito ang laman ng ating employment strategy. This strategy includes five principles. Una, the creation of employment. Pangalawa, the promotion of labor standards. Pangatlo, social protection, pang-apat social dialogue, panlima tripartism.

The challenge for all of us is to make this declaration work.

Tungkol sa unang bahagi ng employment strategy, ang creation of employment. Magpasalamat tayo sa Panginoon na sa nakaraang taon, nakapaglikha ang ating ekonomiya ng mahigit sa isang milyon at kalahating trabaho sa kabila ng maraming kaguluhan sa ating mundo. Kaya bumaba ang ating unemployment rate mula sa 11.3% hanggang sa 10.3% ngayon isang taon mula nang ako'y manungkulan. We must have job creation through investments and also through employment facilitation. Para magawa itong employment facilitation, our goal will be to expand the computerized linking of the labor market information networks to include more employers and workers organizations, as well as government units.

Tungkol naman sa pangalawang patakaran ng ating kasunduan sa stratehiya. Ang promotions of labor standards. Nagkaroon na tayo ng bagong rules sa subcontracting upang magbigay ng higit na seguridad sa trabaho at bilang tugon sa isyu ng contractualization. Kaya gusto kong klaruhin muli sa lahat, labag sa batas ilapat ang "labor-only subcontracting."

Tuluyan din natin ipinapatupad ang patakaran ng wage simplification gaya ng pinaglaban ninyo sa proseso sa pagtaas ng minimum wage. Labing-isang wage ang itinakda sa inyo ng ating Regional Wage and Productivity Boards hinggil sa nilagdaan ninyong petisyon na itaas ang sahod. Noong isang taon sa aking SONA, sinabi ko na umaasa akong magpasya ang Kongreso o Wage Board tungkol sa nararapat na suweldo. Ganoon pa rin ang aking paniniwala hanggang ngayon. Noong Kongresista pa lamang ang aking ama na si Diosdado Macapagal, tinakda niya ang unang minimum wage law sa ating kasaysayan. Noon siya 'y naging Pangulo, pinirmahan din niya ang pangalawang minimum wage law sa ating kasaysayan. Kaya naniniwala ako na ang Kongreso ay may kapangyarihan at dunong na hanapin kung ano ang nararapat na minimum wage sa ating lipunan.

Pangatlong elemento ng ating ILO-based employment strategies ay social protection. Naghandog ang pamahalaan ng P27 milyon sa state insurance fund para mapautang sa mga displaced workers. Humigit kumulang sa 2,000 manggagawa na ang nabiyayaan sa pautang na ito. Meron pang hiwalay na socio-economic assistance amounting to another P27 million to about 5,000 sugar workers and their families. Kanina tinanggap ni Zoila Dela Cruz ang P12 milyon na tseke para sa mga nahihirapang manggagawa sa sugar sector. Nakapaglaan din ang DOLE at ang aking Social Fund ng P22 milyon para magkaroon ng Poverty Free Zone Project sa bawat rehiyon at matulungan ang maliliit na komunidad na maging maunlad at magkaroon ng sariling kakayahan. Hinihingi ko rin ang tulong ng Philippine Ports Authority at ng DOLE na tugunan ang mga pangangailangan ng mga port workers natin.

Noong ako ay maupo bilang Pangulo kinilala ko ang kalagayan ng informal sector. Kaya't ang pamahalaan ay naglunsad din ng Social Protection Program for Workers in the Informal Sector. Ang programang ito ay naglalayong isama ang mga manggagawang nasainformal sector sa Social Security System.

Patuloy nating kinikilala ang malaking contribution ng overseas Filipino workers sa ating ekonomiya. Kaya ang DOH, DSWD, at DOLE ay magpapadala ng mga duktur at social workers sa iba't-ibang overseas post mula nitong Hunyo. At meron tayong P25 milyon na ibibigay dito para alagaan ang kapakanan ng ating mga OFW lalo na sa pagbigay ng medical and counselling services doon sa mga bansa kung saan sila nagtrabaho.

Ang pang-apat na bahagi sa ating employment strategy ay ang social dialogue. Ibig sabihin nito ay hindi dapat adversarial ang relasyon ng mga manggagawa at mamumuhunan. Sa aking State-of-the-Nation Address, sinabi ko "to reduce excessive friction in labor and management relations, we will go the extra mile to work for industrial peace." Siguro pinakinggan tayo ng ating mga labor and employment sector sapagkat naging lalong mahinahon ang kanilang relasyon nitong nakaraang taon. Sa nakaraang taon, 43 lamang ang welga kumpara sa 60 noong taong 2000, kaya mas lumawak ang industrial peace.

Kasama naman sa panlimang bahagi ng ating employment strategy ang tripartism which means we must continuously facilitate a regulatory function in government. For instance, all proceedings arising from the disposition of labor cases and processing of documents are administrative rather than judicial proceedings. That is why as part of the centennial observance of the Philippine labor movement, Secretary Sto. Tomas will consult with all sectors concerned, to conduct a comprehensive review of the structure and procedures of all the agencies administering labor justice undertaking registration functions. Sa madaling salita, iyong red tape ay hahatiin ang signatures na required para sa iba 't-ibang serbisyo ng DOLE, POEA, OWWA, at National Labor Relations Commission para sa inyong manggagawa. Related to this, Secretary Sto. Tomas will study the adoption of joint inspection teams composed of representatives from labor and management to assist labor inspectors in doing their jobs to make sure the firms are following the law. As a service to our heroic OFWs, the e-link system for OFWs, a system simplify and fast-track the documentation process for overseas workers, will also be implemented.

Sa aking State-of-the-Nation Address noong isang taon, hiningi ko sa Kongres: na bigyang daan ang matagal nang pinapangarap ng ating OFW — ang karapatari bumoto. Ang ating administrasyon ay lubos na nagpapanukala ng batas na absentee voting upang mabigyan ang ating mga OFWs ng boses sa halalan. Sinusuportahan kc rin ang panukalang batas na naglalayong magbigay ng dual citizenship sa ating oversea Filipinos.

Mauumpisahan na rin ang ating inamunsiyong National Provident Fund or SSS Flexifund para sa ating OFWs. This will take the form of a social security scheme that will encourage savings and investments as well as entitle them to benefits such as multi-purpose loans and insurance coverage. If they hold this up to retirement age, the provident fund can finance the member's old age needs in the form of monthly pensions or lump sum payments.

Para sa ating manggagawa naman na narito sa Pilipinas, alam ko na importante ang presyo ng mga batayang bilihan na maging kaya ng mga manggagawa. Kaya dadagdagan pa ng NFA ang mga rolling stores na umiikot sa iba 't-ibang lugar upang mapalapit sa inyo ang mga murang bilihan kagaya ng bigas na P14 at kalahating presyo ng gamot. Ngayon pa lang nga mahigit na 1,000 na ang lumilibot na NFA stores. Dadagdagan pa rin natin para maglingkod sa manggagawang Pilipino. Ikinagagalak ko rin iyong pagkukusang bukluran ng manggagawang Pilipino, Employees Confederation of the Philippines, at Metro Manila Development Authority na nagpirmahan itong araw na ito ng memorandum of agreement para sa pagtatayo ng mga tindahan ng pangunahing pangangailangan sa murang halaga at pagtatalaga ng MMDA rolling stores sa medium size enterprises kung saan makakabili ang mga manggagawa ng murang kailangan nila. At the same time, the essential drugs and medicines, specifically frequently used by the poor, are now available to you at 50 percent of last year's price at government hospitals and at NFA rolling stores. Ngayon, 73 hospitals ang mayroon noon. Sa Setyembre, aabot na ang half-priced medicines sa 600 hospitals na sakop ng pamahalaang lokal at 800 na botika sa barangaysa buong bansa alang-alang sa manggagawang maralitang Pilipino.

Umaabot na rin sa higit tatlong milyon ang napasailalim ng Indigent Program ng ating National Health Insurance which will pay for the hospital bills of poor beneficiaries. For the housing of workers, I am tasking HUDCC to make available to the homeless workers the foreclosed properties of government financial institutions like PAG-IBIG, NHA, NHFMC, SSS, and other agencies on a rent-to-own basis. So, ito ay huhulugan ninyo ng 25 years. For this year, I want 20,000 units to be made available to our workers. This is where P10 billion for workers' housing is going.

We must also provide assistance to displaced workers. The DOLE will aggressively implement the Quick Response Team Operation Balik Trabaho to provide an immediate and integrated package of assistance to displaced workers including their dependents. Included in the delivery of employment services are profiling, job matching, referrals, guidance, skills retraining, livelihood, and entrepreneurship development. It will also give assistance to workers in obtaining their separation benefits and in making informed choices on re-employment options that should be pursued because I learned that workers have difficulty in getting their separate-benefits.

We must also set up our safety nets for sectors affected by globalization.

Let's talk about electricity. I have instructed Secretary Vince Perez to study the Purchase Power Adjustment or PPA. I am also urging the Energy Regulatory Commission to carefully examine and expedite the review of the monthly PPA filings and to listen closely to the voice of the people.

Panahon na para ma-audit ang mga PPA na pina-file ng mga electric companies. On top of this is a proposal by the DoE that PPA charges can also be in addition to the audit and the review significantly reproduced through financial reengineering.

The proposal, if implemented, can bring the cost of NAPOCOR power by as much as 85 centavos per kw hour. Let's pass a bill that would give power to bring down the PPA through re-financing and I hope that in the near future this can be included in our priority legislation in Congress.

Ako ay nagpapasalamat sa malaking pagsuporta ng lehitimo at responsableng labor movement sa ating administrasyon. Nakatutuwang isipin na napakaangkop ng ating pagdiriwang ng 100 taon ng labor movement. Nararapat na pag-alabin natin muli ang apoy na sinindihan ng ating mga unang lider na manggagawa. Itulak muli natin, sa progresibong pag-iisip at aksyon, ang ating mga pagawaan upang masimulan natin ang isa pang makahulugang kabanata sa kasaysayan ng ating bayan. lisa lang ang superstar ng ating bansa at iyan ay ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Maraming salamat.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

ATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Centennial Celebration of the Labor Movement in Cebu City

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Centennial Celebration of the Labor Movement in Cebu City

[Delivered at the Cebu Coliseum, Cebu City, May 1, 2002]

Maraming salamat.

Maraming salamat sa ating Secretary of Labor Pat Sto. Tomas. Ang inahang dili ra sa mga workers diri sa Pilipinas kungdi sa tibuok kalibutan kay siya ang Presidente sab sa International Labor Organization, Secretary Pat Sto. Tomas.

Ug paabot ko sab ang akon pag-abi-abi sa aton mga opisyaless diri sa Cebu, ang aton mga Congressmen — Congressman Tony Cuenco, Congressman Del Mar, Congressman Kintanar; ang atong Governor sa Cebu province, Governor Garcia; atong Acting Mayor Michael Rama; ang amahan sa Labor Movement sa kining atong henerasyon karon, Associate ALU National President Democrito Mendoza; ang atong Vice President, si Attorney Cecilio Seno. Ug gusto ko ipaabot ang akong pagpasalamat kan Vice President Seno sa imong manindot nga ekspresyon sa pagsuporta sa atong administrasyon; ug sab ang duhang member sa akong Cabinet, kauban ni Secretary Sto. Tomas, si Secretary for jobs creation Cito Lorenzo, ug si Secretary for Special Concerns Bert Gonzales; kag ang tanan-tanan nga mga members sa mga labor union; mga laing-laing dinapit aton mga kaigsuonan; mga pinalangga ko nga mga sugbuanon, maayong udto ug malipayong adlaw sa pagbuhat sa tanan nga mga Cebuano ug sa Bisaya.

Kini ang sentenaryo sa paghimo sa unang unyon sa mga trabahador sa atong nasud, ang unyon obrera demokratika. Sa ining okasyon, hinumdumon naton ang mga kalisud sa mga unang leader sa unyon. Sa Manila si ka Andres Bonifacio, Don Isabelo Delos Reyes, Lope K. Santos, ka Amado Hernandez ug uban pa. Ug tungod kay kining adlaw usa ka espesyal nga Labor Day kay Centennial sa atong labor movement sa atong nasud kinahangalan nga ang aton National celebration dili ra mahitabo sa Manila kundili sa sentro sa pinakakusog, pinakadako nga labor union sa atong nasud diri mismo sa Cebu ang balay ng atong alu ug TUCP ug Labor Solidarity Movement. Ug manindot gyud ang atong slogan diri, Labor Day 2002: Sandaan Isang Daan — 101 Way; 100 and Unity, mao ang atong tema sa atong selebrasyon.

Usa ka siglo sukad nahitabo, napundar ang atong Union Labor Movement, ang kapobrehan mao hangtod karon ang pinakadakong problema sa atong nasud. Kinahanglan na gyud madaog nato ang pagkakabos sa sunod sa usa ka dekada. Aron dili na kita mapadayon sa aton mga anak ug apo. Sa niaging tuig, niagi kita sa daghang pagsulay apil na ang problema sa politika ug sa ekonomiya dil ra dinhi sa nasud kundili sab sa tibuok kalibutan. Apan bisan daghan ang mga laing nasud nga gibaba ang ilang produksiyon, gibaba ang ilang ekonomiya, salamat sa ginoo ang produksiyon ug atong mga pumuluyo diri sa Pilipinas gitaas. Ug niadtong sinugo ako isip presidente ang atong unemployment nga akon giabot 11.3 percent niadtong January 2001 apan karon nga nahuman sa isa ka tuig ang atong administrasyon gibaba ni ini sa 10.3 percent. Hibalo ko nga dako pa ni ini apan salamat nga sa pagbaba gikan sa 11.3 hangtod sa 10.3 salamat nga 1.6 million nga bag-ong trabaho ang nahimo ug niabot sa 29.16 million ang suma sa mga Pilipino nga may trabaho karon.

Dinhi sa Bisayas, miingon ang dole, nga ang unemployment rate nababa sa 9.3 percent sa sulod sa atong administrasyon sukad sa 11.06 percent sa niaging administrasyon. Sa tibuok Pilipinas 10.3, diri sa Bisayas 9.3, mas maayo ang ekonomiya sa Bisayas compare sa laing lugar sa tibuok Pilipinas. Diri sa atong administrasyon gyud nahimo ug 473,000 o lapit sa 500,000 new jobs diri sa Bisayas. Alang sa tibuok nasud gi-ingon ko sa akon State of the Nation Address sa niaging tuig — sa niadto sila Congressman Del Mar ug congressman Cuenco — gi-ingon ko nga ang atong una nga paagi aro makadaog kita sa kapobrehon sa atong nasud mao’y makalabaw ang trabaho sa atong nasud. Gi-ingon ko, the way to fight poverty is to create jobs not to destroy them. And that is the beauty of the labor movement that started here in Cebu. Your labor movement seeks to create jobs and improve working conditions not to destroy jobs. busa ang akong pag-abi-abi ug dako nga admiration kaninyo tanan.

Ang atong kauswagan modepende sa pangita ug oportunidad aron napalabaw na trabaho alang sa atong mga pumuluyo. Mao nasa upat nga parte ug employment strategy sa ating Department of Labor — employment generation, employment preservation, job enhancement ug employment facilitation. Ang una gid nga stratehiya ang employment generation. Kon mahitabo ang bag-o... Daghan nga bag-ong trabaho makita kita ug growth sector of the future. Ang mga sektor asa paspas ang pagdako ug trabaho ug ana kita competitive advantage ang atong mga great Filipino workers sama sa information and communications technology, modernisasyon sa agrikultura, laing-laing pang labor intensive ug skills intensive service sectors, sama na diri ang pagpadako ug housing sector nga motabang aron ana balay ang mga kabos ug ana mga labaw pang trabaho.

Gusto ko ipaabot sab sa usa sa aton mga growth sectors sa kaugmaan ang atong turismo. Ug kagahapon sa Cabinet meeting namo natapos na, nahuman na sa katapusan ang National Tourism Strategy na nahimo ug pinakamaayo nga consultancy firm sa tibuok kalibutan gikan sa Washington na iyang base ug ang mga kliyente apil ang Singapore, ang Korea, Malaysia, India — ang iyang presidente usa ka Pilipino. Ug siya ang nahimo sa aton... Nahuman sa atong National Tourism Strategy. Siyempre sa usa ka stratehiya kinahanglan usa ka review sa atong mga resources, atong baseline, atong present conditions, ug sa iyahang review ang number one sa tibuok Pilipinas na competitive nga lugar sa atong turismo wala laing kundili ang turismo diri sa Cebu.

Ug ngano Cebu, daghan ang aton mga natural wonders diri sa Cebu apan daghan sa atong natural wonders sa laing lugar tingali bisan daghan ang mga natural wonders sa laing-laing lugar sa Pilipinas espesyal ang warmth and hospitality sa mga sugbuanon. Ug kining inyong warm hospitality usa ka demonstrations sa inyong goodness of heart ug inyong goodness of heart makita sa maayo nga relasyon sa labor ug management diri sa sugbu. Busa competitive kaayo ang Cebu ug usa ka rason tungod kay maayo gyud ang labor and management relations diri sa Cebu.

Importante ang relasyon sa labor ug management. Sa atong ikaduha nga stratehiya, employment strategy, nga mao ang labor preservation. Mao kini mohitabo sa industrial peace ug sa mga laing-laing multilateral ug bilateral agreements. Gi-ingon ko gyud sa akong State of the Nation Address, we want to reduce excessive friction in labor and management relations. And to do this, we will go the extra mile to work for industrial peace and to work with labor and business to re-train workers for the fast changing technologies of the new economy. Bisin ug tuman ka-aktibo ang mga unyon dinhi, ang industrial relations maayo kaayo. This goes to show that strong unions do not necessarily mean weak economies. What is important is that the union’s main goal is to maximize the benefits for its workers and not to destroy the economy that provides the jobs to these workers. This kind of union, the responsible and reasonable union mao ang naka didto... Diha sa atong streamer that is the kind of unionism that will create jobs and preserve jobs. And I congratulate ALU-TUCP for being that kind of union.

Busa, dinhi sa Bisayas, may paspas ang disposition sa mga kaso sa strikes ug lockouts kon mitaas sab ang suma sa mga kaso nga miagi ug preventive mediations, ang success rates sa mga strike nga dakugngan pinaagi sa mediation ug negotiation umabot sa 94 percent tungod kay 59 kan notice of strike or lockout ang napugngan sa maayo nga pagistorya sa labor ug sa management. Mi-ingon sab ang dole nga ang collective bargaining nagasugod nga mahimong paboritong paagi sa pagresolba sa mga problema sa unyon ug management. Sa 715 ka lokal nga organisasyon dinhi sa bisayas, 202 na ang naga-cba, nagapaila kini nga misaka na ang maturity level sa relasyon sa labor ug management. Nagapahilipay ako kaninyo tungod kay sa inyong pagpili ug mangina nga paagi mipadayon ang productivity ug job preservation. Nalipay gyud ako nga ang mga sektor sa labor ug management maypili sa negosasyon ug dialogo aron ma-resolba ang inyohang mga problema. Ang panagsulti o pagpaminaw sa usag usa mga epektibong instrumento aron mutaas ang productivity aron nga mapadali nato ang pagbuntog sa kapobrehon.

Didto sa Manila unya nga hapon, dawaton ko ang kopya sa tripartite declaration nga gipirmahan sa mga representante sa labor employers ug government nga naanad sa pagpasunod na mga buluhaton aron mausbaw ang disente nga trabaho sa definition sa International Labor Organization. Kini nga dokumento ang mulista kung unsay pagahimuon sa tulo ka sektor aron sundon ang employment creation, labor standards, social protection, social dialogue ug tripartism. Hinaot unta nga sa dili madugay mupirma pud ang tulo ka sektor dinhi ug commitment sama ni ini. Kanunay nga gina-awhag sa gobyerno ang mga unyon sa paggamit sa malinaw nga pamaagi aron mausbaw ang kalinaw sa lugar sa trabaho. Duna na kita'y bag-o rules sa subcontracting aron motubag ang issues sa contractualization ug seguridad sa trabaho.

Ikatulo na stratehiya mao'y job enhancement. Kauban na diri, kasama na dito ang pagpabuti ng kakayahan ng manggagawa, pagpahusay ng kondisyon sa workplace at pagbibigay ng mga incentives. Gi-ingon ko sa akong State of the Nation Address umaasa akong magpapasya ang Kongreso o ang wage board sa nararapat na minimum wage. Ginsunod pud nato ang policy sa wage simplification nga mao gihangyo sa labor sector. Kini ana sa sulod sa proseso sa pagtaas sa minimum wage ug 11 na ka wage orders ang gipagawas sa mga Regional Wage and Productivity Board. But on top of the wage boards, I also believe and I respect that Congress still has the right and the duty to look at what the appropriate minimum wage should be at a given point in time.

Ako gyud sa karon nga adlaw gusto ko gyud ipaabot ang akong dako nga pagpasalamat kaninyong tanan sa inyong mga laing-laing mga nahimo sa atong industrial peace ug naa kita mga programa nga mahatag sa atong mga workers. Una sa tanan, alang sa informal sector. Sa ako nahimo presidente nakita kong kondisyon sa atong mga informal workers, busa ang gobyerno nahimo ug Social Protection Program for Workers in the Informal Sector. Agi sa kining social protection program ang mga informal sector sa kabilugang Pilipinas mu-cover na sa SSS. Kining program mu-implement sa Cebu agi sa Development Bank of the Philippines, sa DOLE ug sa SSS.

Ikaduha, sa atong mga programa is the creation of the State Insurance Fund with an allocation of 27 million pesos for use as loans to displaced workers. And so far, sa atong pilot 2,000 workers na ang naka-avail sa kining programa. Busa kong kamo mawala ug trabaho kon unsa man ang rason makaadto kamo sa State Insurance Fund. Mangita ug tabang hangtod sa makapangita kamo gihapon sa bag-o nga trabaho.

Kasunod, to implement my directive in last year's Labor Day, DOLE and the President's Social Fund set aside 22 million pesos for a demonstration of our poverty-free zone projects in every region. Alang sa atong OFWs tungod kay daghan ang atong OFWs sa Bisayas, we have reduced the processing time of papers for OFWs at OWWA and POEA which have also installed 24-hour hotlines for them. And for our OFWs nga ingon ko gyud sa akong State of the Nation Address mudayon pa ang ilang kontribusyon sa ekonomiya ug seguridad sa atong nasud. Ugma ang DOLE ug SSS mupirma ug Memorandum of Understanding na mu-establish usa ka National Provident Fund or SSS Flexi Fund for OFWs. Kining Flexi Fund usa ka Special Savings Project for OFWs and can be borrowed for investment or personal purposes. Gusto nato na makusog ang tingog sa atong OFWs sa gobyerno, busa sa Kongreso apil sa akong mga priority legislation sa akong State of the Nation Address nga mu-representar sa atong OFWs sa atong nasud agi sa ilang voting rights sa laing nasud alang Pilipinas. Ug anyay karon si Congressman Del Mar ug si Congressman Cuenco ug maka-istorya sila na duol na mupasa sa House of Representatives kining balaud.

Training and re-training of workers importante man na, labi na karon na daghan na ang mga bag-o nga teknolohiya. Naa kita re-training for workers tungod kay paspas kaayo ang pagkambyo sa teknolohiya. For the Visayas, 250 workers every year will be trained in high-tech fields such as fiber optic cable technology, computer-aided design and network administration, apil ni ini sa tesda training program. Dunay trainees na maka-avail sa offer gikan sa private education student financial assistance ug diri sa Bisayas naka-avail na... Naa na ang 3,364 scholarships alang sa atong mga workers.

Karon ang union sa tucp importante nga union sa atong mga port workers. Ug gusto ko ipaabot ang usa nga mensahe sa atong mga port workers. Bisan na ang modernisasyon sa atong mga pantalan ang importante ay makatabang ang Philippine Ports Authority, DOTC, DOLE o private sector nga makataas ang capability sa ating port workers aron dayon pa ang ilang employment. And we will establish the workers fund. This will be funded with 100 million pesos. It will be used for loans to finance micro-entrepreneurial activities of workers organizations apil na diri ang TUCP.

Unya nga hapon, muhatag ako ug formal directive didto sa Manila. Daghan sa mga workers nahimo na entrepreneurs. Ubang gobyerno mu-promote sa entrepreneurship, busa sa kining atong pagbisita karon naa kita tabang totalling 180, 000 pesos for cooperatives nga gusto nga makasulod sa income-generating projects, ug sa mga laing mga lugar sa Bisayas karon, sa Eastern and Western Visayas, dunay laing pang kooperatiba nga naa tabang karong adlaw. Kini ang mga laing-laing nga gusto ug gobyerno nga ihatag kaninyo ang Great Filipino Worker nga kamo ang backbone sa atong economy. Ang along hangyo kaninyo padayon ang inyong pagtrabaho ug... Mahimo unta na kusog ang atong pinag-usa. Importante ang pagtinabangay, importante ang dili kita magpolitika kaayo, and so instead of arguing, let us find ways of helping one another, helping our workers in the workplace and in our businesses.

Diri sa sugbu, usa ka modelo sa kauswagan, usa ka modelo sa industriya, usa ka modelo sa turismo, usa ka modelo sa workers rights. Busa, sa kining adlaw, sa 100th Anniversary sa Labor Movement, ang akong pag-abi-abi ug dako nga respeto sa labor movement diri sa Sugbu.

Daghan salamat ug Congratulations sa inyong tanan.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Centennial Celebration of the Labor Movement in Cebu City. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225840/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8316&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Labor Day Celebration

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Labor Day Celebration

[Delivered at the Araneta Coliseum, Quezon City, May 1, 2002]

Dahil ito ang Centennial ng Kilusang Manggagawa ng ating bansa, binigyan nating kanina ng parangal ang mga namuno at naghirap para sa kilusan noong ito ay nagsimula. Doon sa mga nagsimula noon pang-100 years ago, siyempre wala na sila. One hundred years ago iyon, kaya mga apo nila ang narito. Yung mga lider naman ng henerasyong ito, ay binigyan din natin sila ng pagkikilala, yung ating mga beteranong buhay pa dito sa ating Labor Movement. Binibigyan din natin ng parangal, kahit nawala na ngayon yung ating mga kasalukuyang lider, pero nawala na, ilan sa kanila ay dahil nagmartir sa kasalukuyang henerasyon.

Si Popoy Lagman, hindi natin siya binigyan ng posthumus award, pero iba ang gusto kong ibigay na parangal sa kanya. Para itong parangal ay lalong maging makabuluhan inuutos ko ngayon si Sec. Joey Lina at ang ating mga pulis na maglunsad ng intensified manhunt kay Roger dela Torre, alias Ka Rowel, na siyang umanong pumaslang kay Popoy Lagman. Merong eye witness, at nasampa na ang kaso kontra kay Ka Rowell sa pagpaslang kay Filemon Lagman. Sa wakas, sana, ay dumating na ang katarungan. Kahit na hindi pareho ang ating paniniwala, karapatan ng mabuhay ang lahat ng tao. Kaya kahit hindi pareho ang ating paniniwala, pag nalabag ang karapatang pantao kahit na ibang paniniwala karapatan din nilang magkaroon ng katarungan mula sa atin.

Kanina sa Cebu sa pagdiriwang ng Labor centennial doon sabi nang mga streamer “Isang daan, Isang daan” tamang-tama sa isang daang taon na kilusan ng manggagawa sana magsamasama tayo sa isang daan lamang, ang lansangan tungo sa pagsugpo sa kahirapan ng ating bansa. At ako ay nasisiyahan na matanggap iyang tripartite declaration kanina na binigay sa akin ni Tito Carlos, Pat Sto. Tomas at Atty. Mendoza at iyan ang magiging laman ng ating pag-uusap nitong hapon na ito. Dahil iyong pinirmahan nila bilang kinatawan ng manggagawa, namumuhunan at pamahalaan ay isang pangako na tayong lahat na narito ay magtratrabaho magkasasama upang ipaiiral ang trabahong disente, at ano ba ang trabahong disente, ayon sa ginuhit na mga patakaran ng International Labor Organization. Dapat ang Pilipinas ay sumunod sa mga patakaran ng International Labor Organization kungdi mananagot ang ating Secretary of Labor si Pat Sto. Tomas sa pangulo ng International Labor Organization walang iba na rin kung hindi Pat Sto. Tomas, ang pangulo ng ILO. Kaya maiintindihan natin kung bakit isinulong ni Pat Sto. Tomas itong ILO NA tripartite declaration. Itong dokumento na ibinigay sa akin kanina ay iginuguhit ang gusto nating makamit sa maikling panahon, itto ang sinasabi nating laman ng ating employment strategy. This strategy includes five principles. Una, the creation of employment dahil ang sabi ni Atty. Mendoza ang pinakaimportante sa lahat to create jobs. Pangalawa, the promotion of labor standards. Pangatlo, social protection, pang-apat social dialogue, panglima tripartism. The challenge for all of us is to make this declaration work.

Tungkol sa unang bahagi ng employment strategy ang creation of employment. Magpasalamat tayo sa Panginoon na sa nakaraang taon, nakapaglikha ang ating ekonomiya ng mahigit sa isang milyon at kalahating trabaho sa kabila ng maraming kaguluhan sa ating mundo. Kaya, bumaba ang ating unemployment rate mula sa 11.3% noong ako’y unang naupo hanggang sa 10.3% ngayon pagkatapos ng isang taong panunungkulan ko. Ngunit malaki pa rin ang 10.3% dahil ang sabi ni Ka Quinto(?) ibig sabihin ng 10.3% ay milyon-milyon pa rin. Kaya tayo ay dapat magkaisa para lumikha ng mass marami pang trabaho. And we must have job creation through investments and also through employment facilitation. Para magawa itong employment facilitation, goal will expand the computerized linking of the labor market information networks to include more employers and workers organizations, as well as government units.

Tungkol naman sa pangalawang patakaran, ng ating kasunduan sa stratehiya, ang promotions of labor standards. Nagkaroon NA tayo ng bagong rules sa sub-contracting upang magbigay ng higit NA seguridad sa trabaho at bilang tugon sa isyu ng contractualization. Kaya gusto kong klaruhin muli sa lahat, labag sa batas ilapat ang labor-only sub-contracting.

Tuluyan din natin ipinapatupad ang patakaran ng wage simplification gaya ng pinaglaban ninyo sa proseso sa pagtaas ng minimum wage, labinisang wage order ang itinakda sa inyo ng ating Regional Wage and Productivity Boards sa nakaraang taon noong mula ng ako'y naging pangulo na nilagdaan ninyong petisyon na itaas ang sahod. Noong isang taon, na ako'y nagdiskurso sa aking SONA, sinabi ko na umaasa akong magpasya ang Kongreso o Wage Board ng nararapat na suweldo. Ganoon pa rin ang aking paniniwala hanggang ngayon. Ang aking ama si Diosdado Macapagal noong siya ay kongresista, siya ang nagtakda ng unang minimum wage law sa kasaysayan. Noon siya'y naging pangulo, pinirmahan din niya ang pangalawang minimum wage law sa ating kasaysayan. Kaya ako rin naniniwala na ang kongreso ay may kapangyarihan at dunong na hanapin kung ano ang nararapat na minimum wage sa ating lipunan. And I adhere to the principles in the labor position paper that was given to me earlier. I affirm the principle and the democratic nature of the right to self organization. Kaya kayo ay binibigyan namin ng galang ang mga unyon itong araw na ito.

Pangatlong elemento ng ating INO based Employment strategies ay Social Protection. Ito rin ay laman ng kasunduan at ang deklarasyon na ibinigay sa akin kanina. Naghandog ang pamahalaan ng P27 M sa state insurance fund para mapautang ang mga displaced workers. Humigit kumulang sa 2,000 manggagawa na ang nabiayaan sa pautang na ito. Merong pang hiwalay na socio-economic assistance amounting to another P27 M to about 5,000 sugar workers and their families. At kanina si Zoila Dela Cruz may P12 million na cheque na tinanggap sa mga nahihirapang manggagawa sa sugar sector. Nakapaglaan din ang DOLE at ang aking Social Fund ng P22 M para magkaroon ng demonstration na tinatawag na Poverty Free Zone Project sa bawat rehiyon at matulungan ang maliliit na komunidad na maging maunlad at magkaroon ng sariling kakayahan. Hinihingi ko rin ang tulong ng Philippine Ports Authority o PPA ng DOTC at ng DOLE na tugunan ang mga pangangailangan ng mga port workers natin.

Noong ako ay maupo bilang Pangulo kinilala ko ang kalagayan ng informal sector. Kaya't ang pamahalaan ay naglunsad din ng Social Protection Program for Workers in the Informal Sector noong makalawa. Ang programang ito ay naglalayong isama ang mga manggagawa nasa informal sector na saklaw ng Social Security System.

At patuloy nating kinikilala ang malaking contribution ng overseas Filipino workers sa ating ekonomiya. Kaya ang DOH, DSWD, at DOLE ay magpapadala ng mga duktor at social workers sa iba't-ibang overseas post mula itong Hunyo. At meron tayong P25 M na ibibigay para dito para alagaan ang kapakanan ng ating mga OFW lalu na sa pagbigay ng medical and counselling services doon sa mga bansa kung saan sila nagtatrabaho.

Yun namang social dialogue, pang-apat na bahagi sa ating employment strategy. Ibig sabihin nito ay hindi dapat adversarial ang relation ng mga manggagawa at mamumuhunan. Sa aking State-of-the- Nation address sinabi ko "to reduce excessive friction in labor and management relations, we will go the extra mile to work for industrial peace" siguro pinakinggan tayo ng ating mga labor and employment sector sapagkat naging lalong mahinahon ang kanilang relasyon nitong nakaraang taon. Sa nakaraang taon, 43 ang welga kumpara sa 60 noong year 2000, kaya mas lumawak ang industrial peace. Kasama naman sa panlimang bahagi ng ating employment strategy and tripartism which means we must continuously facilitate a regulatory functions in government. For instance, all proceedings arising from the disposition of labor cases and processing of documents are administrative rather than judicial proceedings that is why as part of the centennial observance of the Philippine labor movement Secretary Sto. Tomas will consult with all sectors concerned to conduct a comprehensive review of the structure and procedures of all the agencies administering labor justice are undertaking registration functions. Sa madaling salita, iyong red tape sa DOLE ay liliitin, hahatiin sa ang numero ng signatures na required para sa iba't-ibang serbisyo ng DOLE, POEA, OWWA, National Labor Relations Commission para sa inyo manggagawa. Related to this, Secretary Sto. Tomas will study the adoption of joint inspection teams composed of representatives from labor and management to assist labor inspectors in doing their jobs to make sure the firms are following the law. And as a service to our heroic OFWs, the E-link system for OFW's, a system to simplify and fast track the documentation process for overseas workers will also be implemented.

At sa aking State of the Nation Address noong isang taon, hinihingi ko rin sa Kongreso na bigyang daan ang matagal nang pinapangarap ng ating OFW, and karapatang bumoto. Ang ating administrasyon ay lubos na nagpapanukala ng batas na absentee voting upang mabigyan ang ating mga OFWs ng boses sa halalan. Sinusuportahan ko rin ang panukalang batas na naglalayong magbigay ng dual citizenship sa ating overseas Filipinos.

Mauumpisahan na rin ang ating inanunsiyong National Provident Fund or SSS Flexifund para sa ating OFWs. This will take the form of a Social Security scheme that will encourage savings and investments as well as entitle them to benefits such as multi-purpose loans and insurance coverage. And if they hold this up to retirement age the provident fund can finance the member's old age needs in the form of monthly pensions or lump sum payments.

Para sa ating manggagawa namang narito sa Pilipinas, alam ko na importante ang presyo ng mga batayang bilihin na maging kaya ng mga manggagawa. Kaya dadagdagan pa ng NFA ang mga rolling stores na umiikot sa iba't-ibang lugar upang mapalapit sa inyo ang mga murang bilihin kagaya ng bigas na P14 at kalahating presyo ng gamot. Ngayon pa lang nga mahigit na 1,000 na ang lumilibot na NFA stores, dadagdagan pa rin natin para maglingkod sa manggagawang Pilipino. Ikinagagalak ko rin iyong pagkukusang bukluran ng manggagawang Pilipino, Employees Confederation of the Philippines at Metro Manila Development Authority na nagpirmahan itong araw na ito ng Memorandum of Agreement para sa pagtatayo ng mga tindahan ng pangunahing pangangailangan sa murang halaga at pagtatalaga ng MMDA rolling stores sa medium size enterprises kung saan makakabili ang mga manggagawa ng murang kailangan nila. At the same time the essential drugs and medicines, specifically frequently used by the poor are now available to you at 50% of last year's price at government hospitals and at NFA rolling stores. Ngayon, 73 hospitals ang mayroon noon. Sa Setyembre, aabot na ang half-priced medicines sa 600 hospitals, na sakop ng pamahalaang lokal at 800 na botika sa barangay sa buong bansa alang-alang sa manggagawang maralitang Pilipino.

Umaabot na rin sa higit tatlong million ang napasailalim ng Indigent Program ng ating National Health Insurance which will pay for the hospital bills of poor beneficiaries. And for the housing of workers, I am tasking HUDCC to make available to the homeless workers the foreclosed properties of government financial institutions like Pag-IBIG, NHA, NHFMC, SSS and other agencies on a rent to own basis. So, ito ay huhulugan ninyo ng 25 years. And for this year, I want 20,000 units to be made available to our workers. This is where P10 billion for workers housing.

We must also provide assistance to displaced workers. The DOLE will aggressively implement the Quick Response Team Operation Balik Trabaho to provide an immediate and integrated package of assistance to displaced workers including their dependents, including the delivery of employment services such as profiling, job matching, referrals, guidance, skills retraining, livelihood and entrepreneurship development. And it will also give assistance to workers in obtaining their separation benefits and in making informed choices on reemployment options that should be pursued. Because I have learned that workers have difficulty in getting their separation benefits.

We must also set up our safety nets for sectors affected by globalization. I will just leave to the new Presidential Adviser of Safety Nets, incoming Secretary Boy Herrera.

I spoke about the price of medicine, hospitalization, transportation, basic goods...

Yun namang kuryente. Let's talk about electricity, I have instructed Secretary Vince Perez to study the Purchase Power Adjustment or PPA. And I am also urging, because I cannot tell them what to do, independent sila, I am urging the Energy Regulatory Commission, to carefully examine and expedite the review of the month PPA filings and to listen closely to the voice of the people.

Panahon na para maaudit ang mga PPA na pina-file ng mga electric companies. Sa ibabaw nito, there is a proposal by the DoE that PPA charges can also be in addition to the audit and the review significantly reproduced through financial reengineering.

The proposal, if implemented can bring the cost of NAPOCOR power by as much as 85 centavos per kw hour. Pero para dito, kailangan natin ng legislation. Kaya, sabi ko kay Vince, work with Congressmen and Senators, let's pass a bill that would give power to bring down the PPA through re-financing and I hope that in the near future, can be included in our priority legislation in Congress.

Mahigit na isang taon nang ako ay Pangulo at ako ay nagpapasalamat sa malaking pagsuporta ng lehitimo at responsableng labor movement sa ating administrasyon. Nakatutuwang isipin na napakaangkop ng ating pagdiriwang ng 100 taon ng labor movement. Nararapat na pag-alabin natin muli ang apoy na sinindiha ng ating mga unang lider na manggagawa. Itulak muli natin, sa progresibong pag-iisip at aksyon ang ating mga pagawaan upang masimulan natin ang isa pang makahulugang kabanata sa kasaysayan ng ating bayan. Iisa lang ang superstar ng ating bansa at iyan ay ang dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Maraming Salamat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Labor Day Celebration. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225857/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8317&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the UNESCO World Press Freedom Day Celebration and Awarding Ceremonies

Speech
of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines

During the UNESCO World Press Freedom Day Celebration and Awarding Ceremonies

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, May 3, 2002]

Thank you very much Dr. Garcia.

And first, I would like to greet and congratulate once again former President Fidel V. Ramos, who is here not only because he's former President of the Philippines but because he belongs to the family of awardees of UNESCO. We remember him and we congratulate him once again for receiving the 1997 UNESCO Peace Award. Congratulations again, Mr. President.

Director General Matsuura; Madame de Cano; Mr. Nyarota, our Awardee for this year; Excellencies of the Diplomatic Corps; Mrs. Soliven and Mrs. Elizalde; the journalists and delegates of UNESCO World Press Freedom Day International Conference on Terrorism and Media; the Commissioners and Officers of the UNESCO National Commission of the Philippines; distinguished guests; Ladies and Gentlemen:

Thank you for this opportunity to be with your distinguished group.

I welcome the fact that we are here together celebrating World Press Freedom Day in the Philippines. The Philippines is honored to have been chosen by the UNESCO as the host of this year's celebration. And as both Mr. Matsuura and Mr. Nyarota said, our country has earned the reputation of being one of the 'not-so-many' havens of press freedom in the world today. And with all humility, I nevertheless claim in behalf of our country that this is a well-deserved reputation for press freedom in the Philippines.

Today we celebrate good journalism, which means we celebrate the responsible exercise of press freedom. We celebrate principled disagreement, enlightened debate, productive controversy. We celebrate the light that shines through events and mirrors them in the firmament of truth.

In the Philippines today there is avowedly a growing interest in the media about playing up the good news. And this seems to go against the report that the tradition of reporting the seedy part of the day. In the Philippines, we are known not only as a free press but having a licentious press. But in the Philippines, speaking for the government, we would rather have a licentious press than a bridled press. That is our press policy. Nonetheless, I am glad to know that there are reformists within the press, and I hope that this celebration of world press freedom day will inspire the reformists to demonstrate that press freedom can also mean the freedom to report good news.

And as a public servant and therefore the subject of press reports, I really appreciate the good news. Good news about personal heroism — such as the heroes that we in fact honor today — values, human worth and community triumphs. Sometimes we tend to gloss over these things, even if they are the real stuff of nationhood.

I see no reason why press freedom, for instance, should not mean that a good provincial story makes page one, or a good metro report lands on premium space. I believe that press freedom means that the press is free enough to give credit to a small-town mayor who helped the military and the police recover a terrorist hostage or a hometown entrepreneur who develops a 15,000-peso core shelter for calamity victims. Press freedom should mean also giving credit to the people because the people deserve a break.

But by all means, press freedom should mean letting the media take down the spotty woodwork. God knows there are many under performing public servants and there are many lousy programs. But press freedom should mean letting the battle focus on issues, on policy, on principles. Our societies need relief from personal attacks so that the issues will surface in clear light.

Press freedom means getting to the heart of a controversial policy. Press freedom means doing it with fervor and a genuine penchant for chronology and detail. Indeed, done this way as our awardees have demonstrated, press freedom is one of the grindstones of policy.

In the world press, Mindanao has become a media focus of the global war against terrorism, especially now with the participation of American forces in training exercises. I believe this attention is as it should be because we must defeat terrorism not only with force but with enlightenment.

But there is a deeper reason why the press must be deeply involved in the fight against terror. It is accepted that terrorism is aimed at an audience beyond its immediate victims. Terrorism operates in the broad arena of public awareness and discourse molding a psychological landscape of its own. Terrorism breeds fear, doubt in the efficacy of institutions, suspicion, hatred of authority, and most of all, irrational bases of conflict.

We took this into account early in the day in the Philippine battle against terrorism. In September last year, I laid down a 14-point counter-terrorism program, and this is what I said about the press:

I said then, "The mass media assumes a paramount role in the overall strategy to defeat terrorism. I seek the media's support in the implementation of our policies and programs, in enlightening the public of the rationale behind our actions, in promoting consensus and constructive criticism, in depriving terrorists of the benefits of glorified coverage and publicity, and most of all, in maintaining calm, sobriety, prudence and solidarity in our society. We must bring the media into the loop of collective action and information."

Let me cite a few areas where common action between the government and the press is indicated:

First, informing the public of the full dimensions of the terrorist threat, especially the relationship between physical and psychological action, and the transnational nature of terrorism. The public must appreciate the common interest involved in such alliances as Balikatan, and our Trilateral Agreement with Indonesia and Malaysia to check the movement of terrorists along our common sea borders.

Second, mustering the cooperation of the public with the executive, legislative and judicial authorities in meeting terrorist threats through operational programs, criminal justice programs and legislative measures. For instance, now, we have a pending Anti-Terrorism Bill in Congress I consider urgent.

Third, strengthening local institutions and civil society to bolster the vigilance of ordinary citizens in the streets and in the countryside, which makes the big difference in the war against terror.

Fourth, enlightening the public of the constitutional issues involved because the war against terrorism requires strong measures such as the power of the commander-in-chief to call upon the armed forces to quell violence. The nature and breadth of these measures must be clear in the public mind, so that we can allay the perception that constitutional guarantees such as the bill of rights are being eroded or set aside in favor of martial imperatives.

Fifth, supporting broader interfaith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity. Terrorists wish to instigate a religious war. We must instead take every opportunity to forge religious understanding, ecumenism and solidarity.

Sixth, improving support for and confidence in the law enforcement agencies. We need strict vigilance against movements of suspected persons, firearms, explosives, raw materials, toxic materials, biological materials. We have already put a money laundering law in place to check questionable and dirty money transfers.

Seventh, coordinating public preparations and actions in the event of catastrophic terrorist attack however remote this may be.

Eighth, enhancing public vigilance in securing critical infrastructure including power plants, power transmission and distribution facilities, oil and gas depots, key public works structures, vital communications installations, public buildings as well as private buildings, and facilities in the nerve centers of commerce and industry.

Ninth, pushing forward the anti-poverty campaign, with focus upon the perceived roots of fanaticism and irrational violence.

I consistently mention poverty side by side with terrorism because there is a need to put terrorism in a wider perspective. Poverty is a form of lingering terrorism — one that slowly kills on a daily basis; one that condemns its victims to a lifetime of pain and misery.

This is not to say that poverty is the cause of terrorism. Osama bin Laden is not a poor man. It is not poverty that causes terrorism. But poverty and the sense of powerlessness it brings provide the fertile ground where terrorism can more easily spread its evil ideology. So, if we must defeat terrorism, we must defeat poverty with equal resolve and fervor.

The Philippines did not need to join the war on terrorism; it was in that war already, in the southwestern part of our islands. The Philippines could not have done otherwise than renew its commitment to fight terrorism in a wider field in the wake of September 11.

This is a fight between tolerance and bigotry, between reason and fanaticism, between law and anarchy, between justice and murder pretending to be just.

The fact that the Abu Sayyaf bandits, who once freely roamed the entire Southwestern Philippines, have ended up with their last stand in Basilan — the province with the lowest human development index in our country — reminds us of how closely national security and economic prosperity are intertwined.

In this context, I welcome the call made by President George Bush for a new compact for development defined by greater accountability for rich and poor nations alike. This call echoes an initiative I proposed to form a global coalition against poverty, just as we have formed a coalition against terrorism.

The developed nations must recognize their duty to open markets, transfer resources and reform international institutions. These will all help to win the war against poverty.

I hope that we could soon remove the scourge of terrorism. But, more than that, I hope that we could soon have tangible results in our war against poverty, and that media would find our continuing struggle worth covering.

Thank you for inviting me to celebrate press freedom day with you. I would like to welcome all the journalists who took part in the international conference on terrorism and media. I understand that you had a successful conference and that the agreements are very good. You have agreed that journalists have the right to report on terrorism and that journalists have the right to be protected against terrorism. I hope indeed, that those who participated — whether they are in media, in the government, in civil society — will work together and also work in their own fields to carry out and ensure that these resolutions can be implemented.

I would also like to congratulate the recipient of this year's UNESCO/ Guillermo Cano World Press Freedom — Mr. Geoffrey Nyarota, Editor-in-Chief of Zimbabwe's Daily News. He told us of his story and as he was telling us about how in his journalism, he has been the subject of so much terrorism upon him, his institution and his colleagues. I suppose our journalists here must thank their lucky stars that we are a country with a very free press.

And I would also like to pay homage to the man after whom the award is named — Guillermo Cano, a martyr of terrorism perpetrated by the syndicates who try to spread the evil of drugs all over the world. That is political terrorism and there is also criminal terrorism. It doesn't matter who causes the terrorism, it is the act that constitutes the terrorism. And here we have, we'll remember him, when the awards are given, we must always remember him and thank him for giving up his life for the cause of journalism.

We also remember Daniel Pearl because we all saw on TV his martyrdom, not that we saw how he was martyred but we all know how he disappeared and we all know how he surfaced again because everything was covered by the free press. And we pay homage to him as we pay homage to Guillermo Cano.

On this note, I would like to thank all the journalists who are here today and all the diplomats; to thank all the representatives of the different countries who believe in press freedom, who believe in a war against terrorism. I thank you for a fervent and lasting partnership against terrorism and poverty and in favor of world press freedom.

Congratulations and thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the UNESCO World Press Freedom Day Celebration and Awarding Ceremonies. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225830/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8314&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo at the Opening of the First Summit of the Philippine Political Parties

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
At the Opening of the First Summit of the Philippine Political Parties

[Delivered at the Centennial Hall, Manila Hotel, May 3, 2002]

AS we come together today, of course, it is natural to remember that more than a year ago, the nation had to deal with the leadership crisis. Today, in contrast, for the first time in our history, most of the major political parties and the regional parties formally convene to find commonalities on our nation's future, our people's progress and the fate of Philippine democracy.

Because this is a meeting of political leaders, I would like to share with you something that I read about a great political leader in contemporary history – and that is my classmate, Bill Clinton. I was reading David Albersam's new book on the presidency of Clinton. This study of the Clinton presidency brought me some comfort. Because according to this study, in his first year at the White House, Bill Clinton was under attack from all sides. His political enemies made much hay; for instance, from the White Water controversies. And he had to change his stand on many things many times, because the first time he talked was different from what the public wanted. And then when he listened to the public and changed his position, he was attacked for being very weak. He even lost control of both Houses of Congress in the mid-term elections. But a year before he was due for reelection – in fact, his popularity dropped to its lowest point in his career – but he just kept working and moving forward and plodding, focusing like a laser beam on containing the budget deficit, bringing down inflation and the interest rates, even though in the beginning, the people would say that they only read about the inflation rate going down and the interest rate going down in the papers, but they didn't really feel it. And he also put together a crack economic team in his Cabinet. He worked tirelessly to restore fiscal discipline and economic reforms. In fact, once in a phone conversation, with his nemesis, Gingrich, Clinton compared himself to a rubber clown doll that bounced up each time it was hit, bouncing back more quickly the harder it was hit.

And so, in the last year of his first term, his economic policies began to bear fruit. The economy rebounded strongly, a long period of uninterrupted expansion began, and he was reelected to the presidency by a landslide. That is the story of Bill Clinton that inspires me.

But on this platform, I would like to greet other people whose stories have inspired me. We have former President Fidel Ramos whose story inspires me. Because I remember that there were also difficult moments in his presidency, but he kept on with his economic reforms.

I would like to greet the other leaders of the political parties whose parties also gave us very inspiring stories of their leaders' careers. I would like to greet former Vice President Doy Laurel of the Nacionalista Party, as Joe says, a representative of the oldest party in the Philippines. Doy Laurel's father also had his great difficulties during his time. But it was, in fact, my father, Diosdado Macapagal, who told me one thing about the late President Jose Laurel; he never lost his focus on the fundamentals. And that is where my father learned what he called fundamental thinking what we now call strategic thinking.

And, of course, I would like to greet the leaders of the Liberal Party, Butch Abad and Lito Atienza, who is our host also today as Mayor of Manila. The Liberal Party was, of course, the party that my father started with and ended with. And as President, he also had his difficult moments but I was watching on television a profile of my father.

And I'm so happy that after all the difficult moments that he suffered during his presidency, he is remembered with fondness and great respect because he stuck to his principles no matter how difficult the going was.

I would like to greet former Congressman Frisco San Juan, the President of the Nacionalist People's Coalition, and I would like, through him, to thank the NPC because truly during these past several – more than one year of my administration, the NPC has been truly instrumental in helping us pass the most important legislation that have allowed our economy to survive the world crisis that he suffered for last year.

And as we go and remember the history of the different political parties represented here in the platform and represented in the various tables that I see around us today, I go back again to the difficulties of Clinton as recounted with great detail in that book. And one of the themes of that book is that, whatever issues might have been raised against Clinton's character, no one ever accused him of indolence, of laziness. On the contrary, even his fiercest rivals credited him for persistence. In the last analysis, it was his persistence, it was his plodding that mattered. The record of the Clinton presidency has been inspiring for me. Because like Clinton, the first year of my administration was a period of severe tests. Like Clinton, I inherited a massive budgetary deficit. From day one, I committed myself to taming the fiscal monster. And everybody thought we wouldn't make it. The IMF thought we couldn't make it. Never mind the opposition or the other groups opposing us, keeping down public expenditures is never popular. The political costs are immense in the short term, the positive impact on our people's lives will only be felt farther down the road. Because the natural thing is, oh, the economy is down, spend more. That's the fourth year high school economics, not as simple as that, and that's what Clinton showed. At a time when the economy was threatening to go into recession,spend more instead to tame the deficit. Instead of pump priming was done not by the government but the private sector. Because it responded to the tame budget, it responded to the reduction in the interest rates. And that is what we are seeking to do today.

I am confident that in the area of fiscal discipline, we are right on track. Because in the case of Clinton, the positive results, the reduction of interest rates, the stabilization of whatever had to be stabilized among the macro-economic fundamentals only occurred in his third year. In our economy, the results are showing earlier than they did in Clinton's story. You saw the stock market yesterday? You saw our peso? The dollar yesterday was R50.20. Our inflation and our interest rates are at historic lows.

As I said over the last few days, the peso has gained significantly against the dollar despite low interest rates. Usually, when there is an economic problem, you need to raise interest rates to stabilize the currency. Remember what was happening in January of the year 2001, or December of year 2000? They had to raise the interest rates sky high because the dollar was running away, and conversely, if you want to reduce interest rates in difficult times, you would need to let the currency go. Many times as an economist, I've come across a debate among economists. What shall we take care of? Shall we reduce interest rates and let the currency devalue, or shall we strengthen the currency and let the interest rates go up? But today, both the peso and the interest rates are stable, and that means, economic fundamentals are strong.

This is probably one of the reasons why the international credit agencies upgraded our rating from negative to stable. We were working to get this in July this year, but we got this rating one after the other from November to January, November 2001 to January 2002. The last holdout, Standard and Poor, gave us our positive rating this year. And maybe it is not too premature to announce some possible good news about Calpers, the California pension fund of the teachers, who pulled out of the stock market in the Philippines because they felt that we were not fundamentally stable, because they said that we... and lumping us with other Asian countries. But Asian countries don't take care of workers' rights and are politically unstable. Well, after they analyzed and reevaluated the Philippine situation and restudied our labor laws, labor rules and the performance of our stock market and our economic fundamentals, the managing director is prepared to recommend to the Calpers' board that they come back to the Philippine stock market. And they haven't come back yet, but the stock market has begun to show signs of strong recovery adjudged by Bloomberg last January as the best performing market in the world. This is the first time the Philippine stock market ever enjoyed the distinction of being named the best performing stock market in the world.

How do these inflation rates and interest rates translate to the poor? Well, I have been talking to you about the price of rice. When I became president, the price of regular rice was P15.00. Today, it's still P16.00. That means the price of rice has stabilized.

I came from Cagayan Valley where we have a very big source of palay. The deputy head of the National Administration told me that the farmers wanted to give me a message. They are thanking the administration because the selling price of palay... if going up, the farmers' price is going up. The consumers' price stable. That means we have reduced the cost in-between. So therefore, good macroeconomic policy also translates into direct benefits for the poor farmer and the ordinary consumer. But I want to share these achievements with all the political parties. And I would like to, therefore, especially recognize the leaders of the various political parties from Congress and the Senate. We have here Kiko Pangilinan, our deputy speaker Ningning Espinosa, Raul Gonzales, Gery Salapuddin, and Boyet Gonzales, – because through them and all the members of Congress and the Senate, notwithstanding the pervasiveness of confrontational politics during this last year of our administration – the first year, we managed to pass the Power Sector Reform Act, the Anti-Money Laundering Act on the basis of what President Ramos calls not bipartisan cooperation, but rather multipartisan, or better still non-partisan cooperation. I hope this cooperation up to this summit will spread even to the representatives of the various parties that are outside Congress. That's why I specifically want to also give my greetings to former Senate President Manong Ernie Maceda.

Two days ago, a television station ran a poll on this political summit, and this morning, another television station ran a poll on this political summit. In both polls that I saw on T.V., the overwhelming number of respondents was of the opinion that the exercise will amount to nothing. It won't mean anything for the poor. The opinions of television respondents are understandable, because many of our people, especially among the youth, have become disillusioned with the political class... Oh, I saw Sonny Osmeña.. I'd like to greet him too. But no one can better arrest the disillusionment that those respondents feel than those of us who are here in this poll today. Thus, I look forward to the final communiqué that will be put out.

I call on everyone, above else, to reaffirm our common commitment to constitutional democracy, while democratic practice connotes constant debate on all issues affecting the public interest, this must be differentiated from constant combat that first puts the life of the constitutional order on the line at every turn.

In a living democracy, no group has the right to hold policy making hostage by threatening to overthrow the executive on every issue of policy disagreement. It is time to enrich our democratic culture by engaging in political debate driven by good faith and guided by the best intentions for our nation.

Instead of perceiving electoral competition as an act of war, let us agree to treat such competition as a cooperative process to win the future. Lately, a number of political parties have resumed advocacy of charter change. They are well within their rights to do so. Let me take this opportunity to emphasize now what I believe are prerequisites to constitutional change. Because if we do not recognize these prerequisites, as the discussion on charter change moves forward, there might be a tendency to look at alternatives removed from the realities on the ground.

For instance, the proposed move towards federalism, this should take careful account of economic viability. Federalism is not merely a political form. It will have substantive implications on the political economy of the nation. Thus, before we can go to federalism, we must address the issue of economic viability and the preparedness of component states. Otherwise, federalism could lead to the further underdevelopment of the less developed regions of the country, therefore, if federalism is to be the path, then there should be transitions to be evaluated at every milestone.

First, from this present situation where we are, the next transition should be towards economic zones, then towards autonomy and only then to statehood. And there must be success of the economic zones, success of the economy before we can be confident that statehood will be successful.

As for the other proposed shift in the form of government, before that can happen viably, there must be meaningful political reforms, such as a law on political parties. The rehabilitation of our societal organizations and mass movements and the cleaning up of our electoral processes.

These political reforms were what I was referring to when I said at EDSA on the day I became president last year that – and let me repeat what I said – we must change the character of our politics in order to create a fertile ground for true reforms. Our politics of personality and patronage must give way to a new politics of party programs and process of dialogue with the people.

Political parties exist to catalyze opinion and influence the decisions of government. This is a challenge facing our electoral parties which must evolve mechanisms of transparency and accountability to the public. The political parties have that responsibility of keeping their constituencies properly informed of the issues, where our parties have the responsibility of raising the quality of public debate so that our people may make the best choices. It might help to study further existing proposals to subsidize the political parties. I believe that many of the mature democracies, some of which have their members of the diplomatic corps represented here today – and I greet them too, – that is the system that might help diminish reliance on dirty money and on power brokers. It will help reduce the corruption that infects our electoral process. It will assist the parties as they help to clarify public opinion of the issues and offer reasonable options for our nation's future.

As agents of the democratic order, the political parties should find cause, common cause on the need to enhance the credibility of our electoral process. After each election, losing candidates routinely claim failure of the electoral system. Instead of doing this, let us join hands to ensure the integrity of our elections by modernizing the process. It might seem odd at first glance that the political parties should take the lead in advancing change especially charter change. The process should be as non partisan as possible, effort must be invested in involving a larger universe of people's organizations, professional organizations and other civic groups. Blossoming democratic institutions are gaining in legitimacy and effectiveness. Over the decades, the democratic system has been fortified as political dynasties have steadily diminished, as the media has become more militant and socially oriented, and as the globalized realm has enlarged the political and economic options of society. It is in this milieu that I wish for the full success of the endeavors in this political summit.

Once more, I salute all of those who have joined this gathering. This summit of political parties offers a unique opportunity for us to reinvent the conduct of democratic politics so that it is guided, first and foremost, by the national interest. And so, let us, together, end the episode of turbulence and threats. Let us, together, demonstrate our common commitment to good governance and reasoned public debate. Let us provide our skeptical constituents the best from this conference so that we may shore up once again optimism in the possibility of a productive future for our people. And once again, I thank Joe for conceptualizing this summit. And I thank the various leaders or the various political parties who, whether or not they like Joe as a person, have come to join us because they believe in the idea, because after all, in the new politics, it is not the singer; it is the song that matters.

Thank you and good luck to all of you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech at the Opening of the First Summit of the Philippine Political Parties. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225823/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8312&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the First Commencement Exercises of AMA Computer University

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the First Commencement Exercises of AMA Computer University

[Delivered at the Araneta Coliseum, Cubao, Quezon City, May 3, 2002]

Maraming salamat Dr. King Aguiluz sa inyong pagpakilala sa akin. At maraming salamat sa ating mga magulang na naggastos at naghirap para maka-graduate yung ating mga estudyante itong araw na ito. Maari na kayong maupo dahil ilang taon kayo nagpagod para yung mga anak n'yo ay mag-graduate itong araw na ito.

Ating mga graduating students — oh, nag-graduate na pala — ating mga nag-graduate, congratulations sa inyong lahat. At kay Miguel Aguiluz at lahat na iba't-ibang officials ng AMA, congratulations din dahil muli isa pang taon dito sa Metro Manila apat na libong kabataan ay nagtapos ng kanilang pag aaral. Apat na libo kayong narito kaya ang dami-dami ninyo dito. Ngunit, sabi ni Dr. King Aguiluz, na kahit kayo ay apat na libo, ang dami-dami nag-graduate ay wala raw sa inyong pumunta doon sa mendiola para mag-complain na wala kayong trabaho. Salamat naman at hindi pala kayo pala-demonstrate.

Sa dami ng nag-graduate itong araw na ito. Ito ay graduation U.P.-style tawag nila. Ako ay taga-U.P. at yung graduation sa U.P. sa dami ng nag-ga-graduate, hindi na pumupunta sa entablado para tumanggap ng diploma. Kasi hindi naman yung diploma ang tatanggapin n'yo sa Pangulo ang importante. Yung diplomang ihahandog ninyo sa inyong mga magulang kagaya ng ginawa ni Ginoong Corpuz, 'yon ang importante dahil magulang ninyo nagtrabaho, nagsikap para kayo ay magtapos. Ngayon sa ating kultura ng Pilipinas, ngayon kayo naman ang dapat magsikap, magtrabaho, maghanapbuhay para yung magulang ninyo ay magkaroon ng ginhawa, para yung mas batang mga kapatid ninyo ay makasunod sa inyong hakbang at para kayo ay puwede na ring magsimula ng inyong sariling mga pamilya at magsimula nung cycle kagaya nung ginawa ng inyong mga magulang.

Tamang-tama yung pag-iisip ng mga kabataan ng AMA.

Ngayon tapos na ang isang chapter ng inyong buhay. Susunod na chapter ay mas mahirap pa kesa doon sa nakaraan. Ngayon yung hirap ng inyong mga magulang, kayo naman ang makakadanas.

Parati kong sinasabi na ang kinabukasan ng ating bansa sa 21st century ay Information and Communication Technology. At malamang marami sa inyo, yan na nga ang inyong inaasahan, pero marami sa inyo pumasok sa AMA four years ago — hindi pa ako pangulo noon — kaya pumasok kayo iba-iba ang dahilan kung bakit pumasok kayo.

At that time, four years ago, kasi 2002 ngayon. 1998 ay hindi pa nila pinag-uusapan yung new economy. Yung new economy, yung economy of information technology ay napag-usapan na ng mga year 1998 and 1999. So, bagung-bago itong ideyang ito. So, malamang marami sa inyo — bakit kayo pumasok? — siguro nakikita na ninyo na mas may malaking chance kahit na kung ano ang gusto niyong pasukan — maging secretarial, accounting , yung kung saan nagsisimula at the bottom yung mga estudyante. Mas may chance yung marunong mag-computer kesa yung hindi. Yon ang inyong inisip. Hindi pa niyo inisip na papasok kayo talaga sa mundo ng information technology. Kanya lamang just about the time when you entered college, 1999 or so, doon naging klaro yung kinabukasan ng mundo at yung kinabukasan ng Pilipinas. Kaya tamang-tama may headstart kayo.

In fact, isa sa mga advantages ng Pilipinas sa information and communication technology ay dahil nga sa napakarami nating mga computer institutions, computer schools. So, dumarating dito ang mga computer companies pero dahil marami sa inyo ay pumasok, hind para pumasok sa computer kung hindi para pumasok sa mga ibang opisina at least may bentaha ang marunong mag-computer.

As you went through school, sa nakikita ko, nababasa ninyo na ang kinabukasan ay computer tech... ICT, nababasa niyo yung malalaking suweldo sa mga call centers at software development, marami sa inyo ay magsasabi — ay! Ako ay graduate ng computer science. Ako ay mag-a-apply sa information technology companies. Yon ang kabiguan ng marami dahil hindi pumasok para pumasok sa I.T. pero lumabas at nagdesisyong pumasok sa I.T.

Kaya kailangan maintindihan natin. Kung sinasabi natin na the growth sector of the future is information and communication technology at meron tayong human resource development, hindi lahat ng nagtapos sa computer science ay dapat sa ICT papasok. Kasi, pwede pa rin kayong pumasok sa bangko, sa opisina, sa accounting firm, sa department store, sa written establishments. Kaya lang mas may bentaha nga kayo dahil marunong kayo ng computer. Pero huwag nating isipin na dahil natapos kayo ng computer science, ang papasukan ninyo ay information technology enterprise.

Kasi kung titingnan natin yung mundo ng ICT, malaking range na yon. Ang nagpaliwanag sa akin ito ay no less than Bill Gates himself. Dahil si Bill gGates ay tumutulong sa Pilipinas na umangat ang ating information technology education. Sabi nga niya, there are so many opportunities in ICT itself. So, pinaka-simple yung call center at pinaka-complicated yung software development. That is if you are in ICT. Pero tanungin natin kung tayo ba ay nasa graduate ng computer science sigurado na tayo doon sa range na yon — call center up to software development — not necessarily for now. Kasi ngayon pa natin inuumpisa na yung ating bansa ay pinili natin na information technology ang papasukan natin. So, it is a new industry. Maraming trabahong being made available pero hindi pa kasingdami ng mga estudyanteng nag-graduate sa computer science. Yung computer science ay maraming ibang pwedeng puntahan hindi pa muna necessarily yung ICT.

So, ano ang hinahanap ng ICT companies ngayon? Kasi noon sinasabi ko, sa manufacturing you spend a hundred million to hire hundreds. In information technology, you spend five million dollars to hire thousands. Kasi labor intensive pero skills intensive ang information and communication technology. So, kung yung pinakamura, pero pinakamura pero maganda na rin ang starting salary yung call center, ano ang hinahanap ng mga call center? Hindi lang na marunong kayo ng computer science, dapat magaling din kayo sa english. So, you may pass the computer science test, you might fail in english, in speech. So nagkakaroon ngayon yung mga iba't-ibang eskuwelahan ng tinatawag nilang finishing school for call centers and that is advance english speech education.

So, itong maipapayo ko. Well, gagamitin ko itong pagkakataon dahil nasa AMA ako, the biggest and oldest computer school in Asia. Ginagamit kong pagkakataon na makipag-usap doon sa ibang mga computer schools. Para naman yung mga estudyatne ay hindi mabigo at pag-graduate nila, mabuti kung may papayo sa kanila na pumunta sa finishing school for speech. Sana maglagay na ng finishing school for speech doon mismo sa eskuwelahan. So, ewan ko kung AMA meroon na yung sa speech? I would... That is what should be done. Kung yon ang papasukan ninyo. As I said, pwede kayong pumasok sa bangko, sa retail, sa department store, sa Jolibee, okey pa rin yon. Pero kung talagang ICT ang papasukan ninyo, aside from computer science, you must speak good english.

Ngayon, punta naman tayo doon sa kabila, sa kabilang dako, yung software development. Dahil yon ang pinakamalaking suweldo nakukuha sa ICT. Eh siyempre malaki rin ang inaasahan na maibibigay n'yo. And since it's top of the line, chances are a starting student hindi muna doon. You will learn through experience. Although, doon sa Silicon Valley, maraming mga estudyante ay pumasok na sa software development kaagad-agad. Why? Because of creativity. You know, yung mga katangi-tanging estudyante na very creative na kung minsan mas magaling pa kaysa mga teacher nila. Yon ang tinawag na blue jeans millionnaires sa Silicon Valley. Yan ang isa. Well, we remember the love bug, di ba? Yon ang pinakamagandang example, sad to say, of student with creativity na he can go straight into software development sa eskuwelahan pa lang. So, pero dapat malaman din natin that the one who was able to discover the cure for the virus, taga-AMA rin ba? Taga-Pilipinas din. So it also had the same creativity. So, there are students who are creative enough even in school at pag-graduate nila ay puwedeng pumasok kaagad sa software development. Pero siguro naman sa 2,500 ilan kaya yuon ganun?

Now, doon sa middle, between the call center where you need to have good english, and the software development where you need to be so creative, or you need to have more experience in the industry to gain the creativity, yung nasa gitna, yung mga programmer. Ngayon, maraming requirements for programmers. Kanya lamang, just because you finish your computer science does not mean that you are a certified programmer. You must be certified in specific languages, in specific systems, certified for Microsoft, certified for Suns, certified for Java, kaya yan din ay isang inaasahan natin na yung mga computer schools ay magtatayo ng certified programs for programmers. Kaya yon ang isang inaasahan ko.

Kaya yan ang masasabi ko sa ating mga computer schools. Para mas masigurado na yung mga estudyante niyong magga-graduate ay may trabaho, they must be more competitive than others who will compete for the same jobs in this new sunrise industry. Magdagdag ng english speech courses at ipadami yung certified programs for programmers, and develop the creativity among your students. Yan ang isang paraan kung papano tayo makakasigurado na pag-graduate ng isang estudyante ay lumaki ang kanyang chance na pumasok doon mismo sa mundo ng information and communication technology.

In the meantime, gaya sabi ko, there are others — there are banks, there are stores, there are offices. But if we want to go where the money is we have to be prepared extra for these things.

At dahil ang Pilipinas, sabi nila second biggest computer school population in the whole world. Well, kapag ganoon we have to avoid the temptation of the school's becoming diploma mills. Kaya dapat sigurado na yung mga estudyante pasado sa certification. Kaya inatasan na yung CHED, the chairman of CHED, si Ester Garcia na dapat tignan lahat itong mga computer schools para hindi sila diploma mills.

Nangyari na rin ito noon, eh. Doon sa mga seamen, yung mga marine schools. Ano'ng tawag doon? Yung schools for... Yung mga marine technology schools? Yung mga... Dahil maraming demand para sa ating mga seamen, maraming nagtayo ng schools for seamen. Marami doon ay naging diploma mill. Sumama tuloy ang reputasyon ng ating mga seamen for a while. Kaya nagkaroon ng massive reform at maraming mga seamen's institutions na sinarado o binigyan ng deadline na kung hindi nila gagawin yung mga specific na reforms para ma-upgrade ay kailangan magsasarado sila. Salamat naganap yon on time at no'ng gumawa ng white list yung International Maritime Organization, kasama pa rin ang Pilipinas doon sa white list. In other words, kung nag-graduate ka sa isang Philippine Marine School, ikaw pa rin ay makakapasok bilang seaman.

Ngayon, dumadami ang computer schools, nagkakaroon ng diploma mills. We will have to go to the same cleansing process. Tinanong no'ng mga information technology kay Ester Garcia, yung chairman ng CHED, naka-cancel ka na ba ng mga eskuwelahan? Sabi niya, hindi pa naman ako naka-cancel ng eskuwelahan, but I have cancelled specific programs in different schools. Kaya iyan ang importante.

At kayo, mga estudyante, tapos na nakaraos na kayo. As I've said, you have your choice, pero kung gusto niyo na pumasok sa ICT, ang remedyo doon is you take some additional units. Kung gusto niyong pumasok sa call center na napaka-glamorous yung trabahong yon, then you take up english courses. May mga finishing school diyan. Alam ko, doon sa Clark dahil ang dami-daming call centers sa Clark. Meron silang Clark — I don't know what they call it — pero they call it finishing school kasi they know how to speak english. Pero meron silang Call Center Academy. At ang pinakamalaking dinadagdag doon over the computer science is to speak english properly.

Yon namang gustong pumasok sa talagang maging programmer, well, AMA itself offers certified programs. Kaya kung kayo, kung nag-graduate kayo ng computer science at gusto pa ninyong pumasok sa ICT, then maybe you can re-enroll in AMA itself and take up a certification course, a program. Yon ang paraan kung papano mahahanap ninyo yung mga trabaho sa information technology. Siyempre, ang certification program ay mas mahal kaysa sa ordinary computer science. Pero naman, ano ang deperensiya ng suweldong makukuha ninyo o kaya yung chance na makakakuha kayo ng trabaho? Naalaala ko noong bago pa yung Asian Institute of Management, ang mahal-mahal ng matrikula. Kanya lamang dahil sa reputation ng diploma ng Asian Institute of Management, pag nag-graduate yung mga business manager masters doon, yung first month na suweldo nila nasulit na ang isang semester ng kanilang mahal na matrikula.

Kaya't itong mga choices, siguro yung magulang ninyo, kung mag-decide kayo na talagang ICT ang papasukan ninyo, magdudusa pa ng konti dahil ibabalik kayo sa eskuwela at mas mahal ang matrikula ng certification program. Pero doon sa pagdagdag na mga panahon ay paglabas naman niyo siguro ay baka naman aabot tayo na yung unang suweldo ninyo ay makakasulit na sa isang semester na binayaran sa certification program.

Kaya ito ang gusto kong ipayo sa ating mga kabataan. Kasi ang mundo, ang mundo ng tunay na mundo ay talagang mas mabigat kaysa mundo ng eskuwelahan. Naalaala ko noong ako ay bata pang graduate, ako ay naging teacher kaagad. At nagtanong sa akin, bakit ka naman pumasok sa teacher? Because I want to stay in the school. Kasi the school is such a caring, caring institution, not like the world outside, it is so harsh. Kanya lamang, sa gusto natin o hindi, we have to go out into that harsh dog eat, dog world. But we must be prepared, and I am very grateful to ama dahil ang sabi ni king sa akin ngayon — our students are very well-prepared.

Kaya sa inyong lahat, mga graduating students o graduates ng AMA, congratulations to all of you at maraming salamat sa inyong mga magulang.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the First Commencement Exercises of AMA Computer University. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225811/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8310&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Trade Investment Progress and Tourism

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Trade Investment Progress and Tourism

[Delivered at the Expo Pilipino, Clark, Pampanga, May 4, 2002]

Thank you very much Rene, and thank you for organizing this great opportunity for me to practice being a lecturer again later on.

Keng keka tang a host ngening aldo Governor Lito Lapid, thank you very much, dactal a salamat keng maka-host keni ngening aldo.

And I would like to also welcome together with Lito the other governors who are here today we have Governor Vic Ortega from La Union; Governor Valera from Abra; and welcome to North Philippines Governor Ramoncito Ong from Aurora.

Our host mayor. Our host mayors because Clark straddles Angeles City and mMabalacat so we have Mayor Carmelo Lazatin and Mayor Boking Morales of Mabalacat.

Nandito ba si Oca Rodriguez? Ayun. Okay. Oca you should be here. Congressman Oca Rodriguez from, siguro dahil tiga-San Fernando at hindi tiga-Mabalacat pero thank you for being ... After all this is part of North Philippines and Oca, later on, is going to benefit from two very, very big inaugurations.

And then, we have members of the Cabinet who are here today Leony Montemayor of Agriculture; Dinky Soliman of Social welfare; and Dante Canlas of NEDA; and Letty Shahani of Cultural Affairs.

I would like to thank Dr. Angeles also for hosting this affair so that the people of the Philippines will know that this very center where we are is going to become again a bustling center for cultural, historical, touristic activities.

I would like to welcome her Excellency Ambassador from India, Ambassador Nabrakashama. She is here because she is accompanying or she is the guest of the Indian Chamber who is also looking at investment opportunities here. And I welcome the other chambers who are also present here today.

I would like to thank the businessmen who gave their testimonial. First of all, Mr. James go from JG Summit, thank you for returning your money to the Philippines and Kris Monsod, representing Oscar Lopez, thank you for building the road but we need to make mega Manila a reality among other investments. And Cesar Quiambao, the local boy from Bayambang, Pangasinan who made good; and now as I was telling them is giving such a big part of his income back to Bayambang that what he has given to Bayambang I think is bigger than the IRA that Bayambang has received from the national government.

I thank Mr. George Chua Cham, Chairman of the North Philippine Business Council, for your kind words.

And we have here the big names of trade and commerce and industry which I shall not mention because I always mention them all the time in Metro Manila, anyway.

And so, if I may, I had the podium taken out, I had a white board put here because Ronnie Concepcion says, I don't inspire anyway with my speeches so I will just be myself and share with you what is our vision for North Luzon so that you can decide as businessmen where you belong. And we can, therefore, move forward from here.

They have a plan in Central Luzon called w corridor. But actually the North Luzon, is one big w. And if I may go to that, this is what I love to do, being a teacher.

That's w. Here, this side of the w is tourism. This is the China sea; over here, we have Pagudpud. My husband is going to sleep in Pagudpud tonight because like what we do, we personally give the example of going to the tourist spots. Pagudpud's sand is about as good as the sand of Boracay. And so this is a great area for tourism.

And we have half an hour away from Pagudpud, the Laoag International Airport and several tourism facilities around the Laoag International Airport.

In a study that we had on tourism done by the famed, perhaps the number one consultant in the world today — McKinsey and Associates — headed, incidentally by a Filipino, Jim Ayala, we asked them to do a national strategy for tourism.

One, the principle of tourism we are following is the principle of hubs and spokes. The hub is where it's natural for tourists to go and the spokes is where you bring them out for their extension tours. A hub has to have an international airport that's how the tourists come. And so Laoag is a hub for tourism.

And we are, especially, promoting tourists from China because there are 400 million Chinese who can afford to travel and are curious about the world around them. And this Laoag is only about, what, an hour-and-a-half away from Canton and two hours away from Shanghai. So this is a great place to be in.

And well, we have the heritage village in Vigan, an hour away from Laoag airport. So people will stay, they may stay in Fort Ilocandia or they may stay in other places but this is part of the tours that they can make. The heritage village which is a cultural tourism of Vigan.

And then you have La Union, Pangasinan, Zambales. Pardon the proportions, Pangasinan is by far the biggest province. But from La Union, Pangasinan, Zambales, we have a whole stretch of beautiful beaches and other resorts. And therefore, they can land there or they can land here, the tourists can land here, the bottom of this which is where tourism and industry meet.

This is Subic and Limay. Subic has both industry and tourism; Limay is heavy industry.

This portion here, therefore, is industry and I.T. that's why I thank the Gokongwei group because of the telecommunications facility which is absolutely necessary for ICT to develop.

Furthermore, this portion is part of mega Manila so there's a double role. So this is also mega Manila. What is this mega Manila? This is really the Subic-Clark area. This is intended to serve as part of the expansion of Metro Manila — which is congested — and they become one economy. So this becomes the interface between North Philippines and Metro Manila.

That's why the road that the Lopezes is building is of absolute importance because it will truly make this portion part of mega Manila. So I say, therefore that this road from Balintawak — which is improving, all the way up to well up to here, up to somewhere here which is Sta. Ines is what they are developing; and also, we also have the contribution of Cesar Quiambao from Buendia to Balintawak, so the skyway here. So when you have Buendia, Balintawak, Sta. Ines, we can see how you go from Makati to Subic-Clark — it becomes one big cosmopolitan area.

And this is where, in this area, where we will have the inauguration of the mall of Robinson. And I thank them because I remember that they bought that property at the lowest ebb of Pampanga's economy right after the lahar overran the province of Pampanga. But they had foresight, and now that property that they bought is terrible valuable for them as well as for the people of North Luzon.

So, Subic-Clark, of course, is like Calabarzon, the great growth area of our country. And in Clark, we have not only industry, but we also have I.T. that's why Manny Angeles is putting together even all the infrastructure needed for I.T., including the human resource development — we even have an I.T. academy right here. And then we have the Clark airport which will serve, not really Northern Luzon, but it can, but it will serve the people of Metro Manila. It is the alternate airport to NAIA, which has no more room for expansion after NAIA III.

And with this road network and there will be a rail network — north rail, which I have revived, it was abolished in the previous administration. I have revived it, I have reactivated the corporation because if we're gonna to have an airport here and an airport in Metro Manila, it has to be like ... And Heathrow; it has to be like Leonardo da Vinci and Fiumicino; it has to be like national airport and Washington Dulles; it has to be like Kennedy and La Guardia. So therefore, this road network must be very easy: you have the road network and you're gonna have the north rail. And we are inviting investors in the north rail corporation.

The north rail is a subsidiary of BCDA. But we don't want BCDA to be the ... They are just the catalyst. I think there should be private sector investment in this north rail.

And I'd like to thank the province of Bulacan because even as we're arranging for this medium-term or long-term project for the financing for the railroad, already, the province of Bulacan is working on the relocation — the humanitarian manner of relocating the people here. It is almost a painless relocation because we are doing advance planning and then, Josie de la Cruz ... Ay I didn't see you earlier, nahuli ka ba? Ayun pala. Tingnan mo pinupuri kita kahit akala ko wala ka. Okay. Josie is doing the ideal relocation — and she is moving the people from here to dona Remedios Trinidad, but it's done together with the community. In other words, she did not consider the so-called squatters of the Bulacan as a problem, she considered them as part of the solution. And she is putting up a whole new community here, together already with Korean and American investors. So the relocation already includes their source of income that's why we don't need to fear investing in north rail.

Now, Subic-Clark, we are going to make one unit rather than two. Like Calabarzon is one, Subic-Clark will be one. And that's why there's going to be a Subic-Clark road priority project that will make them less than an hour distant of each other. In fact, last year, when I went to Japan, and at that time, Japan was reducing its ODA for the rest of the world but not reducing its ODA for the Philippines, but they wanted to be low profile about what we were signing on ODA. So they said, let's just sign the most important project for the Philippines as far as Japan is concerned, let's just sign the Subic-Clark Expressway. So, that's what we did, that's what we signed.

The Subic-Clark Expressway contains a spur to Tarlac, Tarlac. Why did the Japanese want a spur? I asked for this, and they gave this and that. Because there are Japanese investments in Luisita so therefore, they want those Japanese investors, from whom they get their tax money, to be convenient. So if Rufu Colayco is here, where is he? And there was a policy issue, I think Rufu it's very clear: the purpose is for the spur to go up to Luisita. Okay

So, that's why you have this w because there's already a thriving industrial center here.

Then you go down, and this portion of Bulacan, which is near mega Manila, is industrial. You have Meycauayan, you have the jewelry industry in Meycauayan. But it goes up, and North Bulacan, and then you have Nueva Ecija, and you have Aurora, and you have Cagayan Valley.

So this portion here is agriculture. Nueva Ecija is the center of the modernization of the rice industry — Nueva Ecija and Isabela. And we are fortunate that we have a center of hybrid rice development in Central Luzon State University. So rice is gonna be coming from Nueva Ecija and Isabela and we have rice mills in Bulacan as well.

Then we have Aurora. You know, if Aurora stays in Region IV, nothing will ever happen to Aurora. There is no interest in Calabarzon to develop Aurora. They have their own port, they have Batangas port; and if they wanna go to the Pacific, they want Infanta Real. It is Region III that wants Aurora to be with them. It is symbiotic. Why?

Because we have Dingalan, and Dingalan port can become the egress of the products that will be produced in Nueva Ecija, in Cagayan Valley for other parts of the world ... Because this is why these areas are not export-oriented — they don't have a port. That's why they need a port, and that natural port is Dingalan.

So we invite investors to look at Dingalan as a port. Therefore, I asked Dante Canlas, when they're doing the medium-term plan for the region, they should include Dingalan port as part of the plan of Region III. So welcome to Region III.

Going up, we have the Sierra Madre here — very, very thin. We have a very thin coastal area here, and we cannot build a road in between because that's virgin forest. So therefore, this economy must face the outside world rather than the inside world. That's really why we need a port here, and this should be fisheries. How to modernize the fisheries of Palanan, Divilacan, Dinapigue, Dilasag, all the way up to Baler. So that will be, Leony, the modernization of the pacific coast of North Luzon.

Here, we enter the Cagayan economic zone. But many of the industries here are agro-industry. For instance, saan si Reggie Uriarte? Hindi ba, Reggie, what you're developing here is agro-industry because this is agricultural. And James Go talked about their investment here — they have the Cagayan Sugar Refinery Corporation — so we thank them for being our investor here.

So we have also, here in Isabela as well, in Cagayan Valley, Cassava. And we have Rico Fajardo representing San Miguel Corporation, because San Miguel and the other mills can absorb even one million hectares-worth of cassava production. So that's virtually an unlimited demand considering the supply.

And we have several other ... Ah yeah kamote, kamote is being grown here but for exports, and several other investments that are being promoted by my former DTI colleagues whom I asked to leave like the new head of the Cagayan Economic Zone is Jo Hipolito, who was my friend and colleague as DTI Regional Director of Region II and I needed to make Cagayan Economic Zone work. It used to be political in composition. And I told Johnny Enrile and Chavit Singson, I'm not going to put any of your recommendees as Executive Director, I'll put a professional there. However, I made the board of directors as wide-ranging as possible to represent the different political, business and investment interests. And last that I came from Cagayan Valley, the other night, and Governor Lara of Cagayan was telling me, of Cagayan, how amazed he was that the composition of the board was so even across different political and economic interest. But that's the way to make something work: let everybody be represented in the board, but let it be run by a professional manager. So that is agriculture.

And I want that this agriculture in Cagayan revolve around the great Cagayan river. Cagayan river is the mightiest river in the country. But I don't want a big dam because we still haven't worked out all the social problems of San Roque and Casecnan, I don't want to begin another headache. I want to go small. I think for irrigation it's good to have a mix but on the mix we already have the big dams, now let's go for the small one. Small is beautiful. So, if we were to invest money in a big dam, how much would that be? So I have asked Leony Montemayor to give about 30 million-worth of water pumps, water impounding projects, communal irrigation funding to revolve all around the Cagayan river. And that will have a quicker gestation period, it will prepare us quicker for El Nino which is going to be coming, they say, in October.

Then we have Batanes, sabi ni Cesar Canlas maraming onions sa Bayambang. Onions. Maawa ka naman sa Batanes, onions din ang kanilang main product. Garlic. Onions dito pala Nueva Ecija. Okay. Garlic. We got to help Batanes sell its garlic. There's no port, it's very expensive and then they suffer from the smuggled garlic that comes in. But Batanes is also ... Actually, Batanes is really somewhere here so Batanes is really part of the tourism portion because Batanes is one of the most beautiful provinces in the country.

And in the middle, but more towards here, is the Cordilleras. And for the cordilleras, it is also tourism. Naturally, we have Baguio that's why it belongs to this part of the w because you reach it from la union. So it's really part of the la union of this economy.

Then you have the rice terraces, but they're really somewhere my map is already out of proportion but they're really somewhere here near Nueva Ecija and Nueva Vizcaya. So the rice terraces, but that's till part of tourism.

In Kalinga, you have white water rafting. If you wanna go there, you make Lito Camacho your tourist guide because he's gone white water rafting there with his family and it's really world class. And if there are facilities there ... Foreigners go there. And if there are just halfway decent facilities there, the white water rafting community will be willing to pay 500 to a thousand dollars a night for a package. That's really a great opportunity.

So, this is what we want to envision for North Luzon. And you can see that you have so many investment opportunities here. When I say tourism, for instance, I don't mean that the government will put up the tourism areas – I don't mean that the government will put up the tourism resorts, it's the private sector that will put up the tourism resorts. The government's role is to put the infrastructure. But there's already an international airport, there's already a good road network, so the infrastructure is there and the marketing is what the government will help do. And we have Mona Lopez here who used to be the Usec for Tourism and I'm glad that she's with the private sector on the North Luzon Tourism Council.

And for agriculture, it is the farmers who will plant but the key there is the agricultural modernization fund of which we have made available 26 billion in the past year and we don't intend to be any stingier this year; and the infrastructure, I've told you the railroad, the airport, the roads, the road network.

So I believe that, having therefore, as you can see, a coherent vision, I suppose that you will not join those who say that the government has no direction because you can see I decided to give an impromptu, extemporaneous lecture to let you know that the government knows what it's doing.

Some of these areas need to have flights — Laoag to Baguio, Laoag to Bagabag airport to go to the rice terraces. It's our job to put up the airport, but you can do b-o-t as well. But it's your job to put up the flights. And as part of our national strategy for tourism — identifying the spokes and the hubs and what we will market — we will also have to identify the tourism incentives which would include the airlines going from hub to spoke so it will be easy for our tourists to go there.

So I'd like to thank you for being here today. And I'd like to thank you for your coming on short notice. But I think it was a great opportunity that we could get together, get our vision together. I hope you agree with this vision.

It didn't happen overnight, it's been well studied. Some of them, the study started way back when I was still Undersecretary of Trade and Industry. So, it has been a study done for the last ... Since '89 to 2002, it's been in the woodworks for 13 years. So, now, we have two-and-a-half years to carry out the earlier part of the study.

So, I thank you very much for your cooperation and let's go North Philippines.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Trade Investment Progress and Tourism. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225753/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8309&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 35th International General Meeting of the Pacific Basin Economic Council (PBEC)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 35th International General Meeting of the Pacific Basin Economic Council (PBEC)

[Delivered at the Emerald Ballroom, Mandarin Oriental Hotel Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, May 7, 2002]

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Minister Rafidah Aziz; Mr. Enava, Chairman of PBEC; Mr. Oho; and Mr. Cho, Vice Chairman. And I would also like to greet all of the other participants both from the governments and from the business sector in this forum, this very important forum, ladies and gentlemen.

I am very happy to be here once again in Malaysia. I was just here last year about August. It was my first State Visit as President. I chose to make Malaysia the site of my first State Visit because of the help that Prime Minister Mahathir and the government of Malaysia have been giving to the Philippines in its peace process in Southern Philippines. And now, he invited me once again to keynote this affair. And though, I was here just a few months ago, after all the help that prime Minister Mahathir has done, has given so that we can have peace and development in Southern Philippines it's very difficult to say no to him. So, here I am once again. It's a privilege of the President of the Philippines.

I was here from my very first State Visit anywhere last year in August because that was only a little over a year ago that I assume the Presidency of the Philippines. I was resolved to turn my country around after a period of trip and neglect. When I became president, I declared that our challenge must be that within this decade we will win the fight against poverty. I also declared my intention to work hard so that we will tap into the opportunities of the world's new economy.

Global interdependence has a seamless link to the battle to reduce poverty. And so, I will speak of fostering foreign direct investment in the pacific basin. It is important to talk about this in terms of fighting poverty, in terms of fighting terrorism, in terms of promoting peace and order, in terms of fostering investment in that kind of environment.

I was one of the first to call on the collective power of nations to strike at the root of the conditions that enable terrorism to spread its wings. And that is the despair of poverty, injustice and exclusion. And it is important that as we speak about fostering foreign direct investment in the pacific basin, in this 21st century, in this setting of the battle against terrorism, it is important that we keep this in our minds.

The idea of the interlink between the fight against poverty and the fight against terrorism, the idea of interdependence and the fight against poverty have taken root. For instance, the recent consensus at the U.N. financing for development conference in Monterrey, Mexico projected a deeper recognition that peace and development are mutually reinforcing. And that it is important to promote national and global economic systems that are based on the principles of justice, equity, democracy, participation, transparency, accountability and inclusion.

The Monterrey consensus also declares the international community support for an equitable trading system. It reaffirms the world's commitment to, and I quote: Ensuring that trade plays its full part in promoting economic growth, employment and development for all. Thus, it is fashionable in this age of fight against terrorism, in this age of linking the fight against terrorism with the fight against poverty, in this age of seeing the interdependent nature, the global nature of the fight against terrorism, it has become again politically correct to link foreign direct investment with the fight against terrorism and the fight against poverty. It has become politically correct to recognize that trade is not an end in itself but must be a means to social and human development. Properly employed trade policies enhance our access to a wider range of goods, services, technologies and knowledge. More trade stimulates entrepreneurship, creates jobs, attracts foreign direct investment around the Pacific basin, increases foreign earnings, and fosters vital learning processes. These are the tools for sustainable development and the alleviation of poverty.

We must ensure that the global trading system can be equitable and genuinely contributory to development. On our part, the Philippines will maintain our openness to foreign direct investment and to foreign trade. We will maintain our economic ties with the rest of the world especially to the extent that it is consistent with our commitments and the welfare of our people.

Thus, when we look at the world around us now. When we look at what is politically correct now to believe we'll find it tragic that developed countries still persist in maintaining protectionist barriers to trade. They persist in maintaining barriers to textiles and garments, barriers against agricultural and fisheries products, barriers even against steel products.

The inability to reap benefits from trade on the part of the developing countries translates into a reduced capacity to sustain investments, to sustain imports of capital equipments and other inputs that are needed for development. And this in turn undermines our ability to mobilize support for trade policy reform. How can we reform our trade policies when our citizen see that the developed countries have not yet reformed their trade policies sufficiently to receive our goods more easily. All this erodes faith in the system and aggravates poverty.

We should, therefore, put an end to tariff escalation and tariff peaks for the products of developing countries. Corollary efforts should be made to lessen the burden some requirements for developing countries to meet the stringent standards in developed country markets.

Compliance in many cases has proven to be onerous and expensive. Let me give an example. While we have made many inroads now in getting our mangoes and bananas approved for entry in many developed countries. In some countries, they still have to undergo exhaustive data collection and certification requirements, and these requirements last for years. So, sad to say, while everybody is looking at reducing tariff barriers, sanitary requirements and technical standards seem to be now the weapon of choice of protectionists.

There needs to be greater liberalization in these non-tariff barriers especially sanitary and partly sanitary standards. There should also be greater liberalization of the temporary entry of service providers in the general agreement on trade and services because here there is a large potential, commercially meaningful area for developing countries. And here, there is great support for liberalization especially in the I.C.T. sector. Also, if we want to foster an environment for a good investment climate, anti-dumping actions need to be lessened by raising the requirements for the initiation of such actions. Because when a developing country has to protect itself of anti-dumping charges, the actions are resource-intensive and they weigh down on small business in developing countries.

We must also make special and differential treatment that famous SNT in the WTO. We must make it truly operational by providing more resources for capacity-building to enhance competitiveness and by further differentiation among developing countries.

Right now, there are only two categories among developing countries — you have the least developed and you have the developing. But among the developing countries, there are wide variations in circumstances. For example, there is a very big difference between a South Korea and an Indonesia. And therefore, special and differential treatment must also be applied through these variations within one of the two classifications of developing countries.

Speaking of Indonesia, speaking of Malaysia, the Philippines has faith in the viability of the ASEAN free trade area. This makes ASEAN a great place for foreign direct investments. Because we cannot generate foreign direct investments in adequate magnitudes unless we become a part of a larger integrated regional market. This is the only way we can compete, our markets and investments, with the giants elsewhere in the world.

In 1992, the member-countries of ASEAN launch the common effective preferential tariff for the Asean free trade area. Under this scheme, the members of ASEAN bound themselves into a schedule of tariff-cutting until their tariffs of intra-asean trade were no more than 5 percent. This year the AFTA process quietly reached a significant milestone. Relatively quietly because so many other headlines were competing for it all over the world. But it is no less of a great momentous event when the first signatories to the AFTA agreement — meaning Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand — achieved tariff levels of zero to 5 percent on almost all goods traded among them. And this is something that those who consider investing in the pacific basin especially in this part of the world should remember.

And even as we have achieved this ASEAN is resolve to go beyond tariff-cutting. We are working on the elimination of non-tariff barriers. We are harmonizing our product standards. We are developing mutual recognition arrangements. We are negotiating the liberalization of trade in financial services, telecommunications, construction, transport and tourism. We are binding the region by expanding our transportation and energy networks. We are easing the flow of goods, people and power. We are drafting an agreement to make it easier for tourists to come to ASEAN and to travel within ASEAN. All these integration of ASEAN makes ASEAN truly the investment area for this 21st century.

But, we are not only talking about ASEAN, we're looking beyond our immediate neighborhood to extend regional integration to our major trading partners — the so-called ASEAN + 3 — of china, Japan and South Korea. In fact, to complement this regional effort, there is great activity among the individual ASEAN members in examining the feasibility of entering into bilateral trading arrangements initially with Japan.

As for China, its entry into the WTO will greatly enhance its already strong impact on the world economies. The nations of ASEAN must all embark on a process of collective reflection on how to sustain the competitiveness of their exports and capitalize on the opportunities presented by a more open China.

China's entry into the WTO is considered by everyone as both a threat and an opportunity. As a threat, it's quite obvious, china is a very attractive place for the foreign direct investment going to the pacific basin, but the opportunities are also important because by entering WTO China becomes a more open market. The Chinese people who are in the hinterlands become more prosperous, and if you have 400 million newly-enriched Chinese wanting to travel around the world, that is a great market for tourist investments in ASEAN, which is a neighbor of China. And besides, there are fruits, tropical fruits-producing ASEAN that are not produced in China but are greatly consumed by the Chinese people. A framework for all of these may well be offered by the China-ASEAN free trade agreement proposed by China.

The Philippines on its part is fashioning a domestic environment to attract investments, facilitate trade, create an enlarge markets and generate economic activity. We set down a concrete national reform program founded on four main pillars:

First, a competitive economy capable of building wealth for our people in a more interactive global setting;

Second, a caring society where wealth is interlinked with social equity;

Third, a robust agricultural sector matching the global benchmark of efficiency; and, Fourth, modern institutions of public and private governance based of globally accepted standards of accountability and transparency and the effective enforcement of laws.

I speak about competitiveness as our number one policy for fighting poverty. To enhance our competitiveness as an investment destination, we have addressed several factors crucial to the cost of production and doing business in the country. We are putting in place policies to develop our capital markets such as securitization and the operation of asset management companies, the new area for investment in post-Asian crisis ASEAN.

To reduce the cost of power, transportation and communications, we are working with the private sector via our build-operate-and-transfer law. There's room for investments in mass transport, in transmission and many other areas of infrastructure. We are also increasing productivity by strengthening labor management relations and eliminating corruption and red tape as well as expanding training programs to prepare our workforce for the demands of the new global economy.

Mass housing, land distribution and human development services are essential to winning the battle against poverty. We have enacted — or are in the process of enacting laws — to meet these objectives. And in all these cases, whether infrastructure or social services, opportunities abound for the intrepid investor who wants to make a profit while helping us achieve our social dividends.

And it is important that peace and order be secured — we realize this. It is important so that we can devote our resources to productive undertakings. We are addressing law and order through a holistic approach consisting of political, economic and security components.

As for the security component, I have launched an anti-crime program which includes among other things the allocation of more resources to the police forces. The close integration and coordination of intelligence activities and the raising of bounties for criminals. To help us in our fight against terrorism, the U.S. is providing assistance in the training of our forces and the sharing of intelligence and in the supply of some hardware. We have been rebuilding our national edifice as you can see stone by stone.

And after more than a year, our efforts are starting to pay-off. Growth is respectable. In the sea of negative growth rates, last year, we grew at 3.7 percent GNP. Inflation is low — the lowest in maybe 15 years. Unemployment has been reduced. We give jobs to 1.5 million people, in addition to the original ones with jobs this past year. The peso is stable. Yesterday, the peso reached the 50 pesos to the dollar mark. The dollar is now — as of yesterday — 49.78 pesos.

I thank you for your applause, and I would like to add that usually, especially during the Asian crisis, especially last year when we had the world slowdown and the 9-11, and economies are all seeking to stabilize their economies, well, the classical dilemma between interest rates and exchange rates crop up again as they always do when an economy is seeking to stabilize itself.

Sometimes you have to make a choice. If you want to reduce interest rates you must be willing to let your exchange rate go. If you want to stabilize your exchange rate, you must do it by a draconian method of raising interest rates. But in the Philippines, we have stabilized our exchange rate and we have reduced our interest rates. And that is the best evidence of sound macro-economic fundamentals.

How did we achieve this? Among other things, we put our fiscal house in order. And as a result of putting our fiscal house in order, our credit ratings are now improving. Nexi, JBIC, the World Bank, the IMF, the ADB, J.P. Morgan, Goldman Sachs, Fitch, Moody's, and Standard and Poor have all endorsed our economic fundamentals. And from the negative credit rating that I inherited last year, in less than a year — because I became president January 20 and the last of these ratings came in middle of January — we have moved from negative to stable in all these credit ratings. And all of these is being reflected in the market as the spreads that we have in the international capital market are growing narrower and narrower by the day.

Last January, Bloomberg said that the Philippines has the most... It has the best performing Stockmarket in the world — the first time the Philippines got that accolade. Now, I am hearing that the Philippines is the best performing issue in the international bond market. And I thank you, the investors for that.

And if our record can be used as a benchmark for the future, I am confident that we can build on the momentum we have established. I ask you, therefore, the leaders of the Pacific Basin to join me in delivering on the promise of a new Philippines. I ask you to help bring my country to the threshold of the new economy in terms of human progress, in terms of human dignity.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 35th International General Meeting of the Pacific Basin Economic Council (PBEC). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225708/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8301&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Official Dinner hosted by Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra and Madame Khunying Potjaman Shinawatra

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Official Dinner hosted by Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra and Madame Khunying
Potjaman Shinawatra

[Delivered at the Santi Mari Hall, Government House Bangkok, Thailand, May 7, 2002]

Your Excellency Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra, Madame Khunying Potjaman Shinawatra, esteemed Officials of the Royal Thai Government, your Excellencies of the Diplomatic Corps, my colleagues in the Philippine delegation, ladies and gentlemen: Sawasdee kah!

I am honored to be in Thailand once again. I have been here many times before, but this is my first time as President of the Republic of the Philippines.

And in behalf of Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo and my delegation, I thank the royal government and the people of Thailand for the warm hospitality and generous assistance being extended to us during our stay.

Our national and family relations are laid upon a long span of history, tradition, goodwill and partnership. As the prime minister said, when my father, Diosdado Macapagal, was President of the Philippines, it was our family's and nation's honor to host the visit to the Philippines of their Majesties the King and the Queen of Thailand.

Fifty three years of close and constructive collaboration in bilateral, regional and global issues are a testament to the durable commitment of our government's and people's to assist each other, work together, and grow alongside one another.

We have shared the legacy and responsibility of being the unswerving pillars of Southeast Asian freedom in all its vibrancy and dynamism. And just earlier tonight, I gave a gift to the Prime Minister — a 16th century jar made in Sukotai, Thailand which was found in a wreck off the coast of Zambales in the Philippines. This shows that we have been together not only for 53 years but for many, many centuries.

Inter-dependence, based on fairness and mutuality, propels nations towards prosperity as it helps them collectively seize the opportunities and face the challenges of the 21st century.

Our trade with Thailand has always been steeped with solid value. Thailand is the main source of rice and sugar whenever the Philippines finds it necessary to import these produce. But even greater value lies in the vibrancy of our business environment and the dynamic interaction of our respective private sectors.

Much of our relations in trade and investment operate in the context of broader ASEAN Economic Cooperation. As mentioned by his excellency, the advent of the ASEAN free trade area or AFTA, the ASEAN investment area, the ASEAN Industrial Cooperation or AICO scheme had spurred the rapid expansion of intra-regional trade and investment, and in turn, our own bilateral economic relations.

One good example is the successful partnership under the AICO scheme of Ford Motors Philippines and the auto alliance of Thailand. This collaboration has resulted in the production of high-quality and affordable vehicles, increased employment for the Philippines and Thailand, minimized duplication of regional resources, and pushed the consolidation of expertise and facilities.

Unquestionably, Thailand is the regional leader in tourism, and much can be learned from your success story. There are also more than 10 million foreign tourists going to Thailand who can be encouraged to include the Philippines in their itinerary.

Last year, when Prime Minister Thaksin visited Manila, we both agreed to undertake closer cooperation in tourism, particularly through a twinning program to promote the Philippines and Thailand as a single destination. The tourism agencies of both countries have laid the groundwork for such a program, starting with — as the prime minister said — a joint advertising campaign. The Prime Minister and I share high expectations for this venture, which is being fueled by the keen efforts of tour operators and travel agents of the Philippines and Thailand. And I'm very happy to note that my minister of tourism, Dick Gordon — who named his grandson after Prime Minister Thaksin — now has the phone number of his counterpart here in Thailand.

but the pursuit of development is not an easy challenge especially now amidst the threat of terrorism. Arrest of suspected terrorists in recent months all over Southeast Asia reveal the presence of terrorist cells all over Southeast Asia. This indicates the need for closer multilateral cooperation in law enforcement and intelligence. The Philippines looks to ASEAN for the keys to regional security.

Just before coming here, as the prime minister recounted, I witnessed the signing in Kuala Lumpur of an agreement on the information exchange and the establishment of communication procedures among the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia. This agreement provides for a sub-regional framework to facilitate cooperation and inter-operability to address border and security incidents, terrorism and transnational crimes, and other illegal activities occurring within the three countries' territories.

Upon Indonesia's recommendation, and my own enthusiastic support as well as Prime Minister Mahathir, we invited Thailand to join us in that agreement. And we are very happy that today, his Excellency the Prime Minister said, he is joining that agreement. Indeed, you are our indispensable ally in regional security as you are our bilateral partner in security for a long time now. In much the same way, greater exchanges between our law enforcement officials and military commanders greatly enhance our efforts to curb crime and terrorism.

We are deeply convinced of the historical validity of ASEAN regionalism. In a world of uncertain security and economic flux, we know that the individual nations of Southeast Asia, even one as large as Indonesia or as economically advanced as Singapore cannot have peace, cannot thrive, cannot hope to prosper, cannot have confidence in the future unless we work together, stand together, pool our resources, share more and more of our interests, trust one another, and increasingly speak as one in the councils of the world.

To the promise and challenge of globalization, to the ebb and flow of economic adversity and opportunity, we subscribe to ASEAN's response — domestic reform, the economic integration of our various economies, indeed, I believe we could add more impetus to our political cooperation not only within ASEAN but also bilaterally.

In much the same way, our targets in AFTA and AIA continued to be met at a rewarding pace, so should target be set towards the region's collective political goals to ensure peace, stability and continued solidarity.

The enhancement of our relations is meant to benefit a greater number of our peoples. In seeking institutional partnerships, we open doors for our peoples to interact, to learn from each other, to understand each other, to live in harmony. It is at this level where kinship is truly achieved and where the success of formal relations should be measured.

In this spirit, I am confident that with continuing solidarity, mutual trust and faithful collaboration, the Philippines and Thailand will reap the rewards of the new millennium.

May I, therefore, ask everyone, ladies and gentlemen, to join me in a toast to the good health and continued success of Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra and the further enhancement of the friendly and mutually beneficial relations between the Philippines and Thailand.

Mabuhay!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Official Dinner hosted by Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra and Madame Khunying Potjaman Shinawatra. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225718/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8303&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Departure Ceremonies for a Working Visit to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia and an Official Visit to Bangkok, Thailand

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Departure Ceremonies for a Working Visit to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia and an Official Visit to Bangkok, Thailand

[Delivered at the VIP Lounge, NAIA Terminal I, Pasay City, May 7, 2002]

Thank you.

Vice President Guingona, other officials, ladies and gentlemen, mga minamahal kong kababayan: ako po ay magtutungo sa Malaysia at Thailand sa isang overnight trip.

The timing is perfect, reinforced by recent events. There is a need for fresh diplomatic initiatives as we push forward in democratic consolidation and internal reforms.

Our regional neighborhood also needs a reinvigorated dialogue on issues of terrorism and poverty. Mapapabuti ang ugnayan ng Pilipinas sa ating dalawang kalapit-bansa sa ASEAN.

I shall use the next two days to put forward the position of the Philippines on trade and security as I seek a meeting of minds that can be of regional and global value.

Ang inyong lingkod ay naimbitahan ni Prime Minister Mahathir na magsalita sa International Government Meeting ng Pacific Basin Economic Council or PBEC. The PBEC is an association of senior business leaders from around the Pacific Basin region. It represents over a thousand companies in 20 economies in the region. These account for over 4 trillion dollars in global sales and employ over 10 million people.

Gagamitin ko ang pagkakataong iyon hindi lamang para hikayatin ang mga negosyante sa Asya-Pasipiko na mamuhunan sa Pilipinas. I shall present before this forum our position on liberalized and equitable trade. I will touch upon the relationship of the war against terrorism and the war against poverty. I will dwell on mechanisms to temper protectionism pursuant to our national interest.

Isusulong ko ang kapakanan ng mga Pilipinong nasa Malaysia. Hihingi tayo ng mas maluwag sa mga awtoridad doon na maging mahinahon sa kanilang deportation process at gawing mahusay at makatao sa undocumented Filipinos. Hihingin ko rin kay Prime Minister Mahathir na patuloy ang pagsuporta ng bansang Malaysia sa peace and development initiatives sa Mindanao.

After four months of negotiations, the trilateral agreement on information exchange and communication procedures will be signed in Kuala Lumpur during my visit. This agreement rallies together our neighbors in ASEAN to jointly address border and security incidents, terrorism and transnational crimes, and other illegal activities.

This agreement was among my proposals at the 7th ASEAN Summit held in Brunei in November 2001. I consider this the Philippines' contribution, together with Malaysia and Indonesia, to the global campaign to combat terrorism.

Sa Thailand, itataguyod ko ang pagsasakatuparan ng mga bilateral agreements na ating nagawa na sa mga nakaraang limang taon, kasama na rin iyung mga ginawa noong dinalaw tayo ni Prime Minister Thaksin sa Pilipinas noong nakaraang Oktubre. Kabilang sa mga tatalakayin namin ang turismo, pangangalakal at counter-terrorism.

Thailand, being the regional leader in tourism, has much to share with the Philippines. I intend to discuss with my counterpart the ways and means for our two countries to step up cooperation in this field.

Makikipag-usap rin ako sa ilang business leaders ng thailand para sa posibleng mamuhunan sa Pilipinas. Ito rin ay magsisilbing isang pagkakataon upang mapakita natin ang ating matapat na hangarin na masulong ang pag-unlad ng Pilipinas at ang kapakanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

There are more than 5,000 Filipinos all over the Kingdom of Thailand, making significant contributions to Thai society as educators, musicians, skilled workers and technical experts.

In times of challenge and opportunity, there is nothing more natural or easier than to look to our neighbors for mutually beneficial arrangements. Ating ipanalangin na sana ay maging matagumpay ang paglalakbay kong ito.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Departure Ceremonies for a Working Visit to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia and an Official Visit to Bangkok, Thailand. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225731/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8306&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during a Meeting with the Filipino Community

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During a Meeting with the Filipino Community

[Delivered at the Ta-Jeen and Mdeklong Ballroom, Oriental Hotel Bangkok, Thailand, May 8, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Reyes sa iyong pagpakilala sa akin. Mabuti ikaw ang piniling nagpakilala sa akin kasi balak ko ring ipakilala sana ikaw sa ating mga kapwa Filipino bilang isa sa mga bayani ng Edsa Dos, si Secretary Angelo Reyes.

Nasabi ko rin ‘yun, sisirain ko muna ang protocol para makilala pa rin ang isa pang bayani ng Edsa Dos, si Former Governor Chavit Singson ng Ilocos Sur.

Ngayon naman mabalik ako sa pagbati naman at pagpapakilala muli kung napakilala na kanina sa ating mga iba’t-ibang mga kasama ko na mga government officials na nagbisita dito sa ating official visit. Una sa lahat, Senator John Osmena, Senator from Cebu and Chairman of the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

Alam po n’yo kagabi, kinikwento ko kay Prime Minister Thaksin iyung ating kasaysayan ng ating bansa, dalawang bansa. Nagbigay ako sa kanya ng isang jar, 16th century jar made in Thailand and found in a wreck off the coast of Zambales, at kinwento na nong 1521, si Pigapetta — iyung sumulat ng diary ng byahe ni Magellan — sinabi n’ya na may mga siamese boats na nagpupunta doon sa Cebu. Kaya mabuti kasama ko ang ating Senator from Cebu dahil s’ya ay isang simbolo ng pagkakasama ng Thailand at Pilipinas for the last many, many centuries.

I would also like to introduce Congresswoman from Quezon City Nanette Castelo-Daza, isa sa pinakabatang Congresswoman sa ating bansa — simbolo ng ating bagong henerasyon, ang 21st century governance ng ating bansa. Nandito rin iyung congressman ng aking probinsya, Congressman Oca Rodriguez. Congressman naman ng probinsya ng aking mister na si Mike Arroyo, Congressman Monico Fuentabella of Negros Occidental. Nandito rin mula sa Mindanao at siya ay nag-iimbita ng mga magdadalo sa Mindanao Business Conference doon sa kanyang probinsya, Governor of Surigao, si Governor Lyndon Barbers. At Mayor din doon sa Cebu, maraming asukal ang Thailand, itong lugar din n’ya ay maraming asukal sa Bogo, Cebu, si Mayor Celestino Martinez III.

Of course, I would like to congratulate Sonia Brady, your new Ambassador; and though you’ve only known her for 10 days which means you haven’t really known her at all, I would like to let you know that if you have five star generals in the military, you have five star ambassadors in the foreign service and she is one of them.

Kanina nakilala ninyo yata si Secretary Dick Gordon ng Tourism; si Secretary Cito Lorenzo na tumutulong sa akin na makahanap ng isang milyong trabaho sa agrikultura; si Secretary Lito Sarmiento na tumutulong sa akin na modernize ang ating agrikultura; si Secretary Yongyong Afable, marami s’yang pwestong hawak sa aking gobyerno — Press Secretary, Spokesman, Head of the PMS, ... And our Senior Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs, si Larry Baja. At gusto ko ring batiin iyung mga taga-Philippine Embassy dahil marami kayong trabahong ginawa paghahanda sa biyaheng ito.

At gusto ko ring batiin iyung iba’t-ibang mga pilipino na naririto kung pwedeng banggitin ko iyung mga pangalan ng iba’t-ibang mga lider na nag-organize nitong affair na ito — si Ginoong Alvin Nadal, ang pangulo ng Association of Filipinos in Thailand. Batang-bata pa, naalala ko tuloy iyung mga predecessors mo dito, mga Filipino community leaders noon, nandoon noong araw, nandito ba si Roy Navarro? Sila Roy Navarro, sila Ramon del Rosario, iyun ang mga nandito noong araw, noong generation ko and afterwards. Ngayon another young man here; si Ms. Victoria ..., ang pangulo ng Association of Changmai — Changmai ang bayan ni Prime Minister Thaksin; si Art Nieva sa Pataya; si Neil Batea sa Phuket; si Bernadette Reyes ..., ang pangulo ng Ladies Group; si Jess Ballesteros ng

Filipino Golfers Club, si Aureo Dacanay ng Bowlers League; si Camila Jose-Lim ng Tennis Association; Roy Velario ng Filipino Association ng Asian Institute of Technology, kung saan din yata nandoon iyung ama ng ating speaker kanina, hindi ba? Si ka Dante, your father is also from AIT? Yes. So, I would like to greet also our young man ka Dante who has not forgotten the Philippine root; si Lolita Pamaran sa teachers group; si Father Allan ng religious sector — kasama na sa religious sector iyung mga madre ng Assumption, nandiyan sila, si Sister Stella, how nice to see you; si Lita Tuason, iyong musicians group — sila ang pioneer overseas Filipinos sa buong mundo, 1950s, 1960s, nandito na sila. At iyung Filipino staff ng iba't-ibang organs ng United Nations based dito sa Bangkok, binabati ko rin kayong lahat.

Kaya sa inyong lahat, magandang umaga.

At napakasaya akong magkaroon ng pagkakataon na makasama kayo ngayon, dito sa aking kauna-unang pagkakataon na magbisita sa Thailand bilang pangulo ng Pilipinas.

And as we have been told earlier by Ambassador Brady, we have more than 5,000 Filipinos all over the Kingdom of Thailand. And many of you consider Thailand your second home and you make significant contributions to the Thai society but you also make significant contributions to the Philippine economy. Filipino educators — kaya meron tayong education association dito — Filipino educators abound in many Thai schools and institutions of higher learning. Iyun ngang ama ni ka Dante ay nandoon sa AIT. Dito sa aking pagbyahe ngayon, iyung Secretary of Health ay lumaki raw sa Filipino teachers sa kanyang eskwelahan sa St. Joseph.

And Filipino musicians have been proud to work with Thai entertainers. Sabi ko nga kay Prime Minister Thaksin kagabi, marami kaming mga Filipino musicians dito. He said, “yes”. Sabi n’ya sa lahat ng mga magagaling na hotels and clubs nandoon ang mga Filipino. Sabi ko sila ang aming original OFWs. Sabi ko, oo, and he said, “yes, and many of them have in fact already decided to live here.” meron pa s’yang binanggit, Tony Aguilar, sabi n’ya na dito at iyung anak raw n’ya ay isang kilalang-kilalang musician din.

Our own business executives are well positioned in prestigious companies. Binanggit ko nga iyung mga kilala ko sa mga nakaraan, sina Roy Navarro at saka Ramon del Rosario, but I know that there are many Roy Navarros and Ramon del Rosarios in this generation of Filipinos in Thailand. Filipino experts help man the organs of the United Nations and other international organizations. Filipino religious missionaries run charity homes for the underprivileged and also teach the young.

Our own technical people and social development workers are respected in your own fields of specialization.

So, we may not be the largest expatriate community in Thailand, but we certainly have one of the most productive foreign groups in the kingdom. Kaya, Congratulations sa inyong lahat.

Bilang mga professionals, malamang wala kayong masyadong problema bilang OFW, so to speak. But nonetheless, I am aware that there are still certain difficulties experienced by some of our people here.

And I am counting on our embassy, especially our new ambassador to Thailand, Sonia Brady, who was, I said, is one of the best ambassadors in our foreign service today, to provide you with the appropriate assistance so that our Filipino workers, particularly our world-class musicians, will be accorded sympathy and understanding, the sympathy and understanding that you deserve by the Thai government.

At the same time, I am glad to learn that the various Filipino associations who organized this affair have done a great deal to build the Filipino community spirit in Thailand. I think, the fact that a young man who came to Thailand when he was about three years old still feels Filipino today can be attributed to the fact that the Filipino community remains a community.

And bilang inyong pangulo, sa ngalan ng lahat ng inyong kababayan sa Pilipinas, pinupuri ko kayo sapagkat sa pamamagitan ng inyong husay sa pagtatrabaho, inaangat ninyo ang pagkatao ng sambayanang Pilipino. Napamalas ninyo sa mundo na ang Pilipino ay dapat ipagmalaki at hangaan.

Sa buong daigdig, nararamdaman ng mga bansa, ng mga may puhunan at mga magulang ang malaking tulong ng mga Pilipino, ng mga dakilang manggagawang Pilipino maging trabaho ninyo ay nasa hotel, nasa pabrika o nasa opisina. Kaya nalalagay sa isip ng mga dayuhan ng buong mundo na ang Pilipinas ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Tinatanaw ng pamahalaan ng Pilipinas at ng taong-bayan ng Pilipinas na nasa Pilipinas ang kontribusyon ng overseas Filipinos sa ekonomiya at kabuhayan ng pambansa.

Sa inyong malaking tulong nagpapasigla sa ekonomiya at nagtutulong sa kaunlaran ng bansa.

Sa ibabaw ng magandang reputasyon na binibigay ninyo sa ating bansa bilang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino, milyung-milyong kabataan ang nag-aaral o nagtatapos ng edukasyon sa inyong tulong.

Gaya ng sabi ni ka Dante, sana bawat Pilipino ay nag-aaral. At totoo 'yun, sinisikap nga natin na, kasi libre yung grade school, high school pero nagbabayad ng miscellaneous fees, sinisikap nating matanggal yung miscellaneous fees; at may mga barangay, 1,600, na wala pang paaralan so kahit na libre wala namang paaralan, mahirap mag-aral naman 'pag walang paaralan. Nagtatayo ng mga paaralan doon.

But in the meantime when we're trying to do all this, nagpapasalamat ang mga Pilipino doon dahil sa tulong ng overseas Filipinos, maraming nakakapag-aral.

At libu-libong bagong bahay ang napapatayo at nagkakaroon ng bagong buhay tuloy iyung nagpapatayo ng bagong bahay dahil marami sa pinapadala ninyo ay ginagamit din pangtayo ng bahay.

Dahil sa inyong tulong ay nakapaglunsad tayo ng maraming negosyo — maging small business sa buong bansa — dahil marami sa pinapauwi ninyong pera ay ginagamit na puhunan ng inyong mga kamag-anak. At ang matagumpay na negosyo na napapatayo sa ating bansa dahil sa inyong remittances ay isang malaking haligi ng ating ekonomiya.

Alam n'yo, halimbawa, meron tayong tinatawag na human development index. Yan ay sukat ng hindi lang economic development kung hindi human development na nga — nandoon yung literacy rate, per capita income at saka yung longevity rate. Nira-ranking natin iyung mga probinsya ng Pilipinas in terms of human development. At well, not surprisingly, iyung mga probinsya ng Central Luzon kagaya ng pampanga at saka Bulacan, nandoon, siyempre maraming industriya; iyung mga probinsya ng Calabarzon ay nandoon, siyempre maraming industriya — Cavite, Laguna, Batangas. Ngunit nakakagulat kasama doon yung Ilocos Norte, yung Abra. At tinanong bakit? Kasi iyung pinanggagalingan ng mga nakakapag-aral, malusog dahil sapat ang pagkain at mataas ang income ay yung overseas Filipinos. Kaya 'pag ang isang lugar ay maraming overseas Pilipino na tiga-roon, mataas ang kanilang human development index.

Sumigla ang maraming barangay, bayan, lungsod at probinsiya sa kontribusyon ng mga overseas Filipinos. At marami doon, nagpatayo na ng negosyo, naging maganda ang economic activity. Doon nga sa laoag, 29 banks ang nandoon sa dami ng mga remittances ng mga Ilokanong overseas. Kaya ang Laoag ay net lender — maraming pumapasok na deposit, marami namang humihiram doon pinapahiram sa ilang ibang lugar.

Kaya, ito ang bunga ng trabaho ng dakilang manggagawang pilipino na taun-taon nagpapadala ng six billion dollars sa Pilipinas. Biro n'yo pinakamalaking investments sa Pilipinas, foreign investment, ay five billion dollars — iyung Shell sa Malampaya. Ay yung Filipinos, six billion ang pinapadala so every year, you give, you send to the Philippines, you invest in the Philippines more than the biggest single foreign investor in our country. Kaya kayo ay major economic investors sa ating bansa.

Karaniwan ang tawag sa Pilipinong nasa ibang bansa ay overseas workers. Palagay ko dahil sa mga nakwento ko mas bagay na ang dapat itawag sa overseas Filipinos ay hindi overseas Filipino workers kung hindi overseas Filipino investors dahil hindi ninyo nakakalimutan mag-invest sa ating bansa.

Kayo ay mga overseas investors na araw-araw namumuhunan sa kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Pinupuhunan ninyo ang inyong “productive years” alang-alang sa ating bayan. Kaya saludo ako, saludo ang kapwa Pilipino n’yo sa inyo.

At dapat lamang suklian ng bansa ang inyong tulong.

Sa aking State of the Nation Address noong isang taon, July, sinabi ko na isang malaking prayoridad ng ating gobyerno ang pagpasa ng absentee voting bill para sa ganoon ang mga overseas Filipinos ay mabigyang kapangyarihan na makaboto at makapili ng mga mamumuno sa ating pamahalaan. Kakapirma ko lang ang certification as urgent ng panukalang batas na ito. Pinirma ko ito as urgent dahil nakatapos na sa second reading sa House of Representatives. Kaya panahon na magpirma as urgent kaya samahan ninyo akong magdasal para pumasa na ito at maging batas na.

The Philippine economy will, for the foreseeable future, continue to be heavily dependent on overseas-worker remittances. Isang bansang kasing-unlad na nauna sa ating umunlad noong 1970s, sila rin marami silang overseas Thai workers.

Gaya ng sabi ni ka Dante, pitong milyong pilipino ang nagtatrabaho sa ibayong dagat. And so, on the basis of this and of the nation’s humanitarian responsibilities to its people wherever you are, our government is working doubly hard to strengthen overseas Filipino workers’ protection.

For instance, the Department of Foreign affairs is floating “Bagong Bayani Bonds.” have you done that already, Larry? To support a new package of high socio-economic benefits to OFWs. And the “Bagong Bayani Bonds” will raise funds to enable you, the overseas Filipinos, to mobilize your savings to be invested in various projects like housing programs back home. Ito ang isang dahilan kung bakit tinanggap ko yung panukala ni Vice President Tito Guingona na gawin kong Undersecretary for Economic Affairs ng DFA si Sixto Roxas — na kayo na maraming mga financial executive dito, kilala n’yo si Sixto Roxas, iyung nag-establish ng investment banking sa ating bansa. Later on in his retirement from government, he did many bond floatations for local government units. Kaya, ito siguro mapapairal niya itong ating bond for OFWs.

We also have a housing program for overseas Filipinos under the Housing and Urban Developing Coordinating Douncil. This is part of our goal to provide 100,000 housing units a year for workers, and these workers need not be workers working in the Philippines but workers working abroad because you send houses, money for houses for your folks back home.

We have also scrapped the requirement for overseas Filipinos to file an income tax information sheet, and with that we have lifted the penalty for non-filing.

We strengthen bilateral relationships with countries hosting large numbers of Filipinos. Kasama na rito ang Thailand.

Tonight, in fact, I will have an audience with his Majesty the King of Thailand. The first time I met His Majesty was when I was still a teenager, when my late father, President Diosdado Macapagal, hosted the King and Queen during their Majesty’s State Visit to Manila in 1963.

In my State of the Nation Address last year, I cited the serious challenges facing the Philippines.

The economy I inherited was very well described by our young man ka Dante — stark and daunting. At that time, when I became president I inherited four million jobless Filipinos. And this four million meant a rise in poverty incidence to 40 percent of the population. The budget I inherited was a budget that threatened to balloon to 225 billion pesos. And so I thought, how daunting. We need to have common sense to address this.

Trabaho. Edukasyon. Sariling tahanan. Pagkain sa bawat mesa. This was, and is, in common sense and plain talk, the core of my vision.

I also urged everyone listening to my State of the Nation Address to set aside bickering and politicking for at least one year. Sa halip ng alitan, hiningi kong isang taon tayong magtulungan sa ikabubuti ng taong-bayan. Dahil kung araw-araw, kahit na ano na lang, dakdak nang dakdak ay yun ang sinusulat sa peryodiko, ang peryodiko naman sa Pilipinas ay English language, eh di syempre naaabot sa international television.

To succeed, our national agenda must revolve around four components — apat na elemento ng pakikibaka sa kahirapan.

The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. Pagnenegosyo upang dumami ang trabaho.

The second is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. At para nga doon, meron akong presidential adviser na nago-oversee ng iba't-ibang mga ahensyang may kinalaman sa agricultural modernization, at iyun na nga ay si Lito Sarmiento. Palalaguin ang kita at ani ng maralitang tagabukid.

The third component is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. Pagkalinga sa mga bahagi ng lipunan na naiwan ng kaunlaran.

And the fourth component is to raise the moral standards of government and society. Moralidad sa gobyerno at lipunan bilang saligan ng tunay na kaunlaran.

Difficult and daunting as was the economy I inherited. The New York incident further changed the global mood. World business conditions became more uncertain.

But despite the stark economy that I inherited, and the uncertain world business conditions, in 2001, the first year of my administration, we made progress.

After more than a year, our efforts have not yet paid off but they are starting to pay off: growth is respectable — 3.7 percent GNP growth rate in a sea of economies with negative growth; inflation is at its lowest in the last 15 years; presyo ng bigas hindi nagpapalit; presyo ng pasahe, hindi nagpapalit; presyo ng galunggong, hindi nagpapalit. Kaya tinitingnan natin yung presyo ng mga bilinging pinaka-importante sa karaniwang taong-bayan. And watching all of that has helped bring the inflation to 3.6 percent, lowest in 15 years.

Unemployment, well I inherited four million unemployed. In the past year, we are able to give to job 1.5 million additional Filipinos. So, that our unemployment rate went down from 11.3 percent to 10.3 percent — still at daunting number as far as I'm concern. That's why I said, it starting to pay-off, I hasn't paid-off because if you still have 10.3 percent unemployment that's still very big.

Interest rates are at their lowest in history; the peso is stable. Usually a struggling economy must choose between a stable currency and low interest rates. Like if it wants to stabilize its currency like for instance in the previous administration 56 pesos to the dollars and yet interest rates are going, what, 36%? That the administration tried to fight one or the other last year, they decided that they would work on stabilizing the peso, so they raised the interest rates sky high, they still couldn't stabilize the peso. On the other hand, there are administrations where you seek to reduce interest rates, but that means you need to let the exchange rate run away. But not in the Philippines today. We have a stable exchange rate and low interest rates. This combination is bedrock evidence of sound economic fundamentals and a correct economic policy.

We achieved this, among other things, by putting our fiscal house in order. And as a result, our credit ratings are improving.

NEXI, JBIC, the World Bank, the IMF, the ADB, J.P. Morgan, Goldman Sachs, Fitch, Moodys, and Standard and Poors have all endorsed our economic fundamentals, and our international credit rating has been upgraded from negative to stable. This is being reflected in the international capital market, where the spreads in the market for our issues are growing narrower and narrower by the day. But of course there are still many daunting challenges ahead.

What are our growth sectors for the future? I have identified tourism as one of the industries that can create tremendous opportunities for our economic recovery. You have seen that here in Thailand. In 1997 when Thailand was afflicted in a crisis that spread throughout the other parts of the region, how did Thailand strategize its recovery? By pushing tourism and it succeeded. We are determined to get a share of Thailand's tourist arrivals that peaked at almost 10 million last year. The challenge is how to convince these visitors coming to Thailand to fly another three hours eastward to gain an experience of Filipino hospitality.

We have already started the work in this direction. Dick has been talking about it: we have engaged Thailand in a "twinning program," in which the two countries will be promoted as a single tourist destination to markets in Europe, the Americas, and Oceania. The Philippine Department of Tourism and the Tourism Authority of Thailand have produced posters and brochures that jointly promote the two countries. Philippine and Thai travel agents and tour operators have also agreed — and they will be signing today — on marketing strategies that will maximize the potential benefits from the program.

Nananawagan din ako sa inyong lahat na sumali at makibahagi sa tourism "Volunteer 12" program kung saan ang mga Pilipino sa ibayong dagat ay hinihikayat na magpapunta ng isang turista sa Pilipinas.

I encourage all of you to be our ambassadors of goodwill and to maintain our friendly relations with the Thai government and the Thai people.

The days and months ahead will still be filled with daunting challenges. All these beautiful things that the international credit rating agencies have been saying about us, all of this lowering of the interest rate, lowering of the inflation rate, decent growth rate, stable peso, all of this must be translated into more jobs, more food, more schooling for our people. But I do not fear as long as I have your support.

Kaya muli, salamat na mapapagmalaki kayo ng Pilipinas sa mga kontribusyong ginagawa ninyo sa Thai society. Salamat din na habang nagko-contribute kayo sa Thai society, tuloy pa ninyong pinapaangat ang ekonomiya ng ating bansang Pilipinas. Ipagpatuloy po ninyo ito sana dahil kailangan ko kayo.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

*Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during a Meeting with the Filipino Community. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225639/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8299&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Philippines-Thailand Business Luncheon Speech
of

Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Philippines-Thailand Business Luncheon

[Delivered at the Chaophya and Ta-Jeen Ballrooms, Oriental Hotel Bangkok, Thailand, May 8, 2002]

Thank you very much, Secretary Roxas.

Chairman Chartsiri Sophonpanich – I would like to greet you and also to convey to you our condolence on the passing away of your mother two weeks ago; Dr. Ayspat Thaonalonda, Chairman of the Board of Trade of Thailand; Mr. Prakaspesat, Vice chair of the Federation of Thai Industries; Dr. Weng Pittaya, Chairman of the Thai-RP Business Council; other members of the organizations comprising the joint standing committee on commerce, industry and banking; members of the Filipino community in Thailand; Ambassador Brady; members of the Philippine delegation; distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen:

I thank the joint standing committee for commerce, industry and banking composed of the Thai Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of Thai Industries and the Thai Bankers Association, and the Thailand- Philippines Business Council for organizing this luncheon in cooperation with our Embassy in Bangkok.

This is the second day of my official visit to your beautiful country. And indeed, I see an amazing Thailand, not just your warm hospitality but also in the steady pace of your economic recovery.

It is an opportune time to push forward the partnership which our two countries began formally more than 50 years ago, but which has been there for centuries now. Some 40 years ago, my father, then President Diosdado Macapagal, was host to the state visit to the Philippines of their Majesties the King and Queen of Thailand. And some 35 years ago, Thailand and the Philippines helped create ASEAN, an institution that sustains our time-honored partnership in promoting peace and prosperity in the region.

There is much we can do together as ASEAN brethren and as bilateral partners. I hope that this business forum has been catalyzing our collaboration in trade and business.

We derive strength from the common experience of hurdling the Asian financial crisis. And I am happy that last April 4th, 2002, standard and poor's — the last to do so because many other had done it before standard and poor's — revised the rating of the Philippine economy from negative to stable. According to standard and poor's, improved economic management under my administration has brought economic coherence and urgency to economic policies, and has led to higher investor confidence and higher GDP growth prospects.

Indeed, I would like to say in all candor, that under my administration, our country's political and economic priorities have been clearly defined.

When I became president last year, I declared before the Filipino people and before the world our determination to win the war against poverty within the decade.

To win our war against poverty, we have steered our national agenda along four paths: first, an economic philosophy of transparency and free enterprise; second, a modern agricultural sector founded on social equity to extend opportunities to the rural countryside; third, a social bias towards the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan; and fourth, higher moral standards in government and in society.

Our department of trade and industry has identified, through its annual investment priorities plan, a fairly extensive list of growth areas and priorities open to investors and eligible for incentives. Among the most promising is the information and communications technology sector. And I'm glad that today, we signed two agreements regarding that.

There are indeed new opportunities in this field, combined with our ready pool of highly-skilled English-speaking ICT professionals having gained ground for us as a choice location for I.T. and E-commerce ventures including specialized operations such as backroom facilities and call centers.

We have also opened up the retail trade sector to allow 100 percent foreign ownership depending on paid-up capital. Some of our bigger local retailers are also open to entering into joint ventures with foreign partners.

Infrastructure projects under our liberalized build-operate-and-transfer scheme and its variations, and the privatization of government corporations, also provide new opportunities for investors to take part in the Philippines' growth.

Our agricultural modernization plans offer another investment area for Thai businessmen who have been modernizing Thailand's agriculture for many years now. Business partnerships in tourism are also very much welcome, as we know that Thailand is the undisputed leader in tourism in Asia.

Equally important to us is the need to further enhance our trade relations. One of the pillars of foreign policy in my administration is that more and more foreign policy decisions have to be made in the context of ASEAN. Logically, therefore, this leads to more and more business activities and decisions being done in the context of AFTA.

AFTA provides the impetus to growing intra-ASEAN trade. And I am impressed at the pace of bureaucratic reforms under AFTA and also under the various partners within AFTA including and especially the administration of Prime Minister Thaksin.

We have a program of bureaucratic reforms similar to that being undertaken by His Excellency the Prime Minister of Thailand. These reforms strictly define the role of government where business is concerned. To spur enterprise,

We follow a principle of facilitation rather than intervention, enabling rather than interfering.

We have taken concrete steps to increase transparency and reduce, if not eliminate, red tape within government. I have tasked all government agencies to undertake institutional and procedural reforms to speed up the delivery of essential frontline public services. Graft and corruption in high places certainly have no room in our government, and we seek to spread the ethic of public morality in all levels of government.

With systematic resolve, we are meeting the challenge of improving peace and order. We are determined to provide a safe environment not only for our citizens but also for investors, tourists and all visitors. We are carrying on our fight against terrorism and are working closely with foreign governments in this campaign. This is coupled with an aggressive program to uplift economic conditions in conflict-affected areas.

I would like you to know that under my administration, we will continue to join Thailand in maximizing the opportunities that abound within the ASEAN investment area and the ASEAN free trade area.

Thailand is an important participant in our country's economy. In the year 2001, Thailand was second only to Singapore among ASEAN countries as a trading partner of the Philippines. We buy the bulk of our sugar and rice from Thailand whenever there is a need to import these produce. And I am very happy that I witnessed today a memorandum of agreement whereby there will be a joint venture or a Thai investment in sugar corporation in the central part of the Philippines, in Negros oriental.

Over the past several years, we have seen tremendous growth in our trade coming from the electronics sector, of which we are both part of the international supply chain. A new source of growth is the automotive sector, where alliances and collaboration can be expanded. In fact, Pprime Minister Thaksin and I talked about this last night because we have the AICO-Ford scheme, but Prime Minister Thaksin said that there are many other opportunities in the automotive sector where we can do this kind of joint venture.

We must continue to sustain our competitive edge through ASEAN value-added complementation — well, that's a more accurate term, complementation, rather than joint venture in this case. Abundant opportunities exist in a diverse range of trade arrangements, marketing tie-ups, joint ventures, integrated production and as i said earlier, AICO schemes, and cross investments.

Let us take a closer look at the future focus of our partnerships. One is agriculture and food production, where Thailand is a giant.

We have a history of interdependence in agriculture. Quite a number of Thai agriculturists have studied in our agricultural colleges such as the university of the Philippines in Los Baños. And as I said earlier, in the last few years, we have turned to Thailand for rice and sugar imports when we experience shortages in domestic production.

Today, I invite Thai and Philippine businessmen to explore the opportunities of complementation and cooperation within the entire farm-to-market agricultural chain. As my adviser for one million jobs, Secretary Lorenzo calls it, the chain from soil-to-shelf.

As we explore more cooperation in the food sector, i encourage the concerned agencies in our two governments to work together towards mutual recognition of standards and regulations to reduce non-tariff obstacles to trade.

Another area, is for I have mentioned, is industrial complementation.

We must examine higher value-added economic activities where we can benefit from each other's competitive advantage and optimize what each can offer. Already, we see this happening in the electronics and, as I said, automotive sectors, which have benefited largely from the AICO scheme.

We must also strengthen partnerships in ICT, as we have done today in the two agreements.

I urge you to look at the Philippines for outsourcing opportunities in five main areas where we have found we have competitive advantage — call center services, software development, medical transcription, business process outsourcing and animation. Filipino expertise in animation may be tapped to add value to your films, advertisements and educational materials. We must explore collaboration to meet the dramatic surge in the popularity of animation over the last decade, both in the traditional media as well as through the internet.

I also look forward to expanding our cooperation — of course, in the area where you are also giant — the area of tourism. Thailand's leadership position in tourism is given and highly admirable. At the government level, I am very pleased that the Philippine Department of Tourism and the Philippine Tourism Authority of Thailand have begun to jointly produce tourism promotion materials. The parallel effort by our private sectors — as shown here this noon — to undertake joint marketing efforts and to promote joint tourism packages, are certainly timely and appropriate.

Years from now, maybe a decade from now when joint tours to Thailand and the Philippines have become part of the regular tourism scene, we will remember it all started when our Secretary of Tourism named his grandson after the Prime Minister of Thailand, Prime Minister Thaksin.

The idea makes good sense. We do have attractions that can complement each other, and tourists would enjoy visiting both countries in one trip especially when they come from such far away places as Europe, America, Oceania. We also share a special pride in our heritage, in our cuisine, in our natural attractions, and in the warmth and hospitality of our people.

I am also pleased to add that the World Tourism Organization has declared year 2003 as "Visit the Philippines Year." but please don't wait until 2003, I am inviting all of you to visit the Philippines now. And better still, I am inviting you, who have made Thailand the leader of tourism in Asia, to go to the Philippines and invest in tourist facilities that even now are always fully booked and there will be plenty of tourist next year to make even the additional facilities fully booked.

I understand that when Thailand was declared... I understand that during the year when it was declared as "Visit Thailand Year" that was the time when Thailand experienced its greatest jump in tourist arrivals. So, please come and take advantage of the potential because you know how to run a tourist sector. Please invest in the Philippine tourism industry as well. And I invite you to get to know the Philippines better. There is much more we can do together. Let us continue to seek partnerships in education, in trade promotion, in research and development.

I invite you to explore more extensively the opportunities in the Philippines. I invite you to invest in our country. I invite you to sustain our partnership with the rest of ASEAN in meeting the challenges and tapping into the potentials of the new global economy.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Philippines-Thailand Business Luncheon. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225622/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8291&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Launching Ceremony of ABS-CBN News Channel (ANC) Business Night

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Launching Ceremony of ABS-CBN News Channel (ANC) Business Night

[Delivered at the Shangri-la Hotel Manila, Makati City, May 9, 2002]

Thank you very much, Oscar.

I would like to greet also Gabby and to congratulate him for this launching. I'd like to greet Senate President Franklin Drilon and the other government officials who are here tonight together with the Governor of the Central Bank, Paeng Buenaventura, Mayor Sonny Belmonte and adviser Cito Lorenzo. I'd like to congratulate also Freddie Garcia and the other managers of ABS-CBN and ANC. To the pledgers, thank you very much for your pledge. And to all of you, ladies and gentlemen.

This is a good night for us to be here together. I congratulate ANC for its work. I watch you every night, all night. In fact, I wander into my sleep tuned in to your channel, but since I'm a light sleeper I suddenly wake up when something alarming from your channel manages to wade through my dreams. And since I leave my TV set on all night, I wake up to the sound of your early morning news.

And tonight, bringing the business community here marks the solid relevance of the network in strengthening national consensus on our economic directions. We are partners in this quest.

Having just arrived this dawn from an overnight trip to Kuala Lumpur and Bangkok, I am very proud to say that confidence in our country is growing. Business potentials abound in our regional neighborhood reinforced by deepening security alliances. That is as far as the discerning businessmen are concerned.

But when I was in Thailand, a young boy, fourteen years old — could have been living in Thailand since he was three years old. Filipino but living in Thailand since he was three — said that he wants to think the best about the Philippines. He has fond though vague memories of the Philippines but he gets disturbed when he watches TV and all he sees about that country that he has not seen in the last eight years or eleven years is negative. That really shows how important it is to have good news.

And tonight, I would like to take this opportunity to dwell on issues that are close to the ground, so to speak, because we need to move forward on a number of vital fronts, foremost of which is the fight against poverty. We need to focus on this challenge. It is the key to our political stability and economic prosperity. And it is important that this focus on the fight against poverty be also conveyed to the watching public.

When I became president last year, I said that we want to win the battle against poverty within the decade. This commitment stands, and it is anchored on a comprehensive medium-term Philippine development plan. The plan revolves around four major components already familiar to those of you who have followed my pronouncements throughout the year: an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity; a social bias toward the disadvantaged; and elevating moral standards of government and society.

This plan is fleshed out in real, visible and measurable targets, most of which are contained in my first state of the nation address before congress last year. These targets are measurable and also they can be mediagenic if you make them so in ANC Business News.

On my part, as I look at the targets and I look at the accomplishments, I am generally satisfied with the accomplishments of these targets. And it is important, however, that the people be satisfied with them. If only the people could be made aware of these hard facts and figures. Of the 55 items that I targeted to do last July — twelve have already been fully accomplished with three months to spare; 34 are on schedule; nine targets are behind schedule, but Secretary Bert Romulo is working closely with the department heads involved to make sure that they catch up. All in all, therefore, we are about 85 percent done. We will move forward substantially till the next SONA in July this year.

But let me mention a few accomplishments so as to give you some ideas of what you can feature in some of your shows in ANC Business News.

Economic growth last year created more than a million-and-a-half jobs, reducing both unemployment and underemployment, and exceeding the targets in our plan. I wish some of those new job holders could be featured in ANC Business News. As of January, unemployment was 10.3 percent—one percent lower than a year ago — but I still think the 10.3 percent is too high, but then “Rome was not built in a day.” and it can’t be built any faster if there are always those who seek to tear it down.

While the economies of many of our neighbors and trading partners suffered declines last year, ours posted a 3.7 percent growth in GNP. This is one of the highest output growth rates in east and Southeast Asia. But sometimes I get interviewed by international media who assumed that we are growing slower than some of the other traditional high flyers. Until I point out to them the respective figures. Maybe I would’ve had to point out to them the relative figures if they saw it on ANC Business News.

Inflation was contained at 6.1 percent last year. And inflation for the first quarter of this year was even lower, at 3.6 percent. This shows that last year was not a fluke but a result of effective inflation management.

So, for those who keep saying, “tumataas ng tumataas ang presyo.” I wish they would answer, “alin?” because if you look at the price of rice, it’s the same. If you look at the price of galunggong, it’s the same. If you look at the price of medicines, it’s lower. So, what are we talking about. But then, well, I hope that when we have good news now, we won’t have those sweeping statements that really cannot be back-up by facts and figures.

Interest rates are at record lows, and hopefully with enthusiastic response from the business community, this low interest rates can translate to further increase in economic activities. But as far as interest rates are concerned, there was a saying, there is a saying that I learned from one of my textbooks in economics 101 — “you can lead a horse to water, but you can’t force it to drink.” that is what monetary policy is all about. With our low interest rates, we have brought the horse to water — that’s the business community. But to make them drink, they’ve got to feel that there is good news in the economy.

The peso has remained stable relative to the dollar. This week, as you all know, the peso breached the psychological barrier of 50 pesos to the dollar for the first time in thirteen months, a far cry from the 56 pesos to the dollar that rocked the period just before I became president.

The budget deficit was limited to a 140 billion pesos last year. This year, we will continue to exercise fiscal discipline because it was the main detail cited by the international credit rating agencies for our early graduation from negative to stable.

If last year’s growth had been consumption-led, it would not have been sustainable. But it was not consumption-led, rather it was investment-led, giving it the prospect of sustainability. What can I cite to prove it was investment-led — gross domestic capital formation increased by 4.3 percent last year compared to only 2.3 percent the year before.

I hope to stimulate big chunks of capital formation coming from getting major business projects going like the National Steel Corporation and housing projects, by reducing red tape and bottlenecks. And by getting specific big ticket infrastructure projects going like the LRT-3. That is why Oscar Lopez and all of the Benpres people I hope will be patient with me when everytime I see them I asked them, “when are you going to start the Northluzon Expressway?”

We have stabilized the domestic political situation while continuing to mop up residual problems of law and order. We are putting in an additional 200 million pesos into an effort to bolster our capability against kidnapping and terrorism. We will set up more operational teams exclusively focused in this threat. We shall back up these teams with better surveillance equipment. Peace and order is essential to economic development. But it is also important that we give the good news the same attention as the bad news.

For instance, when Abu Muslim bombed General Santos, you saw all the big headlines for days and hours on end. But when Abu Muslim was arrested with all the evidence, where were all those headlines.

The decisiveness by which we are continuing to enforce the rule of law is only matched by our consistency and unswerving determination to keep the economy on track.

I targeted 20 billion pesos a year for agriculture and fisheries modernization but in actual terms last year, 26 billion pesos was spent. Last year and this year, we have allocated another 26 billion pesos.

Mr. Henry Lim and Cito Lorenzo were here to show the ‘Gloria rice.’ behind that ‘Gloria rice’ is a lot of hybrid dispersal, a lot of training, a lot of loans, a lot of soil analysis, behind that is 450 million pesos to bring productivity to our farmers. And this is only the second phase of what we did last year. Last year, we distributed other kinds of certified seeds, increase our produce by 300,000 metric tones of rice. And that is why the price of rice has remain stable. We met Mr. Romeo Vasquez — movie star-looking farmer from Isabela — and his fellow farmers in Isabela when I went to Cagayan Valley last week, thank me because even as the consumer is feeling the same stable prices of rice in the consumer market the farmers are receiving higher prices for their palay farm gate. This is good news. And I wish that what they had said, what they said could have been covered by ANC Business News.

I targeted shelter security for 150,000 urban poor families and a 100,000 rural farming families, and we have accomplished more than that already. More than 34,000 low-salaried workers have already been given financial assistance for their housing needs. But i want to bring that up to 100,000 in the next three months. I would wish and i do hope that the conduit banks for housing would be more aggressive in bringing the government funds which are available for housing through their system into the hands of the home builders. But why aren’t they doing it — because they’re feeling timid; because they’re lacking confidence; napaso na sa nakaraan. They need good news to become more aggressive again.

We have exceeded our target for health insurance coverage for the urban poor by almost threefold. We targetted 500,000 beneficiaries; we’ve already enrolled more than 1,475,000 in the urban areas. And we have done even more for the rural poor — more than 1,722,000 have already been enrolled, bringing a total of more than 3 million persons or 600,000 families into the health insurance scheme. At this pace, we will achieve universal coverage for the poor within the decade. And the government will pay for a big chunk of their medical bills.

The same prospect is true for land reform. We have distributed more than a 100,000 hectares of private land that we have targetted. And at this pace, we will achieve universal land reform within the decade. If every member of the poor has health insurance, and if every tenant farmer now has land that he can till and call his own. These two indicators show indeed, that we are complying with the targets that are needed to win the battle against poverty within the decade.

We have moved towards greater transparency in awarding contracts. These have to be bidded out rather than negotiated. We have computerized the bidding in public works. We have exceeded the target set for the number of agencies to be registered under the electronic procurement system. The result from all these — honest and faster contract awards.

We have infused in government, to a great degree, common sense, discipline, and accountability in management and public service. And civil society is in the loop. Private sector groups have set up procurement watch, which has been sanctioned to check the integrity of government purchases.

There is also the report card survey project which periodically measures public attitudes towards the delivery of services. There is the tax watch which monitors the internal revenue service. And there are the volunteers against crime and corruption which monitor the transactions of the department of public works and highways and other agencies.

But we have much, much more to do to enable the poor to catch up. And we can't do all that work if we have all these crabs bringing us down.

Leaders from all over the world are one in saying that in resolving poverty needs the combined resources of the entire planet to succeed. A global alliance can be forged to wage war against poverty.

This alliance against poverty can be seen in ASEAN. We are working within ASEAN to integrate and expand the regional market, so that our products and the products of those who invest in our country will cater to a regional market of half-a-billion people.

We are seeking, by ourselves and with our ASEAN partners, to strengthen and deepen our economic ties with countries and groups of countries beyond ASEAN — China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, India, the United States, the European Union. We are part of the global effort to build a liberal but equitable trading system.

In this great endeavor to win the war against poverty, every little thing helps. I am glad that ANC Business News represents those in media who have heard my call and are taking the challenge of responsibly influencing and inspiring people to improve their lives and help in the development of the economy.

I want to take this opportunity again to tell everyone that we should set aside divisive politics and focus our energies on freeing our people from the bondage of poverty.

I also call on our business people to add a social dimension to their usual bottomline concerns. I urge you to create more jobs as you expand. More jobs translate to more purchasing power in the economy. More purchasing power will increase effective demand for goods and services, which would increase sales and profits. We must sustain this cycle of progress and stability.

You can, of course, directly or indirectly involve your companies and yourselves personally in social welfare activities. And I would like to congratulate ANC for taking the initiative in soliciting the specific pledges that were made from the business community for this purpose.

An act of kindness inspires similar acts of kindness. Let us flood the country with acts of humanitarianism. After all, we are all in this together — sink or swim. We must close ranks and ride on our collective buoyancy to face the steep challenges in the horizon.

Seeing you all here and seeing the new ANC Business News tonight gives me confidence that we shall prevail in the end. I appreciate your support very much. And be assured that I intend to continue to exercise my leadership to keep the government clean, to move it forward, and to make it responsive to Filipino aspirations.

Once more, let us thank ANC for the gift of innovative broadcast journalism that it started six years ago. And tonight, let us thank ANC once again for the gift of pioneering in consciously responsible broadcast journalism.

ANC business news, we need you to keep our nation at an even keel. We need to you to build confidence in a brighter future. So, I'll be watching again tonight. and I hope I don't have to wake up again alarmed by bad news.

Thank you and congratulations.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Launching Ceremony of ABS-CBN News Channel (ANC) Business Night. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225545/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8287&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 14th Anniversary of the Office of the Ombudsman and the Inauguration of its New Building

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 14th Anniversary of the Office of the Ombudsman and the Inauguration of its New Building

[Delivered at the OMB Building, Agham Road, Quezon City, May 9, 2002]

Thank you very much, Ombudsman Desierto. And Happy Anniversary to you and congratulations to you as you end a very colorful career as the Ombudsman of the Republic of the Philippines.

The other great Cebuano in this hall, Chief Justice Hilario Davide; Comelec Chairman Fred Benipayo; Human Rights Chair Aurora Recena; may I also greet the deputies in the Ombudsman's Institution — Margarito Gervacio, our emcee; Jesus Guerrero; Primo Miro; Antonio Valenzuela; Orlando Casimiro; Leonardo Tamayo.

I would like to greet all the justices who are present here today; and also the members of Congress headed by Deputy Speaker Raul Gonzales, himself a former state prosecutor. May I greet Mayor Belmonte, the host mayor; and all the other local government officials who are here; and I would also like to greet the members of the uniformed services headed by PNP Deputy Director General Jun Ebdane, who presented the co-authorship of the book on "Investigating Crimes Against Women and Children," and also represented by the Deputy Chief of Staff of the AFP, General Narciso Abaya; other officials of the Philippine Government; distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen.

My warmest greetings to all the men and women from the Office of the Ombudsman on the occasion of your 14th anniversary. And my congratulations goes to the recipients of the awards for outstanding corruption prevention units, junior graftwatch units, and Outstanding Ombudsman Employees. I thought you were going to come here so I could shake hands with all of you. But later we'll do it, afterwards. So, I'd like to congratulate you and to wish you well so that you will continue to do your good work. Congratulations, too on the inauguration of your new building here in this road that is supposed to house many government buildings.

This is an opportune time to mark the distinctive contributions to good governance that have been made over the past year. The personal and professional conduct of every official and employee of the government is the ultimate measure of our worth as public servants. For the office of the ombudsman, there are many good reasons to celebrate. You have contributed immensely to molding responsible public servants. Responsible public servants are those who put the interest of our people above everything else.

Our constitution mandates you to be the "protector of the people against graft and corrupt practices." and as such, you are the public's watchdog, a mobilizer, an official critic and a vital instrument in the dispensation of justice. The ombudsman's office will always be relevant and needed for as long as the lure of wealth and power is occasioned by dishonesty and abuse among government officials and employees. In other words, as long as there is original sin, there is need for the ombudsman.

Our people's faith and trust in government is based on the imperative that justice is served fairly to every man, and that the law is applied to all. We, in government must strive hard to remove the impression — currently held by not just a few — that only the poor, the underprivileged and those without the means are hailed to court and made to answer for their crimes and misdemeanors. There is that saying, "poor boys fry and rich boys fly." this is something that we must disabuse our constituency of.

We must sustain public faith in our system of justice if we want the people themselves to uphold what is just and right. Mistrust in our justice system breeds contempt and resentment against authority. And when authority is severely eroded, we plant the seeds of disorder and at worst, social upheaval.

It is of paramount importance then that the personnel of the nation's watchdog against graft and corruption be at all times the good examples of the true public servant — ethical, religious, decent, upright, honest. Without these virtues, efforts to eradicate graft and corruption will amount to nothing.

You and I, and all public servants must share the commitment to uphold the rule of law, to sustain a government of laws and not of men, and to achieve a just society in which no one is above the law. For no democratic society can achieve respectability, seriousness and political maturity until it proves that in words and in deeds no one is above the law, not even those in-charge of its highest offices.

History has shown us that there were those that were tempted, in their time, to test the limits of this maxim. And that there were those who have miserably failed in the face of our laws. It may be said that “power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely.” but those blinded by an absolute sense of power were eventually brought down by the people themselves. And that is a great lesson from Philippine history.

We should not wait for this to happen again. Corruption must be nipped in the bud and never allowed to flourish. Such is the special role that the ombudsman plays in our society. It balances power in governance. It ensures that government not only creates laws but also upholds it. The ombudsman is our people's insurance that those who are chosen to govern will respect the Filipinos basic rights and act in accordance with their public oath.

The office of the ombudsman has vigorously pursued the dictum that “public office is a public trust.” the ombudsman has stood as a sentinel in enforcing a higher order of ethics and efficiency. As an independent constitutional body, the ombudsman has done its job without regard for personalities, and has shown a sense of justice that is blind to influence peddlers, powerbrokers and vested interests.

I would like to congratulate our Ombudsman Ani Desierto — especially now as he approaches the day that he will join the private sector — the records of the office of the ombudsman are testimony to the energy of the personnel meeting its mandate because as Ani said, from 1995 to 2001, he received 58,264 cases plus a backlog of almost 15,000. Yet, the Office of the Ombudsman under Ombudsman Desierto was able to dispose of about 95 percent of all cases and is seeking to have zero backlog. So, Congratulations! For that undeniable quantitative proof of efficacy.

More impressive is the record of prosecuting high-ranking officials. They talked about ‘big fish’ — well, the ombudsman has tackled a lot of ‘big fish,’ among them: a former president, two former first ladies, 17 cabinet members, six congressmen, 541 local government officials. And in your graft prevention program, you have mobilized NGOs — some of whom we are recognizing today — government agencies, the youth, and other sectors in the drive against graft and corruption. Given the rate also that the ombudsman is receiving complaints against erring officials, we must certainly strengthen our programs to nip corruption in the bud by removing the conditions that cause it.

The nation's foremost concern is the war against poverty, and poverty is a big contributor to graft and corruption. Poverty induces graft and corruption and conversely corrupt practices cause more poverty and injustice among the disadvantaged sector — this vicious cycle must be stopped.

Good governance is what we must have. When I became president, on my first working day, the first Monday after I became president, January 22 year 2001, I said, good governance rests on three pillars: first, a sound moral foundation to guide our leadership at all levels; second, a philosophy of transparency and accountability in all government transactions; and third, an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy. All of these are part of your mandate.

On your 14th anniversary, I urge the ombudsman's workforce to remain steadfast as protectors of our people. May you never be intimidated by the steepness of challenges, and may you remain impervious to the call of wealth and fame in exchange for your favors. There should be no greater favor for you than the high esteem and the gratitude of the Filipino people.

May I say in closing that one of the things I remember most about Ani Desierto in his career is that one time he told me that he is very conscious that he faces the judgment of history and he does not want history to judge him badly, he wants history to judge him well. And so, i am confident that in all the actions that Ani has done throughout his work as ombudsman, he was always conscious of history, and I think history rather than the lure of temporary wealth or temporary approval is a greater guide for what is the good that should be done. So, I congratulate you, Ani — all your service as ombudsman. And I congratulate all of those who worked with you and may you all continue to do a good job.

I would like to acknowledge the presence of Speaker Joe de Venecia. I already explained to the head table, Joe that you will be following because I left you in the golf course because today was the golf tournament for the speaker's cup in order to be able to build a large home for streetchildren. So this is part of our fight against poverty, and as I said earlier, the fight against poverty is interlinked with the fight against injustice. The work of the ombudsman is just as much a part of the fight against poverty as it is a large part of the fight against graft and corruption. Once again, congratulations, Ani. Congratulations to all of you on your 14th anniversary. Congratulations on this new home and may you do your work as beautifully as the new home that you are working in.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 14th Anniversary of the Office of the Ombudsman and the Inauguration of its new Building. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225556/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8289&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Arrival Ceremonies after an Official Visit to Bangkok, Thailand

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Arrival Ceremonies after an Official Visit to Bangkok, Thailand

[Delivered at the NAIA Terminal 1, Pasay City, May 9, 2002]

Mr. Vice President, Mr. Senate President, Mr. Speaker, members of the Cabinet, the Charge d' Affaires of the Thai Embassy, General Villanueva and the major service commanders of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, Ladies and Gentlemen.

My overnight trip to Malaysia and Thailand have been fruitful and rewarding. We have brought the Malaysian and Thai peoples closer to our own in terms of greater security, progress and social advancement.

As our political and economic stability continues to be proven and reinforced by recent events, there is no better time for fresh diplomatic initiatives in the fight against terrorism and poverty. Prime Minister Mahathir and Prime Minister Thaksin are among our close allies.

In Malaysia, I keynoted the 35th International General Meeting of the Pacific Basin Economic Council which Malaysia hosted. The PBEC is an association of senior business leaders from around the Pacific Basin region. It represents over 1,000 companies in 20 economies in the region. This accounts for over U.S. 4 trillion dollars in global sales and employs over 10 million people.

I presented before this forum our position on liberalized and equitable trade. I touched upon the relationships of the war against terrorism and the war against poverty in the light of our own experience. I dwelt upon mechanisms to temper protectionism pursuant to our national interests. I sought investments that could pay premium social dividends for our people.

Prime Minister Mahathir and I witnessed the signing of the trilateral agreement against terrorism and transnational crime in Kuala Lumpur — where in the media, I acknowledged that the whole idea came from Speaker Joe de Venecia — Prime Minister Thaksin has pledged to sign shortly. We will soon have their quadrilateral agreement to constrict terrorists and further insulate the regional neighborhood from evildoers.

Prime Minister Mahathir chipped in another big stake in the Mindanao peace process. In Kuala Lumpur, the government and the MILF signed an agreement setting forth the parameters of a stepped up rehabilitation and development effort in the former conflict-affected areas. The MILF will work with the ARMM in pursuit of the program. In areas outside ARMM, the government agencies will work the rehabilitation into their existing priorities and programs.

The GRO-MILF agreement paves the way for the participation of the Islamic Development Bank in the rehabilitation and development effort. In Kuala Lumpur, I was also informed by officials of Maybank, a giant in Malaysia, of its plans to support development thrust in Southern Philippines.

In Bangkok, aside from committing to sign the trilateral agreement against terrorism, Prime Minister Thaksin agreed to expand our cooperation in tourism. This was a very kind and generous offer considering that Thailand is the pillar of tourism in Southeast Asia — it probably has about 20 or 25 percent share in the entire tourism of Asia. So, under this agreement, we shall now engage in joint advertising of Thai and Philippine destinations. This synergy will bring jobs and income to many of our people.

We have also agreed to expand accounting trade arrangements. I have designated the Land Bank of the Philippines to be our official clearinghouse for such arrangements, the first of which will be the payment of imported rice from Thailand with a corresponding export of fertilizer to that country.

Among the investments and partnerships that were firmed up in Bangkok were the following:

- * The Ban Pong group of Thailand and the National Federation of Sugarcane Planters of the Philippines will establish a joint venture company — Asian Sugar Alliance, Inc. — to construct, own, and operate and manage a sugar mill in Mabinay, Negros Oriental. The project will have a total cost of 16 million dollars.

- * The Thai travel agents association and the Philippine Tour Operators Association will conduct joint programs for the development of extension and joint destination holiday packages under the twinning program of the Tourism Authority of Thailand and the Department of Tourism of the Philippines.

- * Boon Tawd Trading Co. Ltd. of Thailand will distribute in Thailand alcoholic spirits produced by the Philippines' La Tondena Distillers.

- * Horwath Consulting Services of Thailand will outsource I.T. requirements from information technology solutions of the Philippines, which is located at the Eastwood I.T. Park in Quezon City.

- * Corporate Vision Asia of Thailand will resell in Thailand the wireless communications software products of the DFNN group of companies in the Philippines.

- * The Thai-Chinese Chamber of Commerce and Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry will promote commercial and industrial links between our two countries. The Thai-Chinese Chamber of Commerce will soon send a business delegation to the Philippines.

I also conferred with the Thai food Giant Charoen Pokphand to interest them once again in the Philippines after a disappointment they felt many years ago about our then restrictive investment laws, which at that time led them to invest in China instead of the Philippines. The Bangkok Bank also called on me and accepted our suggestion to transfer to their Philippine operations their successful technology of mobilizing credit for small-and-medium sized enterprises — something which many of our Philippine banks are not interested in doing.

In stressing the need for increased peace and security in the region, I called for enhanced cooperation between the military and police authorities of the two countries — Thailand and the Philippines. Prime Minister Thaksin and I — in his visit last October — signed an agreement on the transfer of sentenced persons. This time, he and I witnessed the exchange of instruments of ratification of the treaty on this transfer of sentenced persons. This will be an added deterrent to transnational crime.

I also spoke to the Philippine-Thai Business Council, the Filipino community in Thailand, and to the faculty of Chulalongkorn University, where I received an honorary doctorate in political science. I carried common themes — tourism, trade, investment, the fight against terrorism, ASEAN solidarity — in these gatherings.

And, most of all, the highlight of my trip to Thailand was my visit to their Majesties the King and Queen of Thailand. It was a wonderful meeting that lasted for more than an hour, filled with wonderful memories of their visit to the Philippines when my father was president, and the many times that the king and my father interacted with each other in various bilateral and multilateral meetings. The king remembered very well his trip to the Philippines. He remembered his trip to Baguio. He remembered his trip to the rice terraces. We talked about the rice terraces, about their being a national heritage recognized by UNESCO. But I also told him about how the young people now are no longer interested in working so hard to preserve the rice terraces because there are other better ways, more lucrative ways to produce rice, or there are other better ways to make a living. The king informed me about a technology that they are doing in the mountains of Thailand. They are also building rice terraces but with modern technology. And he is willing and very much able, and very much enthusiastic about transferring that technology to the Philippines. So one of the things that the embassy will be doing — now that I have left Thailand to come back here — will be to go to the various experimental stations so that we can save our rice terraces through modern technology. And at the same time, spread this technology to other mountain areas where the poor people need to produce rice at a surplus or enough rice that they can eat on their own.

In times of challenge and opportunity, there is nothing more natural or easier than to look to our neighbors for mutually beneficial arrangements. In this spirit, I went to Malaysia and Thailand to reaffirm close ties and inject vigor into our mutual undertakings. My trip was short, but I have faith that it built new bridges to greater peace, progress and prosperity for the Filipino, Malaysian and Thai peoples.

Tomorrow is another day. I thank you all for staying up so late at night just to meet me here tonight, this morning. Tomorrow is another day, and I shall keep on going with the job of leadership. From the capitals of the ASEAN region, I shall again forge into our country's regional centers and find the commonalities we can muster to uplift our people from poverty. My spirits are reinforced by the genuine empathy and concern of our neighbors.

I would like to thank Prime Minister Mahathir and Prime Minister Thaksin, and especially the King of Thailand, and all the peoples of Malaysia and Thailand for their abiding kindness, hospitality and genuine sense of solidarity with our nation and people.

And to you, my countrymen and countrywomen, thank you for your prayers and thank you for your support

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Arrival Ceremonies after an Official Visit to Bangkok, Thailand. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225611/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8288&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Groundbreaking Ceremonies of the Mindanao Container Terminal Project (MCTP) Phase 1 and Awarding of Projects to Beneficiaries

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Groundbreaking Ceremonies of the Mindanao Container Terminal Project (MCTP) Phase 1 and Awarding of Projects to Beneficiaries

[Delivered at the PHIVIDEC Industrial Estate Tagoloan, Misamis Oriental, May 15, 2002]

Daghang salamat kanatong Vice President sa nasud Tito Guingona. Anak ug Misamis Oriental. Sa istorya sa atong nasud duha ang presidente nga gipili isip ilahang Vice President, anak sa Misamis Oriental. Si Diosdado Macapagal gipili niya isip iyang Vice President si Emmanuel Pelaez gikan sa Misamis Oriental. Si Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo gipili isip iyang Vice President Tito Guingona, anak sab sa Misamis Oriental.

The honorable First Secretary of the Japanese Embassy Mr. Shi Mermuri; Chairman of PHIVIDEC, Boy Abadia. You know it took me a year to look for a job worthy of Boy Abadia. And when it was time to nominate the new board of PHIVIDEC I said, Boy Abadia usa pa nga anak sa Misamis Oriental kay ang iya nga asawa nagikan sa balingasag. And so I said the best place for boy to be in is the PHIVIDEC Industrial Authority.

Aton mga Congressman diri sa Misamis Oriental. Ang akong higala, si Congressman Oscar Moreno; ug si Congressman Baculio, ang Congressman sa kining distrito ni ini; ang akong bag-o nga higala, si Governor Bong Calingin; ang atong laing-laing na Governor sa Region 10. Anhi karon si Governor Romualdo, akong higala sab apan mas higala sa reyna sa Espana. Kay si Queen Sophia of Spain ang iyang favorite nga lugar diri, ang iyang favorite nga beneficiary sa iya mga project walay laing kundi lang sa probinsya sa Camiguin; Governor of Bukidnon, Governor Joe Zubiri, na siya sab ang atong Chairman sa Regional Peace and Order Council; ug siyempre gusto ko ipaabot ang akong dako nga pagpasalamat kan Mayor Dongkoy Emano, ang Mayor Karon sa Cagayan de Oro ug ang Governor sa Misamis Oriental, niadto ako ang Undersecretary sa Trade and Industry ug kanusaa nasugdan nato gihapon kining project diri sa PHIVIDEC murag sa iyang pagkwento kanako.

And I would like to thank our friends from JBIC, Chief Representative Mitsuru Taruki, because this project is funded with a loan from JBIC but let me say that even loans cannot proceed — oh, I see Congressman Jaraula is still here, in the back. Why are you there congressman? He was with me already all day including whitewater rafting in Cagayan de Oro. I thought he would be tired already but he's still here — anyway, speaking of JBIC let me explain that even if a loan is available if it is not put in the budget and if the special allotment and the release is not provided for by the national government that project cannot push through. And that is what Mayor Emano was saying that in the past administration it was his idea — the story is that the Phividec led by administrator Evangelista went to Mayor Emano and told him about this project which would complete the requirements for the Phividec industrial estate, and the mayor brought it to the previous president. The paperwork started but the final release of making availability of the funds to make the project actually move did not move. There was no signature. There was no approval in the previous administration. So therefore, though it was conceptualized by Mayor Emano in the previous administration, a project starts when the money starts flowing. And the money started flowing under the administration of Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Our much esteemed foreign investors and local investors, Mr. Allen Roxas; and our friends from Germany. I believe this is a project for the coal-fired power plant. This is a very much coveted project even by other foreign investors. And I would like to greet also tanan mga laing-laing mayors sa laing-laing lunsod sa Misamis Oriental labi na ang mayor diri sa tagoloan, Mayor Bambi Emano. And we have tanang atong mga barangay officials and together with me as members of my national delegation, we have the Secretary of Trade and Industry, Manuel Roxas; and the Presidential Adviser on job creation from Bukidnon of Region 10 Secretary Cito Lorenzo; with us also today because he was able to make available in our administration again the funds for the westbound terminal in Cagayan de Oro, Landbank President Gary Teves; aton mga... Oh, there is here a... There is here an insertion, "don't forget to...” No, not “don’t forget.” Anyway, is they’re standing very — ah no, sitting down already — very humbly by the side, south commander and soon to be Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, General Roy Cimatu. We have him until Saturday. Saturday he takes over as Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces; aton mga laing-laing members sa board ng Phividec industrial authority let me tell you I went through a lot of work to make sure that the Phividec board would be a board that represents a very broad range of concerns and stakeholders in the Phividec. And I’m very proud of the composition and I hope that indeed under your leadership, your collective leadership and especially the overall leadership of Boy Abadia and the good legwork of administrator Evangelista this international container port would make Phividec not only an industrial center, it will make the whole Region 10 truly one of the major industrial centers of the whole Philippines.

Because today we had earlier our Regional Development Council meeting in Oroquieta in Misamis Occidental. And we were looking at what NEDA had in mind for Region 10 as well as what the RDC has in mind for Region 10. NEDA’s presentation gave us its vision for region 10 agro-industrial center and food basket. I said, “no.” Agro-industrial center is a demotion. Region 10 must be industrial center and food basket. And not only for Mindanao but for the entire Philippines. Because if we talk about industrialization in the 21st century we talk about petrochemical and we talk about steel. The petrochemical industry will be in Bataan or Batangas but the steel industry will be in Northern Mindanao.

Busa Kanina Gyud, ganina sab gi-present ang atong flagship projects in order to promote the vision of Region 10. And the big projects, the big ticket projects mentioned were the Pangil bay bridge which will connect Lanao del Norte and Misamis Occidental; the Bukidnon integrated area development program; the Mindanao International Container Terminal, which is what we are doing today; and the Langindingan airport. You noticed two of them are in Misamis Oriental.

Kaya kung sinabi ni Bong at saka ni Dongkoy na sila’y aking-akin na dapat naman siguro.

But I also said that if we are to correct our vision from being just an agro-industrial center to an industrial center, a fifth major project must be the rehabilitation of the National Steel Corporation. That’s why Mar Roxas is here because he is my man to do those things.

Busa kaninyong tanan mga kaigsuonan maayong hapon mga higala ko dinhi sa Cagayan de Oro kay naa karon, anya karon ang atong mga oro chamber ug laing-laing nga mga negosyante sa Cagayan de Oro ug sa tibuok Misamis Oriental. Kanunay ako malipay kung ako makabisita dinhi kaninyo: una sa tanan, kay murag ingon ni Vice President Guingona ako sab usa ka anak sa Mindanao kay nidako ako sa Iligan City. Ug pangaduha, kay duol kaayo kanako ang Phividec Industrial Center ug ang Cagayan de Oro-Iligan corridor. Kay murag ingon gyud ni City Mayor Emano katong sa Phividec Industrial Center ug sa Cagayan de Oro-Iligan corridor ako man ang nisugod ni ining project niadto ako pa Undersecretary sa Trade and Industry, way back in 1989, thirteen years ago.

Mao kini ang akong ulahi nga parte sa akong byahe sa tulo ka probinsya sa Northern Mindanao. Nagikan ko sa Surigao, unya sa Misamis Occidental kanina, ug karon sa Misamis Oriental.

Isip usa ka batan-on nga nidako usahay sa lunsod sa San Juan, Rizal ug usahay sa pang-uuma sa akong lola sa Lanao, natan-aw ko ang kalibutan nga diperensya sa kinabuhi sa mga middle-class suburbanites sa San Juan ug sa mga kaluoy nga tenant ug mang-uuma sa Lanao. Natan-aw ko ang grabe nga kabus-an sa mga lugar nga muslim parehas sa kabus-an sa mga probinsya nga muslim sa mindanao nga wala’y duda mao’y labing kabos nga lugar sa atong nasud. Wala’y duda nga ang kabus-an mao’y ginikanan sa aton mga problema sa national security sa Mindanao. Ang kabus-an bisan sa atong labing problema sa atong nasud parehas sa ako usa pa batan-on diri sa Mindanao.

Sa kanunay nga ako mubisita sa Mindanao, musolti ko sa akong mga prinsipyo alang sa Mindanao: una sa tanan, ang kalinaw ug kauswagan kaluwa nga dili angay magbulag; ikaduha, kinahanglan ang pangita nato sa kalinaw sulod sa konstitusyon ug prinsipyo sa territorial integrity; ikatulo — well, wait let me go... Before I go to the third one — katong territorial integrity. Good that General Cimatu is here. Because there is this misperception, misconception or maybe a pre-fabricated and really intended misinterpretation of the agreement that we signed, that our negotiators signed in Kuala Lumpur regarding the MILF. There is nothing in that agreement that says that the camps, the former MILF camps will be returned to them. Nothing, nothing, nothing. There is nothing in that agreement that talks about the MILF at all. It is an agreement about how to rehabilitate the former Wartorn areas. And what it says there is recognizing the right of the evacuees to go back to their original homes or to their new homes of choice which is fait accompli because there are no more evacuation camps, they have all gone back to their homes. And by definition, evacuees are non-combatants. So if you say we help the evacuees go back to their homes, we are not talking about the MILF. Therefore, all of these interpretation being peddled are wrong interpretations and I hope that they are just honestly wrong and not maliciously wrong. Ikatulo sa Mindanao, kinahanglan musabot nato nga ang atong nasud usa ka multi-ethnic society asa kinahanglan aduna'y social justice for all and institutionalized accommodation of various cultural traditions.

Ug sa pangita sa kauswagan nga kinahanglan alang sa kalinaw, we are here to mark another achievement of Misamis Oriental and Cagayan de Oro as a lead player in Mindanao's development. As we break ground for this Mindanao container terminal project phase I, we also launch today the Mindanao container terminal port phase 2. These are a testimony to Cagayan de Oro and Misamis Oriental's leadership in regional development as they are turning points in the country's battle against poverty. Mindanao's gain is the country's gain although without doubt the people of Mindanao stand to benefit most from it.

Cagayan de Oro's leadership in Mindanao development is highlighted by the fact that in Region 10 unemployment rate is the lowest in the whole country. The unemployment rate in the country was 11.3 percent when I started my presidency in 2001 and it is now 10.3 percent. But it is in region 10 — while the rest of country is 10.3 percent — the unemployment in region 10 is 5.74 percent. And that is why sa kining atong jobs fair diri sa tagaloan, sa town plaza, sa akon nakita diri sa atong records ang mga jobs available 2,326 apan ang mga applicants 537. So nakita nato na for every job seeker dunay 4 to 5 jobs available diri sa tagaloan tingali sa tibuok region 10 ug Misamis Oriental. Busa sa atong mga awardees — asa man atong mga awardees diri? Sa high school leadership awards? — kung mangita kamo ug trabaho maadto kamo sa town plaza sa tagaloan kay naa pa jobs fair until 5 o' clock pm this afternoon.

Now, it is said nga usa ka rason ngano that gamay ra ang unemployment rate diri tungod sa micro-finance and the success of small and medium enterprises. This confirms the strategy that our administration started early last year. When we saw early last year that exports would decline due to the world slowdown, we decided to strengthen the domestic market. And i remember asking Mar Roxas, "so, how do we strengthen the domestic market?" And mar said, "first, by strengthening the small and medium enterprises." Nahimo gyud diri sa misamis oriental ug Region 10. Unya by agricultural expenditures and housing programs followed by the decision to pay the local governments your IRA in full, on time without deductions and even to pay part of the debt of the previous administration to the LGUs. □kauban sa mga debt sa previous administration kining atong project gyud diri karon.

Tungod kay siyempre ako nahimo presidente because of God's will ug hibaw ko na ako nahimo presidente aron makapangita kita ug sabot sa problema sa kabus-an sa atong nasud.

Poverty is the country's foremost enemy and our battle plan is contained in our medium-term Philippine development plan. At the core of our plan are four strategies, namely: first, a philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; second, agricultural modernization with equity; third, a social bias for the poor and disadvantaged sectors; and fourth, high moral standards in government and Philippine society.

Ubos sa free enterprise nga angay sa 21st century, ginpili nato ang turismo isip usa sa mga sector sa kauswagan sa kaugmaon tungod sa mga klarong rason — daghan ang aton mga natural wonders ug manindot ang natural warmth ang hospitality ug mga Filipino. Naa kita bentaha sa beach ug eco-tourism gikan sa mga baybay sa Boracay, sa Visayas ug sa baybay sa Camiguin — nga siguro more than 100 percent ang inyo nga occupancy rate sigurado sa Camiguin — hangtod sa perfect surf sa Siargao ug ang Mambuaya river for whitewater rafting which I can now guarantee from personal experience is perfectly delightful.

Ubos naman sa agricultural modernization, dako ang papel ug Mindanao. Hibalo nato tanan ang climate ug soil sa Mindanao nahimo gyud na ang Mindanao karon usa nga natural food basket sa tibuok nasud. In fact, sa karon ingon ni Secretary Cito Lorenzo kay ang El Nino sigurado maadto sa North Luzon, the shortfall in North Luzon can be made up for by the additional agricultural production diri sa Northern Mindanao.

In fact, I was very happy to get the report earlier in the regional development council tanan mga crops, tanan mga agricultural products region 10 is a net exporter. So you are truly a food basket and you truly need a container port like this one.

Ang MCTP siguradong tabang sa kauswagan sa Mindanao. 30 hectares space? For phase 1, 60 afterwards. 400-meter wharf that will initially handle 270,000 container vans per year, this project will facilitate the transfer of food and other cargo from this part of Mindanao. It will accelerate trade and industry and encourage the construction of more facilities for business and for leisure.

MCTP's rationalized and organized cargo handling will push forward the efficient transport of more agricultural products from this part of Mindanao to the Visayas, to Luzon and even to foreign lands. This will ensure that products arrive at destinations fresh and on time. New markets will be opened to the farmers of Northern Mindanao. This will encourage even small farmers to produce more. It will have a multiplier effect on development.

The MCTP will likewise play a major role in providing a social bias through the jobs it will generate. Beyond the 2,000 people it will hire directly during its 24-month construction, this port will become a hub of commerce and attract many small entrepreneurs in the food and services industries.

The MCTP is expected not only to complement the 100-million peso Cagayan port, but it will also serve as the main gateway of marine transport for Northern Mindanao and a major business location for the whole island. It will eventually be the trans-shipment hub serving the BIMP-EAGA region.

More business means a greater number and variety of jobs for people of various skills levels. I foresee that with just phase 1 completed in January 2004, as Phividec chairman Boy Abadia has promised, more than 10,000 men and women from the Cagayan de Oro-Iligan corridor and the whole of Mindanao will find jobs here.

This very important infrastructure project costing 85 million dollars for its first phase alone, is a vital part of the development of the Phividec estate into an industrial estate. And I am glad that the LGUs of Tagoloan and nearby towns have expressed full support for the speedy development of the Phividec industrial estate.

Tungod kay apil sa atong anti-poverty medium-term plan ang social bias alang sa mga kabos, it is also heartening to note that the Phividec industrial authority offered a humane relocation package to affected families, which is being implemented ahead of schedule. By the way, this port is implemented ahead of schedule. It's suppose to start in October. But it started now because the funds have already been made available by this administration.

But speaking about the relocation, nahinumduman ko dayon ang akon experience niadto ako pa undersecretary sa trade and industry katong kwento ni Mayor Emano ug natan-aw ko niadto dako ang resistance sa pag-uswag sa Phividec industrial estate kani adto. Nianhi ko aron mahibalo ko ngano daghan ang resistance. Nahibalo ko nga sa mga niaging tuig, sa kanunay duna'y bag-o nga locator sa Phividec, gipalakaw ang mga pamilya gikan sa yuta hangtod sa masunod nga locator muadto naman asa nakabalhin sila. Busa lakaw gihapon. Lakaw ug lakaw sama sa mga baka.

Hangtod sa ako naanhi isip undersecretary sa Trade and Industry ug sa nadawat ko ang feedback diri niadto ako sa DTI ug gi-ingon ko sa Manila na dili kita mudayon sa pagsulod sa mga bag-o nga industriya hangtod nga makapangita kita ug permanent ug acceptable nga relocation site sa mga gi-displace sa Phividec. Nahimo gyud busa ni-ining atong okasyon karon padayon lang sa akong trabaho sukad pa sa 13 years ago.

Mindanaoans have been asking for a fair share of the national budget. And I wish to point out so that, once and for all, you can dispute another accusation that Mindanao gets less than the other areas. Let me tell you that Mindanao has the highest per capita budget allocation at 4,878 pesos per capita. And furthermore, region 10, which as for the budget I inherited had the lowest per capital allocation among all regions in the country in the last administration, Governor Calingin. Now, it enjoys the highest growth rate in per capita allocation in 2002 — 25 percent growth rate.

And from the 450 million-peso agricultural modernization budget for hybrid rice — which we will distribute today — of the 450 million pesos, 200 million — almost one-half — is going to Mindanao. And this will go so Mindanao is receiving 200 million or almost one-half, where will this go? This will go to seed subsidy like these seeds that we are distributing today and training for 82,500 hectares of hybrid rice planting, of which 25,000 are being planted right this April and may season and the rest in October-November next season. Moreover, there is also again — thanks to Gary Teves — 250 million pesos credit being granted by the Land Bank through Quedancor at 10,000 pesos per hectare this season. Unta mubayad maayo ang atong mga mang-uuma sa ilahang utang, aron unya kung maayo ang repayment naa pa sa October-November additional 525 million pesos for a total of 828 million pesos for the farmers of Mindanao.

Katong pagbayad daghan ang gihimo nga ang problema once there are bad payers because they are irresponsible. But there are bad payers because of force majeure, the world's slowdown, September 11, the BW scandal, El Nino, etc. And I figured, and this has been... It was in fact formally taken up at the regional development council meeting this morning to request that because in the past hangtod karon if you have arrears you cannot borrow again. What a pity, because our interest rates today are at their lowest in the history of our country. But they can't go to our poor farmers because of this rule that if you have a pending arrear you cannot borrow. But Gary Teves has said that he is willing to restructure the present arrearages, and part of the restructuring will be additional working capital. Therefore, the funds will be made available to the farmers even if they have current arrearages.

Kay gi-ingon ko kanina sa mga niaging administrasyon kon makahatag sila ug amnesty sa mga tax evaders ngano dili kita makahatag ug amnesty sa aton mga farmers. So the amnesty is with regard to their being prohibited from borrowing again. So gary will speed up the restructuring and make available additional funds.

Karon sa 200 million pesos hybrid rice for Mindanao, 24 million pesos will go to region 10. Ug sa 825 million-peso credit for Mindanao, 100 million pesos will be available to farmers in the region, again let me repeat, from Land Bank through Quedancor. Daghan salamat Gary Teves.

We join you in the relentless drive to attract investors like our German friends. And I congratulate PIA for the 6 new locators in 2001 that have given jobs to close to 1,000 people. This year's two additional investors are bringing in approved investments of 100 million, while six more have signified their intention to come in together with our German friends.

Most importantly, I would like to thank, in behalf of the Filipino people, the Japanese government, represented here by the charge d' affaires of the Japanese embassy... By the first secretary of the Japanese embassy because we have no ambassador yet from Japan. The previous ambassador just left and his replacement is still to come. The MCTP has been made possible through I said earlier, a special yen loan package under our official development assistance. This project will remain a long-lasting symbol of deep friendship between Japan and the Philippines and the special concern that the Japanese people hold for the Philippines' sustained growth.

Let me say nga duna'y tiyempo sa niaging mga tuig nga dili na nadayon ang mga Japanese loans diri sa mindanao tungod sa problema sa kalinaw. Apan sa niaging bisita ni Prime Minister Koizumi kanako diri sa Pilipinas ni-ingon niya na they are ready to go back to Mindanao. They are ready to contribute to peace and development in Mindanao.

Let me reiterate that not even the MCTP or any other project can fully guarantee equitable growth in Mindanao. However, only long-lasting peace can assure us of sustainable development. And peace can be achieved only through the concerted effort of the people of Mindanao. Ang pagkab-ot sa kalinaw ug kauswag anaa sa mga kamot sa taga Mindanao.

Let us, therefore, strive together for peace and development. Let us be united in relentlessly pursuing unity, harmony and solidarity behind our dreams for all Filipinos. In that light, I accept Dongkoy and bong saying sila'y aking-akin na.

Daghan salamat kaninyong tanan.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). During the Groundbreaking Ceremonies of the Mindanao Container Terminal Project (MCTP) Phase 1 and Awarding of Projects to Beneficiaries. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225529/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8285&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 46th National Council Meeting of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 46th National Council Meeting of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines

[Delivered at the Dusit Hotel Nikko, Manila Hotel, May 16, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Raul Roco sa iyong pag-imbata at sa iyong pagpahayag ng patuloy na suporta ng Department of Education sa Boy Scouts of the Philippines. Dahil alam natin na nagkaproblema yung boy scouts nung ipinatupad ni Raul ‘yung batas na dapat walang collection. Kaya kanina pinag-usapan namin dito sa mesa at siguro ‘yung nawala sa boy scouts dahil sa pagtigil ng collection during enrollment ay pwedeng manggaling sa special education fund. Iyon ang ating gagawin para hindi malugi yung boy scouts.

Mayor Jojo Binay, ang National President ng Boy Scouts of the Philippines. At pinaalala n’ya yung utang ko bilang pangulo, na one million pesos para sa Boy Scouts of the Philippines, pandagdag na rin ‘yon; Congressman Butch aquino; Congressman Teddy ‘Boy’ Locsin; Vice Mayor Mercado, ang Conference Chairman nitong ating meeting ngayon; Mr. Kim Kyu Young, Cam Saha Meda, and we thank you and we congratulate you for being here. And congratulations as you end your tour as Regional Director of the World Scout Bureau; si Jun Aniag, ang Senior VP ng Boy Scouts of the Philippines, former Congressman, binabati ko rin; si Vice Governor De Jesus ng Misamis Oriental, Chief National Commissioner ng Boy Scouts; si Dr. Pedro San Vicente, ang member Emeritus ng Boy Scouts; si Frankie Roman na member Emeritus din ng boy scouts — saan si Frankie? Ayun; si Secretary General Escudero, ang ating Master of Ceremonies at saka si Secretary General. Monsignor Laban, member ng Executive Board ng Boy Scouts pero siya ang Malacanang Chaplain kaya ‘pag nagsi-simba ako araw-araw, siya ang nagse-sermon sa akin; Obet Pagdanganan, BSP past National President and now, kasi tapos na ‘yung one year, Presidential Adviser on Cooperative Development; Congressman Del de Guzman; and si Dr. Destura, ang Vice President for the Visayas; at ‘yung aking kababayan sa Iligan, si Jimmy Semana, ang Vice President for Mindanao.

Binabati ko rin yung mga members ng executive board, officers and members of the Boy Scouts of the Philippines. May I also greet Mr. Nazmul Haque Nazu from Bangladesh; Commander Aftab Qureshi from Pakistan; nandito rin si Congressman Cho Roco at saka si Congressman Harry Angpin; si Governor Petilla ng Leyte na induct ko bilang Boy Scout din doon sa Leyte; ay, mabuti nadaanan ko si Governor Aurora Cerilles dahil wala sa listahan, Governor Cerilles; at iyung inyong counterpart naman sa kababaihan, si Cynthia Sagala, President ng Girl Scouts — naku, nalaman na niyang narito ako mapipilitan akong pumunta ngayon sa Girl Scouts Conference din; other Government Officials; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

Greetings, my fellow scouters. I come to this council with best wishes for your safety, security and happiness.

Ako ay natutuwa na, bilang inyong pangulo, ako ngayon ang Chief Scout ng Pilipinas. Tunay na ito ay isang napakalaking karangalan, dahil alam naman nating lahat na kayo ay isang samahan ng mga huwarang kabataang kilala sa gawa at hindi puro salita. Hindi ba ang motto natin sa boy scouts, sa mga scouts ay “laging handa”, always ready. Laging handa sa pagtulong sa ating clean-up drives, sa traffic assistance — hindi ba ‘yung image ng boy scout always helping an old lady cross the street? — sa anti-drug campaign, sa community service.

Mataas ang aking paggalang sa scouting. Ang aking mga anak naging boy scouts din noong panahon nila. At mula nung matatag ang Boy Scout of the Philippines noong 1936, milyun-milyon na ang kabataang pilipinong nakinabang dito at nakaiwas sa masasamang bisyo.

In fact, I am very happy to learn that the boy scouts is number three in the world. But that is in terms of absolute numbers. Sabi nga ni Jojo, if you talk about percentage of the population being boy scouts, lalo pang mas mataas — siguro baka pinakamataas na nga — at ang isang dahilan nga ay dahil dito kaiba-iba ang kostumbre ng boy scouts, naka-integrate sa mga gawain ng mga eskwelahan. And so it is truly important that we continue this tradition because it leads our youth into the good path away from the bad path.

The practice of self-reliance, the attitude of taking the initiative to achieve goals and the skills of emergency preparedness have inculcated in countless young Filipinos the values of discipline, diligence and perseverance. Through the path of scouting, many respectable and responsible Filipinos of today have acquired the sturdy character and firm conviction to selflessly serve god, country, and fellowmen. It is largely because of scouting that many of them, many of you have become good citizens and outstanding leaders.

At ‘yon na nga, sana ay, tayo ay, dahil marami sa mga leaders dito sa boy scouts ay leaders din ng pulitika sa iba’t-ibang mga lugar sa ating bansa, sana nga ‘yung mga political leaders na leaders din ng boy scouts ay manguna sa asal na huwag na muna tayo masyadong mag-alitan sa pulitika, gawin muna ang trabaho para sa ating pamayanan.

At dahil nga sa aking mataas na paggalang sa scouting, noong 1997, noong ako ay senador pa, tumulong ako sa pagpapatayo sa Nueva Ecija ng isang training center dahil hiningi ni Jojo. Ngayon ay ginagamit na ring pook-sanayan ng mga boy scouts. Meron din akong ilang na napondohan na Girl Scouts Centers — alam ni Mrs. Sagala ‘yan — noong ako ay senador. Kaya sabi ni Jojo, pero iyung contribution bilang pangulo, iba naman ‘yon. So, “okay, Jojo,” kaya sabi ko. Kaya si Jojo ‘pag nag-uutos, mahirap tanggihan.

Tulad ng aking nasabi kanina, ang boy scouts ay isang samahan ng mga huwarang kabataan. Kilala sa gawa at hindi puro salita. Scouts are not faultfinders, empty critics or complainers. Kaya ‘yan ang hinihingi ko sa mga politicians na scouts. Scouts have an active concern for and a determination to resolve problems affecting the community.

Scouting in the Philippines is also a symbol of hope, because it springs from the youth. From this hope flows the strength to confront and overcome challenges, the tenacity of spirit to reach out for the best, the noblest, the most sublime of human aspirations.

But hope alone, without substance, cannot meaningfully alter or improve the human condition. Hope must be transformed into decisive action and resolute initiative. This is true in confronting two great challenges today — terrorism and poverty.

Ang laban kontra sa kahirapan at laban kontra terorismo ay hindi nagkakalayo, magkambal nga sila. Poverty and the sense of powerlessness that it brings are the spawning grounds where terrorism can easily spread its evil ideology.

Kaya nga ang ating laban sa kahirapan ay binubuo sa apat na bahagi:

Una, sa pagpapairal ng sistema ng ekonomiya ng bagong siglo, kinakailangang magkaroon ng magandang macroeconomic environment para magkaroon ng trabaho ang bawa’t mamamayang Pilipino.

Pangalawa, dahil karamihan sa ating mga mahihirap ay nasa kanayunan, kinakailangan ang agricultural modernization founded on social equity.

Pangatlo, ang mga programang direktang nakakatulong sa mahihirap tulad ng pabahay at Medicare.

Pang-apat, ang pag-angat ng moralidad sa ating pamahalaan at sa ating lipunan.

Ano ang ibig sabihin ng mga ito sa ating kabataan? Edukasyon. Dapat nating bigyan ng kaalaman at kakayahan ‘yung mga kabataan upang sa paglaki ang mga kabataan ay maging responsableng mamamayan na kayang bumuhay sa mga sarili.

Our national hero, Dr. Jose Rizal, once said that an uneducated people cannot be a free people. We have seen places in the world where innocent children are tutored in hatred and utter disregard for human values. They are programmed like robots along a single path of behavior, to obey authority without question. And worse sometimes, the authority is an authority that foments hatred.

We are all witness to how an uneducated citizenry can be controlled by extreme ideologies, by contrived fears, by irrational causes. They become vulnerable to dictators, to rabble-rousers, to unscrupulous leaders.

The education and enlightenment we need to propagate is the responsibility of all and everyone in our society.

This annual meeting of the national council sets the direction and the pace of the BSP. The BSP is the largest youth organization in the country. The deliberations and decisions made in this council have far-reaching effects on the Filipino youth.

As your chief scout, allow me to pose three questions in guiding your deliberations:

First, are we doing the right thing? Second, are we doing enough of the right thing? Third, are we doing enough of the right thing with the required urgency?

The country and each of your communities wait upon your leadership and participation to make life better for our people.

The world we are living in today needs more peace, but it is filled with strife. The global community needs more cooperation, but it is surrounded by conflict. Humanity needs more solidarity, but we hear the voices of hate and belligerence all around.

There is an urgent need for our children to be in the company of good, decent and sincere people. Without doubt, they should be in the company of the boy scouts.

Ang scouting ay simbolo ng pagkakaisa. Pinagsasama nito ang mga muslim at kristiyano, mga tagalog, mga bisaya, mga chinese, mga kastila, mga mayaman, mga mahihirap, mga pinuno, mga tagasunod. Sa boy scouts, palagay ko, lahat ay pantay-pantay.

Indeed, let scouting be a shining example of what a common vision plus strong unity can achieve. Let scouting pave the way towards team spirit, self-reliance and the excellence of youth.

Sa ating hangaring masugpo ang kahirapan at mabalik ang dangal ng ating bansa ngayong siglo beinte-uno, kailangan natin ang tibay at dignidad ng mga boy scouts.

Kailangan natin ang lakas ng loob ng mga boy scouts. Higit sa lahat, kailangan nating ipamalas ang magagandang bagay na natututunan sa scouting.

Ako ay umaasa na hindi ako bibiguin ng ating mga kasamahang scouts. Lubos ang aking tiwala sa inyong kakayahan na tulungan ang ating bansa na masugpo ang kahirapan sa dekadang kasalukuyan.

At dahil nga ang national president ng boy scout ay mayor din ng pinaka-mayamang lungsod sa ating bansa, iyung boys world's scout headquarters ay sana nga, sa sipag ni Jojo Binay, ay matayo dito sa Makati City.

Maraming salamat at mabuhay ang scouting sa Pilipinas.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225512/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8283&Itemid=38

OFFICIAL GAZETTE OF THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES

Speech of President Arroyo during the 53rd Multiple District Lions State Convention

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 53rd Multiple District Lions State Convention

[Delivered at the Olongapo City Convention Center Hall, Olongapo City, Zambales, May 17, 2002]

Maraming salamat Congressman Gordon sa iyong pagpakilala. At salamat sa inyo, salamat kay City Mayor Kate Gordon, at salamat kay Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon sa inyong pag welcome sa amin lahat dito sa napakaganda at napakagaling na lungsod ng Olongapo.

Bago ko batiin ‘yung iba sabihin ko lang na pag pinagmamalaki ni Kate ‘yung Olongapo meron siyang ‘k’ kasi tingnan n’yo itong convention center na ito na ang nagpatayo nito ay ang city ngunit sa dahilan kung bakit walang choice ang dbp kung hindi ibigay sa kanila ‘yung credit para matayo ito ay mismo ‘yung world bank ay nagsasabi na sila ay nararapat at sila ay creditworthy at isang huwarang lungsod.

At kanina bago kami pumunta rito, ilan sa mga Lions ay pumunta rin doon nag-usyoso across the street doon sa kanilang amphitheater, at doon ay nagmahagi ng mga school supplies sa mga batang papasok mula sa iba’t-ibang mga mahihirap na barangay. At ‘yon din ay nanggaling sa programa ng DILG at Australian financing dahil kilala rin ‘yan ay bilang gantimpala naman sa lungsod ng Olongapo bilang isang sa pinakama-child friendly cities na hall of famer sila.

At bago nito ay nanggaling naman kami doon sa city hospital. Naalala ko ‘yung city hospital dahil noong ako’y — ewan ko senador o vice president — ay nag-contribute din ako doon dahil si Kate lahat ng pinupuntahan kung magko-contribute kasi sa CDF dapat sa hospital. Talagang binuo niya ‘yon at nakita natin ay isang tertiary hospital na ‘yung state-of-the-art na mga equipment ay nandoon kaya naglilingkod ang Olongapo City hospital hindi lamang sa Olongapo, sa Zambales, sa Bataan, sa Pampanga, sa buong Central Luzon kaya ang Olongapo City, city of volunteers may karapatan si Kate ipagmalaki.

Nandito rin si Presidential Assistant Rene Diaz, hindi ba? Ayun! Siya ang tumutulong sa akin upang ipairal ‘yung mga proyekto dito sa North Luzon. ‘Yung North Luzon ay ‘yung kanyang mga bahagi ng kanyang kaunlaran ay ‘W.’ tinatawag nating ‘W’ kasi shaped like a ‘W.’ tayo ay nasa left hand ng ‘W.’ at itong left hand ng ‘W’ from the top up to the bottom ‘yan ay tourism area. Tapos ‘yung bottom nagsi-share ‘yung parang letter ‘B’ sa baba ng ‘W’ ‘yan ang interface ng tourism at saka industry. Kaya kung makikita n’yo itong left side ng ‘W’ ‘yan ay from Subic in the south going up — Subic bay ‘no including Olongapo — going up, up to the beaches na of Zambales, Pangasinan, Ilocos hanggang Pagudpod, ‘yan ang ating tourism stretch at lahat ng mga Lions na ang mga distrito ninyo or ‘yung mga club ninyo ay nandoon, isang malaking magagawa ninyo ay tumulong para manatili na ‘yung mga beaches doon ay parating malinis para ito ay talagang umunlad ang turismo ng West Luzon.

Gusto ko ring batiin siyempre ‘yung mga elder statesmen ng Lions lalong-lalo na si General Pedro Balbanero na siya ang nagsalita kanina. Muling nagkaroon ng Lion ang international director kagaya ni ginoong Enrique Lim noong dati; at ‘yung inyong bagong state council chairman si ginoong Santiago Morante na salamat din sa iyong welcome remarks; binabati ko si Ginoong Jose dela Vega, ang convention chairman. Napaka successful itong convention. Ang dami-daming nag-attend dito sa napakagandang lugar na ito. At nagpapasalamat din ako dahil kayo ay nagbigay ng... ‘Yung kiosk, ‘yung tourism kiosk doon, ‘yung cyber kiosk para sa mga turista at sana ‘yung mga Lions dito ay magdala din ng mga Lions mula sa ibang bansa para makita ang magandang turismo natin dito sa Pilipinas; binabati ko rin si Miss Adelia Acasio, ang convention coordinator at regional chairperson. Congratulations sa pagdala mo dito sa ating mga convention participants; and may I also greet the Commanding General of North Luzon, General Rodolfo Garcia; and Regional Director of the Philippine National Police si General Rey Berroya; mga district governor ng Lions; mga lions at Lionesses na narito ngayon; ladies and gentlemen:

I am so honored to be here in Olongapo City and to be here to address the men and women of the Lions Clubs in the Philippines who are gathered here in your 53rd multi-district state convention.

1.3 million members worldwide, sabi ni General Balbanero, since your founding in 1917. Imagine kung 10 percent lang sila ay maalok n'yo dito, 'di 100,000 tourist na 'yon dito sa Pilipinas. But not only that, 1.3 million members since 1917 that is formidable civic power. And i know from personal experience that here in the Philippines the growth of Lionism has been likewise impressive. Kasi naalaala ko 'yung tulong ninyo halimbawa nung ako ay namumorolema sa mga streetchildren sa Metro Manila. 'Yung Lions ay tumulong hindi lamang sa pagka volunteer gumastos pa kayo. Parati kayo nagko-contribute sa Streetchildren's Program nung ako ay Vice President. Aside from the fact na tuwing may Lions convention meron kayong tseke para sa streetchildren project ay naalaala ko 'yung isang magandang streetchildren's home doon sa bandang Paranaque, doon sa may airport road ay galing sa Lions. Naalaala ko nung 1998, first Christmas na nagkaroon ng streetchildren's project. Eh, siyempre the days before Christmas ay bakasyon na, and siyempre 'yung mga government employees bakasyon na pero doon naglalabasan 'yung mga streetchildren. Sino 'yung nasa kalsada para mag-rescue sa kanila, 'yung mga Lions ng Quezon City at Metro Manila.

And having seen first hand how lions has supported the government, gaya ng sabi ni General, "you ask not what your government can do for you but what you can do for your government." Having seen that, I am confident that your growth rate is directly proportional to the civic-mindedness of your members.

Lionism as conceived by your founder, Melvin Jones is all about elevating your concerns from a purely personal point of view to that which can benefit the community and the world at large. And as I said earlier, I am personally aware of the generosity of the lions clubs. And I never can forget dotes of work that I mentioned for my programs when I was vice-president and concurrently Secretary of Social Welfare and Development. 'Yung pinag-uusapan — ah meron pang isa. Hindi ko pa nabanggit 'yung Center for Streetchildren Rehabilitation in Mandaluyong City. That could not have been built without the 75,000-dollar grant of the lions clubs international foundation. Kasi naalaala n'yo nung nagkaroon kayo ng 50th Anniversary ba 'yon? Hindi ba 'yon ang panahon na 'yung international ay magbibigay ng kontribusyon at pinili n'yong beneficiary itong streetchildren center na ito na napakaganda. And therefore let me take advantage of this occasion to formally acknowledge the solid contribution of all of the lions clubs in the Philippines towards improving the lives of the disadvantaged sectors of our society.

Maraming salamat sa inyo at inaasahan kong kayo ay handa pang tumulong sa iba-iba pang pangangailangan. Because we have to do more for the poor. They lack opportunities for advancement, they are most vulnerable to the shifting tides of socio-economic change. And it's not only Christian charity that should move us to help the poor, we must look at them as partners in improving our national productivity and growth. But to transform the poor into nation-builders, they must first be provided with the primordial opportunities for survival and growth. They must be provided the basic services with which they may elevate the quality of their lives.

As I mentioned earlier, we see streetchildren, beggars, drug addicts, forsaken elderly citizens and other vulnerable groups almost everyday. These are the disadvantaged sectors that lions clubs assist most. Kaya tamang-tama kayo ay nandito sa Olongapo, the city of volunteers. Kasi ang Lions napakalakas sa volunteerism. The lions are also a constant reminder of our crucial task of fighting poverty remains to be fulfilled.

Poverty is the root of most of our country's ills. Poverty begets ignorance, social inequity and the despair of those who perennially suffer from injustice. Poverty abets terrorism where terrorism stems from inequity. And conversely, terrorism breeds more poverty because it drives away investments and smothers the spirit of enterprise.

Poverty is a cyclical threat to national stability vicious cycle. Deprived of essential needs, the children of the poor tend to be poorer than their parents. And long-term poverty threatens peace, as our experience has taught us. The spawning grounds of conflict are the most depressed areas of our country.

And I have said on numerous occasions that we must win the war against poverty within the decade. We want to put a full stop to the cycle of want, injustice and conflict. I am campaigning among all sectors, all civic clubs, all local governments, all ethnic communities of the country — join me in this battle against poverty. Alam ko na kayo'y kasama ko nung vice president pa ako, eh lalo naman ngayon na ako ay presidente na, inaasahan ko kayo.

Noong makalawa — ah, kahapon pala — death anniversary ng nanay ko, the late First Lady Evangelina Macapagal. Nag-misa kami sa libingan ng mga bayani kung saan noong siya ay First Lady 'yan ay inayos niya. Ngayon nakinabang siya dahil doon siya nakalibing pati tatay ko. At nung nagkukwento 'yung pari, si Father Bobby Perez, na 'yung tatay niya noon ay Executive Secretary ng tatay ko, naalaala niya na yung libingan ng mga bayani at saka 'yung Luneta ay inayos ng nanay ko hindi sa paggamit ng government funds kung hindi funds ng mga volunteer civic organization. At binanggit pa niya 'yung mga pinaka-prominent na tumulong at kasama doon — panahon pa ng nanay ko — ay 'yung Lions Club. Kaya mula pa doon sa magulang ko, maraming salamat.

My roadmap in the fight against poverty consists of four components: first, an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; second, modernizing agriculture with equity; third, providing a social bias to the marginalized and the disadvantaged sectors to balance our economic growth; and the fourth, the adoption of higher moral standards in government and the whole of society.

We also have under the sectoral and social bias a sectoral anti-poverty program formulated in coordination with the national anti-poverty commission. This is geared towards uplifting the lives of less fortunate Filipinos. And this NAPC program has five core thrusts: asset reform. Meaning, the redistribution of assets to the poor like land reform and other assets for production; fortifying the human capital base of the poor; strengthening the capacity of the poor to engage in productive enterprise; politically empowering the poor through organized consultations; and protecting the underprivileged sectors, such as the children, the youth, the women, the aged against exploitation.

At kung tinitignan ko itong mga ito, una nga 'yung asset reform — pagmumudmod ng mga arian, lupa, pabahay sa mga mahihirap; pangalawa, 'yung mga saligang mga serbisyo. In other words education for the poor, medicine for the poor, medical care for the poor; 'yung economic empowerment — mga livelihood, mga microfinance, mga specific jobs para sa, halimbawa, out-of-school children, 'yon din economic empowerment; 'yon namang protection of the exploited and the vulnerable — 'yan ang mga streetchildren, 'yung babaeng inaabuso, matatandang naiwan na, mga disabled na walang maraming pagkakataon; at pang lima, 'yung capability- building. Kung tignan natin lahat itong lima ang laki ng papel ng Lions Club.

The Lions Clubs have projects that provide assistance to the disadvantaged sectors. I kept talking about the streetchildren but you have helped so much the physically disabled as well. Your projects form part of a positive response in aid of our anti-poverty programs, and I thank you for your invaluable help.

I have been informed that your clubs have complained of difficulties in having shipments of goods donated to your projects such as medicines, reading glasses and clothes released by the government. We want to help you facilitate your charitable shipments, but it is both in your interest and the government's to ensure that the system is not exploited for the benefit of smugglers. Perhaps you can give us more details so we can set up a coordinating system for these matters. Kaya lang sabihin ko sa inyo ang mga patakaran, ang mga nasa batas. Batas po ito. Kaya kung gusto n'yong palitan humanap kayo ng Congressman na magpapalit ng batas. Pero sa ngayon para hindi kayo mabigo sasabihin ko na ang batas. You can accept donations except old clothes as long as you are willing to pay the taxes. I think ang problema ninyo 'yung tax and duty free.

Ngayon Lions, rotary, civic club are not listed among those who are allowed to receive, to be consignees who are tax-exempt. Kaya kung gusto n'yong magdonate, halimbawa, magdo-donate kayo sa Lions ng Olongapo City, I-donate sa Olongapo City dahil ang Olongapo City 'yan ay allowed to receive duty free — cities and provinces. City governments and provincial governments are allowed to receive duty free but not municipalities. If you want to give the municipality — well, like the municipality of Subic in Zambales — it will have to be to the province of Zambales. And you ask them to give it to the municipality of Subic. If you want to have duty free, but if you don't wanna go through the government, you can go ahead. You just pay taxes. 'Yan ang klarong-klaro. Why except old clothes? Kasi may batas na sinasabi old clothes cannot be imported. So there is a law that says old clothes cannot be imported in commercial quantities. Kaya ‘yan ay sumusunod ang DSWD sa batas na ‘yan. So if people want to donate old clothes sabihin n’yo perahin na lang. At dito na lang n’yo bilingin ‘yung mga damit. So I hope that these laws — they are not rules they are laws — are clarified. Because the times call for selflessness and a genuine desire to see the poor improve their lives.

I recall the words of my father, the late president Diosdado Macapagal, who said: “the chosen leader of the nation is expected to give his best, to work his hardest, and to bear hardship.” Kanina sabi ni Kate,” ma’am, I don’t know where you get your energy.” I get it from what my father said, “the leader is expected to bear hardship.” Pero I don’t know where she gets her energy. Mutual admiration society.

In any case, these words ring true not only for presidents but for every leader who genuinely has the people’s interests at heart including civic leaders. Everyone who subscribes to the vision of the original Lion, Melvin Jones is a leader. And a leader is always a slave to the people.

So let us be united in all our efforts for the good of the community. Only then can we succeed in our fight against poverty. Only then will we be able to build a stable and secure nation for all generations of Filipinos.

I wish to commend every Philippine Lion and lioness for their continued demonstration of selflessness and concern for people. Carry on with a big roar! And carry on with a big heart.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the 53rd Multiple District Lions State Convention. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225502/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8282&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the AFP Turnover of Command

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the AFP Turnover of Command

[Delivered at the GHQ Grandstand, Camp Aguinaldo, May 18, 2002]

Thank you very much, Secretary Angelo Reyes.

Gen. Diomedio Villanueva. For the last time I will call him Lt. Gen. Roy Cimatú because I have just signed his appointment as General Roy Cimatú.

I would also like to join in welcoming to the Philippines Admiral Thomas Fargo, the Commander in Chief of the Pacific; and to welcome him especially because this is his first official trip after assuming his post as commander in Chief of CNCPAC. He likes the Philippines very much because Roy Golez's his classmate in Annapolis.

I would like to, having mentioned Roy Golez and Angelo Reyes, I would like to greet also the other Cabinet Members who are here, and of course the members of the Boards of Generals of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, as well as the Philippine National Police headed by General Leandro Mendoza.

I would like to greet the Senators, Senator Ramon Magsaysay, Chairman of the Committee on National Defense; and Senator Rodolfo Biazon who is here not sitting with the senators but sitting with his fellow former Chiefs of Staff, and with him I would like to greet the other former Chiefs of Staff.

I would like to greet our local government officials who have already been mentioned by name and also our members of the House of Representatives who have not all been mentioned by name — and I hope I have the list complete. General Cimatú mentioned already Congressman Salapudin, I would also like to greet Congressman Rudy Albano, Congressman Abdullah Dimaporo, Congressman Munir Arbison, Congressman Ernie Clarete, Congressman Constantino Jaraula, Congressman Romualdo Vicencio, and Congressman Harry Angpin.

I would also like to greet the members of the Diplomatic Corps and the members of the Defense Armed Forces Attache.

Troop commander, give the troops tikas pahinga.

Once again, we witness a great tradition as the command changes hands today. And once again it is from an excellent officer and gentleman to another equally deserving of the title of Chief of Staff.

Before I revealed my final choice for the position of Chief of Staff and even afterwards, there was the usual flurry of white papers and derogatory press feeds. I hope they now end, and I hope they do not resurface when it is time to choose the next Chief of Staff.

I can only pick one Chief of Staff at a time; and I have made my choice. And I am supremely confident that I have chosen rightly for the service and for the country — the man who will lead the AFP's tradition of fine soldiery.

But even before we officially welcome our new Chief of Staff, let me pay tribute to the outstanding soldier, officer and leader, Gen. Diomedio Villanueva, on whose shoulders I entrusted the good of our military service for the past 14 months.

I first knew of Gen. Villanueva's work when he became Commanding General of SOLCOM, and then as Vice-President I was able to observe and not just hear about his work as Commanding General of SouthCom. I also recall that we had a good conversation when he became Commanding General of the Philippine Army.

And when I became President, and decided to ask then Chief of Staff Gen. Angelo Reyes to become my Secretary of Defense, I started a round of quiet consultations on who should be my Armed Forces Chief of Staff. Some of you may recall, when I was asked by the media what criterion I would use in choosing whom to appoint, I said that I wanted one who could best keep the Armed Forces united behind the constitution. This was a subjective criterion in the sense that it was not quantifiable, but then again it demonstrates that there is reason why the Commander-in-Chief under the Philippine Constitution has the absolute prerogative to select the Armed Forces Chief of Staff.

In any case, as I consulted with middle level officers, retired officers, enlisted personnel and many other sectors, Diomedio Villanueva's excellent reputation as a soldier made him the overwhelming choice. I decided that he deserved the leadership of the command.

Since Diomeng entered the PMA. in 1964 to the time as three-star general he got into my short list as a probable Chief of Staff, he had acquired an enviable mix of combat and staff duty, academic preparation and actual field experience. Before Abubakar there was Marag Valley in the history of Diomedio Villanueva. These, plus the unflinching courage under fire, his known concern for the soldiers' welfare, and what I observed to be his virtue of living up to the admirable ethic of soldiery as depicted in the great poem, the charge of the light brigade: "theirs is not to reason why, theirs is but to do and die," and many times Diomeng Villanueva showed that though he had a different opinion from what I commanded him to do, he would do what I commanded him to do. All these made him the perfect choice for Chief of Staff during the early months of my presidency.

And Gen. Villanueva proved me right. The 14 months that he served as Chief of Staff were replete with crisis and challenges for the AFP and the whole nation. He was barely two months in his post when the mob stormed Malacañang's gates on May 1 last year and severely tested the temperance of our soldiers. But under his steely resolve and professionalism, our soldiers gallantly defended the palace while resisting the urge to fire back at the unruly crowd. By that act, the uniformed services under the leadership of Gen. Villanueva once again won the nation's trust, and showed their readiness not only in the battlefield, but in all other fields that require their discipline, courage, skills and professionalism.

Diomedio Villanueva proved true to what he said at his inaugural, for the AFP to be ready, and I quote "... To assist the new government in gathering the remains of a corrupted trust ..." General Cima, if more chairs break down, the command responsibility will go higher the chain of command. Going back to the words of General Villanueva in his inaugural address, he said that it was the job of the armed forces to create "an atmosphere of confidence for progress and in rebuilding bridges to peace."

I also congratulate Diomeng Villanueva and the entire armed forces for the many gains achieved in the past months. I am particularly pleased that the proposed national military strategy that he drew up, in response to my call last December for a review of our military doctrine, has been submitted to the Department of National Defense. I am glad that the mechanisms for the creation of the revolution in military affairs at the GHQ level are now in place, and ready for replication in the other commands nationwide. I have high hopes that this program will successfully reorient our soldiers on the role of the AFP in the 21st century and its primary mission of defending national security. I enjoin the new chief of staff to provide continuity on this and other assignments that came directly from instructions of the commander-in-chief, so that no matter how long or how short the chief-of-staff sits at the helm of the armed forces, we will not be forever reinventing the wheel.

I am also pleased that, with Gen. Villanueva sitting as Chairman of the Board of Trustees, the RSBS posted a 39 million-peso income for 2001, ending a long period of being in the red. Congratulations, Gen. Villanueva. Here again, I believe, that there should be continuity. The law calls for the Chief-of-Staff to supervise the RSBS through a Board of Directors. It does not necessarily require him to be the cChairman of the Board of the RSBS. thus, I will probably appoint a Chairman of the Board co-terminus with the Commander-in-Chief who shall be supervised by the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces.

I am confident that Gen. Roy Cimat, our 29th Chief of Staff, with his long experience in comptrollership, being one of the so-called Santolan boys, can also adequately supervise the RSBS., as I am sure he can more than adequately lead the Armed Forces given his exciting and achievement-filled war record. Gen. Cimat has had some of the toughest but I might say most glamorous assignments in the field, including the Mindanao war of 1999 and year 2000. It was he as 4th division commander who received my predecessor's order for an all-out war — a verbal order without any accompanying written operational instructions. But if secretary then Chief of Staff Angelo Reyes told him afterwards, "Gen. Pacman ..." — I haven't heard others call him the thinking general — and as thinking general he worked out the battle plan for the all-out war and carried it out to capture Camp Bilal in Munai, Camp Apo Gil in Baloi, the supposed to be impregnable Camp Bushra, and finally, together with the 6th division under Greg Camiling, Camp Abubakar itself.

Having selected for my Chief of Staff, the general who captured all those camps, I'm sure you will believe me, ladies and gentlemen of the Philippines, when I assure everyone that there is no returning of Camp Abubakar or any other camp to the MILF., contrary to either malicious or paranoid or uninformed or even well-meaning misinterpretations with regard to the back channeling peace talks of government representatives with the MILF.

Let me clarify what my instructions are with this regard. They are: to move forward in the rehabilitation and development in conflict-affected areas. In such areas within the Autonomous Region of Muslim Mindanao, consistent with its mandate under the law, the regional government of the autonomous region, headed by Governor Parouk Hussin who is here with us today, shall be responsible for and shall accelerate all rehabilitation and development efforts and activities. In such areas in Mindanao outside the autonomous region, the SPDA. shall be primarily responsible for and accelerate the same efforts and activities. The departments of the national government, through their regional and provincial offices, bureaus, and instrumentalities, including government-owned and controlled corporations, shall assist the ARMM regional government or the SPDA, as the case may be. And by way of restitution for damages caused to private property, specifically the houses that were burned during the conflict, the DPWH, the DND, through the AFP, engineering brigades, and the NHA shall assist the ARMM regional government or the SPDA., as the case may be, in building core shelter units in conflict-affected areas.

The DSWD and the DND shall assist the ARMM regional government and the SPDA in providing relief and rehabilitation to evacuees in all areas within the scope of the implementing guidelines.

The ARMM regional government shall ensure compliance with all laws pertaining to the possession and use of firearms, and in this regard, may be assisted by the Philippine National Police and the Armed Forces. In areas inside and outside the ARMM, the DND and the DILG shall form joint task forces composed of PNP and AFP to enforce the pertinent laws, consolidate intelligence against terrorists and lawless elements. The joint task force for Southwestern Mindanao is headed by the secretary of national defense, covering ARMM and Regions 9 and 12. The joint task force for northeastern Mindanao is headed by the Secretary of the Interior, covering Regions 10, 11, and CARAGA.

Of course like any other Filipino citizens or group of citizens, the MILF has the legal right to form a non-government organization to initiate and determine project proposals for funding, and to manage such proposed projects, once approved. But in this regard, the ARMM and the SPDA shall be the primary funding conduits for these projects.

I enjoin all local government units in Mindanao, especially, may I request this of the muse of South Command, Mayor Tita Caling Lobregat, and the City Mayor of my childhood town, City Mayor Franklin Quijano, and the other local officials who were mentioned by Gen. Cimat today in Mindanao, i ask them to support these accelerated efforts and activities within their territorial jurisdiction because all of this will be done within the framework of the area coordinating center that was innovated by Secretary Angelo Reyes..

It must be noted that of this date, the evacuees have returned to their places of origin or settled in their chosen new homes. Many of you may recall that I was always rushing the government agencies to speed up rehabilitation and development so that by the time we sign the agreement regarding rehabilitation and development, much of it would have been a fate accomplee — and that is the case with the evacuees, that is a fate accomplee, they have gone back to their old homes or gone to their new homes. Nevertheless, there is a continuing need to extend relief and rehabilitation in the form of appropriate services and material needs.

But we must also continue to focus on our programs of modernization.

Expanding the size of our armed forces is part of our modernization efforts — and I have authorized Secretary Reyes to work towards this. But modernization also includes the upgrade of our soldiers' benefits. I have certified as urgent the administration bill raising our soldiers' salaries to the same level as public schools teachers'.

Senator Jun Magsaysay, chairman of the committee on national defense, has sent me a note that this basic salary adjustment bill which i have certified as urgent, in his expectation will probably be passed before the end of may. So they are now in the period of individual amendments.

The welfare of the families of soldiers killed or wounded in action, also highlight our list of priorities. This is one program that Gen. Cimatú will pursue vigorously as he has mentioned in his inauguration speech.

To set our new chief of staff off to a good start, the president's social fund, I am announcing today, is donating eight million pesos to help the educate and rear orphans foundation, or hero foundation. This foundation was organized in 1989 by a group of businessmen to support the education of the children of soldiers killed or permanently disabled in action. It has already supported 1,439 scholars, and needs a fresh infusion of funds to support the growing number of school-age orphans of our military personnel. So I have here, and I would like to ask the president of hero, Mr. Pl Lim, to receive my first release worth four million pesos of this donation; and I would like to thank hero chairman, Don Jaime Zobel de Ayala, and the members of the board, that includes former Executive Secretary Rene de Villa, who is right now abroad, for their tireless effort to help our soldiers and their families.

Gen. Cimatú, carry on the tradition of valor, service and professionalism that is the mark of the great Filipino soldier.

Gen. Villanueva, congratulations for a job well done and welcome to corporate life.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the AFP Turnover of Command. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225453/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8278&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Conferment Ceremonies of Doctor of Laws Degree Honoris Causa by Waseda University in Japan

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Conferment Ceremonies of Doctor of Laws Degree Honoris Causa by Waseda University in Japan

[Delivered at the The Masaku Ibuka Auditorium, International Conference Center Waseda University, Tokyo, Japan, May 20, 2002]

Mr. Takayasu Okushima, President, Waseda University; Mr. Katsuhiko Sirai, Vice President, Waseda University; Mr. Norio Okusawa, Vice President, Waseda University; Mr. Hikota Fuguchi, dean of academic affairs; Mr. Yasusi Kekuchi, Professor Institute of Pacific Studies; members of the diplomatic corps; members of the Philippine delegation; faculties; staff and students of Waseda University; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I am deeply honored to receive this Doctorate of Law from one of the most prestigious universities in Asia and the world — Waseda University.

Your institution is renowned not only for its academic excellence but also for its valuable contributions to Japanese society. Throughout its 120 years of existence, Waseda has provided this country with leaders and role models in the various fields — the natural and social sciences especially law and economics.

I feel a special affinity for Waseda University, which has institutional ties with my alma mater, the University of the Philippines. Waseda also has academic ties with two other Philippine universities — De La Salle University and Mapua Institute of Technology — under Waseda's Global Network Program. And I am very happy to learn also that soon my other alma mater, the Ateneo de Manila University, may also join Waseda's Global Network Program.

My degree from the University of the Philippines was in economics. Now, this conferment of a Doctorate in Laws brings me closer to my father's achievement, the late president Diosdado Macapagal, who held two doctoral degrees — one in economics and the other in law.

Incidentally, it was during the presidency of my father that my country had the honor of receiving the state visit of their imperial majesties the emperor and empress of Japan when they were still crown prince and princess.

My father taught me that beyond the rules and jurisprudence, law is a force for empowering the poor. In the Philippines, the overarching mission of my administration is to address the plight of the underprivileged who make up 40 percent of Philippine society.

I realize that to ensure the welfare of peoples, states must not only strengthen international institutions and regulatory systems and laws, but must also strengthen rule making and universal norms — international laws, if you wish — in such areas as trade, environment and security. I would like to speak on each of these three areas.

The environment is one area that should top our global agenda where norms must be agreed upon and properly addressed. For instance, the Kyoto protocol deserves special mention, because it outlines the specific measures which the international community has agreed upon to reduce greenhouse gases based on scientific findings.

At the 1992 Earth Summit Rio, governments signed the framework convention on climate change, an international treaty that set the goal of preventing a dangerous disruption in the climate change caused by human activity. But the concrete plan for reducing greenhouse gases was set forth by the Kyoto protocol in 1997, where 160 nations met and negotiated and agreed that the world's 41 industrial nations would cut emissions by 5.5 percent below 1990 levels by the year 2012. The determination of industrialized economies such as Japan and the European nations to make the agreement a success is truly reassuring.

Another area where norms are crucial, international norms is the economy. Trade expansion and market access are necessary to further spur growth in our economies. But the New Doha round of negotiations under the world trade organization must be a development round. It must be broad enough to include areas that would benefit all members, but at the same time, it must not be so broad as to entail commitments that would be burdensome on some members especially the developing countries.

Since many members are still striving to implement commitments agreed upon in the previous Uruguay round, it is important if we have a development approach. We need an approach that would be more sustainable and with reinforced credibility and trustworthiness in the economic world. Because if we impose too much on developing countries, then it would not be a credible development round.

Secondly, the new round should mainstream economic trends, particularly global trade into a wider development agenda of eradicating poverty. To do this, there should be greater coherence and policies among international development institutions. In other words, among WTO, the World Bank, the IMF, the Asian Development Bank.

The trade regime must accord sufficient flexibility to developing countries for them to pursue development goals such as poverty alleviation and capacity building in areas where the implementation of rules negotiated under the Uruguay round had been difficult. For instance, developing countries have found difficulty in the rules regarding valuation, in trade investment measures, in trade related intellectual properties, in sanitary and phyto-sanitary standards, in technical barriers to trade. In all these, there should be sufficient concern for the capacity building and flexibility of developing countries. Thus, the Philippines looks at the Doha round as an area where we choose what we want to support in the negotiations or what we do not want to support. If the negotiations will be difficult for the Philippine development then we oppose these negotiations.

For instance, the Philippines opposes certain negotiations in the following: labor, the environment, competition policy, and investment. There are other areas where the Philippines has agreed to join the consensus. In other words, if the rest of the countries want to proceed with negotiations, we will agree. If the rest of the countries feel that negotiations should not move forward, we will agree as well. So we would have no specific prejudice for any particular outcome. These areas are the following: trade facilitation, transparency and openness in government procurement, and the liberalization of e-commerce. So this is an area where it is very important to develop new rules of the game. The Doha round of the WTO. These are areas where international economic laws will have to be developed in the 21st century.

But, the field where norms are perhaps most critical in the 21st century, is also the most sensitive area in global relations, and that is security. The world used to tend to take security for granted. But after September 11, we have seen that even terrorism can ride the wave of globalization. Therefore, there must be international laws and international rules to address human security.

We have been successfully cultivating economic linkages in the Asia Pacific. But if we are to progress to a true regional community, we have to cultivate deeper security relations as well in the Asia Pacific.

The ASEAN regional forum or ARF has a loose structure, but it has allowed us to advance into the security frontier. Its major achievement has been confidence building. Still there is a need for ARF to advance further into preventive diplomacy in conflict resolution. It may be time for our region to explore more formal regional security arrangements. In suggesting this, two major considerations must be borned in mind:

First, full importance should still be accorded to bilateral arrangements and even multilateral initiatives in order to ensure multiple linkages; second, there should be no intention at all to fashion a regional alliance like NATO which specifically aims at campaigning military crisis.

An organization with a more comprehensive outlook is preferable, incorporating not only political and security considerations but also economic and human security, and even environmental cooperation. In this regard, the Asia-Pacific may learn from the ARF, which is right now only ASEAN. The ARF has more potentials as a legally oriented organization. It operates by consensus and depends on its members conforming to norms and acting upon principles they have defined and agreed to.

As recently as a decade ago, the very proposal of a multilateral mechanism for regional security was not a welcome idea. During an ASEAN Post-Ministerial Conference in 1991, however, Japan proposed a multilateral forum that would discuss regional security issues. Many parties immediately expressed reservations. However, soon enough the parties proved to be quick in seeing the logic and soundness of the proposal. The U.S. in fact proposed a multilateral security dialogue in Asia in 1993 as one of the pillars of a new Pacific community. An ASEAN Post-Ministerial Conference took this up that same year, and in July the following year, the ASEAN Regional Forum was born.

The keys to a prosperous and stable Asia Pacific region are multiple linkages, and this would have to include a security dimension as well. The organization of American states and the organization for African unity are providing such a comprehensive approach to regional problems in the Americas and Africa, respectively. We should have a similar mechanism for our part of the world.

We are being called upon to accelerate our broad-base and multiple linkages because the end of the cold war has changed the global security configuration. The immediate security problems no longer arise from strong states, but from the internal breakdown of the weak states, or those that are failing or have already failed. These are the territories where systemic breakdown has occurred, where citizens have to contend with communal strife, criminality, civil war, mass starvation, and in some cases, with mass destruction of human lives.

Where we would uphold non-interference in domestic affairs as a cardinal principle of international relations, we find it difficult to remain indifferent bystanders when we are real-time witnesses to genocide or to other abuse by a state of the rights and dignity of its population, or to human catastrophes in failed states.

Our common humanity entails us to take action as an international community. Aside from humanitarian considerations, we know the fact that the disorder in failed states can be exploited by other states or non-state actors. For instance, Afghanistan has demonstrated that failed states can become a base of operations for terrorists. Elsewhere, failed states as a no man's land can become a safe haven for criminals or the dumping grounds of toxic waste or other harmful materials. For these reasons, the international community has a vested interest in rescuing failed states. The important policy questions are by whom and with what degree of commitment. The United Nations is universally regarded as having the authority for concerted action in failed states. To the reassurance of the world, it has acted several times in this capacity.

Recently, however, the U.N. has begun delegating some stages of intervention to what we call coalitions of the willing. This is now the preferred mechanism for dealing with failed states. It not only prevents unilateral actions by single actors, but it also helps guarantee the sustainability of policy implementation.

Let me give examples of how coalitions of the willing have helped. In our part of the world, Cambodia and East Timor are examples of how the concerted efforts of interested parties have helped ensure regional stability. And I am proud to say that the association of Southeast Asian nations or ASEAN was very active in nursing Cambodia back to health in the early 1990s. As for East Timor, which will inaugurate its independence today, Japan and the Philippines are cooperating to ensure that East Timor will have stronger state institutions under the Japan-Philippines partnership program, which is a form of south-south cooperation. This was signed in Manila last January 9th. Japan, through JICA, has been promoting south-south cooperation where developing countries which have shown expertise in certain development areas are assisted in extending technical know-how to less developed countries such as through third party expert programs. Japan also has partnership programs with Singapore and Thailand. This arrangement — south-south cooperation — involves a donor country or agency, and that is usually Japan. But the U.N., through the UNDP, is also active in promoting this type of technical assistance.

The challenges to the 21st century are daunting. Today, more than ever, I believe, as did the young reformers of the Meiji period during Japan's rapid modernization, that a nation will stand or fall on how well it could train and educate its people.

I congratulate Waseda for its contributions to Japan's greatness. And I thank Waseda for giving me this doctorate in law. Because now having earned a doctorate in law from the great Waseda University, I find it now my duty to study more not only about economics but also about international norms and rules especially in the areas that I talked about — trade, the environment and security. And I hope that if all of us will do this kind of study, all the faculty, all the students of Waseda, then Waseda's principles and teachings would have contributed to peace and prosperity as it has contributed in the past, it will contribute once again to peace and prosperity in the 21st century.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Conferment Ceremonies of Doctor of Laws Degree Honoris Causa by Waseda University in Japan. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225433/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8272&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 8th International Conference on the Future of Asia

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the 8th International Conference on the Future of Asia

[Delivered at the Tsuru-Nishi room, Hotel New Otani, Tokyo, Japan, May 21, 2002]

Thank you very much.

First of all, I would to greet my colleague from Laos, Prime Minister Vorachith, who was my recent visitor in Manila; Mr. Tsuruta, President of Nikkei. Thank you for inviting me here; Mr. Sugita, Executive Vice President; participants of the 8th International Conference on the future of Asia; members of the Philippine delegation; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I would like to thank Nikkei for inviting me to this conference, which is a wellspring of leadership, competence and commitment. The insights we shall gain will serve well our respective nations and peoples, as well as our collective interests.

The year 2001 may be a year many countries would want to forget. With the sharp contraction of the global ICT industry, many economies underwent recession or stagnation. Then, just as the prospects for global recovery were improving, the September 11 terrorist attacks came and changed the world altogether.

On top of these external shocks, we, in the Philippines had to contend with internal problems.

When I assumed office in January 2001, business confidence was at its lowest ebb. The political scandal involving my predecessor had induced capital flight, raising up interest rates and the inflation rate and sinking the value of the peso to historic lows. Upon assuming the presidency, my urgent task was the restoration of the country's financial health.

I told the Filipino people that we must be bold in our national ambitions so that our challenge must be that within this decade, we will win the fight against poverty. I told our policymakers that to succeed, our national agenda must revolve around four components: first, an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; second, a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity; third, a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan; and fourth, to raise the standards of morality in government and society.

My economic team — some of whom are here with us today — initiated a budget deficit reduction program in order to prevent government from crowding out the private sector for investment funds.

On the monetary side, my administration focused on price stability as the main objective. The results of these policies have been gratifying. In a bleak global landscape, our economy registered a real GNP growth rate of 3.7 percent. Inflation and interest rates fell, reaching historic lows this time. The spreads of the country's sovereign issuances have become narrower, making future government borrowings cheaper. The major credit rating agencies have upgraded our country's credit rating outlook from negative to stable. The peso-dollar exchange rate has stabilized despite the decline in exports due to the slowdown of our major markets. In fact, gross international reserves now stand at an all time high.

The explanation for our economic performance is the hard work of the Filipino people, the good policies and the assistance of friendly countries such as Japan.

Private analysts and multilateral agencies, such as the Asian Development Bank and the international monetary fund, attest that the Philippines has the strength and capacity to build on our achievement.

Central to our future is Japan. As the largest economy in the region, Japan led East Asia's economic transformation during the latter part of the 20th century. As the Philippines largest source of official development assistance, Japan enabled the Philippines rapid recovery during this past difficult year.

Today, Japan is embarking on major industrial reforms and fiscal restructuring. The success of Japan's efforts in reviving its economy is crucial to the regional and global economy of the 21st century. I praise Japan for its continuing economic leadership and i have full confidence in Japan's economic recovery.

The Philippines is optimistic about Japan. I hold the view that Japan will continue to be the region's economic leader because of its technological and financial capital. Japan is far ahead of other countries in the region.

I am informed that the world's fastest computer has been made operational by Japan. This is clear proof of a sharp competitive edge in technology.

The macro-economic policies adapted by my government in the Philippines positioned us well in taking advantage of the expected recovery of Japan and the u.s. and other positive external developments, foremost of which is the resulting rebound in exports and investments. Their expected rebound will hopefully accelerate our GDP growth.

We are committed to foster development to uplift the lives of the poor in the Philippines. We are strengthening the pillars of our house to meet the challenges and opportunities of the global environment.

The Philippines is fortunate to be at the center of the action because East Asia is projected to be the hub of the highest growth in the world in this century.

In the main, I believe, Japanese economic leadership, coupled with China's emerging market and a revived u.s. economy will be the engines of growth for our region.

Let me now talk about China's emerging market. We, in ASEAN, welcomed China's accession to the world trade organization. This accession indicated China's determination to play by global trading rules and added another venue where ASEAN can engage with China constructively.

There are concerns that china would be a formidable competitor for ASEAN. But let me point out that ASEAN exporters have been competing with china in major markets for more than 20 years now ever since China obtained most favored status from the U.D. in 1980.

In this sense, China's entry into the WTO's to Asean's advantage because china has come into the ambit of universal norms in exchange for its' most favored nation' status.

China's emergence as a market economy has not been a zero-sum competition with ASEAN. We may have similar export policies and we both experienced an increase in comparative advantage in labor-intensive manufactured exports. However, complementarities within manufacturing industries along horizontal divisions of labor have enabled ASEAN to take advantage of niche markets and design differentiation.

This is the reason why ASEAN is able to trade with China. ASEAN-China trade totalled 39.5 billion U.S. dollars in the year 2000. A case in point, in the semiconductor industry of the Philippines. Demand for this component in china has led to a hundred fold increase from 1995 to 2001.

Industrial manufactures now account for 62 percent of Philippine exports to China. And electronics such as semiconductors and other components account for 90 percent of this type of exports.

In the short-term, China may add to competitive pressures on ASEAN economies. However, in the long run, China's market would function as a magnet for products and services in the region. The agenda for ASEAN firms is how to remain efficient and market savvy.

Market efficiency is the fundamental logic that fuels ASEAN efforts to accelerate and expand the ASEAN free trade area or AFTA. Starting this year, the six original signatories of AFTA have reached zero to 5 percent tariffs in their trade among themselves and are steadily harmonizing product standards. ASEAN subscribes to the belief that healthy competition leads to better allocation of resources.

A free trade area between ASEAN and China would upgrade market efficiencies. It would also have an effect on investment flows which are now heavily in China's favor. The steep increase in foreign-direct investments into China cannot be explained by cheap labor or incentives alone, because ASEAN is also competitive in these areas.

The rush into China is more than anything a race to secure a foothold in its huge consumer market. Here then is another incentive for creating an ASEAN-China free trade area. Large integrated markets, not small fragmented ones are what attracts investors. Integrating markets make sense. ASEAN's population is 500 million as against China's 1.3 billion. But ASEAN's GDP is almost the same size as China's. Combining them would give birth to a market of 1.8 billion consumers or almost one-third of humanity.

The wide variety of traditional strengths, talent and natural resources of the two areas would shape the contours of this giant consumer market. As it evolves, investment flows would be redistributed in the future.

The Japanese consultant Kimichi Omae has pointed out that the China exporting to Japan is not actually made up of Chinese firms but is part of a production system conceived in Japan that simply uses Chinese land and labor. Since China by itself would not have been able to penetrate the Japanese market, he said, it is basically still a case of Japan competing with Japan.

To build an AFTA, a number of ASEAN member countries have suggested multiplying the Japan-Singapore Economic Partnership Agreement or EPA. This EPA promotes not only trade but also science and technology, tourism, human resources development and other important sectors of the economy.

If replicated elsewhere in ASEAN, multiple EPAs would enable Japan to amplify its competitive advantages in technology especially in ICT, biotechnology and environmental technology using the competitive advantages of ASEAN.

Regional and bilateral trade agreements, as long as these remain as open arrangements, complement and strengthen the multilateral system of the WTO.

The Philippines supports the New Doha round under the WTO, which is meant to further strengthen the principle of non-discrimination and thereby ensure an open global trading system.

Developing countries have devoted their collective energies to ensure that the Doha round of the WTO would be a truly developmental round and that it would bring about a more equitable outcome. Economies that have adopted market-driven policies should be rewarded by more open markets especially for products that are particularly important to us.

Regional and bilateral trade areas are hubs of open regionalism. The task before us is how to expand our cooperation to other areas to create interlocking linkages. ASEAN should foster multiple linkages in such areas as finance, energy, environment, and peace and security in this part of the world.

As the 1997 Asian financial crisis showed the landscape of globalization is littered with quicksand. Global capital is suspect. To shelter ourselves from destabilizing flaws, we have set up a network of bilateral swap arrangements under the Chiang Mai initiative within the ASEAN plus three framework. We welcome the additional protection offered recently by the arrangement between the central banks of China and Japan.

Since China and Japan have the largest foreign exchange reserves in the world, this agreement fortifies the region's firewall against speculative attacks. The network of currency swap arrangement is the first step toward much deeper financial and monetary cooperation in East Asia. In the future, we can further explore the feasibility of having a common basket of currencies.

Aside from finance, the time is ripe for cooperation in the energy sector. The continued growth of our economies would depend on a stable supply of energy at a competitive price relative to other regions. The European union has demonstrated, from its beginnings as the European coal and steel community, that energy can be a catalyst for regional cooperation.

The region can, for example, explore cooperation in common stockpiles of oil, environmental quality control on oil products, interconnecting power systems and utilization of natural gas.

On the environment, our cooperation must be underlined by the absence of borders. China's cooperation is vital in environmental issues.

In laying the groundwork for multiple linkages, East Asia must cultivate an environment of peace and security. Security problems now ride the tide of globalization. Thus, it is important to present a united front against terrorism and international crime such as illegal trafficking of women and children, and money laundering. But much farther than that we must recognize that beyond physical security, there is the broader concept of human security which relates to basic human needs such as food, shelter, education and employment.

Unless, both physical and human security are effectively addressed, impoverished and disillusioned communities will continue to be the recruitment grounds for terrorism.

Japan's leadership in the reconstruction of Afghanistan is a prime example of the keen awareness of the paramount value of human security.

ASEAN has done its share in mitigating disputes in the region. It has seen to the smooth transition to political stability by Cambodia and East Timor, and acts as the nexus of the ASEAN regional forum, a major venue of constant dialogue among the powers in the Asia Pacific.

This ARF has been instrumental in ensuring peace and stability in the South China Sea. In all spheres of cooperation, from currency swap arrangements, to ensuring regional security, the role of Japan is crucial. It is by engaging in multiple linkages with the other economies of Asia that Japan can guarantee its stability and growth into the future. And may I say once again, I have full faith and confidence in Japan's leadership and in Japan's economic recovery.

More than a century ago, in 1886, a young Japanese author named Tokotomi Soho, wrote a book titled The Future of Japan. after analyzing European geopolitics in the 19th century, Soho said that the world of might would be replaced by the world of wealth. And he predicted that interdependence especially through trade will become the path to peace.

The challenge before us, in East and South East Asia, is how to integrate our multiple linkages into a common vision for the rest of the 21st century.

All countries today aspire for pacific solutions. We share the same prayers for peace, good health, justice, dignity and prosperity for our peoples. And most of all, we all believe we can achieve much more by acting together.

Building peace and attaining prosperity in East Asia would be our noblest contribution to the world.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 8th International Conference on the Future of Asia. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225426/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8269&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Luncheon hosted by the Foreign Correspondents Club In Japan (FCCJ)

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Luncheon hosted by the Foreign Correspondents Club In Japan (FCCJ)

[Delivered at the Pen and Quill Dining Room, Yurakucho Denki Bldg., Tokyo, Japan, May 21, 2002]

Thank you very much Abiko San.

Other officers and members of the Foreign Correspondents Club of Japan; members of the Philippine delegation; Philippine journalists and correspondents present; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I am very honored to be here. This is an esteemed club of foreign journalists and media practitioners in Japan. Having opened its doors to journalists in the aftermath of the second World War, the FCCJ enjoys preeminence as an institution of authority in the analyses and reporting of Japan's post-war and modern history. It has been a real-time witness to Japan's transformation. And also many of who you are based here are also covering the Philippine beat.

A new regional environment has emerged in East Asia, characterized by growing political and economic relations among its states, both at the bilateral and regional planes.

The 1997 Asian financial crisis awakened countries in East Asia to their economic and financial interdependence, compelling them to coordinate closely their monetary and financial policies. As a result, there has been greater commitment to identify new opportunities for regional cooperation within the framework of Asean. The Asean-China, Japan and Republic of Korea dialogue has also been transformed into an effective instrument for economic and financial cooperation. Regional integration is taking place, and a sense of East Asian regionalism is evolving.

The Philippines welcomes this trend. I believe our regional economic integration will bring us not only more economic prosperity, but also greater political stability.

Central to this future is Japan. We are optimistic about Japan. As the largest economy in the region, Japan has led East Asia's economic transformation during the latter part of the 20th century. And today, Japan is embarking on major industrial reforms and fiscal restructuring. The success of Japan's efforts in reviving its economy is critical to the regional and global economy of the 21st century. And may I say that I have full confidence in the economic recovery of Japan.

The Philippines is confident in the ability of Japan to undertake reforms. I hold the view that Japan will continue to be the region's economic leader, because of its technological and financial capital. Japan is far ahead of other countries in the region. I am informed that the world's fastest computer has been made operational recently by Japan, this is clear proof of a sharp competitive edge in technology.

We, too, in the Philippines, are engaged in reforms. When I took over as president in January 2001, the state of public finances was most precarious.

My new government had to act — quickly — before the worsening external environment aggravated further our domestic situation. My government instituted a budget deficit-reduction program.

Philippine monetary policy, meanwhile, focused on achieving and maintaining price stability. Efforts were made to strengthen the banking system, which had accumulated burdensome, though relatively small compared to others in the region, non-performing loans. For the equity market, stronger regulations against manipulation and insider trading were put in place.

Our macroeconomic policies for stable growth have been accompanied by long-term policies for economic restructuring. We opened more opportunities for the private sector to be the primary engine of growth. The electric power industry reform act, bottled up in congress for nine years, was finally enacted into law. This paves the way for the complete privatization of power generation, transmission and distribution in the country.

We also passed an anti-money laundering act to alleviate uncertainties attendant to financial intermediation.

The market welcomed these policies. Inflation declined from 7.9 percent in January of 2001 to 3.4 percent in February of 2002. Interest rates eased and the bellwether treasury bill rate reached its lowest level on record. This has been a boon to businesses, as it has also reinforced the government's deficit reduction program.

Despite the decline in exports, occasioned by the world's slowdown and the post September 11 decline, the foreign reserve asset position of the central bank has been manageable. Gross international reserves now stand at a record high adequate to enable us to service short-term obligations, as well as about five months of imports. The peso-dollar exchange rate has stabilized to below 50 pesos to one U.S. dollar.

Recognizing the turnaround in Philippine economic performance, the credit agencies have upgraded the country's sovereign debt rating outlook from negative to stable. The Philippines successfully launched several global bond offerings; and the California public employees' retirement system, the largest public pension fund in the United States, which made a very much publicized retreat from Asean markets, is back now in the Philippine market.

The creditable performance achieved during the difficult year of 2001 provides ground for optimism about our economic prospects in 2002 and beyond. Rising business and consumer confidence is invigorating domestic demand. Our exports went down by 40 percent last year and yet our GNP grew by 3.7 percent because of consumer spending and, more than that, because of gross domestic capital formation. Along with the expected economic recovery in other parts of the world, this sets the stage for further expansion in the Philippine economy.

My government projects real GDP to grow from four to 4.5 percent in 2002. We shall strive hard to realize this target and to improve on it in the years ahead.

Our growth prospects hinge much on maintaining a disciplined macroeconomic program that leads to greater stability and investment. We are vigorously pursuing our deficit-reduction program. At the same time, fiscal policy will protect and, in well-identified cases, increase spending for agricultural modernization, education and health, socialized housing, infrastructure, information and communications technology and tourism.

The deficit-reduction program will sustain the downtrend in interest rates. This will propel the recovery of industry. The revival of the banking industry is being addressed through the special purpose asset vehicle act and related bills in Congress. These laws aim to aid the banking sector unload its non-performing loans — again may I say they are smaller than around the region — and strengthen the regulatory and supervisory functions of the central bank and the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The road to sustained growth over the medium-term will be secured by efforts to improve total productivity. We are starting with agricultural modernization.

And to sharpen competitiveness, we are committed to deregulation, privatization, liberalization. We are on track in meeting our liberalization and tariff reduction targets, particularly those forged under the ASEAN free trade area, the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation and the World Trade Organization.

My administration is convinced that the best investment for sustained growth and development is good governance. We know we can win our battle against poverty more effectively and speedily if we adhere to what I call the three pillars of good governance: first, a sound moral foundation to guide our leadership at all levels; second, a philosophy of transparency in all government actions; third, an ethic of effective implementation throughout the bureaucracy.

We know, too, that our efforts require the participation and support of all sectors of our society. But our actions are not limited to the national level, we have also pursued our economic reforms within ASEAN.

These efforts, if successful, will facilitate the conclusion of a free trade agreement with China and an economic partnership agreement with Japan.

In recent months, Japan demonstrated an innovative approach in accelerating integration in East Asia through Economic Partnership Agreements, or EPA., with ASEAN countries. This year, Japan concluded its first EPA. with Singapore. We find the EPA. an attractive initiative that could involve not a just trade agreement, but also other sectors of the economy like science and technology, tourism, human resource development, and investment promotion. We, in the Philippines, are interested in the establishment of a Japan-Philippines study group on a possible EPA.

There is also a greater need to focus on regional peace and security in East Asia, especially after the 11th of September terror event. This tragic event reminded us of our collective vulnerability.

Countering terrorism is indispensable for regional stability. The Philippines and Japan were one of the first countries — Prime Minister Koizumi and I together, September 12th because I was here in Tokyo — condemned the terror attacks and pledged our firm support to the international coalition to combat terrorism.

I note Japan's swift passage of the special law on anti-terrorism and the amendments to the self-defense forces law to enable Japan to proceed with her commitment to the international coalition. I believe that with these changes in Japan's domestic laws, Japan will be able to contribute more effectively to east Asia's regional security. A good example is Japan's peacekeeping team, recently fielded to East Timor under the U.N.. flag.

My country has also been at the forefront of the fight against terrorism. Philippine cooperation with the United States within the framework of the Visiting Forces Agreement has improved Philippine defense capabilities. At the same time, it has contributed to enhanced mutual operability between the armed forces of the Philippines and that of the United States. These security gains have reinvigorated Philippine economic activities.

During my visit to Malaysia early this month, Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines signed a trilateral anti-terrorism agreement. The next day, during my visit to Bangkok, Thailand expressed its willingness to sign the agreement as well.

We did this in the belief that security has two facets: one is physical security and the other is human security.

Human security relates to basic needs like shelter, food, education, employment and sustainable development. People who have no hope for the future tend to vent their frustrations on established institutions and societies.

Japan's ODA. program has been targeted to meet the human security needs of our people. It is therefore important to consider Japanese ODA. as a necessary instrument to eliminate poverty, and thus diminish the breeding grounds for potential terrorists.

On this occasion, I would like to express our deep appreciation for Japan's continuing support for the economic development of the Philippines.

We look to the developed world not for dole-outs, but for equitable cooperation. I look to Japan to lead a dialogue that can identify the principal development issues of our region in the 21st century. Prime Minister Koizumi's initiative for development in East Asia conference this year, may be the appropriate venue to consider these issues.

Finally, let me reiterate our commitment to work with Japan and other countries to ensure a more prosperous and peaceful East Asia for the 21st century.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Luncheon hosted by the Foreign Correspondents Club In Japan (FCCJ). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225411/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8267&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Nikkei Conference Dinner

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Nikkei Conference Dinner

[Delivered at the Tsuru-Higashi Room, Hotel New Otani, Tokyo, Japan, May 21, 2002]

Thank you very much.

His excellency Prime Minister Koizumi; his Excellency Prime Minister Mahathir; his Excellency Prime Minister Bunang; Mr. Tsuruta; Mr. Sugita; participants of the 8th international conference on the future of Asia; distinguished guests; ladies and gentlemen:

I am greatly honored to join you this evening as I was honored to give the keynote address this morning.

Our deep appreciation goes to Mr. Tsuruta Sacho and Nikkei for inviting us to the 8th International Conference on the future of Asia. I would also like to express our gratitude to the Japanese government and Nikkei for the warm hospitality extended to all of us.

Since the start of the Nikkei conference on the future of Asia, the East Asian region has undergone tremendous transformation. In 1995, ASEAN only had six member countries, today we are ten. In 1997, we had the Asian financial crisis which highlighted the close interdependence of our economies. We also discovered with gladness that in times of need, East Asian countries like Japan and China are there to help us.

We came together at the ASEAN+3 Summit in Singapore in the year 2000. There we are decided to move ahead towards greater functional cooperation. As a result, we have a currency swap agreement involving Japan, China, Korea, Singapore, Malaysia, Philippines and Thailand. Eventually, this could be the foundation for an Asian Monetary Fund.

Recently, China joined the world trade organization after long and tedious negotiations. China has proposed a free-trade area with ASEAN by the year 2010 while Japan is proposing an economic partnership agreement with individual ASEAN countries. These are part of our significant benchmarks for the future.

Both of these proposals, when realized, will facilitate the formation of an East Asian free-trade area. This would create one single market of some two billion people with rising disposable incomes.

Recently, after the recession of 2001, East Asia has shown signs of positive recovery pointing to a clear path of long term economic growth. Our regional economy has fared quite well in the last few decades.

The September 11 events, however, refocused our sights on paramount concerns of global security. A closer scrutiny of our region reveals that in terms of institutions dealing with political and security issues, the region of East Asia compares quite poorly with the continent of Africa which has the organization of African union, the Americas which has the organization of American states, and Europe which has the organization for security and cooperation in Europe.

While we have under the ASEAN framework the ASEAN region forum, the institution has not developed beyond the incipient stage of confidence building measures. It is necessary to accelerate the development and strengthening of institutions dealing with political and security issues in our region.

In this context, Nikkei might wish to consider devoting a part of the future of Asia international conference to political and security institution building in East Asia.

We need a more symmetric development between our economic institutions on the one hand and those of our political security institutions in the region. Only in this way can we assure ourselves of better prospects for peace and prosperity in East Asia for the 21st century.

Thank you again, and may this gathering be an added impetus to unity and solidarity in East Asia.

Mabuhay!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Nikkei Conference Dinner. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225418/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8265&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Symposium on “ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA) and Beyond”

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Symposium on “ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA) and Beyond”

[Delivered at the Peninsula Manila Hotel, Makati City, May 30, 2002]

I would like to take this opportunity to articulate my administration’s trade policies.

The rapid pace of global integration and its depth and breadth call for a more holistic approach that goes beyond just trade policies. Such integration involves not just the flow of goods but also of services, people, ideas, and best practices of governance and of doing business.

The holistic approach starts by our own vision for our country, which is to win the battle against poverty within the decade. Our national agenda to win this battle has the following components:

First, a philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century, the century of the global marketplace. Thus our battle against poverty is interconnected to the world’s marketplace.

Second, a sectoral and social bias in our economic development plan. While we have no choice in the world today but to be guided by the signals of the market, to face the perils of the transition towards closer global economic integration, we must provide the safety nets for sectors adversely affected by globalization. This is part of our sectoral and social bias in our economic development plan.

Third, a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity; and Fourth, improving moral standards in government and in society.

To make our economy competitive, we have addressed several factors crucial to the costs of production and of doing business in the country. We have put in place policies to lower the cost of capital by developing and strengthening our financial markets. We have taken measures to reduce the cost of power, transportation, and communications which are the lifeblood of commerce, through the strong involvement of the private sector. To increase productivity we are strengthening labor-management relations, eliminating corruption and red tape, and expanding retraining programs to prepare our workforce for the demands of the new global economy.

Central to our global engagement – and hence our development agenda – is trade. Trade is not an end in itself, but must be a means to social and human development. Properly employed, trade policies enhance our access to a wider range of goods, services, technologies, and knowledge. More trade stimulates entrepreneurship, creates jobs, attracts capital, increases foreign earnings, and fosters vital learning processes. These are the tools for sustainable development and the reduction of poverty.

Thus we support a rule-based multilateral trading system which the WTO is supposed to be. Our support is based not on any attachment to an ideology, but in a practical sense, in the light of what we think works for our people.

It is imperative that the rules that underpin this system ensure that trade plays its full part in promoting economic growth, employment, and development for all. An inability to reap benefits from trade can translate into a reduced capacity to sustain imports of capital equipment and inputs and into less faith in the benefits of liberalized trade, thus undermining our ability to mobilize support for our trade policy reforms.

It does not help any therefore when developed countries persist in maintaining protectionist barriers against products of interest to developing countries like the Philippines. These include textiles and garments, and tropical, agricultural, and fisheries products. While the developed countries take every opportunity to lecture us about the virtues of a market-driven economy, hundreds of billions of dollars subsidize their farm production. James Wolfenson, the World Bank president, was recently quoted as saying that there is something fundamentally wrong in spending $300 billion annually for a small segment of society of these subsidizing countries compared to the $50 billion annually in ODA to the most impoverished countries. I would use stronger terms than Wolfenson and describe these actions as simply immoral.

These actions damage in a fundamental way the climate for – and weaken the global commitment to- the flow of trade that it risks emboldening the forces of protectionism and complicating the job of developing country trade officials.

The Doha Round has been billed as the development round. To ensure that it becomes so, I have instructed our negotiators to focus on the following goals:

To eliminate tariff escalation and tariff peaks for products of interest to developing countries and make these part of the early harvest of results.

For the WTO to make corollary efforts to lessen the burdensome requirements for developing countries to meet the stringent standards in developed country markets. Compliance in many cases has proven to be onerous and expensive. For example, our mangoes and bananas have to undergo exhaustive data collection and certification requirements lasting for years in some markets. Sad to say, sanitary requirements and technical standards seem to be the weapon of choice of protectionists.

To seek greater liberalization for the temporary entry of service providers in the General Agreement on Trade in Services, a large potential commercially meaningful area for developing countries and where support for such liberalization is strong such as in the ICT sector.

For anti-dumping actions to be made less a tool for harassment by raising the requirements for the initiation of such actions and rationalizing the standards for determining injury. These actions are resource intensive. They weigh down small business and developing countries.

To make special and differential treatment truly operational by providing more funds and resources for capacity building to enhance supply-side capacities, improve private sector competitiveness, negotiate effectively, implement trade agreements, and meet continuing obligations under those agreements. Further, I have asked our negotiators to provide for further differentiation of treatment among developing countries given the wide range of levels of development from the current two categories of least developed and developing. There are wide variations in circumstances, for example, between a Philippines and a South Korea.

We will continue to support the Cairns Group consensus that export subsidies in the agricultural sector should be eliminated. But we will make a strong case for special and differential treatment on other agricultural issues to enable us to have sufficient flexibility to pursue vital development goals such as poverty alleviation.

I also place great importance in regional trading arrangements.

I have faith in the viability of the ASEAN Free Trade Area. We cannot generate investments in adequate magnitudes unless we become part of a larger, integrated regional markets. This is the only way we can compete for markets and investments with the giants elsewhere in the world.

At the beginning of this year, the AFTA process reached a significant milestone, when the first six signatories of the AFTA agreement-Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore, and Thailand-achieved tariff levels of 0-5% on almost all goods traded among them.

But AFTA has some ways to go before becoming an effective means for strengthening the region's competitive economic position in the global market.

This is why I support ASEAN's resolve to go beyond the tariff-cutting. The leaders of ASEAN are working on the elimination of non-tariff barriers of trade. We are harmonizing our product standards and developing mutual recognition arrangements. We are negotiating the liberalization of trade in such important areas as financial services, telecommunications, construction, air and maritime transport, and tourism. We are binding the region together by expanding our transportation and energy networks and easing the flow of goods, people, and power throughout the region. We are drafting an agreement to make it easier and less expensive for tourists to come to ASEAN and to travel within ASEAN.

Closer integration is necessary for the long-term survival and prosperity of each of the ASEAN countries.

We are also looking beyond our immediate borders to extend the benefits of regional integration to our major trading partners in the region-the so-called ASEAN+3: China, Japan and South Korea.

With China's entry into the WTO, the nations of ASEAN must embark on a process of reflection regarding their own economies and for the ASEAN region as a whole to determine how they can best position themselves to ensure the continued competitiveness of their export and to capitalize on the opportunities presented by a more open China.

The China-ASEAN Free Trade Agreement will create a market of 1.8 billion people and combined GDP of $2 trillion. It is projected that this would boost ASEAN exports to China by 48% and increase ASEAN's G.D.P. by 0.9%. The benefit for the Philippines is expanding our exports to the rapidly growing Chinese market as well as cooperating with Chinese and multinational companies in the developing of manufacturing and service facilities in ASEAN that can feed their expanding mainland operations. This is an excellent opportunity to position our logistics service, manufacturing and commodity firms for strong business links with post-WTO China.

Japan's trade with ASEAN totaled more than $120 billion last year. The outlines of an ASEAN-Japan economic partnership are being fleshed together. Meantime, a "new age partnership" arrangement with the Philippines is under study.

This demonstrates that we will look for opportunities to further our economic interests through bilateral trading arrangements. It is not so easy for us to enter into such arrangements since we are a more diversified economy than, say, Singapore, therefore there are more areas for potential asymmetry in interest.

In sum, the Philippines is fashioning a development agenda based on an economy competitive in the 21st century. Our reforms aim to create a domestic environment that will enable us to reap the benefits of global economic integration while minimizing the risks to the adversely affected sectors. We are working within ASEAN to integrate and expand the regional market, so that our products and the products of those who invest in our country will have the region's half a billion people as a market.

We are also seeking, by ourselves and with our ASEAN partners, to strengthen and deepen our economic ties with countries and groups of countries beyond ASEAN-China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, India, the United States, and the European Union.

The Philippines will maintain our economic ties with the rest of the world to the extent that it is consistent with our commitments and the welfare of our people.

Thank you.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Arrival Ceremonies after a Working Visit to Japan

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Arrival Ceremonies after a Working Visit to Japan

[Delivered at the Departure Lounge, NAIA Terminal II, Pasay City, May 24, 2002]

Thank you very much.

Vice President Guingona; Senate President Drilon; Speaker de Venecia; Mr. Sadaoka, Charge de Affaires of Japan; members of the Cabinet; General Cimatú and the major service commanders of the Armed Forces of the Philippines; Mayor Francis Tolentino of the League of Cities and other officials; fellow workers in government; ladies and gentlemen:

Thank you for coming to meet me. I only wish that Executive Secretary Bert Romulo were here with us to share the results of my trip to Japan. Nevertheless, I ask the nation to join me in praying for his quick recovery.

High profile events have transpired since I left. Just before I took off last Monday, East Timor had its independence celebration. As I arrived in Tokyo, I was met with the news that the Japanese government had officially declared the end of the recession in Japan. And as I was attending an energy forum to obtain investments for the privatization of our power industry by midweek, a blackout hit the Luzon grid. In a late breaking development, we allowed five North Koreans once again safe passage through Manila for a journey home from China.

These seemingly disparate events all had a relevance to my trip to Japan. In my meetings with business and political leaders, as well as media moguls in that country, we were discussing the future of Asia and the roles of Japan, China, South Korea, Asean and the Philippines in that future. Our terms of reference were versatile and wide-ranging; they covered the entire gamut of social, economic, political and security issues.

In this light, East Timor is important because it symbolizes the need for closer regional cooperation in ensuring peace and stability under conditions of democracy and freedom. In fact, I am very happy and proud that Japan and the Philippines have a south-south cooperation for technical assistance to East Timor — funds from Japan entailed from the Philippines. The case of the five Koreans is relevant to our universal ideals of human freedom. And reemergence of Japan from recession is important because Japan continues to be the economic powerhouse of the region. It has 60 percent of the region's GDP, it has the largest capital in the region, and it has the sharpest edge in technology even today. The Luzon blackout brought into the forefront the urgent need to privatize our energy sector, which bears primordial relevance to confidence in our economy within the context of the globalized regime.

Today's axiom is that every significant political, social and economic event within each country in East Asia has reverberations that impact upon the common future of the nation. This was the consensus in my meetings in Japan; this is the consensus that will continue to shape the future of Asia.

Japan remains an important pillar in the economic growth of East Asia given, as I said, its huge capital and its sharp edge in technology — these are indispensable drivers of the information age and the knowledge society of the 21st century.

I addressed two important conferences separately sponsored by the two largest media organizations in Japan — Nikkei and Mainichi Shimbun. Prime Minister Koizumi of Japan, Prime Minister Mahathir of Malaysia and Prime Minister Vorachith of Laos were all in the Nikkei forum with me.

At that Nikkei forum spoke on an integrated East Asian economy, which would create one market of two billion people with rising disposable incomes. Along the same track, the Asean-china free trade area envisioned within the next 10 years — approved even before my term as president — and the individual economic partnership agreements of Asean members with Japan, are strong reinforcing elements of the trend towards East Asian economic integration.

I had a very spirited and very cordial meeting with Prime Minister Koizumi. We reinforced our bilateral relationships through themes of mutual confidence and earnest hopes for speedier regional integration. I took the opportunity to outline my vision of the Philippine-Japan Partnership — of marching closely with Japan and the rest of the region — consistent with Prime Minister Koizumi's view of "working and advancing together" for East Asia. In preparation for my next visit to Japan — because Japan is important enough to be visited at least twice a year, as Prime Minister Mahathir does all the time for all these decades — we will be working out a poverty alleviation proposal for Japan to fund similar to that with which it is helping countries like Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The Philippines and Japan are deeply immersed in the vision of Asian economic integration. Both countries are committed to studying the possibility of forging a bilateral economic partnership agreement or EPA. that will spell out the framework to hasten the process of economic integration.

This EPA. will encompass not just trade, it will also cover the mutual recognition of professions and skills, human resources development, and technology transfers. It will facilitate the access of our I.T. professionals and our health care professionals in the Japanese market. Prime Minister Koizumi and I agreed to have a joint study group to look into the setting up of this partnership. This working study group is led by Secretary of Trade Manuel Roxas on the Philippine side and his counterpart on the Japanese side.

I had meetings with business leaders from the top Japanese firms like Sumitomo, Mitsui, Marubeni, Mitsubishi, Tomen, Honda, Toyota, Sanyo Electric. I reassured the business leaders of the sound investment environment in the Philippines and our determined efforts to improve the peace and order situation.

I met with members of the Japan federation of economic organizations or Keidanren, which is the organization of the top business leaders of Japan. I also met with representatives of the car manufacturing sector and with the leaders of the Japan shipping industry.

In my meeting with Keidanren I spoke of our readiness to provide health care to Japan's aging citizens — because Japan has an aging population while we have a young population with many health care workers and professionals. Our tourism program can be bolstered by "medical check up tourism" in our renowned medical centers. And also caregiver facilities can be set up in conjunction with our economic zones so that Japanese expatriate communities can be developed in tandem with investment ventures in nursing care in those areas.

On the car manufacturing sector, the Japanese are ready to expand their present facilities to a higher stage of C.B.U. or complete body units or completed built up units and car parts manufacturing in the Philippines for the world market. I am encouraged by the decision made by Honda corporation, for instance, to set-up a transmission plant in the Philippines. In my last visit to Japan last September, they said they would set up this transmission plant for the Asean market. Now, in this latest visit, they said they will set it up for the world market rather than just the Asean market. This will mean more investments and more jobs.

I assured the Japanese investors of our commitment to industrial peace through a special team headed by Secretary Roxas and Secretary Sto. Tomas of the DTI and the DOLE. We agreed to join hands in establishing more proactive cooperation in industrial peace.

On the part of the ship owners, they assured me of the continued hiring of our highly skilled seafarers. On top of this, our seamen can now also take qualifying exams for management positions in Japanese vessels — ito ay isang pribilehiyo na binibigay ng Japan para sa Pilipinas lamang.

I met with leaders of the diet, both from the majority and the opposition. They have continuing faith in our country and our people.

I had a happy moment with the leaders of the Filipino community in western Japan, in Osaka. They are very proud of our country's remarkable economic performance because they can feel from personal knowledge the regional difficulties, the regional challenges that they have personal knowledge of, and they are proud and they know what an achievement it is that we have achieved our positive growth rates, a reduction in interest rates, a reduction in inflation rates. They can appreciate that these are all the more remarkable given the regional difficulties. They also urged our government to deepen our links with Japanese agencies for the benefit of the Filipino people. I thanked them for their role in keeping our economy strong and for their hearty remittances to the Philippines.

The future of East Asia now moves inexorably forward, but we must also take note of its attendant constraints. There is still a wide disparity in wealth among the countries in the region as well as within the internal boundaries of the countries of East Asia including our own. But the good thing is that the more developed countries once again recognize their obligation to nurture the weaker ones on the basis of more equitable relationships. The more developed countries once again recognize the obligation to help fight the scourge of abject poverty within the weaker economies. All of these happened in the aftermath of September 11. Now, once again, the developed countries recognize that helping the weaker countries, helping the poor especially in these weaker countries is the only way the long-term ends of regional stability and security can be attained.

In this light, I urged the Japanese government to lead in the development and strengthening of institutions dealing with political and security issues in our region. We need a more symmetric balance between our economic institutions which are quite advanced in Asean and East Asia, and our political-security institutions which are quite far behind those of Europe, Africa and the Americas. This is one way we can assure ourselves of better prospects for peace and prosperity in East Asia for the 21st century.

All in all, my trip was about regional solidarity and integration, about the fight against terrorism and the fight against poverty, about the creation of wealth and opportunity in the largest potential market in the world, which is East Asia where we are a part.

We are part of a larger world — the Philippines — and we must be prepared to face its challenges and pitfalls. While our national interest lies in recognizing the inevitability of openness, it must be characterized by strength and enlightenment, by a strong Philippines that can adapt and remain resilient amid the buffeting winds of the 21st century.

Our partnership with Japan is secure, vibrant, infused with confidence. It will serve us well in the years ahead.

I thank the lord for his blessings, and I thank our people for your faith and support.

Thank you.

*Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA'S Speech during the Arrival Ceremonies after a Working Visit to Japan. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225348/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8262&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the 40th Founding Anniversary of Angeles University

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 40th Founding Anniversary of Angeles University

[Delivered at the Angeles University Grounds, Angeles, Pampanga, May 25, 2002]

Dacal pong salamat, Mong.

I would also like to greet the officials of Pampanga and Angeles City headed by Governor Lito Lapid; our friends from the other parts of Central Luzon headed by Congressman Willy Villarama of Bulacan; our friends from Manila headed by don Emilio Yap, Chairman of Manila Bulletin; the officials of the Commission on Higher Education headed by Esther Garcia, Chairman of CHED; the members of the Angeles family and the Angeles University family, happy 40th Anniversary to all of you.

I will make my remarks very brief because I don't want you to get caught in the rain and end up in Angeles University Hospital from Pneumonia. But I just like to spend a few minutes to congratulate the administration, faculty and students of Angeles University, Happy Ruby Anniversary.

As Bishop Paciano Aniceto said, I came here almost straight from my trip to Japan because this celebration is special — it's 40 years — and it is like a homecoming for me because the Macapagal family has been a part of the Angeles University family. My father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, and I both served as chair of your board of trustees in our time. My father served as chairman of the board from 1988 to 1997 when he passed away. When he died, I took his place, but before that Angeles University gave him a deeply moving necrological service; and my mother loved the service so much and the Angeles chorus, that she requested that if she would die the Angeles university choir should be her requiem choir for her own funeral. After my father passed away I became the chair until my duties as vice-president required me to stop serving on the board. Bishop Aniceto became the chairman and my brother Boboy took my place in the board as a member.

And having known the university all these years, I commend the university's sustained and strong commitment to make quality education accessible to our people. Your mission of "total development of man for god and humanity" tells it all. You have continued to instill academic excellence among your students, and motivate them to become capable and responsible members of our society.

Relevant and quality education is the key to our country's stability and progress. It is needed to break the cycle of poverty that has been passed from generation to another. My administration is dedicated to winning the war against poverty within the decade. And education is one of the pillars of this mission.

The fight against poverty will be won, as my father put it, "not by pulling down the rich to the level of the poor, but by raising the poor towards the more abundant life." And, as my father showed the way, by personal example and deeds, by dint of sacrifice and hard work.

Diosdado Macapagal was born poor to humble tenants and suffered genuine hunger and deprivation as a child, but he fought his way out of poverty through education. He pulled himself up through education to be a bar topnotcher, a doctor of laws, a doctor of economics, and, with solid background, became congressman, vice-president and, eventually, president.

My father's story proves that beyond equipping today's youth with the necessary skills to ply the job market, education is the force of empowerment; it is the most effective counterbalance to the disabling forces of poverty.

The mission of my administration is to continue his work, to address the plight of the underprivileged, who make up more than one-third of our society. I have pledged good governance to empower the poor — to make them, and their children, look to the future with hope. In this mission, a comprehensive education program is a most vital component.

The need for an educated workforce is all the more important in today's highly interdependent world, and a world of rapid advances in technology. The cultivation of our human resources is the only way to maintain our competitive advantage in this new world, because in this new world of the 21st century, the Philippines' competitive advantage lies in its human-resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors. The Philippines is the home of the great Filipino worker.

As Monsignor Aniceto said, I just arrived from Japan yesterday, together with Manny Angeles, whom as you know I pirated from Angeles university to become the president of Clark Development Corporation. The pervading theme in my meeting with the top political and business leaders of Japan was the future of Asia. It was the consensus that the future of Asia belongs to a great regional market, the largest market in the world — where goods, services, skills, technologies and political ideas are exchanged through multiple linkages among peoples, governments and institutions.

This world of regional consolidation will largely be driven by educational systems designed to equalize the opportunities for development and progress, not only in the regional community, but within the nations in it. In our own land, we must equalize these opportunities by improving the productivity of the poor, and pursuing their political and social empowerment.

In sum, our victory against poverty depends on productivity enabled by education. The task begins in our schools, our goal is for every Filipino to find gainful employment.

When I became president last year, the unemployment rate I inherited was 11.3 percent. This is now down to 10.3 percent, because our economy was able to create an additional 1.5 million jobs this past year.

But we need to create jobs for 2.4 million people. And this we will achieve by pursuing more vigorously the employment-promotions strategies embodied in the medium-term Philippine development plan for 2001-2004.

The medium-term Philippine development plan has four components: first, promoting a philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. Second, agricultural modernization founded on social equity. Third, a social bias for the poor in our development plan. And fourth, improving moral standards in government and in society.

Because last year we knew the export market would collapse as a result of the global slowdown, we concentrated on developing new employment opportunities in the domestic labor market — and we were successful. For instance, in agriculture, we have given our administration the goal of creating one million new jobs by 2004, and we have almost reached this already and it is only the first part of 2002.

10.3 percent is our national unemployment rate now but in region iii, as we learned in the regional development council meeting just now, is 11.3. That means that Region III's unemployment is higher than national average. However, I am quite sure this is not because of Pampanga because Pampanga, together with Bulacan, are two of the 10 provinces in the country with the highest human development index. So it is in the other parts of Region III.

But Angeles City, Clark Development Area, these areas have the responsibility of bringing about economic development for the rest of Central Luzon.

If it were not raining I would give you a lecture on the w corridor of our medium-term plan for Central Luzon. But it's raining so that's a message from the Lord for me not to give a lecture even if it's so tempting given as I am in a university complex and I am in this front of this building which is the last building inaugurated by my father when he was still chairman of the board of Angeles University. Suffice it to say, however, that Manny Angeles knows the details of those plans, and as president of Clark Development Corporation, that's why he has taken a leave from being president of Angeles University, he will take care of helping lead the economic development not only of Angeles city and Mabalacat where Clark belongs but also the whole of Pampanga and the whole of Central Luzon; and I believe he is one of Angeles University's most important contributions to the economy of our country.

Once again, to all of us — my father from heaven is reminding me that's why it's raining harder again — to all, from all of us, Happy Ruby Anniversary and congratulations, Angeles University.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the 40th Founding Anniversary of Angeles University. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225338/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8261&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Symposium on “ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA) and Beyond”

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Symposium on “ASEAN Free TRADE AREA (AFTA) and Beyond”

[Delivered at the Peninsula Manila Hotel, Makati City, May 30, 2002]

I would like to take this opportunity to articulate my administration’s trade policies.

The rapid pace of global integration and its depth and breadth call for a more holistic approach that goes beyond just trade policies. Such integration involves not just the flow of goods but also of services, people, ideas, and best practices of governance and of doing business.

The holistic approach starts by our own vision for our country, which to win the battle against poverty within the decade. Our national agenda to win this battle has the following components:

- First, a philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century, the century of the global marketplace. Thus our battle against poverty is interconnected to the world’s marketplace.
- Second, a sectoral and social bias in our economic development plan. While we have no choice in the world today but to be guided by the signals of the market, to face the perils of the transition towards closer global economic integration, we must provide the safety nets for sectors adversely affected by globalization. This is part of our sectoral and social bias in our economic development plan.
- Third, a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity; and
- Fourth, improving moral standards in government and in society.

To make our economy competitive, we have addressed several factors crucial to the costs of production and of doing business in the country. We have put in place policies to lower the cost of capital by developing and strengthening our financial markets. We have taken measures to reduce the cost of power, transportation, and communications which are the lifeblood of commerce, through the strong involvement of the private sector. To increase productivity we are strengthening labor-management relations, eliminating corruption and red tape, and expanding retraining programs to prepare our workforce for the demands of the new global economy.

Central to our global engagement – and hence our development agenda—is trade. Trade is not an end in itself, but must be a means to social and human development. Properly employed, trade policies enhance our access to a wider range of goods, services, technologies and knowledge. More trade stimulates entrepreneurship, creates jobs, attracts capital, increases foreign earnings, and fosters vital learning processes. These are the tools for sustainable development and the reduction of poverty.

Thus we support a rule-based multilateral trading system which the W.T.O. is supposed to be. Our support is based not on any attachment to an ideology, but in a practical sense, in the light of what we think works for our people.

It is imperative that the rules that underpin this system ensure that trade plays its full part in promoting economic growth, employment, and development for all. An inability to reap benefits from trade can translate into a reduced capacity to sustain imports of capital equipment and inputs and into less faith in the benefits of liberalized trade, thus undermining our ability to mobilize support for our trade policy reforms.

It does not help any therefore when developed countries persist in maintaining protectionist barriers against products of interest to developing countries like the Philippines. These include textiles and garments and tropical agricultural and fisheries products. While the developed countries take every opportunity to lecture us about the virtues of a market-driven economy, hundreds of billions of dollars subsidize their farm production. James Wolfenson, the World Bank president, was recently quoted as saying that there is something fundamentally wrong in spending $300 billion annually for a small segment of society of these subsidizing countries compared to the $50 billion annually in O.D.A. to the most impoverished countries. I would use stronger terms than Wolfenson and describe these actions as simply immoral.

These actions damage in a fundamental way the climate for — and weaken the global commitment to — the flow of trade that it risks emboldening the forces of protectionism and complicating the job of developing country trade officials.

The Doha round has been billed as the development round. To ensure that it becomes so I have instructed our negotiators to focus on the following goals:

- To eliminate tariff escalation and tariff peaks for products of interest to developing countries and make these part of the early harvest of results.
- For the W.T.O. to make corollary efforts to lessen the burdensome requirements for developing countries to meet the stringent standards in developed country markets. Compliance in many cases has proven to be onerous and expensive. For example, our mangoes and bananas have to undergo exhaustive data collection and certification requirements lasting for year, in some markets. Sad to say, sanitary requirements and technical standards seem to be the weapon of choice of protectionists.
- To seek greater liberalization of the temporary entry of service providers in the General Agreement on Trade in Services, a large potential commercially meaningful area for developing countries and where support for such liberalization is strong such as in the I.C.T. sector.
- For anti-dumping actions to be made less a tool for harassment by raising the requirements for the initiation of such actions and rationalizing the standards for determining injury. These actions are resource intensive. They weigh down small business and developing countries.
- To make special and differential treatment truly operational by providing more funds and resources for capacity building to enhance supply-side capacities, improve private sector competitiveness, negotiate effectively, implement trade agreements, and meet continuing obligations under those agreements. Further I have asked our negotiators to provide for further differentiation of treatment among developing countries given the wide range of levels of development from the current two categories of least developed and developing. There are wide variations in circumstances, for example, between a Philippines and a South Korea.

We will continue to support the Cairns Group consensus that export subsidies in the agricultural sector should be eliminated. But we will make a strong case for special and differential treatment on other agricultural issues to enable us to have sufficient flexibility to pursue vital development goals such as poverty alleviation.

I also place great importance in regional trading arrangements.

I have faith in the viability of the Asean Free Trade Area. We cannot generate investments in adequate magnitudes unless we become part of a larger, integrated regional markets. This is the only way we can compete for markets and investments with the giants elsewhere in the world.

At the beginning of this year, the AFTA process reached a significant milestone, when the first six signatories of the AFTA agreement—Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore, and Thailand—achieved tariff levels of 0-5% on almost all goods traded among them.

But AFTA has some ways to go before becoming an effective means for strengthening the region's competitive economic position on the global market.

This is why I support Asean's resolve to go beyond the tariff-cutting. The leaders of Asean are working on the elimination of non-tariff barriers of trade. We are harmonizing our product standards and developing mutual recognition arrangements. We are negotiating the liberalization of trade in such important areas as financial services, telecommunications, construction, air and maritime transport, and tourism. We are binding the region together by expanding our transportation and energy networks and easing the flow of goods, people, and power throughout the region. We are drafting an agreement to make it easier and less expensive for tourists to come to Asean and to travel within Asean.

Closer integration is necessary for the long-term survival and prosperity of each of the Asean countries.

We are also looking beyond our immediate borders to extend the benefits of regional integration to our major trading partners in the region—the so-called Asean+3 of China, Japan and South Korea.

With China's entry into the W.T.O., the nations of Asean must embark on a process of reflection regarding their own economies and for the Asean region as a whole to determine how they can best position themselves to ensure the continued competitiveness of their export and to capitalize on the opportunities presented by a more open China.

The China-Asean Free Trade Agreement will create a market of 1.8 billion people and combined G.D.P. of $2 trillion. It is projected that this would boost Asean exports to China by 48% and increase Asean's G.D.P. by 0.9%. The benefit for the Philippines is expanding our exports to the rapidly growing Chinese market as well as cooperating with Chinese and multinational companies in the developing of manufacturing and service facilities in Asean that can feed their expanding mainland operations. This is an excellent opportunity to position our logistics service, manufacturing and commodity firms for strong business links with post-WTO China.

Japan's trade with Asean totaled more than $120 billion last year. The outlines of an Asean-Japan economic partnership is being fleshed together. Meantime, a "New-Age partnership" arrangement with the Philippines is under study.

This demonstrates that we will look for opportunities to further our economic interests through bilateral trading arrangements, although it is not so easy for us to enter into such arrangements since we are a more diversified economy than, say, Singapore, therefore there are more areas for potential asymmetry in interest.

In sum, the Philippines is fashioning a development agenda based on an economy competitive in the 21st century. Our reforms aim to create a domestic environment that will enable us to reap the benefits of global economic integration while minimizing the risks to the adversely affected sectors. We are working within Asean to integrate and expand the regional market, so that our products and the products of those who invest in our country will have the region's half a billion people as a market.

We are also seeking, by ourselves and with our Asean partners, to strengthen and deepen our economic ties with countries and groups of countries beyond Asean—China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, India, the United States, and the European Union.

The Philippines will maintain our economic ties with the rest of the world to the extent that it is consistent with our commitments and the welfare of our people.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Symposium on "ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA) and Beyond". Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225332/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8258&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during 14th Anniversary Convention of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During 14th Anniversary Convention of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP)

[Delivered at the Expo Filipino Millennium Hall, Clark Field, Angeles City, Pampanga, June 10, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Braganza at maraming salamat din dahil ngayon lang naipulong mo ang lahat ng mga officers ng Department of Agrarian Reform sa isang lugar sa buong kasaysayan ng land reform. Kaya welcome sa inyong lahat dito.

Secretary Joey Lina; ang aking anak na si Mikey Arroyo na nangangatawan sa Pampanga; Mayor Moki Morales nangangatawan naman sa ating host municipality, ang Mabalacat; our very supportive Ambassadors from the countries that support land reform in the Philippines very heavily, Ambassador Van Remoortele of Belgium and Ambassador Ben Abba of Israel; other members of the diplomatic corps representing the countries and agencies that have been supporting Philippine land reform; our AFP Chief of Staff General Cimat and the other officers of the armed forces of the Philippines who are here today; PNP Chief Larry Mendoza and the other officers of the police who are also here with us today; and ating ring host dito sa lugar na ito, si Pangulong Manny Angeles ng Clark Development Corporation; PARCOM Chairperson and private sector representatives; the CARP implementing agencies; mga beneficiary ng land reform; mga panauhin; mga kaibigan:

Magandang umaga sa inyong lahat at Happy Land Reform Day sa inyong lahat.

Noong ako ay nagbigay ng aking State of the Nation Address noong isang taon, sinabi ko na isa sa apat na pangunahing programa ng ating laban sa kahirapan ay agricultural modernization founded on social equity. ‘Yung bahagi noon, founded on social equity, ang pinakalaman ng social equity sa ating agricultural modernization ay ito na ngang reporma sa lupa o land reform. Kaya ang land reform ay pangunahing bahagi ng ating programa ng administrasyon.

Even when I was still vice president, and I was articulating the four components of what I believe a program to fight poverty should have, I said many times that the promise of land reform, a commitment that spans several presidents, must finally be redeemed. I said that without equity and modernization, we will never win the struggle against poverty in our rural countryside.

Katunayan alam ko, napakaraming mga pangulo, ito ang talagang hinangad nila na magkaroon at matupad ang reporma sa lupa. Katunayan, tinuring ng aking ama, ang dating Pangulong Diosdado Macapagal, bilang pangunahing nakamit niya sa kaniyang administrasyon ay nasimula ang reporma sa lupa sa pagtuturing na ang tenancy ay labag sa batas. Kaya naman pinagpapatuloy ko ang sinimula niya na ito. At ako ay nasisiyahan na kung noong isang taon ginanap natin ang Land Reform Day sa Malakanyang, ngayon naman ay ginaganap natin ito sa probinsiya kung saan ang aking tatay sa kanyang kabataan at kabinataan ay naranasan niya ang mahirap na karanasan ng mga magsasakang hindi may-ari ng lupang tinatrabaho nila. Dahil si Diosdado Macapagal ay anak ng mga tenant farmer. Ayun ang kanyang pinakalayunin noong siya ay naging pangulo.

Sa aking State of the Nation Address ng nakaraang taon, sinabi ko ang ating layunin, mamahagi tayo taun-taon ng sandaang ektaryang lupaing agrikultura sa ilalim ng DAR.

Kanina, in-unveil ni Nani Braganza ‘yung kanyang programa — “Bayan, Anihan.” At sinabi niya na land distribution will not be enough unless there is an increase in productivity kaya meron siyang lahat noong bahagi ng “bayan, anihan.” Pero ako rin gusto ko namang bigyan-diin, increase in land productivity without land distribution is not social equity.

Kaya para sa akin, ang pangunahing layunin talaga ng DAR ay iyung land distribution. At lahat ng ibang bahagi ng “bayan, anihan” ay suporta para maging matagumpay ‘yung land distribution. Kaya itong araw na ito — sabi ko kay Nani, “pareho kaming seven minutes ang speech namin.” Kasi isa lang mensahe ang ibibigay ko — ang tanging mensahe ko ay ito: binabati ko si Nani, binabati ko kayonglahat, binabati ko ang dar na namamahala para sa pribadong lupaing distribution dahil nga noong nakaraang taon, kayo ay nakapamahagi ng 104,261 hectares na lupain sa 72,188 farmer-beneficiaries sa buong kapuluan. In other words, nilampasan ninyo ang target na binigay ko sa Inyo.

Sabi nung iba, saan? Macro figures. Hindi. Kaya huwag kayong matulog pero itong araw na ito, ibibigay ko ang breakdown ng lupaing napamahagi natin nitong nakaraang taon.

Nandito ba ‘yung ating Abra delegation? Abra, naimbag nga bigat yo amin, apo. Ako ay nagpapasalamat sa inyo dahil kayo ay namahagi ng higit sa 1,000 hectares para sa land reform; addadtoy dagiti officials ti dar gapo benguet? Congratulations! Dahil sa benguet higit 600 hectares ang nadistribute n’yo sa land reform; dagiti officials gapo ti apayao, Ifugao ken kalinga, addadtoy? Sa inyong lahat, congratulations dahil ang inyong tatlong probinsiya tag-300 hectares, for a total of 900 hectares ang dinistribute ninyo; ken diay probinsiya ti mountain province, ‘dinno ti opisyal? ‘Yon ay bulubundukin na probinsiya kaya tawag mountain province, nakapagbigay ng higit 50 hectares naman sa mountain province; gapo mi ti La Union, ‘dinno ti delegation gapo ti La Union? Okay, congratulations, halos 300 hectares sa La Union. Probinsiya ni Nani at ng inyong lingkod, Ilocos. Ah, ‘no. Pangasinan ken Ilocos Norte. ‘dinno ti Pangasinan ken Ilocos Norte? Tig-200 hectares ang inyong namudmod, congratulations; at sa Ilocos Sur? Seven hectares; ‘yon namang Isabela, okay, more than 3,000 hectares sa Isabela; cagayan province, almost 20 hectares; Nueva Vizcaya, sino ti Nueva Vizcaya? Almost 400 hectares; Quirino, more than 100 hectares; at ‘yung Nueva Ecija naman, higit tatlong libong ektarya.

Tarlac, Pampanga at Bulacan, saan kayo? ‘Yon. Kayong tatlo, tig-sanlibong ektarya, kaya tatlong libong ektarya kayo, tatlong probinsiya; Zambales at Bataan, tig-limang daang ektarya, kaya isang libo ‘yung dalawa Dalawang probinsiya; Aurora? More than 100 hectares, congratulations; ‘yung Quezon at Mindoro Oriental, nandito? Tig-dalawang libong ektarya kaya apat na libong ektarya kayong dalawa; ‘yon namang Occidental Mindoro, Palawan, Marinduque, Romblon, Batangas, mukhang tig-isang libong ektarya kayong lima, kaya 5,000 hectares; ‘yung Laguna, probinsiya ni Joey, narito ba? More than 400 hectares; ‘yung sa Cavite narito kayo? More than 200 hectares; ‘yung Rizal, Rizal? Wala. Ayun, nandoon kayo. Halos siyudad na ang Rizal kaya meron pa ring apatnapung ektaryang nagawa; Camarines Sur? Salamat, marhay nga aga, and thank you for the more than 3,000 hectares you distributed; ‘yon namang Albay, may nagbati sa akin dito, taga-Albay, Masbate, Camarines Norte, tig-2,000 hectares kaya kayong tatlong probinsiya ay 6,000 hectares, congratulations; sa Sorsogon, saan ang Sorsogon dito? Halos isandaang libong ektarya, congratulations din sa inyo; at sa Catanduanes ay halos isandaang ektarya rin sa Catanduanes.

Negros Occidental, ito ay isa sa pinaka-special mention, noong araw ay kasama sa kulilat, sabi ni Nani Braganza, pero ngayon more than 7,000 hectares sa Negros Occidental; doon naman sa Iloilo, diin ang taga-Iloilo diri? Okay, more than 2,000 hectares; Capiz? More than 1,000 hectares; Guimaras kag Aklan, diin? Okay, each of them almost 500 hectares kaya halos 1,000 ‘yung dalawa; Antique, more than 400 hectares sa Antique; sa Negros Oriental, Negros Oriental? Lugar ng pangulo ng Land bank of the Philippines, kaya dapat hindi siya inaresto dahil halos apat na libong ektarya ang Negros Oriental; Bohol at Cebu, more than one 1,000 hectares each more or less, so 2,000 hectares for the two; adto naman sa maliit na Island ng Siquijor, ayun, eight hectares, congratulations; maliit naman na island ang Siquijor, maliit na maliit. Siquijor, Siquijor is smaller than our Mikey’s and my hometown of Lubao, so salamat sa ano. Okay na rin ‘yung eight hectares; Leyte, halos anim na libong ektarya sa Leyte, saan ang Leyte? Binanggit kanina, di ba? ‘Yon din ay dating kulelat pero nakahabol, almost 6,000 hectares, congratulations; ang Northern Samar, nandito ba? Maupay nga aga mga Northern Samar, congratulations sa almost 3,000 hectares na dinistribute ninyo; sa Western Samar. Western Samar, more than 2,000 hectares, congratulations. Ay! Ah, yes. At sa Eastern Samar at Biliran, wala? Ayun. Each of you 1,000 hectares each so 2,000 hectares for the two provinces; and Southern Leyte, almost 500 hectares in Southern Leyte.

Sa Zamboanga Del sur, ang ating outstanding landowner ay galing sa Zamboanga Del Sur, so... Palagay ko, this includes Zamboanga Sibugay, higit 2,000 gikan sa Zamboanga Del Sur; sa Zamboanga Del Norte, saan ang Zamboanga Del ...? Okay, halos anim na daan naman sa Zamboanga del Norte; sa Basilan? Oy, kahit na meron tayong Abu Sayyaf, higit dalawang daan pa ay nadistribute; sa Lanao del Norte? Higit tatlung libong ektarya, congratulations; sa Bukidnon, more than 2,000 hectares; and the two Misamis, Oriental and Occidental, 700 each for 1,400 hectares; and in the little island of Camiguin na binagyo pa, more than 20 hectares. Camiguin, ganoon din, mas maliit din kaysa sa bayan namin ni Mikey na Lubao.

In Davao del Norte, almost 3,000 hectares; in Davao Oriental, the number one coconut province in the country, 2,000 hectares; In Davao del Sur, more than 1,000 hectares; and in the city of Davao, city of Davao, kahit na city, halos pitong daang ektarya ang nadistribute sa city of Davao; ito naman, isa pang dating kulelat at naging valedictorian kasama ng Negros Occidental, Sultan Kudarat, higit pitung libo; sa Cotabato Province, higit limang libo; South Cotabato and Sarangani, 2,000 each to make 4,000 hectares; Agusan del Sur, almost 2,000; Surigao del Sur, almost 1,000; Agusan del Norte, wala? Ayun. Almost 400; Surigao del Norte, almost 100. Kasi panay beaches ang Surigao del Norte kasama na 'yung Siargao surfing beach which we shall visit in September; and our sole land reform area in the Autonomous Region, Lanao del Sur? Wala sila kasi nalipat na sa ARMM, anyway, nalipat na sa ARMM but we congratulate them because even in Lanao Del Sur, more than 2,000 hectares were distributed for land reform.

Kaya 'yan. Doon sa mga lugar na iyon ay naganap ang land reform at ayon kay Nani Braganza — hindi ba nani, totoo ito? — hindi na ngayon lang nagkapulong ang mga officers ng DAR sa isang lugar pero ngayon din lang nakaroon ng ganitong karaming napamahaging lupang pansasaka sa loob ng isang taon, the biggest in history. At isang dahilan kung ba't hangang-hanga ako kay Nani at sa inyo, ginawa niyo ito nang hindi kayo kumuha ng ekstrang budget mula sa akin, 'di ba? And I would like to congratulate you, I would like to thank our official development assistance partners because they help us meet these targets without Nani getting additional budget from the general appropriations act but one reason why he was able to do this also was that Nani was able to have a very, very high absorption rate for official development assistance. congratulations sa inyong lahat doon. kasi siguro, ilan sa inyong mga regional directors, nandoon na kayo sa ating mga iba't-ibang mga regional development council meetings, at siguro nakikita ninyo istriktang-istriktang ako. Isa-isa sa mga projects ng different departments, tinitignan, ano ang delay? Bakit delay? Ganyan. Pero halos tuwing DAR ang project, on time, hindi delayed kaya congratulations.

Ang land reform, dalawa nga 'yon. Ang pinaka-land reform, 'yung private agricultural land, so 'yon ay 100,000 hectares a year ang ating project, ang ating goal. There are also lands available from... owned by national government or public domain that can be alienable and this is also another hundred thousand hectares that we want to distribute every year. Kaya ang partner ng DAR ay 'yung DENR para doon naman sa public lands.

Ang DENR naman na namamahala sa lupaing gobyerno ay may target din kagaya ng DAR na 100,000 hectares per year at itong taon na ito nakaraan, nakapaglagda ng patent para sa almost 6,000 hectares mula nang July hanggang March, so hindi pa tapos 'yung accounting nila. At naglabas din ang DENR sa loob ng panahong ito ng certificate of allocation sa about 76,000 hectares of land or a total of 82,000 hectares of public land. Kaya inaasahan ko na pagdating ng July ay masasabi rin nila na kagaya ng DAR nagawa rin nila 'yung kanilang target.

Eh sabi ko kay Nani, pareho kaming seven-minutes lang. Kasi ako ayaw kong haluan ng iba pa 'yung mensahe. Kasi para sa akin, napaka- importante na matupad 'yung target natin sa State of the Nation Address, 'yung 100,000 hectares. Ito ang dapat bibigyang-diin na gawa ninyo, at dahil nagawa ninyo, para sa akin naka-boundary kayo.

Kaya maraming salamat at congratulations! Happy Anniversary sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225111/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8331&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the 50th Founding Anniversary of the Province of Zamboanga del Norte

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the 50th Founding Anniversary of the Province of Zamboanga del Norte

[Delivered at the Zamboanga del Norte Convention and Exhibition Center Dipolog City, Zamboanga del Norte, June 1, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Montemayor sa iyung pagpakilala sa akin. lingkod na kamo tanan, palihug mga kaigsuonan.

Sa atong Gobernador Gani Amatong; ang atong mayor diri sa Dipolog, mayor Uy; atong mga congressmen: anhi karon si Congressman Barinaga nga kanhi mayor diri sa Dipolog; aniya sab si Congressman Angel Carloto ang akong ka-duet sa pagkanta. Unya magkanta mi ug usahay sa matapos ang akong diskurso; atong mga laing-laing mayors diri sa aton nga selebrasyon ngayon — dakal gi kalista karon nga nianhi si Mayor Albos sa Sindangan; Mayor Jamora sa Leon Postigo; Mayor Te sa Godod; Mayor Josue sa Gutalac; (SIC) Mayor Carloto sa Kalawit; Mayor Caballero sa Manukan; Mayor Tenorio sa Mutya; Mayor Olvis sa Polanco; Mayor Catane sa Rizal; wala diri si mayor sa Piñan, Mayor Carreon? Kay kauban ko siya ganiha sa Manukan, ha?; Mayor Feras sa Roxas; Mayor Edding sa Sibuco; Mayor Tolentino sa Sibutad; ug Mayor Uy sa Liloy.

Anhi nga sab karon ang Congressman sa Negros Oriental apan son-in-law sa Dipolog, Mayor Herminio Teves; anaa sab laing-laing mga in-laws sa Dipolog ug Zamboanga del Norte, ang akong Cabinet member nga son-in-law ug Dipolog, Secretary Ed Ermita; ug ang atong Senior Undersecretary sa Finance nga daughter-in-law ug Dipolog Nitz Amatong, Ang iyang bana si Former Congressman Amatong; ‘yung nakilala ninyo ‘yung ibat-ibang Cabinet member natin: si Dinky Suliano sa DSWD — ay, Julian Soliman. Dinky Soliman, oo. Dinky Julian Soliman kasi, okay; ang atong emcee, si Mike Defensor; ang atong Secretary of Planning, Dante Canlas usa pa nga anak ug region 9 gikan sa Zamboanga, Cito Lorenzo; ang atong ling-laing opisyaes sa national government kauban nang atong opisyaes sa Armed Forces ubos sa atong bag-o nga Southcom Commander General Ernesto Carolina; tanan-tanan mga kaigsuonan sa Dipolog ug Zamboanga del Norte, maayong golden anniversary kaninyong tanan!

Nagapasalamat ako labi na kan Governor Amatong, sa inyong pagdapit kanako nga maka-uban kamo ni-ining linggo ng Zamboanga del Norte.

Dako ang akong kalipay nga makabalik sa Zamboanga del Norte tungod nga ako “at home” kaayo dinhi sa Zamboanga del Norte. Ngano ako “at home” kaayo tungod kay daghan kaayo ang akong mga ig-agaw dinhi sama sa mga members sa Guico family gikan sa Manukan.

Ug ngano ako nga na ig-agaw sa Zamboanga del Norte? Tungod kay niadto pang 1920s, sama sa daghan sa mga nianhi gikan sa Luzon, diri sa Mindanao ang akong lolo — amahan ug akon inahan, si Juan Macaraeg — niadtong 1920s gyud nianhi sa Zamboanga isip manager sa Santa Clara Kumber, kauban ang iyang pamilya, ang aking inahan nga gamay pa kaniadto, iyang pamilya sa iya mga asawa... Ah sa iya nga asawa ug iyang mga ig-agaw. Usa sa iyahang mga ig-agaw si Evaristo Guico kaya akong lolo, Juan Guico Nacaraeg. Ug si Evaristo Guico nga iyang ig-agaw nagapakasal sa usa nga taga pamilya sagario sa Manukan. Naa istorya pa gyud nga isip head of the clan ang akong lolo pa ang gipili kon kinsay mahimo asawa sa iyang ig-agaw. Ang gipili n’ya gyud kining Ms. Sagario gikan sa Manukan.

Ug ang akong lolo, ginagugma niya kaayo ang Mindanao, kay niadtong ni-retire na siya, ni-retire sa gyud sa mMindanao, sa usa ka pang-uuma didto sa Iligan, ug sa nahimo biyuda pa ang akong lola ako nidako sa iyahang balay didto sa Iligan. Busa ako usa nga anak ug Mindanao, usa ka ig-agaw ug Zamboanga del Norte.

Busa, sentimental ako kada nako anhi dinhi sa Zamboanga ug sa Mindanao. mobalik sa akong panumduman ang kagahapon sa akong pagka-bata sa Mindanao. nag-uban-uban pa ako sa akong amahan sapagduaw niya dinhi sa Zamboanga del Norte. Niadtong siya usa pa ka Vice President naa kami ritrato didto karon sa inyo nga photo exhibit. Ako tingali nine, o eleven, o ten years old ang akong ritrato didto. So gin-encircle ko karon ang akong ritrato ug gi-autograph ko ang ritrato, ingon ko, “nice to be back again in Zamboanga del Norte.”

Ang probinsya sa Zamboanga del Norte layo na ug naabot sulod sa singkuenta anyos. Gikan sa siyam ka lunsod pagka-tudo usa Zamboanga del Norte niadtong June 6, 1952 nine towns Tingali — Dipolog, Dapitan, Siocon, Katipunan, Unsa pa? Siguro Polanco, Sindangan, basta nine lang. Ang probinsya karon adunay duha ka syudad ug beinte singko ka munisipyo. Ug murag katong syudad nga Dapitan nahimo gyud syudad niadtong tiyempo ug akong amahan, si kanhi president Diosdado Macapagal.

Ug murag ingon ni Governor Amaton, sa maayo nga trabaho ug mga officials ug pumuluyo diri sa Zamboanga del Norte, nahimo dako gyud ang inyong income. Ingon nila nga ang estimated income sa probinsya sa tuig 2002, mokab-ot na sa 730 million more or less. So kogusa congratulations kaninyong tanan nga taas nga income kaayo sa probinsya sa Zamboanga del Norte.

Laing dakong kulambuan mao ang nagkadaghang barangay sa sulok sa lalawigan nga nahagtan sa elektrisidad. Nalipay ko nga si Governor Amaton nalunsad sa iyang kaugalingong barangay electrification program sukad pa niadtong 1999 nga nakakonektar na sa elektrisidad sa 39 ka bag-o nga barangay. Dungan kini sa atong “o ilaw program” sa atong administrasyon karon.

Sayo karong tuiga, ang akong administrasyon aron makatabang sa iyang barangay electrification program gipahulam ug 10 million pesos alang sa pagtukod sa solar energy system sa beinte ka barangay dinhi sa Zamboanga Del Norte. Ang probinsya mi-abot sab ug 2 million pesos, samtang ang 800 ka mga household beneficiaries mihatag usab laing 1.2 million pesos isip counterpart sa proyekto

Gipa-upgrade usab ang atong lokal na liderato ang pantalan sa Dapitan nga nag-serbe sa katawhan dili lamang sa Zamboanga del Norte kundili lakip na Ang Misamis Occidental, Zamboanga del Sur ug Zamboanga Sibugay.

Ug isip suporta sa maong pag-upgrade, akon gi-approban ang nubenta’y otso milyones ka pesos alang sa “rehabilitation, widening, extension” sa Pulaan Port ubos sa locally-funded project sa Philippine Ports Authority.

Labaw pa niini, ang gobyerno nasyonal nagpadayon pa sa implementar ang “Trans-Visayas Intermodal Network” labi na gyud ang “Roll-on Roll-off Ferry Network project” nga naglakip sa pantalan sa Dapitan ug sa Nabilid, Texas.

Kining maong proyekto nagtinguha nga makonektar ang mga isla sa Visayas ug mga probinsiya niini, ngadto na sa Philippine-Japan Highway nga naga-gikan sa Luzon padulong dinhi sa Mindanao. Ug ang Zamboanga Del Norte, pinaagi sa Pulaan Port, makakonekta na unya sa highway sa Bais, Dumaguete ug Zamboangita sa Negros island, ubos niining “Roro Ferry Network Project.” kay tingali ang Zamboangita gi- ngalan gyud Zamboangita tungod kay ang katong lungsod ang gamay nga Zamboanga. Ug ang Zamboangita gyud — busa nakita nato si Congressman Teves, ang iya nga asawa gikan sa Dipolog ug ang iyang anak si Garry Teves tunga Negros, tunga Zamboanga — kay Mao Gyud ang Zamboanga gyud duol kaayo kay gamay ra ang dagat, in the middle. so, maayo kon naa kita kiting ferry parehas sa ferry sa liloan hangtod sa Surigao.

Kining proyektoha mokapasas sa “Regional Socio-Economic Development,” dili lamang alang sa mga pasahero nga buot mamisita sa ilang kaubanan o mamista sa kabisay-an apan labaw sa tanan alang sa aton mga produkto, industriya ug turismo diin daghan sa aton mga katawhan mobiyahi gyud sakay sa barko. mabulahon unya ang atong mga katawhan niini.

Kining “Roll-on Roll-off Ferry Network Project” usa lamang sa mga proyekto nga mogastosan sa 67.6 bilyones pesos nga “yen package” gikan sa Japan. Ako kining gi-approban sa miaging tuig isip chairperson sa NEDA board.

Ug tungod sa... Eh kung gi-kwento nato ang sea travel importane sab ma-istorya kita alang sa air travel, ang atong airport diri sa Dipolog. Niaging January nianhi ang Asian Development Bank aron mo-examine nila ang ilahang mga pending projects diri sa Pilipinas, ug ang airport project ug ang Asian Development Bank kakauban ang Dipolog Airport ingon ug ADB, lima ka-tuig na wala pay development. So ingon ug Asian Development Bank mo-cancel na tanan kining mga airport project gikan sa ADB. Apan salamat nga naka-regional development council meeting kita kagahapon, usa sa atong homework alang sa regional development council Meeting gi- resolbar ang mga problema sa Dipolog airport. Ang labi na problema gyud ang pagpalit sa yuta nga kinahanglan alang sa runway. So, tungod kay nakita ug adb nga naa solusyon — bisan katong laing projects sa laing lugar sa Pilipinas murag mo-cancel — diri sa Dipolog ingon nila na mo-extend nila hangtod sa October. So, dili pa gi-cancel.

Apan ang akong hangyo kaninyo, isigurado nato na bag-o sa October mapalit tanang mga yutang kinahanglan kamo tanan mga pumuluyong matabang unta sa katong mga tag-iya sa mga yuta na baligya nila unta sa presyo ug expropriation kining yuta. Kay kundili nila baligya sa gobyerno dili madayon ang atong airport project, ma-cancel sa Oktubre. So, kita tanan Importante mag-tinabangay kita tanan aron madayon kining atong project sa airport sa Dipolog.

Sa agrikultura naman, tungod sa ka-abunda sa agrikultura sa Zamboanga del Norte, dinuyogan sa maayong klima, ma-abtik nga katawhan ug maayong gobyerno, ang inyong probinsiya karon aniya sa maayo nga sitwasyon sa pagsagop sa agri-industrialization isip stratehiya sa kalambo-an.

Daghan kamo ug bag-o nga produkto, sama nga sa mangga. Ang mangga karon gikan sa Guimaras makasulod na sa Amerika. Tingali human sa Guimaras nga karon officially sa Amerika, sa tibuok kalibutan ang labi na maayo nga mangga ang ikaduha usa ka contest — pangasinan ug Zamboanga del Norte. busa mo-trabaho sab kita — ug si Secretary Montemayor kay maka-binisaya man siya kay ang iya nga asawa taga-Bohol — ang akong instruction sa iya kay sa karon naka-daog na kita sa struggle aron makasulod ang Guimaras manggo sa Amerika, karon mo-negotiate nato kita aron ang mangga sa Zamboanga del Norte makasulod sab sa Amerika ug sa kaing-laing nga mga market sa tibuok kalibutan.

Labaw sa mangga, naa pa ang inyong bottled spanish sardines, lami kaayo. ang... Kay ako sa akon nga niaging pagbisita diri niaging tuig ay niadto ko sa pabrika sa spanish bottled sardines didto sa pantalan sa Dipolog. maayo, gwapo ang factory, world class, ug lami kaayo ang sardinas mismo. at kaganina sa ako niadto sa manukan, gi-bisita ko ang akong tiya nga invalid karon, ni-breakfast mi — ay, kalami kaayo gihapon ang bottled spanish sardines gikan sa Zamboanga del Norte. Ug kining sardines world class gyud. Ingon gyud ni General Carolina, nakikita nya ‘yung sardines sa Manila pero sa mga specialty stores, ug kining sardines hangtod sa Malaysia makaabot. Apan kung specialty stores lang sa Manila, ang problema kasi ang supply. Apan lami kaayo tingali ang demand dili problema. So, i think if we can expand, nung maka-expand kita Secretary Montemayor, instruction ko gihapon nga mo-expand nato kining bottled sardines nga magikan sa Zamboanga del Norte kay lami kaayo ug special kaayo. Sigurado ako na maayo iyang palengke bisan sa Manila, bisan sa malaysia ug sa laing-laing pang merkado sa atong rehiyon. Akong awhagon ang mga “producer” nga ilang gamiton kining mga oportunidad ug maghiusa kita.

Ug sa usa pa, ang atong coconut industry. Kay daghan kaayo ang aton mga coconut farmers diri sa Zamboanga del Norte. Duol ang aton coconut industry labi na niaging tuig karon mas maayo na ang presyo apan taas-baba ang presyo sa coconut industry. Dili kita maka-sigurado tuig-tuig. Apan tingali duol na ang solusyon, kay ang gobyerno naa na sa United Coconut Planters Bank, nga agi sa laing-laing korporasyon mao’y mo-maneho na sa dibidendo ug coconut levy fund. Tingali sa June 12, atong Independence Day, mo-announce nato ang mga una nga mahimo nga proyekto ubos kining atong dako nga gi-accomplish sa akong administrayon nga mo-abot ang atong mga coconut farmers sa coconut Levy funds.

Busa, nalipay ko nga ang liderato sa gobyerno probinsiyal nagpadayon sa pag-koordinar sa Philippine Coconut Authority aron matukod ang usa sa Integrated Coconut Processing Plant dinhi sa Zamboanga del Norte. Usa kini ka solusyon nga makatabang sa atong coconut farmers. Ang akong instruction sa pca agi kan Secretary Montemayor gihapon nga mahatagan kamo ug pagsuporta sa kining processing plant ubos sa Coconut Levy dividends nga tingali magawas na sa June 12 aron matawo gyud kining proyektoha sa Zamboanga del Norte sa labing dali nga panahon.

Ganganina didto sa manukan gi-gamit ko ang okasyon aron mamati sab sa mga gibati ug atong mga ordinaryong mang-uuma diri sa Zamboanga del Norte. Ug tungod gyud sa maayo nga pag-gobyerno, kaabtikan ug ang mga katauahan diri, Ang Zamboanga del Norte isa ka-surplus agricultural producer. Bisan labaw ang production compared sa consumption. Busa kinahanglan diri ang buying stations diri sa Zamboanga del Norte, apan pa unsa kita maka-construct ug buying stations. Kay unya... Na-istorya na ba kamo sa atong regional director? Murag dili nila kaila ang regional director sa D.A. kay didto siya nakabilin sa Zamboanga City. Aron nakita ko usa sa mga shortcomings kinla labi na kining mga grassroots oriented nga mga Department na kinahanglan mas duol sa aton mga mang-uuma.

Busa, ingon ko kan Secretary Montemayor nga unta ang D.A. — ang Mother Unit, ‘no — ang D.A. proper mubalhin sa pagadian aron maka-serbisyo sila sa mga mang-uuma diri sa Zamboanga del Norte, Zamboanga del Sur ug Zamboanga sibugay ug dili na kinahanglan ang mga eroplano kada-pagbiyahe sa mga laing-laing pang-uuma diri sa Zamboanga Peninsula.

Ang inyong mga gihimo nga programa aron maayudahan ang pobre naton mga mang-uuma ug mangingisda, wala maka-eskapar sa akong atensyon. Akong ipag-abi-abi ang aton mga opisyaes sa probinsiya, siyudad ug mga lungsod sa ilang paningkamot nga unta mosagop ang aton mga mang-uuma sa gi-tawag ug “integrated approach in farming.” Kining importante sa “integrated approach” gyud ang buying stations. Ang turno eco-park sa probinsiya nagpakita sa determinasyon nga unta molampos kining kampanya sa “integrated approach in farming.”

Nasabot usab ako nga ang “inland fishing” gi-programa na sa mga landlocked nga lungsod, lakip na ang mga multi-cropping ug livestock production aron magamit gyud ang aton mga yuta diri sa Zamboanga del Norte. Sigurado ako sa inyohang pagka-abtik nga mogamit ang bisan unsa kagamay nga butang nga gihatag kaninyo ug ginoo.

Nalipay sab ako sa pagkasayod nga daghang mga proyekto nga atong gi-recognize sa una ang natapos na dinhi sa Zamboanga del Norte sama sa kalawit ug Lomogon Communal Irrigation System, ug ang Kalawit-Marcelo Road Extension project.

Nanghatag sab gyud kita ug mga Certificate of Ancestral Domain Claim ngadto sa 32 ka mga beneficiaries, ug laing Certificate of Land Ownership ngadto Sa 197 (SIC) nga Agrarian Reform Beneficiaries. Sila karon ang tag-iya sa ilahang kaugalingon na yuta. Apil niini sa akong target nga gi-sulti ko sa akong State of the Nation Address niaging hulyo, nga kada tuig modistribute kita ug 100,000 hectares of private land ug 100,000 hectares of public land ubos sa land reform, mao ang kaganina.

Kagahapon, si Congressman, si Governor, si Secretary Soliman, si Secretary Lorenzo, si Secretary Alvarez — nga niadto na karon sa Manila — nianhi mi, niadto mi sa siocon sa Zamboanga del Norte. Dili aron mahatag ko ug desisyon sa mining claim kay katong desisyon muagi pa, o katong kaso muagi pa sa due process sa DENR. Ako niadto aron makahatag ug Certificate of Ancestral Domain sa aton mga subanen didto. Kay ingon ko sa ila, bisan dunay mining o walay mining, ang importante ang ancestral domain, ang tag-iya ang aton mga subanen didto sa bukid sa siocon.

Ang tema sa atong kasaulogan karon, “50 pioneering years for purposeful decades ahead” tugma kaayo, kay nakita nako nga sunod nga singkuwenta anyos sa Zamboanga del Norte, masarong gyud. Parehas ang panglantaw sa inyong mga lideres ug sa national level. Ipadayon nato ang atong mga maayong kooperasyon ug pinag-usa.

We must continue to reach out for peace in this region, an honorable and just peace based on tolerance, understanding and a common sense of nationhood.

Peace will bring us more development and progress. Peace will bring us security and a brighter future for our children.

And that is why, in ending my message to you, the people of Zamboanga del Norte, I would like to inform you that even as we speak, there is an ongoing military offensive operation in SSSB. And I hope that the officials, municipal and barangay, will support our soldiers. Ayaw ma-proteksyon ang mga bandido, ang mga terorista kay uban sa kadtong mga lungsod, sa mga barangay sa bukid, ang mga laing-laing lair sa mga bandido kauban na ang Abu Sayyaf. Magtinabangay kita tanan aron madaog kita sa kining giyera kontra sa mga bandido ug sa terorista sa Western part of Zamboanga del Norte sa SSSB. Sa matapos kining atong giyera didto tingali masugdan nato sa katapusan ang development didto sa SSSB.

Kay sa nakita ko kagahapon, daghan kaayo ang mga area integrated plan — ‘yung pinakita ni Dante Canlas — meron dito, banda rito, merong banda roon, merong kung anu-anong valley, Sibugay, meron sa Salug valley. Pero tinitingnan ko yung map, Dante, walang integrated area sa SSSB, sa Sibuco, Siraway, Siocon at Baliguian eh kasi walay kalinaw, lisud na dunay kauswagan kung walay kalinaw. Tabangi, mga kaigsuonan sa Zamboanga del Norte, tabangi aron makaabot ang kalinaw didto, tabangi aron sa katapusan makaabot sab ang kauswagan aron makaabot ang kauswagan sa tibuok Zamboanga Del Norte.

Daghang salamat kaninyong tanan.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the 50th Founding Anniversary of the Province of Zamboanga del Norte. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225303/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8341&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the First Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines (TODAPHIL) Summit 2002

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the First Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines (TODAPHIL) Summit 2002

[Delivered at the Amoranto Sports Complex, Quezon City, June 1, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Dinky Soliman sa iyung pag-imbita at sa iyung pagpakilala sa akin. At maraming salamat kay Secretary Roy Golez sa iyung pagtulong na ma-organize itong summit ng TODA.

Ating Mayor ng Quezon City, na siya rin ang mayor na kung saan isa sa bawat apat ng tricycle drivers ay nagtatrabaho, ang Quezon City Mayor Sonny Belmonte; at narito rin ang Congresswoman ng 4th district ng Quezon City si Nanette Daza; at nandito rin ‘yung vice mayor ng Quezon City si Herbert Bautista; at gusto kong batiin din si Ginoong Adolfo Quiming, ang overall chairman ng NCR – TODA Council na nagsalita kanina; at lahat ng iba’t-ibang mga lidars ng TODA na pinakilala kanina at sabay-sabay binigay sa akin Itong resolusyon na ito; gusto ko ring batiin si Ben Abalos, ang Chairman Ng Metro Manila; at kayong lahat mga tricycle drivers:

Magandang hapon sa inyong lahat.

Ako ay nasisiyahan na makasama kayo sa inyong pagpulong na ito. Ang mga tricycle drivers, ang mga tricycle pati ay ka-akibat ng aking administrasyon tungo sa kaunlaran ng ating sambayanan.

Natutuwa akong malaman na ang pagpupulong na ito ay nabuo dahil sa matibay Na gusto ng pamunuan ng toda na palakasin ang inyong pakikilahok sa matapat Na pamamahala at pagtalakay sa mga usaping panlipunan.

Noong ako ay naging pangulo, sinabi ko na isa sa aking mga batayang paniniwala ay dapat magkaroon tayo ng bagong pulitika. Iyong lumang pulitika ay pulitika ng personalidad at patronage. Ang bagong pulitika ay dapat pulitika ng programa ng partido at organisadong konsultasyon sa taumbayan. Itong ginagawa natin ngayon ay organisadong konsultasyon sa mga tricycle drivers. Kaya ito ay bahagi ng bagong pulitika na ating hinahangad.

At bahagi din nga nitong organisadong konsultasyon ay ‘yung organisadong agenda na binigay n’yo sa akin. Ang workshop output na ito at ‘yung mga TODA scholar na binanggit ni Ginoong Quiming, yung mga pinasok natin sa GMA scholars na mga TODA sa trabaho ni ... Sa pag-organized ni Dinky Soliman, ito ay nagpapatunay sa panibagong direksiyon na inyong tinatahak ngayon. Una sa lahat nga nagsasama-sama kayo sa mga patakarang dapat mangyari. At pangalawa gusto n’yong mag-aral para tuluyang umunlad ang Inyong buhay at kakayahan. Kaya itong scholarship, ako ay nasisiyahan at malaking karangalan na makapamahagi sa inyo ng GMA scholars para sa TODA. Sana ay patuloy kayong lumakas at maging matibay na haligi ng ating lipunan sa patuloy nating pagharap sa mga hamon ng makabagong panahon.

Ang tricycle ay halimbawa sa kasabihang “small is beautiful.” kasi di ba maliit ang tricycle, kasing liit ko. Pati na rin si Dinky pareho kami. Ngunit malaki naman ang nai-aambag ng inyong hanay hindi lamang sa ating pambansang ekonomiya kundi pati na rin sa Ikabubuti ng kapakanan ng ating mamamayan.

Lahat kayo ay naging bahagi na ng pang-araw-araw na buhay ng marami nating kababayan — sa kanilang pagpasok sa opisina, sa paaralan, paghatid ng mga paninda patungo at mula sa pamilihan, maging sa panahon ng emergency kahit dis-oras ng gabi. Dito natin makikita kung gaano kahalaga ang inyong ibinibigay na serbisyo sa publiko.

Naalaala ko minsan nung ako ay senador pa, umabot ako... Pupunta sana ako doon sa... Doon sa isang isla ng Romblon, yung tinatawag nilang ‘Philippine Bermuda Triangle.’ eh sumama ang panahon, nag-landing ako sa mainland Romblon. Wala namang mga telepono so walang may alam kung saan ako nag-landing, kaya walang nagsalubong sa akin. Kaya kailangan humanap ako kung saan ako pupunta sa ibang bayan na pantalan walang eroplano, walang barko, walang jeep, walang kotse, pero sa malayong lugar na 'yon may tricycle kaya' yon ang aking ginamit.

Minsan naman nagpunta ako doon sa isla ng Cagayancillo. Alam n'yo 'yung Tubbataha nakita ninyo ako ay nagd-diving sa Tubbataha, ang tubbataha ay bahagi ng bayan ng Cagayancillo, nasa gitna ng Sulu sea, nasa gitna ng nothing, middle of nowhere. Pero pag landing ko doon sa helicopter may tricycle na naman.

Kaya dahil sa inyo, nakaka-asa ang mga pasahero na makararating sila sa kanilang paroroonan, umuulan man o bumabagyo nandoon pa rin kayo.

Kaya sa pamamagitan ng summit na ito, umaasa ako na talagang katuwang tayo upang makamit ang pambansang katatagan at kaunlaran. Kailangan ko kayo.

Ang sektor ng tricycle driver ay matatagpuan, gaya nang pinaliwanag ko kanina ang halimbawa, sa halos lahat ng sulok ng ating bansa, at umaabot na raw sa walong daang libong katao ang inyong kabuuang bilang. Dahil dito, lalong naging mahalaga ang inyong pakikilahok at pakikiisa sa ating mga programa upang labanan ang kahirapan at i-angat ang kabuhayan ng bawat Pilipino partikular na ang mga mahihirap dito sa lungsod kagaya ng Quezon City nga kung saan one-fourth ng tricycle driver ay nandito sa Quezon City. doon din sa Caloocan 'yung number two na pinakamaraming tricycle driver, pinaka-dense. Maging sa kanayunan nga kagaya ng mga malalayong lugar ng Romblon o Cagayancillo o Batanes.

Noong ako ay maupo bilang pangulo, sinabi ko na dapat manalo tayo laban sa kahirapan sa loob ng dekadang ito. Matapos ngayon, may isang taon at kalahati ng aking pamamahala, masasabi kong tayo ay nasa tamang landas. dahil sa pagpapatupad ng wastong patakaran, ang ating ekonomiya ay sumusulong bagama't marami at mas malaki pang mga mas mayamang ekonomiya ay dumanas ng paghina. Ang naitalang pagtaas ng ating ekonomiya noong nakaraang taon ay isa sa pinakamataas na kung ihahambing natin sa ating mga karatig-bansa sa timog-silangang asya maging sa mga mayayaman na bansa ng mundo.

Halimbawa, nakalikha tayo ng higit sa isa't-kalahating milyong trabaho noong nakaraang taon, kaya lamang kailangan maghanap pa tayo ng trabaho para sa apat na milyong Pilipino.

At ang pinaka-mataas na unemployment rate sa buong Pilipinas ay dito mismo sa Metro Manila. Kaya 'yan ang ating hamon — makahanap ng trabaho para sa ating mga mamamayan na nasa Metro Manila.

At meron ding nagsasabi na, "pataas nang pataas daw ang presyo ng bilihin." ang nagsasabi nito ay hindi gumagalang sa malasakit ng mga tricycle drivers. Pero ako, gusto kong mag-pasalamat sa inyo dahil mula noong ako ay naging pangulo hindi pa n'yo tinataas ang pasahe. Kaya, masasabi natin at dahil sa inyong malasakit nasasabi natin na ang presyo ng mga pangunahing bilihin ay pareho pa rin tulad ng bigas, galunggong, gamot, pasahe. Iyon ngang presyo ng mga karaniwang gamot na binibili ng mga mahihirap ay nahati natin. Mahahanap itong mga gamot sa mga parmasya ng mga ospital ng pamahalaan. Pero siguro Dinky, Roy dahil malaki ang TODA baka pwede tayong gumawa ng cooperative na parmasya ng TODA na magbebenta... Na magbebenta ng gamot sa kalahating presyo, kung 'yung TODA mismo ang mag-aangkat ng gamot sa pamamagitan ng Philippine International Trading Corporation.

Sa mga pinahayag kong layunin sa aking State of the Nation Address noong isang taon, tatlumpu't-lima na ang ating natapos at labindalawa na lamang ang kasalukuyang ipinapatupad pa.

Kasama na rito ang katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan ng sandaan at limampung libong maralitang taga-lungsod. Mahigit sa tatlumpu't apat — sana doon sa mga nakakuha ng karapatan — 'yung mga squatter na nakuha ng karapatan na bilhin ang sarili nilang lupang tinitirikan, 150,000 families na yon. sana kasama ang ilang pamilya ng TODA doon sa mga 'yon. At mahigit na tatlumpu't-apat na libong manggagawa ang ating nabigyan ng tulong pinansiyal para sa pabahay. Nguni't ito ay gusto kong paabutin sa isandaang libo sa susunod na tatlong buwan. Eh baka naman ang TODA ay makatulong bumuo ng isang housing program para sa mga tricycle drivers.

At sana rin, sana rin maraming tricycle drivers and kasama sa na-abot nating target na kalahating milyong maralitang taga-lungsod ay mabigyan ng health insurance coverage. Dahil ngayon halos milyon-at-kalahati na Pilipino ay may health insurance na. At alam kong napakamahal ang magkasakit kaya mahalagang may sasagot sa inyong mga gastos sa pagpapagamot pag kayo ay nagkasakit, lalo na katulad ninyo mga tricycle driver na maaaring maaksidente habang namamasada, at ang sagot nga dito ay Ang Philippine Health Insurance.

Patuloy ang ating pagkilos upang tugunan ang mga pangangailangan ng ating Mga mamamayan.

Eh tungkol sa mga isyung inyong iniharap sa akin ngayon, malamang — hindi ko pa kasi nababasa, ngayon lang binigay sa akin eh. Binabasa ko mabilis sana pero in-introduce na ako ni dinky eh — pero malamang ang iba dito ay halos sakop na sa mga program na binanggit ko. At nakakatiyak kayo na pagsisikapan kong matugunan ang karamihan kundi man lahat ng inyong kahilingan.

Ang mga ito ay ating pag-aaralan at ipapasuri sa mga kinauukulang ahensiya ng pamahalaan, para maging mas mabisa ang magiging katugunan. Eh, nandiyan na si Roy Golez, ang ating National Security Adviser, sanay na kayo makipag-usap sa kanya, so siya na ang makikipag-usap sa inyo hanggang kunting-konti ililipat niya ito sa kinauukulang tauhan ni si Secretary Bebot Alvarez ng DOTC. Pero umaasa rin ako sa inyong pagtulong upang mabilis nating malutas ang mga usaping ito.

Ang mga tagumpay ninyo sa mga nakaraang panahon ay nawa'y magsilbing inspirasyon sa lahat ng inyong mga kasapi upang lalong maging matatag at maunlad ang inyong samahan.

Sa panahon ngayon, higit na kailangan ng ating lipunan ang mga organisasyong tulad ninyo na handang makialam at maki-isa sa pamahalaan sa pamamagitan ng mabisang ugnayan at pagtutulungan. Kayo ay bahagi ng dakilang manggagawang Pilipino.

Kayo ang tunay na kabalikat ng pamahalaan sa pagsulong ng ating ekonomiya, pagiging matatag ng ating demokrasya, at pagpapalakas sa kakayahan ng pilipino upang makipag-sabayan kaninuman sa buong mundo.

Muli kong binabati ang todaphil at ang lahat ng inyong mga kasapi, Lalung-lalo na ang inyong mga makikisig at masisipag na pinuno na narito naka-upo sa matagumpay ninyong pagdaraos sa summit na ito.

Mabuhay ang TODA!

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat!

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's Speech During the First Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines (TODAPHIL) Summit 2002. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225235/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8343&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the celebration of the Social Housing Week

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the celebration of the Social Housing Week

[Delivered at the Amoranto Stadium, Quezon City, June 4, 2002]

Ako ay nagalak na makilala ang mga organisasyon na nagbibigay ng suporta para tuluyan nating mapagtagumpayan ang hangaring mas maayos ang buhay ng ating mamamayan.

Sa bagong pulitika, hindi lamang personalidad at pulitiko ang nangunguna, hindi lamang ang patronage ang nangingibabaw. Sa bagong pulitika, importante ang plataporma at importante ang institusyonal na pakikipag-ugnay sa taong-bayan. Bahagi sa institusyonal na pakikipag-ugnay sa taong-bayan ay ang papel ng mga NGO kagaya ng Social Housing Movement.

Naparito ako sa inyong selebrasyon dahil sa pagsama ng bahagi ng sektor na kaugnay sa pamamahagi ng disenteng pabahay at lupa at paraan kung papaano ang taong-bayan ay makahanap nang agarang solusyon sa lumalawak na pangangailangang pabahay ng ating mga mamamayan, lalo na iyong mga mahihirap.

Ang bagong pulitika ay dapat may plataporma. Klarong-klaro ang plataporma ng ating pamahalaan ngayon. Ang ating sinisikap ay masugpo ang kahirapan sa loob ng dekada. Ang layuning ito ay may apat na agenda: Una, trabaho na manggagaling sa investments; pangalawa, modernisasyon ng agrikultura kaugnay ng social equity; pangatlo, espesyal na pansin sa mga kapus-palad; at, pang-apat, iangat ang sukat ng moralidad sa pamahalaan at lipunan.

Ang pangatlo, ang espesyal na pansin sa kapus-palad, sakop nito na makamit ng mahihirap ang katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan.

Napag-alaman ko na matagal na itong organisasyong Social Housing Movement at marami na kayong mga nagawa sa larangan ng pabahay. Kabilang dito ang aktibong partisipasyon sa relokalasyon, sa community organizing, sa site development, sa socio-economic survey, at iba pa.

Naglilingkod kayo sa maralitang taga-lungsod, ganoon din ang aking pamahalaan. Ang maralitang taga-lungsod ay hindi dapat tinuturing bilang problema. Ang maralitang taga-lungsod ay dapat tinuturing bilang bahagi ng solusyon. Ito ay sa pamamagitan people's organizations.

Ang isang malaking solusyon ay tulungan ang maralitang taga-lungsod na magkaroon ng katiyakan ng lupa sa tinitirikan. Nagawa na natin ito, sa unang taon ng aking administrasyon, para sa mahigit na 150,000 families. Karamihan sa 150,000 na nakakuha ng katiyakan sa tinitirikang lupa ay iyong mga nakatira sa lupang ito na hindi na ginagamit ng gobyerno. Inutos ko na itong mga lupa ng gobyerno na hindi ginagamit, tulad ng nasa malapit sa riles sa tren na wala nang treng dumadaan ay ibenta na sa murang halaga sa mga nakatira doon. Dineklara na rin natin ang ilang alienable and disposable areas para mabili na ng maralitang taga-lungsod.

Meron namang ilan na nakatira sa lupang pribado ngunit nakapasok sa community mortgage program. Dito ay malaking kabalikat nila ang mga NGO kagaya ng Social Housing Movement.

Kung minsan, hindi natin maiwasan na i-relocate ang mga tinatawag na squatter. Halimbawa, iyong mga nakatira sa mga mapanganib na lugar, tulad ng sa ilalim ng tulay, tabi ng ilog, tabi ng riles ng tren, nadadaan pa ng tren, at mga lugar na bahain. Dito kailangan din ng tulong ng mga NGO kagaya ng social housing movement.

Isa pang kinakailangan bigyan ng relokalasyon ay yung mga nakatira sa mga right-of-way areas. Ganoon din yung mga squatter na nade-demolish dahil sa court order, at karaniwan itong court order ay dahil pribado ang may-ari ng lupa. Itong mga ito, kailangan tulungang makahanap ng malilipatan.

Kaya itong araw na ito, inuulit ko na ang pabahay at katiyakan sa lupa ay isang sentro ng plataporma ng ating pamahalaan.

Napakalaki ng papel ng sektor ng pabahay upang mapalawak ang ating ekonomiya.

Kapag may katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan ng isang mamamayan, kapag meron na siyang hawak na papel, itong papel ay magagamit para makahiram ng puhunang panghanapbuhay. Hindi kailangan ang transfer certificate of title. Maraming papel na ang ginagalang ng mga nagpapautang. Ito ay nangyayari na sa maraming ibang bansa at nangyayari na rin sa Pilipinas, ayon sa pag-aaral ng isang dalubhasa sa mga bagay na ito na si Hernando de Soto. Gusto nating lumawak itong sistema para ang mga maralitang taga-lungsod ay magamit ang lupang tinitirikan hindi lamang para makatira doon kung hindi para maging collateral lupang magkaroon ng puhunang pangkabuhayan.

Sa ganoon, magkakaroon ng hanapbuhay ang dating squatter at bababa ang ating malaking unemployment rate.

Ito ay bahagi sa mga dahilan kung bakit tayo ay nagbibigay ng pangunahing importansya sa pagkatiyak ng lupang tinitirikan para sa maralitang taga-lungsod. Siguro, iyong nakamit nating ganito para sa higit na 150,000 families sa loob ng isang taon ay testigo ng sinseridad ng inyong pamahalaan tungkol dito.

Sa ibabaw ng katiyakan sa lupang tinitirikan, naghahanap din tayo ng murang bahay para sa ating mga pinakadukha. Halimbawa, may nakita akong bahay sa Bulacan na gawa sa kawayan na umaabot lamang sa P18,000 ang paggawa. Maganda at matipid na halfway house ito para sa mga nire-relocate ng tirahan.

Ang HUDCC ang pangunahing ahensiya na namamahala sa mga bagay ng pabahay at lupa. Maraming minana ang HUDCC na bakanteng bahay mula nakaraang administrasyon at ito ay pinagbibili ngayon sa discounted prices. Ito ay isa lamang katibayan ng ating pagsisikap na bigyan ng espesyal na pansin ang ating mga kapus-palad sa ating plano ng economic development.

Sana kunin ng Social Housing Movement ang imbentaryo nitong bahay na nakatiwangwang para sa ganoon, makahanap kayo ng mga beneficiaries na puwedeng bumili nito on lease-to-own or long-term lease or easy-installment basis.

Ang HUDCC rin ay naghahanap ng pondo para sa mga bahay para sa mga manggagawa. Ang GSIS ay handang magpondo nito. Kanya lamang, hindi nagre-retail ang GSIS kasi hindi naman trabaho ng GSIS ang housing. Ang pondo lang niya bilang investment ang nilalagay sa housing pero hindi siya ang gumagawa ng housing mismo. Kaya kailangang dumaan ang pondo ng GSIS sa mga bangko. Magiging parang middle-men ang mga bangko ng pondong ito. Kanya lamang, sa ngayon, takot pa ang mga bangko na maging agresibo dahil noong 1997, noong Asian crisis, at noong year 2000 na nagkaroon ng post-BW crisis, naapektuhan ang mga bangko sa maraming utang sa pabahay na hindi nabayaran dahil sa pagbagsak ng mga ekonomiya noong mga taong iyon. Kaya sana yung mga NGO, yung mga socially-oriented negosyante, mamuhunan sila. Mayroon namang pondo pero kailangan may namumuhunan, may nagpapatakbo, nagde-develop. Pati na rin yung Social Housing Movement, mga NGO, sana tulungan ang pamahalaan dito, lalo na iyong mga NGO na nakapagpatunay na sila ay mabuting credit risk kasi kailangan ng maraming middlemen na sila ang talagang gagawa ng housing development.

Isang dahilan rin kung bakit naiipit ang mga bangko ay matagal silang mabayaran — matagal mabawi ang puhunan sa housing. Mahaba rin ang red tape bago sila makapagsimula ng development at makabenta ng bahay. Siguro alam ito ng Social Housing Movement dahil dumadaan sila sa mga red tape na ito. Kaya ang isang malaking ginawa ng HUDCC ay bawasan ang red tape sa proseso ng housing permits.

Dati 188 signatures ang kailangan; ngayon, 40 signatures na lamang. Noong araw, two-and-a-half years bago matapos yung papeles bago masimulan ang development. Ngayon ay three months na lamang.

Kaya sana yung mga NGO na may kakayahan, yung mga negosyante na may kaalaman sa development, pumunta naman kayo salow-cost housing dahil maraming kailangang housing para sa ating mga manggagawa.

Sa mga sumusunod na dalawang taon, ang HUDCC ay gagawa pa ng ilang pangunahing direksyon para sa sektor ng pabahay.

Mas madali nang makautang ngayon para sa pabahay. Ang halaga ng interes ng pautang ngayon ay pinakamababa sa kasaysayan ng ating bansa. Ito ay dahil na rin sa mahusay na paghawak ng pamahalaan sa national budget. Maliit na lamang ang ating budget deficit, kaya konti na lang ang hinihiram ng gobyerno, kaya hindi nakikipag-kompetensiya sa pribadong sektor sa pautang. Ang kompetensiya sa pautang kasi ang isa sa nagpapataas sa interest rate. Kaya kung ang isang dating malaking humihiram, kagaya ng gobyerno, ay hindi na masyadong humihiram, bumababa ang interest rate. Ngayon panahon na ng mga developers at saka ng mga gustong mag-housing loan na humiram para magkaroon ng housing ang ating mga manggagawa.

Hindi pa ako Pangulo ay naglilibot na ako sa maralitang taga-lungsod, at sa aking paglilibot, parating sinasabi ng ating mga kababayan na ang kanilang pangunahing kailangan ay ang pagkakaroon ng katiyakan sa lupa, o shelter security. Ito ang dahilan kung bakit gusto ko na may 150,000 families na magkaroon ng shelter security bawa't taon. Natupad natin ito noong nakaraang taon. Sana matulungan ako ng mga NGO kagaya ng Social Housing Movement na matupad ito uli ngayong taon. Kasi noong isang taon, karamihan sa napamahaging lupa ay lupa ng gobyerno. Ngayon dahil marami ng lupa ng gobyerno ang napamahagi na, mas maraming community mortgage program ang dapat nating gawin para makaabot sa 150,000 families na beneficiary. At alam ko na ang community mortgage program ay isa sa mga activity ng mga NGO kagaya ng Social Housing Movement.

Gusto ko rin na makapagpatayo ang ating bansa taun-taon ng 100,000 units na low-cost housing para sa mga manggagawa, at 50,000 units na socialized housing para sa mga pinakamahirap sa lahat.

Alam ko na kung may kakayahan lamang pumili ang ating mahihirap na kababayan, ayaw nilang maging squatter. Talagang nakakalungkot na maging squatter sa sariling bayan. Pero napakahirap makakuha ng lupa sa lungsod dahil mataas ang presyo ng lupa dito. Ganoon pa man, nauunawaan ko ang pangarap ng bawa't tao na magkaroon ng disente at tiyak na tahanan.

Ngunit mayroon din ilan na gustong maging squatter— sila ang mga professional squatters. Ang mga professional squatters ang siyang nagpapahirap sa ating trabaho na magbigay ng karapatan sa mga genuine na landless na gustong magkaroon talaga ng seguridad sa lupang tinitirikan. Kaya isa sa mga hinihingi ng Social Housing Movement sa akin ay gumawa ng task force, isang anti-professional squatting task force para mahiwalay natin ang genuine landless na naghahanap ng tahanan sa mga professional squatters na ginagamit ang pag-squat para maghanapbuhay. Mayroon na tayong mga ginawang ganito. Kapag nagsusumbong ang mga NGO, may ilang mga kilalang professional squatter na tayong nahuli at mayroon na tayong mga nakasuhan. Kaya alam natin na puwede tayong magtagumpay basta't ilagay lamang natin ang ating atensyon. Hanapin natin ang mga sindikato na nangangwarta sa inyo at sa ganoon hulihin natin sila, kasuhan natin sila. Ito ang aking inaasahan sa Social Housing Movement.

Mayroon akong dalawang mensahe sa taga-Payatas: Una, ideklara na ang buong area bilang alienable land tapos maglalagay na lamang ng probisyon na kung may private sector na puwedeng magpapatunay na siya ang may-ari, atin itong igagalang. Ikalawa, itutuloy natin ang tulay ng Pangulo sa Payatas.

Bilang pangwakas, aking ipinanalangin nawa'y sa inyong anibersaryo sa susunod na taon, masabi nating lahat, na itong isang kasunduan na nanggaling sa magandang konsultasyon mismo sa taong-bayan ay magtagumpay dahil magkasama tayo sa kilos at sa gawa.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

Source: Presidential Museum and Library

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). Strong republic : selected speeches of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. [Quezon City] : Philippine Information Agency.

Speech of President Arroyo during the First Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day Celebration, Inauguration Ceremonies of the “Filipino-Chinese Friendship Bridge” (North Bridge) and the “Manila-Beijing Frien”

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the First Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day Celebration sponsored by the Chinese – Filipino Business Club, Inc. (CFBCI) and Inauguration Ceremonies of the “Filipino-Chinese Friendship Bridge” (North Bridge) and the “Manila-Beijing Frien

[Delivered at the President’s Restaurant, Binondo Manila, June 7, 2002]

Thank you very much Secretary Perez.

Mr. Aw Peng Lam, president of the Chinese-Filipino Business Club; Mr. Dante Go, Honorary president; His Excellency Ambassador Wang; Mayor Atienza; congressman Angpin; Congressman Nieva; Secretary Golez; Mr. Liu and the other members of the Beijing delegation; members of the Chinese-Filipino business club; officers of the Chinatown Barangay association; ladies and gentlemen:

I congratulate the officers and members of the Chinese-Filipino business club led by current president emeritus Peter Yu and president Aw Peng Lam for spearheading this significant occasion. I also acknowledge last year’s club president, Mr. Dante Go, for his hard work in pushing forward the initiatives of the CFBCI in this past years.

Today’s gathering is special because we are celebrating three occasions. This is the first time we are celebrating Filipino-Chinese friendship day, and this in accordance with Proclamation no. 148, which, as Ambassador Wang said, I issued last January. Second, we celebrate today the first year of the signing of Republic Act 9139, otherwise known as the administrative naturalization act — and I hope that the members of the Chinese-Filipino Business Club will propagate this law and invite many of the Chinese who have been living in the Philippines for a long time to apply for Filipino citizenship. And third, we mark these twin occasions by, as mentioned earlier, officially naming two unnamed bridges here in Binondo as the “Filipino-Chinese Friendship” bridge and the “Manila-Beijing Friendship” bridge.

May these two bridges serve as monuments to the enduring friendship and historical ties between the Chinese and the Filipinos.

Long before Ferdinand Magellan landed on our shores, the Chinese were already here — trading ceramics and silk for the pearls of Sulu, the indigo of Manila, and the cotton of Cebu. When the spaniards established the galleon trade between the Philippines and Mexico, the bulk of their cargo consisted of luxury goods from China which had, by then, become popular items in the west. During the spanish times, the stores and shops in the parian or Chinese quarter, along the banks of the Pasig river outside Intramuros, supplied most of the essential commodities for local residents.

As the Chinese expanded their commercial presence in the country through the centuries, cultural and social assimilation set in. Intermarriages became so common that the late social scientist Otley Beyer said that Filipinos are generally 10 percent of Chinese descent.

Personally, I feel a deep sense of affinity with the Chinese community. My husband, Mike Tuason Arroyo and his family, the Tuasons, are of Chinese ancestry. I have mentioned many times that they are from the lineage of son Tua, a Chinese businessman granted a Spanish nobility title. That name was eventually, the name son Tua was eventually hispanicized to Tuason. And so therefore I am glad to be here in my husband’s ancestral community.

There is so much from our common past to cement the bonds between our people. And I am glad that here in the Philippines, the Chinese have effortlessly assimilated the Filipino culture. This has enriched our language, traditions and even our values as a people. By stroke of good fortune, this process has also prepared us way in advance for the coming era of regional economic integration and the coming of china into the world trade organization.

The strong presence of the Chinese in the Philippines paved the way for our strong ties with china. Since the 9th of June 1975 when diplomatic relations were established between our two countries — our relationship has become closer and deeper with each passing year. And I personally am proud that in my pre-government days I played a role in the establishment of diplomatic relations between our two countries, because I was a founding member and co-chairman of the association for Philippines-china understanding which worked for diplomatic relations between our two countries.

During my visit to china last year, several agreements were forged, one of which was the signing of the MOU between CFBCI and the all-china federation of industry and commerce.

A cooperation agreement was also signed between the Philippine chamber of commerce and industry and the china council for the promotion of international trade, geared towards the intensification of bilateral trade between the two countries.

I am also very grateful that as a result of my visit to china last year, specifically my talks with Premier Zhu Rongji, we adopted a flagship project in our drive towards agricultural modernization founded on social equity, and this is the famous Chinese hybrid rice which is now being planted all over the Philippines.

As a result of the m-o-u signed in china last year to set up demonstration farms in the country, Chinese experts are scheduled to arrive this month to start the project. The benefits of this project will surely redound to the upliftment of our farming communities in the rural areas.

In response to an educational agreement between the Philippines and china, the commission on higher education has already lined up educational programs and activities to promote bilateral economic-academic relations in higher education. These include lectureship programs and training of Filipino teachers in the Chinese language, as well as the exchange of education professionals between the CHED and the Ministry of Education of China.

The future of Philippine-China relations rests on the ability of both our peoples to continue working for our common goals under the international globalized regime. These goals were articulated in the APEC Summit in Shanghai, in my visit to Beijing where many of you were with me and in the asean+3 summit in Brunei last year. In these three meetings, I had the opportunity to meet again with President Jiang Zemin and exchange ideas and proposals spanning the wide range of issues in regional security and development.

Today we also celebrate the contributions of the CFBCI to the good and welfare of the Filipino people.

I commend your initiatives to help the government address the shortage in school buildings and facilities, your plan to donate school buildings in various Barangays and your book donation program for the poor in the countryside deserve our appreciation and acknowledgement.

I also commend your efforts to help my administration provide better services for indigent families through “operation brotherhood,” to which you generously donated money and medical missions for the benefit of indigents in metro manila.

I am also glad to know about the initiative of Dante go to gather together the heads of over 100 different organizations involved in business brotherhood and fire fighting. I am confident this will result in the further unification and solidarity of the various groups in the Chinese community.

I also want to thank Dante Go because he just announced today that your group will be donating a million pesos to any charity of my choice. And I would like to announce that this million pesos I will use to be seed funding for low-cost housing loans at 200,000 pesos each for five working-class applicants.

We must be united in our fight against poverty. The greatest challenge of our country is to win the battle against poverty within the decade. To succeed, I need your help and assistance.

I realize that poverty alleviation programs will not succeed if crime threatens the well-being of our citizens. I am aware that criminality remains a concern to the members of the CFBCI; and I appreciate that you are doing your best to help in crime prevention and control.

The CFBCI is working continuously and closely with the national anti-crime commission headed by secretary Perez in addressing the problem of kidnapping. Your club has donated 30 patrol cars to the PNP in previous years. This is on top of your determined efforts to establish tighter links between the government and the filipino-chinese businessmen.

The CFBCI's efforts to rally metro manila against drugs also merits acknowledgement. Recently, Mr. Go got together NGO's, students and youth organizations in various chinese-filipino schools to participate in one of the biggest anti-drug rallies ever held.

And today I am happy to let you know that I signed into law the new anti-drugs law which reduces the amount of drugs that one person has been caught holding in order for him to be considered a pusher, and which also created the new Philippine drug enforcement agency.

I assure you that my administration with your help is meeting the problem of kidnapping with more focus and counter force.

I am motivating both the incumbent and the incoming leadership in the PNP to eliminate kidnapping in metro manila.

We will improve the on-the-ground capability of the PNP. We will have a more disciplined processing of intelligence. After all with coup threats subsided, ad hoc sources are now less necessary.

In my visit to London last January, we had an agreement with prime minister Tony Blair for Scotland yard to help the Philippine national police in building up its skills and capacity to fight kidnapping and other organized crimes. We now have such a training program in place, and we are working on a similar arrangement with the Hong Kong police.

I am also thankful for CFBCI's support of our anti-terrorism program and for donating one million pesos to the soldiers killed in Mindanao. You know, more soldiers have been killed than the hostages that were either rescued or that died on the wayside in this battle. Such commitments and actions of your organization are needed — they are what we need to gain the momentum to move forward.

I am deeply saddened over the death of Ediborah yap and Martin Burnham, who were slain in an encounter between our troops and the Abu Sayyaf this afternoon after more than a year of captivity.

I commiserate with the Yap and Burnham families. This has been a long and painful trial for them, for our government, for our country. Our soldiers tried their best to hold their fire for the safety of the hostages. We had hoped and prayed for their safe return. Gracia is safe. This is our blessing. I pray for her early recovery.

I salute our troops for their forbearance and courage. I thank our American military allies for their assistance. The fight against terrorism is our fight. It is the fight of all mankind against evil. Even as we speak, even while the bodies of Ediborah and Martin and while Gracia have all been flown already to Zamboanga so that Gracia can have her treatment in the hospital, the fierce battle is still continuing in the jungles of Siraway in Zamboanga del Norte.

The terrorists shall not be allowed to get away with this. We shall not stop until the Abu Sayyaf is finished. I ask our people to be vigilant always.

Despite the problem of terrorism in southern Philippines, with god's grace and the help of private organizations like CFBCI, our economy has pulled through in just one-and-a-half years.

While the economies of many of our neighbors and trading partners suffered declines last year, ours posted a 3.7 percent growth in GNP, one of the highest output growth rates in east and Southeast Asia.

And in the first quarter of this year, our GNP grew not by 3.7 percent but by 4.9 percent.

I thank your organization for helping me to accelerate and sustain this growth. You have done many things to help me including making a call against political bickering, in line with our shared aspirations.

I call upon you, and all other sectors that share our desire to improve the quality of life of every chinese-filipino and of every Filipino: let us set aside our political differences and instead concentrate on our common aspirations for peace, for public order, for good governance and for national development.

The Philippines will be bright and secure for us and for our children, if we remain united.

Maraming salamat at mabuhay kayong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the First Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day Celebration sponsored by the Chinese – Filipino Business Club, Inc. (CFBCI) and Inauguration Ceremonies of the "Filipino-Chinese Friendship Bridge" (North Bridge) and the "Manila-Beijing Frien. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225213/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8333&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Celebration of Migrant Workers Day

Speech of Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo President of the Philippines During the Celebration of Migrant Workers Day

[Delivered at the Ceremonial Hall, Malacañang, June 07, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Sto. Tomas, na parating sinasabi ko mabigat ang kanyang trabaho kasi hindi lamang siya nag-aalaga ng manggagawa sa pilipinas at pilipinong manggagawa sa ibayong dagat bilang Secretary of Labor, siya rin ay nag-aalaga ng manggagawa sa buong mundo bilang pangulo ng International Labor Organization pero malaking karangalan ang binibigay niya sa ating bansa sa kanyang puwesto.

Binabati ko ang ating mga Lider sa Kongreso, nandito si Congressman Kako Lacson at saka si Congresswoman Imee Marcos. I would also like to greet the ambassadors of the countries who host many overseas Filipinos; si Secretary Lorenzo at iba't-ibang mga officials ng Department of Labor at saka ang kanyang mga ahensya; ang ating mga manggagawang pilipino sa ibayong dagat; Mr. Aligada, representing the labor group leaders of the overseas Filipinos; ating mga tumanggap ng mga parangal na binigay itong araw na ito:

Magandang umaga po sa inyong lahat at maligayang Migrant Workers Day.

Natutuwa po ako at nagkaroon tayo ng pagkakataong magsama-sama itong umaga dito sa Malacañang, ang Palasyo ng Bansa, ang Palasyo ng Dakilang Manggagawang Pilipino.

Mahalaga ang pagkakataon ito upang makausap ko sa pamamagitan ninyo ang pitong milyong filipino sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng mundo. Sabi ng ni Undersecretary Baldoz, seven million Filipinos, tatlong milyon ay overseas contract workers, apat na milyon ay mga permanent residents sa iba't-ibang bansa. Itong araw na ito ay naging araw ng kung kailan naging batas ang Migrant Workers and Overseas Filipino Act. Kaya sa araw na ito, ang pilipinas sa buong mundo, mga pilipino sa buong mundo ay binibigyang pansin ang dakilang manggagawang pilipino sa ibayong dagat.

Maraming beses ko na nabisita ang ating mga dakilang manggagawang pilipino sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng buong mundo.

Ginagawa ko ito noong ako ay senador pa at bise-presidente, at lalong na ngayon ay ako ay naging pangulo, tuwing mayroon akong bisita sa ibang bansa parating may panahon para sa filipino sa aking paglalakbay bilang pangulo.

At ngayon muli, dito naman bilang inyong pangulo, mga dakilang manggagawang pilipino sa ibayong dagat sa ngalan ng inyong kababayan sa pilipinas, pinupuri ko kayo sapagkat sa pamamagitan ng inyong husay sa pagtrabaho, ina-angat ninyo ang pagkatao ng sambayanang pilipino. Napapamalas ninyo sa mundo na ang pilipino ay dapat ipagmalaki at hangaan.

Sa buong daigdig, nararamdaman ng mga bansa, ng mga may puhunan at ng mga magulang ang malaking tulong ng mga pilipino, ng dakilang manggagawang pilipino. Kaya nalalagay nitong mga dayuhan na ito sa isip nila na siguro nga totoo na ang pilipinas ang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawa.

Tinatanaw ng pamahalaan at ng taong-bayan ng pilipinas ang kontribusyon ng overseas filipinos sa ekonomiya at kabuhayang pambansa. Ang inyong malaking tulong ay nagpapasigla sa ekonomiya at nagtutulak sa kaunlaran ng bansa.

Sa ibabaw ng magandang reputasyon na binibigay ninyo sa ating bansa bilang tahanan ng dakilang manggagawang pilipino, milyun-milyong kabataan ang nakakapag-aral o nakakatapos ng edukasyon sa inyong tulong. Libu-libong bagong bahay ay napapatayo at ‘yung mga napapatayuan ninyo ng bagong bahay, sila ay nagkakaroon ng bagong buhay.

Dahil sa inyong tulong ay nakapaglunsad tayo ng napakaraming negosyo maging sa small business sa buong bansa dahil pinupuhunan ng mga mahal ninyo sa buhay ang inyong mga remittances. Ang matagumpay na negosyo na napatayo sa ating bansa dahil sa inyong remittances ay isang malaking haligi ng ating ekonomiya. Sumigla ang maraming barangay, bayan, lungsod at probinsiya sa kontribusyon ng mga overseas filipinos.

Ang pinakamalaking investment sa pilipinas ng dayuhan ay five billion dollars, ito ‘yung puhunan ng shell sa malampaya. Pero ang dakilang manggagawang pilipino taun-taon ang pinupuhunan sa ating bansang pilipinas ay six billion dollars — mas malaki kaysa sa pinakamalaking foreign investment sa ating bansa.

Kaya, narinig ninyo ‘yung ating mga nagsalita ngayon — si Undersecretary Baldoz, yung ating emcee — anong tawag nila sa inyo? Investors, kasi kayo ay major economic investors sa bansa.

Kaya ilang beses kong sinasabi talaga dapat dagdagan ang bansag sa ating mga overseas filipinos. Ang karaniwang tawag sa pilipinong nasa ibayong bansa ay overseas workers. Pero sa seven million, tatlo ang overseas contract workers, pero lahat ng seven million ay nagpapadala ng salapi pampuhunan ng mga kamag-anak dito. Kaya palagay ko na ang talagang dapat ang bagay, ang mas generic na itawag sa overseas filipino ay talagang overseas filipino investors.

Kayo ang mga overseas filipino investors na araw-araw namumuhunan sa kaunlaran ng ating bansa. Ang puhunan ninyo ay ang “productive years” alang-alang sa ating bayan. Saludo ako sa inyo. Dapat lamang na suklian ng bansa ang inyong tulong.

Sa aking state of the nation address, sinabi ko — labing-lima lang ‘yung panukalang batas na sinabi kong kailangan ko, pinakakailangan sa lahat — at sinabi ko bahagi sa labing-limang ‘yon isang malaking prayoridad ng aking gobyerno ay ang pagpasa ng absentee voting bill. Nung ako ay senador 1992 to 1998, nag-file ako ng absentee voting bill, kaya bilang pangulo natural na si-nertify ko bilang urgent administration measure itong absentee voting bill.

I have also certified the Bill on Dual Citizenship as an urgent administration measure. At inaasahan ko na itong mga batas na ito ay hindi magiging kasangkapan sa pag-aalitan sa senado. Bagamat hindi ko papabayaang ang aking tungkulin bilang pinuno ng bansa, pinuno ng aking coalition, at pinuno ng aking partido, tinuturing ko na ang alitan sa senado ay, sa kabuuan, isang bagay na nauukol sa sarili nilang tahanan. Ang aking binibigyang pansin at pag-aabala, ang aking focus ay ‘yung pang araw-araw na trabaho ko kung papaano makapaglikha ng mas maraming trabaho sa ating bansa at kung papaano mananatiling kaya ng mahihirap ang kanilang mga pangunahing bilihan.

Malamang nababasa rin ninyo kung minsan may masalimuot hindi lamang sa Legislatura pati na rin sa Executive. Halimbawa, malamang nababasa ninyo ‘yung masalimuot na welfare fund issue. Ito ang masasabi ko rito: kung may alegasyon ng anomaliya, tungkulin ito ng kalihim ng departamento na ipaimbestiga. At kung may inimbestiga nga karapatan din ng iniimbestiga na ipagtanggol ang kanyang sarili — ito ang due process sa isang demokrasya. Kaya lang hindi tama na magkakaroon ng mga atake personal sa media — hindi ‘yon bahagi ng due process — at importante dapat hindi tumigil ang paglilingkod ng ahensiya sa ating dakilang manggagawang pilipino.

The Philippine economy will, for the foreseeable future, continue to be heavily dependent on overseas worker remittances. On the basis of this realization, this reality, and on the basis of the nation’s humanitarian responsibilities to its people wherever they are, our government is working hard to strengthen overseas filipino workers’ protection. And this is part of our motivation for strengthening bilateral relations with countries which host large numbers of filipinos.

Sa mga biyaya — maraming biyayang nabanggit ni ginoong aligada na sana maipahayag, maihandog — marami doon actually ay nandiyan na pero parang kulang ng impormasyon. Halimbawa, ‘yung ating housing program. We have a housing program for overseas filipinos under the housing and urban developing coordinating council. This is part of our goal to provide a hundred thousand housing units a year for workers, whether these workers are working in the Philippines or outside.

So far, we have only built about 60,000 houses, so we have 40,000 houses more to go under our targets, and surely among the three or four or seven million overseas filipinos, you could go to our embassies and work with their... And apply for these housing benefits for your relatives back home. Many are already doing this but there are many more that can still do it.

At binanggit din ni ginoong aligada 'yung dual citizenship. Talaga importante 'yon — una sa lahat, para makaboto kayo. Pero 'yung sa pagnenegosyo para pagpupuhunan, nung ako ay senador ako ang nag-sponsor noong batas — batas na — na ang tawag “further liberalization of foreign investments.” doon sa batas na 'yon may provision tungkol sa kung saan puwedeng mamuhunan 'yung filipinos na former filipino citizens na iba na ang citizenship, kasama doon ang pag-aari ng lupa para magnegosyo, kasama doon ang pag-invest sa ilang mga institutions na normally reserved 100 percent for filipinos pero kung kayo ay dating filipino ay puwede kayong mag-invest doon.

Kaya sana ay ang hinihingi ko sa ating dole rin na mas ipahayag itong mga benepisyong ito para sa ganoon ay maraming makikinabang. 'Yung sss hiningi rin ni ginoong aligada, 'yung mga insurance, 'yung provident fund. Mayroon na tayong provident fund sa mga ofws doon sa sss pero sa seven million overseas filipinos, 2,000 pa lamang ang nakikinabang, 2,000 pa lamang ang kasapi. Kaya ang dami-daming puwedeng magawa, kailangang mamudmod itong pahayag sa lahat ng ating overseas filipinos.

And i hope that you already realize that last year we scrapped the requirements for overseas filipino workers to file an income tax information sheet so there is no more penalty for non-filing.

Napagmasdan ko rin na 'pag umuuwi ang maraming migranteng manggagawa — marami tayong binigyan ng mga premyo o ng mga parangal na dahil nagamit nila 'yung kanilang expertise para maging mahalagang bahagi ng komunidad pagkatapos pagkauwi. Pero kanina 'di ba binanggit ko, “ano ang puhunan ninyo kaya kayo naging overseas filipino investors?” — your most productive years. Kaya ang napagmasdan ko karaniwan pag-uwi medyo may edad na, lumampas na sa most productive years kaya mahirap na makahanap nang pamamasukan. Kaya inaatasan ko si secretary pat sto. Tomas na gumawa ng kagawaran sa dole bukod tangi para sa reintegration program at dapat ang mamuno nito ay may ranggong assistant secretary.

Inaatasan ko rin ang overseas workers welfare fund na ihiwalay ang kontribusyon ng mga seamen at land-based workers sa welfare fund.

At sa mga doktor naman at social worker na pinapadala na natin, ipapadala na natin sa iba't-ibang overseas posts, sana alagaan ninyong mabuti ang dakilang manggagawang pilipino dahil kayo ay kongkreto ng senyas ng ating malasakit sa migranteng filipino, lalung-lalo na iyung mga mabibigat na lugar kung saan ibang-iba ang kultura nang nagbibigay ng trabaho.

Ang ekonomiyang minana ko noong isang taon ay napakamapanganib. Then the new york incident changed the global mood some more. But despite the stark economy we inherited and the uncertain world business conditions in 2001, we made progress. Where bigger and richer economies failed, ours moved forward. Our GDP grew by 3.4 percent last year and this first quarter it grew by 3.8 percent. Our GDP grew 3.7 percent last year and in the first quarter of this year, it grew by 4.9 percent. Ang gdp mas mababa kaysa sa gnp kasi 'yung gdp hindi kasama ang kontribusyon ng overseas filipinos, ang gnp ay kasama. Biro ninyo last year ang dipirensya 3.4 versus 3.7 — 0.3 percentage point difference. Ngayon 3.8 versus 4.9 — 1.9 percent sa ating growth rate ang kontribusyon ng overseas filipinos itong first quarter na ito. Kaya maraming salamat sa inyong kontribusyon sa ating gnp growth rate.

Kaya 'pag sinasabi nila brain drain, sabi ko, “hindi, naglilingkod doon naglilingkod pa rin dito dahil hindi kinakalimutan 'yung mga pamilya, 'yung pamayanan, at sa ganung paraan pati 'yung bansa natin ay nakikinabang.” ang importante kung ano 'yung nakikita nating demand sa mga skills, ang ating school system ay dapat produce nang produce. Kung malaki ang demand sa nurses, produce more nurses; kung malaki ang demand sa i.t. workers, produce more i.t. workers kasi kailangan din natin sila dito, kailangan sa ibang bansa. Kaya pakinabang kung nandoon, pakinabang kung nandito sila, so produce more because there is an overall increase in demand.

And because of our overseas filipino workers, as well as our relative success compared to many other economies in surviving the crisis of last year, we have gone a long way in bringing our country back on the radar screens of the world, and the work and reputation of the overseas filipinos confirm to the world that indeed the Philippines is the home of the great filipino worker.

And because of you, your remittances which have helped our economy, which have helped our banking system, interest rates and inflation rates have declined. Ang interest rate ay napakababa ngayon haming sa mga nakaraang taon, kaya inaasahan ko na ang inyong mga mahal sa buhay ay 'yung pinapadala ninyong remittances sa kanila ay ma-leverage nila ito para humiram sa mga bangko para magtayo lalo na ng low-cost housing para sa kanilang sarili at iba pang mga mahal ninyo.

Noong isang taon, nagkaroon ng 1.5 million na bagong trabaho sa ating bansa — of that 850,000 was in agriculture. Sabi ko nga kay cito lorenzo 'yung inaasahan nating one million jobs in agriculture for the next three years, 850,000 was achieved already last year. And the unemployment rate in metro manila is higher than in the rest of the country so i asked cito lorenzo dito rin we'd better look for jobs for our workers here in metro manila.

So we have been conducting jobs fairs. But yesterday's jobs fairs were quite a — not a revelation because I've seen it even in other places but especially here — for every five jobs available in the jobs fair there was only one applicant so I think the problem is not totally a lack of job opportunities, there is some friction in the distribution system, in the matching. A lot of the unemployment is what they call structural unemployment, and this is what we have to work for here in the Philippines.

Inaasahan ko na sa darating na mga araw, sana sa dekadang ito ay sa pag-ayos natin ng mga kusot ng ating job market dito mismo sa pilipinas ay magiging sapat ang trabaho sa pilipinas para hindi na kayo kailangan pang maghanapbuhay sa ibang bansa.

Trabaho, edukasyon, sariling tahanan, pagkain sa bawat mesa, this is your aspiration that's why you go abroad; and this, in common sense and plain talk, is also the core of my vision for the country.

When i made my state of the nation address last year, i expressed this vision, and i also urged everyone listening to that address last july 23rd last year to set aside bickering and politicking for at least one year. Sabi ko sana sa halip ng alitan, hiningi kong isang taon tayong magtulungan sa ikabubuti ng taong-bayan. Wala pa pong isang taon eh, kaya inuulit ko ang aking hiling.

Magtulungan tayo upang makamit natin ang apat na layunin ng ating national agenda: first, an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century; second, a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity; third, a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan; and fourth, improved moral standards in government and society.

We have the competitive edge in our human resource-intensive, skills-intensive service sectors. Ang pinakapruweba nito ay ang ating dakilang manggagawang pilipino na napapatunayan ang kadakilaan sa ibayong dagat.

Nagpapasalamat ako sa pahayag na suporta ng ating mga migranteng manggagawa na binigay ni ginoong aligada; at inaasahan ko na itong ating pagtatalakay ngayon ay maririnig ng ating mga manggagawang filipino sa iba't-ibang bahagi ng mundo, kasama na sa gitnang silangan, asya, europa at amerika. Ito ang pinakamagandang paraan kung papaano magdiriwang ng migrant workers day, na makausap ang mga migranteng manggagawa mismo sa lugar ng pagtatrabaho. Alam ko, halimbawa, na maraming naghihintay sa saudi arabia sa aking mensahe para sa migrant day. Doon naman sa hapon, may community picnic na handog ng embahada. Doon naman sa espanya, may sanlinggong pagdiriwang na matatapos sa isang diyologo kasama ni vice-president guingona.

At 'yung mga sinabi ni ginoong aligada na mga recommendations, may ibang nabanggit ko ngayon, pero sabi nga ni ginoong aligada masaya kayo naman dahil tuluy-tuloy ang dialogue na ginagawa ni secretary sto. Tomas sa inyo.

Ang hiling ko sa inyo, mga dakilang manggagawang pilipino ay tuloy na makiisa kayo sa akin.

I am counting on all of you. Kailangan ko kayo at minamahal ko kayong lahat, at nagpapasalamat ako sa inyo sa inyong pagmamahal sa ating bansa.

Maraming salamat po.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Celebration of Migrant Workers Day. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225203/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8335&Itemid=38

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT PORTAL – EDITED AT THE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE PHILIPPINES UNDER COMMONWEALTH ACT NO. 638

Speech of President Arroyo during the Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day Celebration Sponsored by the FFCCI

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day Celebration Sponsored by the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Inc. (FFCCI)

[Delivered at the Century Seafood Restaurant, Century Park Hotel, Malate, Manila, June 08, 2002]

Thank you very much Mar. John Ng, president of the Federation.

Senate President Franklin Drilon; Congressman Harry Angpin and Mrs. Angpin; Congressman Satur Ocampo; Ambassador Wang Chungui of the People's Republic of China and the other Ambassadors who are here tonight; Manny Dy, president of FFCAP; other members of the Filipino-Chinese Business Community; Honored Guests; ladies and gentlemen:

First of all, congratulations to the Department of Foreign Affairs represented here by Undersecretary Ebdalin, the Chinese Embassy in Manila, the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, and the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Associations of the Philippines for spearheading this celebration of Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day.

This occasion is significant for all of us, and for me personally. We are implementing what I signed, as the ambassador said, Proclamation 148 Declaring June 9 of every year as Filipino-Chinese Friendship day. We are also commemorating the day that diplomatic relations were established between the Philippines and China. And I am also very proud that as founding member, lifetime member and co-chairman of the association for Philippines-China understanding or APCU, I was one of those — along with the in-laws of Congressman Ocampo, Roxy Lim and her husband, and Manny Dy — I was one of those who worked for the establishment of this diplomatic relations between our two countries.

Together with many of you, my colleagues in APCU, we started working for closer Philippines-China relations during the early 70s, even before the establishment of formal relations between our two countries in June 1975.

But, as mentioned by our speakers — John, Manny and the Ambassador — the relationship between the Philippines and China started long before the Spaniards set foot on our soil. commercial relations between our two countries antedated our first contact with the west.

Even more interesting is the less-known fact that our racial affinity dates back to prehistoric times. It is said that during the ice age, the Philippine archipelago was contiguous to the Asian mainland. People from China migrated to the Philippines, Indonesia and other parts of the Malay peninsula through land bridges. archaeological and anthropological evidence attest to this.

We come from common ancestors, we are one family.

There are many aspects of Philippine culture that evolved out of this relationship. The Chinese introduced the cast-iron plow head (called lithaw or lueythaw in Chinese) that made our lands productive. fruits and vegetables like petsay, kintsay, togue (laughter/ applause) and the culinary art that brought us lomi, batsoy, tokwa and pancit became our daily fare.

The Chinese ferried sugar cane presses all the way from China to extract sugar from locally-produced cane long before the modern sugar mill was introduced to us by the French. Common Ilonggo words used in sugar production such as siapo (for bagasse), cansiaja (for sugar cane leaves), and kawa (for cauldron) are of Chinese origin.

Likewise, the impact of Chinese influence in Philippine life is seen and heard in our own common house language, such as the kinship terms “kuya” and “ate” that were borrowed from the Hokkien dialect used by the local Chinese.

The shared traditions live on, even in the modern setting, reinforced by common political and economic interests that bind China and the Philippines.

Our trade and investment relations are in the best of health. With the entry of China to the World Trade Organization, I hope our economic relations will improve further. I hope that China will buy more tropical fruits from southern Philippines. I hope that more Chinese tourists will visit northern Philippines. I hope that Chinese business will find the airports of the Philippines a good logistical hub for trading with the rest of the world and the region.

In a decade, Asean is looking at a viable China-Asean free trade area as an integrating force in our region.

More than any country in the world, we have signed the most number of trade and economic, cultural, scientific and technological agreements with China. People-to-people contacts have increased geometrically. Understanding and friendship have deepened.

The future of Philippines-China relations rests on our ability to pursue common goals under the globalized regime. These goals were articulated in the APEC Summit in Shanghai, in my state visit to Beijing where many of you were there with me, and in the Asean+3 meeting in Brunei last year. In these three meetings, I had the opportunity to meet once again with President Jiang Zemin and exchange ideas and proposals spanning the wide range of issues in regional security and development.

Domestically, we shall continue to maintain and strengthen our ties with the Chinese community. You are aware of the administrative naturalization law I signed last year, which makes the naturalization process for native-born Chinese less restrictive. With a faster and much-improved naturalization process, those whose fondest wish is to live in the Philippines permanently, will be acknowledged and served. I hope that among the Chinese community here you can conduct an aggressive campaign so that those who are not yet naturalized will apply under this law.

We are also sharing educational programs and activities, as well as activities for agricultural modernization.

One successful case was mentioned by Ambassador Wang, the hybrid rice project, where Federation Director and Agri-entrepreneur Henry Lim Bon Liong has been an active contributor. Henry was instrumental in acquiring the technical know-how from China's father of hybrid rice and 2001 Magsaysay awardee Prof. Yuan Long Ping, and in applying it in the Philippine setting. This was one of the agenda items of my talks with Premier Zhu Ronggi to propagate the Chinese hybrid rice for our agricultural modernization.

Let me also commend the Federation for actively pursuing programs and projects addressing the key concern of peace and order and its twin — social development.

I know the Federation is working closely with the government, especially the National Anti-Crime Commission, in addressing the problem of kidnapping.

I would like to reiterate how deeply saddened I am over the death of kidnap victims Ediborah Yap and Martin Burnham. This is a terrible tragedy that demonstrates that terrorism has no conscience. Our sympathies go out to the families of martin Burnham and Ediborah yap. As we mourn this loss, let us also not forget the brave soldiers and law enforcement officers whose lives have been lost in the campaign to free the hostages and bring the terrorists who held them to justice.

We feel blessed that the significant efforts of everyone involved in securing the release of the hostages have been successful in the case of Gracia Burnham. I will be visiting her after my participation in this program. Her rescue is also an important milestone in our efforts to restore peace and order in the Philippines and in our broader global fight against terrorism. Our battle against terrorism and the poverty that makes people susceptible to joining terrorist bands does not end here. We will continue our efforts to eradicate terrorism in our country and internationally.

We will not rest until we bring those responsible for this atrocities to justice. At the same time, we are working hard to eliminate terrorism in its recruitment grounds by restoring economic growth and ensuring equitable development so that the terrorists don't find fertile ground with those who have not benefited from the fruits of development.

I am concerned that the Abu Sayyaf leaders may try to flee the country. I am asking the secretary of justice and the department of foreign affairs, especially with frank here, to seek the assistance of our asean neighbors, particularly Malaysia and Indonesia, co-signatories of the counter-terrorism agreement, to assist in their capture. The Secretary of Justice and the Department of Foreign Affairs should also ask for the assistance of Interpol and other International Law Enforcement agencies. The Secretary of Justice and the Department of Foreign Affairs can also send a similar message to the U.S. Attorney General.

Okay, Frank. I don't have to send you a memo.

The Philippines joined in the global effort to eliminate terrorism from day one. Terrorism is a global scourge that has caused great pain and suffering and many casualties around the world.

The Philippine government has and will continue to stand firm on its attack on terrorism and will not back down: no negotiations, no compromise. As you in the Chinese community know very well kidnappers are the lowest form of life and taking hostages is a crime against all humanity and must not be allowed to proliferate. The Philippine government regrets the loss of life of innocent civilians as well as military personnel in the pursuit of wiping out terrorism. It is a painful price that the Philippines and all other peace-loving nations have had to pay to make the world safer for law-abiding citizens. Eradication of terrorism in the Philippines is another step toward strengthening the rule of law in areas of terrorist presence and re-focusing the energy of government on pressing social ills with the overall objective of eliminating poverty that confronts so many of our people.

With this objective in mind, I ask the federation to help me build classrooms in the barangays of the towns of Sibuco, Siraway, Siocon, and Baliguian in Zamboanga del Norte, otherwise known as the triple S-B complex of Zamboanga del Norte. This was where the Abu Sayyaf fled after their atrocities in Ipil, Zamboanga del Sur in 1995. This again was where they fled after they were driven out by the heavy military offensive in Basilan; and this is where martin, Gracia and Deborah were found. this complex, is as poor as Basilan. many barangays have no schools whatsoever. No wonder many of the barrio folk, uneducated, therefore, can earn their living only by harboring terrorists who are on the run. We are winning the military battle in the triple s-b complex, but you must help me win the battle for their hearts and minds. Help me win their battle against poverty.

I thank the federation for helping narrow the gap in our classroom needs through your "operation barrio schools." the federation, as we have just recently seen in frank Drilon's initiatives, can build classrooms at half the cost of government-built school houses. I have challenged the department of public works to try to match your cost because recently, senate president Franklin Drilon turned over 100 million pesos of his own development fund to the federation for the construction of 571 classrooms.

This is a clear acceptance by the government of the status of the federation not only as a leading organization in the Chinese Filipino community, but also as a key partner in socio-economic development.

What makes me especially happy about the Drilon-federation joint initiative is that you allowed me to choose the areas where the schools will be built.

I chose 571 Barangays where no schools exist. This is part of my “school for every Barangay program.”

I understand John Ng has issued a call to the Chinese Filipino community to support this “school for every Barangay program.” please help those Barangays with no school buildings acquire these school buildings especially for the early grades — grades 1 and 2 — so that the little children will not end up dropping out of school so early because they would have to walk so far away just to go to first grade.

If we can work like this, like one big family, we can secure a bright future for our county, for our ourselves, and for our children.

And so on this evening, I celebrate the friendship of the Filipinos and the Chinese. We celebrate the Filipino Chinese. We celebrate the Philippines. We celebrate China and our centuries and millennia of friendship in the past and into the future.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA’s Speech during the Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day Celebration Sponsored by the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Inc. (FFCCII). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225128/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8332&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during 14th Anniversary Convention of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program

Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During 14th Anniversary Convention of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP)

[Delivered at the Expo Filipino Millennium Hall, Clark Field, Angeles City, Pampanga, June 10, 2002]

Maraming salamat Secretary Braganza at maraming salamat din dahil ngayon lang naipulong mo ang lahat ng mga officers ng Department of Agrarian Reform sa isang lugar sa buong kasaysayan ng land reform. Kaya welcome sa inyong lahat dito.

Secretary Joey Lina; ang aking anak na si Mikey Arroyo na nangangatawan sa Pampanga; Mayor Moki Morales nangangatawan naman sa ating host municipality, ang Mabalacat; our very supportive Ambassadors from the countries that support land reform in the Philippines very heavily, Ambassador Van Remoortele of Belgium and Ambassador Ben Abba of Israel; other members of the diplomatic corps representing the countries and agencies that have been supporting Philippine land reform; our AFP Chief of Staff General Cimat and the other officers of the armed forces of the Philippines who are here Today; PNP Chief Larry Mendoza and the other officers of the police who are also here with us today; and ating ring host dito sa lugar na ito, si Pangulong Manny Angeles ng Clark Development Corporation; PARCOM Chairperson and private sector representatives; the CARP implementing agencies; mga beneficiary ng land reform; mga panauhin; mga kaibigan:

Magandang umaga sa inyong lahat at Happy Land Reform Day sa inyong lahat.

Noong ako ay nagbigay ng aking State of the Nation Address noong isang taon, sinabi ko na isa sa apat na pangunahing programa ng ating laban sa kahirapan ay agricultural modernization founded on social equity. ‘Yung bahagi noon, founded on social equity, ang pinakalaman ng social equity sa ating agricultural modernization ay ito na ngang reporma sa lupa o land reform. Kaya ang land reform ay pangunahing bahagi ng ating programa ng administrasyon.

Even when I was still vice president, and I was articulating the four components of what I believe a program to fight poverty should have, I said many times that the promise of land reform, a commitment that spans several presidents, must finally be redeemed. I said that without equity and modernization, we will never win the struggle against poverty in our rural countryside.

Katunayan alam ko, napakaraming mga pangulo, ito ang talagang hinangad nila na magkaroon at matupad ang reporma sa lupa. Katunayan, tinuring ng aking ama, ang dating Pangulong Diosdado Macapagal, bilang pangunahing nakamit niya sa kaniyang administrasyon ay nasimula ang reporma sa lupa sa pagtuturing na ang tenancy ay labag sa batas. Kaya naman pinagpapatuloy ko ang sinimula niya na ito. At ako ay nasisiyahan na kung noong isang taon ginanap natin ang Land Reform Day sa Malakanyang, ngayon naman ay ginaganap natin ito sa probinsiya kung saan ang aking tatay sa kanyang kabataan at kabinataan ay naranasan niya ang mahirap na karanasan ng mga magsasakang hindi may-ari ng lupang tinatrabaho nila. Dahil si Diosdado Macapagal ay anak ng mga tenant farmer. Ayun ang kanyang pinakalayunin noong siya ay naging pangulo.

Sa aking State of the Nation Address ng nakaraang taon, sinabi ko ang ating layunin, mamahagi tayo taun-taon ng sandaang ektaryang lupaing agrikultura sa ilalim ng DAR.

Kanina, in-unveil ni Nani Braganza ‘yung kanyang programa — “Bayan, Anihan.” At sinabi niya na land distribution will not be enough unless there is an increase in productivity kaya meron siyang lahat noong bahagi ng “bayan, anihan.” Pero ako rin gusto ko namang bigyan-diin, increase in land productivity without land distribution is not social equity.

Kaya para sa akin, ang pangunahing layunin talaga ng DAR ay iyung land distribution. At lahat ng ibang bahagi ng “bayan, anihan” ay suporta para maging matagumpay ‘yung land distribution. Kaya itong araw na ito — sabi ko kay Nani, “pareho kaming seven minutes ang speech namin.” Kasi isa lang mensahe ang ibibigay ko — ang tanging mensahe ko ay ito: binabati ko si Nani, binabati ko kayonglahat, binabati ko ang dar na namamahala para sa pribadong lupaing distribution dahil nga noong nakaraang taon, kayo ay nakapamahagi ng 104,261 hectares na lupain sa 72,188 farmer-beneficiaries sa buong kapuluan. In other words, nilampasan ninyo ang target na binigay ko sa Inyo.

Sabi nung iba, saan? Macro figures. Hindi. Kaya huwag kayong matulog pero itong araw na ito, ibibigay ko ang breakdown ng lupaing napamahagi natin nitong nakaraang taon.

Nandito ba ‘yung ating Abra delegation? Abra, naimbag nga bigat yo amin, apo. Ako ay nagpapasalamat sa inyo dahil kayo ay namahagi ng higit sa 1,000 hectares para sa land reform; addadtoy dagiti officials ti dar gapo benguet? Congratulations! Dahil sa benguet higit 600 hectares ang nadistribute n’yo sa land reform; dagiti officials gapo ti apayao, Ifugao ken kalinga, addadtoy? Sa inyong lahat, congratulations dahil ang inyong tatlong probinsiya tag-300 hectares, for a total of 900 hectares ang dinistribute ninyo; ken diay probinsiya ti mountain province, ‘dinno ti opisyal? ‘Yon ay bulubundukin na probinsiya kaya tawag mountain province, nakapagbigay ng higit 50 hectares naman sa mountain province; gapo mi ti La Union, ‘dinno ti delegation gapo ti La Union? Okay, congratulations, halos 300 hectares sa La Union. Probinsiya ni Nani at ng inyong lingkod, Ilocos. Ah, ‘no. Pangasinan ken Ilocos Norte. ‘dinno ti Pangasinan ken Ilocos Norte? Tig-200 hectares ang inyong namudmod, congratulations; at sa Ilocos Sur? Seven hectares; ‘yon namang Isabela, okay, more than 3,000 hectares sa Isabela; cagayan province, almost 20 hectares; Nueva Vizcaya, sino ti Nueva Vizcaya? Almost 400 hectares; Quirino, more than 100 hectares; at ‘yung Nueva Ecija naman, higit tatlong libong ektarya.

Tarlac, Pampanga at Bulacan, saan kayo? ‘Yon. Kayong tatlo, tig-sanlibong ektarya, kaya tatlong libong ektarya kayo, tatlong probinsiya; Zambales at Bataan, tig-limang daang ektarya, kaya isang libo ‘yung dalawa Dalawang probinsiya; Aurora? More than 100 hectares, congratulations; ‘yung Quezon at Mindoro Oriental, nandito? Tig-dalawang libong ektarya kaya apat na libong ektarya kayong dalawa; ‘yon namang Occidental Mindoro, Palawan, Marinduque, Romblon, Batangas, mukhang tig-isang libong ektarya kayong lima, kaya 5,000 hectares; ‘yung Laguna, probinsiya ni Joey, narito ba? More than 400 hectares; ‘yung sa Cavite narito kayo? More than 200 hectares; ‘yung Rizal, Rizal? Wala. Ayun, nandoon kayo. Halos siyudad na ang Rizal kaya meron pa ring apatnapung ektaryang nagawa; Camarines Sur? Salamat, marhay nga aga, and thank you for the more than 3,000 hectares you distributed; ‘yon namang Albay, may nagbati sa akin dito, taga-Albay, Masbate, Camarines Norte, tig-2,000 hectares kaya kayong tatlong probinsiya ay 6,000 hectares, congratulations; sa Sorsogon, saan ang Sorsogon dito? Halos isandaang libong ektarya, congratulations din sa inyo; at sa Catanduanes ay halos isandaang ektarya rin sa Catanduanes.

Negros Occidental, ito ay isa sa pinaka-special mention, noong araw ay kasama sa kulilat, sabi ni Nani Braganza, pero ngayon more than 7,000 hectares sa Negros Occidental; doon naman sa Iloilo, diin ang taga-Iloilo diri? Okay, more than 2,000 hectares; Capiz? More than 1,000 hectares; Guimaras kag Aklan, diin? Okay, each of them almost 500 hectares kaya halos 1,000 ‘yung dalawa; Antique, more than 400 hectares sa Antique; sa Negros Oriental, Negros Oriental? Lugar ng pangulo ng Land bank of the Philippines, kaya dapat hindi siya inaresto dahil halos apat na libong ektarya ang Negros Oriental; Bohol at Cebu, more than one 1,000 hectares each more or less, so 2,000 hectares for the two; adto naman sa maliit na Island ng Siquijor, ayun, eight hectares, congratulations; maliit naman na island ang Siquijor, maliit na maliit. Siquijor, Siquijor is smaller than our Mikey’s and my hometown of Lubao, so salamat sa ano. Okay na rin ‘yung eight hectares; Leyte, halos anim na libong ektarya sa Leyte, saan ang Leyte? Binanggit kanina, di ba? ‘Yon din ay dating kulelat pero nakahabol, almost 6,000 hectares, congratulations; ang Northern Samar, nandito ba? Maupay nga aga mga Northern Samar, congratulations sa almost 3,000 hectares na dinistribute ninyo; sa Western Samar. Western Samar, more than 2,000 hectares, congratulations. Ay! Ah, yes. At sa Eastern Samar at Biliran, wala? Ayun. Each of you 1,000 hectares each so 2,000 hectares for the two provinces; and Southern Leyte, almost 500 hectares in Southern Leyte.

Sa Zamboanga Del sur, ang ating outstanding landowner ay galing sa Zamboanga Del Sur, so... Palagay ko, this includes Zamboanga Sibugay, higit 2,000 gikan sa Zamboanga Del Sur; sa Zamboanga Del Norte, saan ang Zamboanga Del ...? Okay, halos anim na daan naman sa Zamboanga del Norte; sa Basilan? Oy, kahit na meron tayong Abu Sayyaf, higit dalawang daan pa ay nadistribute; sa Lanao del Norte? Higit tatlung libong ektarya, congratulations; sa Bukidnon, more than 2,000 hectares; and the two Misamis, Oriental and Occidental, 700 each for 1,400 hectares; and in the little island of Camiguin na binagyo pa, more than 20 hectares. Camiguin, ganoon din, mas maliit din kaysa sa bayan namin ni Mikey na Lubao.

In Davao del Norte, almost 3,000 hectares; in Davao Oriental, the number one coconut province in the country, 2,000 hectares; In Davao del Sur, more than 1,000 hectares; and in the city of Davao, city of Davao, kahit na city, halos pitong daang ektarya ang nadistribute sa city of Davao; ito naman, isa pang dating kulelat at naging valedictorian kasama ng Negros Occidental, Sultan Kudarat, higit pitung libo; sa Cotabato Province, higit limang libo; South Cotabato and Sarangani, 2,000 each to make 4,000 hectares; Agusan del Sur, almost 2,000; Surigao del Sur, almost 1,000; Agusan del Norte, wala? Ayun. Almost 400; Surigao del Norte, almost 100. Kasi panay beaches ang Surigao del Norte kasama na 'yung Siargao surfing beach which we shall visit in September; and our sole land reform area in the Autonomous Region, Lanao del Sur? Wala sila kasi nalipat na sa ARMM, anyway, nalipat na sa ARMM but we congratulate them because even in Lanao Del Sur, more than 2,000 hectares were distributed for land reform.

Kaya 'yan. Doon sa mga lugar na iyon ay naganap ang land reform at ayon kay Nani Braganza — hindi ba nani, totoo ito? — hindi na ngayon lang nagkapulong ang mga officers ng DAR sa isang lugar pero ngayon din lang nakaroon ng ganitong karaming napamahaging lupang pansasaka sa loob ng isang taon, the biggest in history. At isang dahilan kung ba't hangang-hanga ako kay Nani at sa inyo, ginawa niyo ito nang hindi kayo kumuha ng ekstrang budget mula sa akin, 'di ba? And I would like to congratulate you, I would like to thank our official development assistance partners because they help us meet these targets without Nani getting additional budget from the general appropriations act but one reason why he was able to do this also was that Nani was able to have a very, very high absorption rate for official development assistance. congratulations sa inyong lahat doon. kasi siguro, ilan sa inyong mga regional directors, nandoon na kayo sa ating mga iba't-ibang mga regional development council meetings, at siguro nakikita ninyo istriktang-istriktang ako. Isa-isa sa mga projects ng different departments, tinitignan, ano ang delay? Bakit delay? Ganyan. Pero halos tuwing DAR ang project, on time, hindi delayed kaya congratulations.

Ang land reform, dalawa nga 'yon. Ang pinaka-land reform, 'yung private agricultural land, so 'yon ay 100,000 hectares a year ang ating project, ang ating goal. There are also lands available from... owned by national government or public domain that can be alienable and this is also another hundred thousand hectares that we want to distribute every year. Kaya ang partner ng DAR ay 'yung DENR para doon naman sa public lands.

Ang DENR naman na namamahala sa lupaing gobyerno ay may target din kagaya ng DAR na 100,000 hectares per year at itong taon na ito nakaraan, nakapaglagda ng patent para sa almost 6,000 hectares mula nang July hanggang March, so hindi pa tapos 'yung accounting nila. At naglabas din ang DENR sa loob ng panahong ito ng certificate of allocation sa about 76,000 hectares of land or a total of 82,000 hectares of public land. Kaya inaasahan ko na pagdating ng July ay masasabi rin nila na kagaya ng DAR nagawa rin nila 'yung kanilang target.

Eh sabi ko kay Nani, pareho kaming seven-minutes lang. Kasi ako ayaw kong haluan ng iba pa 'yung mensahe. Kasi para sa akin, napaka- importante na matupad 'yung target natin sa State of the Nation Address, 'yung 100,000 hectares. Ito ang dapat bibigyang-diin na gawa ninyo, at dahil nagawa ninyo, para sa akin naka-boundary kayo.

Kaya maraming salamat at congratulations! Happy Anniversary sa inyong lahat.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during 14th Anniversary Convention of the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP). Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225111/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8331&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Culture and the Arts Conference 2002 Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Culture and the Arts Conference 2002

[Delivered at the Ballroom, Pearl Manila Hotel, Taft Avenue, Manila, June 13, 2002]

Thank you very much Presidential Adviser Letty Ramos Shahani. I would like everyone to remember that it was Letty Shahani who authored the law that created the National Commission on Culture and the Arts. I would like also everyone to realize that it was she who worked hard so that this commission would have an endowment fund of 900 million pesos from the national government.

Chairperson Evelyn Pantig of the National Commission for Culture and the Arts. I am also very happy that Evelyn is the chairperson of NCCA. I have known Evelyn for a long time now from the time when we were both in our early stages of our professional career. I was a professional economist doing work for NEDA-PIDS, a foreign funded project on tourism and its socioeconomic impact, and necessarily I had to deal with the Department of Tourism and Evelyn wasn't even a division chief yet at that time but she was my main resource person in the DOT.; and then eventually we both went up our respective career ladders. And I'm very glad that she is here as chairman of NCCA because I can attest, as you all know by now, to her great professionalism and dedication to work.

I would also like to greet the other officers of the National Commission For Culture and the Arts starting with Ambeth Ocampo who is here as Chairman of the National Historical Institute, and I am also very happy because it was I who appointed Ambeth Ocampo to NHI. yesterday, I saw Ambeth in the Independence Day Celebrations, and I said, "Ambeth, I'm sure you were shocked that I appointed you." He never applied, it was I who thought of putting him there and I said its because I'm an ardent reader of your column and I feel that Ambeth makes history so approachable. When he talks about the various historical figures and gives vignettes that are result of his painstaking research, then he makes them familiar to us as if they were a prominent uncle in our neighborhood that we can be proud of. And this what I want him to do to history for the whole Philippines: make it part of our home parlor, make it part of our home, make it part of our lives. And I am glad that he is here because that's what culture to be: a part of our home, a part of our lives.

I greet the other commissioners, Dr. Ramon Santos, Rod Cornejo, Mr. Ronelio Dela Cruz; Dean Kasilag, our national artist for music; participants of this culture and arts conference; distinguished guests, ladies and Gentlemen:

I must also greet, she's not included here because she's supposed to be the workhorse but I will acknowledge, Muffin Yanzon. I am also very happy that Muffin is the Executive Director of NCCA. Muffin's name came to my desk as a nominee of the search committee and this just shows how good, how well the search committee does its work because I readily accepted Muffin as the nominee of the search committee because I too have known her for a very long time in my professional career. She was one of the leading middle level officers of the Department of Trade and Industry and she was so good in her job that Sef Jollosco, who was in charge of regional operations which is the heart of the Department of Trade and Industry, got her as his alter ego and so Muffin did a great job there and I know she'll do a great job in putting order and structure in an agency, An organization where many of the decision makers are artists and therefore Have an artistic temperament and therefore have the famous lack of ... I mean, artists are more intuitive than structured so all your great ideas must be translated into something workable by somebody who knows how to pencil push and somebody who knows how to do the nitty gritty — and that's the work that Muffin Yanzon will do for culture in the Philippines.

So I am glad to be here in this conference on culture and the arts. I was asked to be a keynote speaker, I said, no, I will not be a keynote speaker because NCCA is not department where, I as your President, and you are supposed to be just my alter egos, I'm supposed to tell you what our policy is. NCCA was made by Manang Letty as a Commission precisely because it is not a department to be regulated by the national government or, to put it this way, not to be under the supervision and control of the president.

Nonetheless, we do have the 900 million endowment, and it is the job of the government to make sure that is well spent. We have an obligation.

So this is the specific unique characteristic of NCCA: there is the freedom from over regulation, or freedom from supervision and control. But on the other hand the obligation to account for taxpayers' money and that is why the commission itself has representatives from the national government.

So I did not want to deliver a keynote speech because of that unique character of NCCA because if I give you the keynote speech then I would be dictating culture policy by preempting the ideas of the cultural community. And I don't want to do that. I preferred instead to listen to the Medium-term cultural plan, as put together by the commission, and then give my inputs to it as I shall now be doing. So I have suggested to Evelyn Pantig that what was presented now by Muffin is the draft cultural development plan to be refined by what I will say and what will emerge from the consultations that will be held in this conference in the next two days.

And so let me therefore give my inputs.

I first became president a year-and-a-half ago, I told the Filipino people about my four core beliefs:

First, we must be bold in our national ambitions, so that our challenge must be that within this decade, we will win the fight against poverty.

Second, we must improve moral standards in government and society, in order to provide a strong foundation for good governance.

Third, we must change the character of our politics, in order to create a fertile ground for true reforms. Our politics of personality and patronage must give way to a new politics of party programs and process of dialogue with the people.

Finally, and fourth, I believe in leadership by example. We should promote solid traits such as work ethic and a dignified lifestyle, matching action To rhetoric, performing rather than grandstanding.

This is the framework where I feel culture has a place. To me, the place of culture in my four core beliefs is in the second of those core beliefs: The need to improve moral standards in society. I believe that culture reflects moral standards, but culture also molds moral standards. And this is why government must have a policy on culture, if it wants to be able to improve moral standards in society. Thus, my overarching vision of culture policy is to mobilize culture to improve moral standards in society.

In my State of the Nation Address last year, again I spoke about moral standards as part of the four components of our national agenda to fight poverty. Our national agenda revolves around the first of my core beliefs, the conviction that we must win the battle against poverty within the decade.

And as I have repeated many times, again four components of our national agenda are there in the fight against poverty. The first is an economic philosophy of free enterprise appropriate to the 21st century. The second is a modernized agricultural sector founded on social equity. The third is a social bias toward the disadvantaged to balance our economic development plan. And the fourth component, again, is to raise the moral standards of government and society.

If we are to raise moral standards, first we must strengthen justice and the enforcement of law and order.

This pertains to two levels. At the level of principle, this administration must affirm its commitment to the principle that no one is above the law. The second level pertains to our sense that justice prevails and the rule of law works in our daily lives.

This is a great challenge to us in today's domestic and international environment which is challenged with crime and terrorism all around. In this challenging environment characterizing the dawn of the 21st century, we must mobilize culture to forge consensus on a just, lasting, and honorable peace in our country. In mobilizing culture to influence moral standards, we must arrive at a national consensus on the principles to guide our search for peace.

As a start, I offer the following for our people in lieu the cultural community to consider. One principle is that our ultimate objective should be both peace and development. A second principle is that our framework must be based on constitutionality, national sovereignty, and territorial integrity. And the third principle which is relevant directly to this body is that we must recognize, the Philippines must recognize that our society is a multi-ethnic one which should be founded on social justice for all, and the institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions.

Christian and Muslim, Chinese and Spanish, Tagalog and Cebuano, these are but a few of the names to which the Filipino responds, in a wondrous testimony to our rich and varied heritage as a nation.

Thus, I believe that our medium-term plan for culture and the arts, the medium-term plan for culture and the arts of the Arroyo administration should revolve around the vision of the institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions. This should be our unifying vision for our medium-term plan for culture and the arts.

Many have expressed unease over an emerging monoculture as a result of globalization — that was the theme of Evelyn's remarks. The fear is that the cultures of developing nations will be slowly eradicated as the cultures of more advanced nations exercise their hegemony.

But the reality is that our culture can only be swamped by global forces if we do not take measures to preserve and defend it. To preserve and defend our culture needs planning and preparedness. That's why I have planners as chairman and as executive director, these two girls are great in planning, they are great in preparedness. So the NCCA must be in the lead.

We must ensure that our culture is strong, vibrant, attractive. That's why I have Ambeth Ocampo who can make history attractive, he can also make culture attractive. He can give us that spirit that culture is not far away but right there in our living room. Culture must not be moribund, must not be lacking in creativity.

Thus I would like to see in the vision statement of the medium-term plan for culture and the arts, the vision of a Filipino people inspired by its cultural and artistic life and heritage to improve moral standards in society.

To achieve this vision, I would like to see that the first and primary approach is to heighten the institutionalized accommodation of ethnic traditions.

This is consistent with the mandate of the NCCA as provided by law because the law says that the NCCA must have the mandate to encourage the continuing and balanced development of a pluralistic culture by the people themselves, to conserve and promote the nation's historical and cultural heritage, and to preserve and integrate traditional culture and its various creative expressions as a dynamic part of the national cultural mainstream.

As a nation of more than 70 ethno-linguistic groups, the cultures that contribute to our national heritage are many and diverse. This diversity has made the Filipino heritage richer in its impact, but more profound. However, this diversity has also created some difficulties in achieving peace and development since what are acceptable norms for some are not acceptable for others. It is imperative, therefore, that we place tolerance at the center of all our efforts. All the cultures that make up the Filipino nation are equally important and should be accorded respect if we want harmony and solidarity.

For instance, the terrorism plague that is upon us in southwestern Philippines. The terrorists seek to make their activity religious warfare. On the contrary, we must make our response an occasion for religious understanding. And we know that religion drives culture. Religious understanding means cultural understanding; institutionalized accommodation of various ethnic traditions.

I was talking about Ambeth on how he can make history so folksy, I think we should do that to culture too. Yes, there are great intellectual initiatives that only a few may understand in the beginning, and we must allow that creativity to happen. But at the same time we must have mass culture. We must make culture available to the masses. We must make culture attractive to the masses.

Many years ago when the cultural center was built, I told myself if I were president I wouldn't spend all that money on the Cultural Center of the Philippines. It's an imposing building not accessible to the masses and its very architecture, its very approach, physical approach is not accessible to the masses. It is forbidding. It is far away. It is not folksy. I said if I had that money I would rather have spent that money on cultural centers all around the country so that we can bring culture to the masses.

You know I'll just give an example of a personal experience. When I was young, studying in assumption I would go to Japan with the nuns and we would watch kabuki. Of course we had to study so that we could appreciate it. But if some Filipino, overseas worker straight from the province were to go there, you wouldn't want to go to a kabuki play because you have to study it first to understand it. When I had my own family and I brought my own children to the kabuki play they had their earphones explaining everything that was happening and they appreciated it without any background study about kabuki.

In other words, advanced cultures like Japan bring their culture to the masses. We've got to do something like that if we want culture to mold, to mold our moral standards.

Now, that money for cultural center has been spent. And I hate to say it but that money for the cultural center actually came from an education fund, ODA from the U.S. that was intended for education but education for land reform extension. So it was even built at the expense of the success of land reform.

Anyway, it's been spent 30 years ago, I mention it only because I want to talk about how we should spend our money now. Our 900 million endowment which can't be spent but its fruits can be spent, a 900 million endowment is at the very least about a hundred million a year. And how do we spend this hundred million a year? How do we prioritize? That's why it's important to have a cultural development plan. It's important to have a framework. It's important to have a vision. It's important to know the primary approaches.

And the approach is where will the supply come from, so to speak as an economist, the various ethnic traditions. Where is the demand that will be met and fed the masses? Let us feed the masses with the culture of our various ethnic traditions ancient and contemporary. And therefore a method of distribution must be something approachable to the masses. It's too expensive now to build many cultural centers from scratch. But there are maybe existing structures we should look for that we can develop so that they can be the repository of culture and the arts where the masses can go and appreciate them and be attracted to them.

Twenty percent of the population lives in Metro Manila, another 20 percent from Region III and Region IV find Metro Manila accessible. So it is right to have a Cultural Center in Metro Manila, it will cater to 40 percent of the population, but I don't think the cultural center is it because it is Imposing; it is unapproachable; it is inaccessible; it is elitist. I believe the one that will make — I'm talking about the building ha, I'm talking about the building — the one that the poor will find approachable, physically, psychologically is the Metropolitan Theater of the Philippines, Manila. And I feel that we should revive the Metropolitan Theater and make it the new home of the National Commission for Culture and the Arts.

The Metropolitan Theater is jointly owned by GSIS and Manila, the City of Manila. Along time ago I asked Lito Atienza, "Lito, if the national government repairs the metropolitan theater, can you spend money to run it?" He said, "I have no money to rebuild it but I can have money to run it." So therefore I believe it is a good investment for NCCA to use a part of the fruits of the endowment to revive the Metropolitan Theater. and that is one specific operational instruction I would like to give to our government representatives.

Mass culture is also about movies. I'm a great movie fan because I grew up in Iligan and that was the culture available to us and I loved watching all those movies of Nida Blanca and Nestor de Villa when I was a child there in Iligan. My lola would bring me to the theater — not air conditioned pero may lodge, may orchestra — so my lola and I would go to the lodge and our driver would go to the orchestra 'cause he'd also having paid his way also to go to the orchestra. But, you know we would watch it over and over the screening, over and over so the driver never knew when we're gonna get out. So after awhile when we are ready to go home after seeing the show, maybe one time and a half or something, you know one whole show and then the favorite, we wait for the favorite scene, then my lola would go down to the orchestra open the door and say, "Romeo, uuwi na tayo." that's mass culture. Let's make it available to everyone.

So that's what I want Metropolitan Theater to be. Also I want we must recognize that the Filipinos love movies it was not only me as a child. probably the number one cultural outlet of anything is the movies. And if culture reflects, no, if art reflects, cultural reflect standards, but culture must also mold standards, then movies must also mold moral standards; and we must use our resources in our cultural establishment to be able to bring movies towards those beautiful values that we must preserve in our society.

That is why I began by advancing money from the President's Social Fund not to give an award to the best movies at the end of the Metropolitan Film Festival, but near the start. In other words there's a preliminary judging on the best scripts. And I've released, I've allocated an initial 50 million pesos to spread out as subsidy for the production of the best scripts that will be chosen by the Metro Manila Film Festival committee.

I would like to acknowledge that this idea was given to me by Mayor Rey Malonzo. So I had asked him also to help me work out the implementing guidelines for the use of this subsidy.

Now, the Metro Manila Film Festival gets a lot of income. And if I said, I have advanced the money but I think that the NCCA should make a statement and participate in this subsidy, but because NCCA will participate in the subsidy it must also participate in the fruits of the Metro Manila Film Festival.

The Metro Manila Film Festival's fund beneficiaries are not provided by law. They are just determined by the committee usually acting on the instructions of the president. So, I will be asking the new chairman of the Metro Manila Development Authority — 'di ba he's the chairman of the Film Festival? — that he will review the allocation of the proceeds of the Film Festival and in the review of the allocation they should ensure that the endowment or the production subsidy contributed by the NCCA to the what you would call the semi-finalist or the qualifying scripts should become a permanent fund. So therefore it should keep returning — it should keep returning, as much as possible, to the NCCA so that you have money again for next year's subsidy.

Incidentally, you might want to know to whom I will give the instructions. You might know who will be the new Metro Manila Development Authority chairman. It is Bayani Fernando, the former mayor of Marikina City. You know when I asked Dick Gordon to be secretary of Tourism I said, "Dick, what you did in Subic you've got to do for the whole country." When I called Bayani, I said, "BF what you did for Marikina you must do for the whole Metro Manila." Bayani is in the mold of Evelyn and Muffin — highly professional, no frills, just straight to the point, no-nonsense. Well, that's my style too.

And so culture and art by nature there are many frills and I appreciate the frills. That's why on my day off, my night off I even go to a play in U.P. and the students there didn't know before hand, suddenly I just show up. I love the Philippine version of "A Winter's Tale" or I'll find out that there's a showing, even if I have seen it already ten times, of "Portrait Of the Filipino as an Artist" because I want to see it again.

And then I put the three painting of Botong Francisco in Malacañang right on top of staircase so that every time I leave the Palace I look at the three paintings first and sometimes that's mystic moment for me.

And felt the pain when I saw the blood compact that was placed there when I was a child in Malacañang. I saw it was moldy and scratched when I got there. And one of the first things I wanted, not first things, I mean I've been wanting to do it is to have it restored. And I believe that well, there are also a couple of others, another Amorsolo is also kind of scratched there, and I put it first in the Office of the President. We have, we have, the Spanish government willing to help in the restoration, we have also some artists that are connected with the Sotheby's willing to make one restoration for free and things like this.

But eventually too I would like all those beautiful art works of Malacañang to be made accessible to the people. I would like that part of the NCCA's job to be to catalog all the art that is in Malacañang and then let's put them on exhibit sometimes, but let's put them also in a coffee-table book where everyone, all the children all over the country to be able to appreciate.

So these are some of my specific operational project level ideas. I'm also very happy that we are going to be preserving the Ifugao rice terraces. When I was still Vice President there was an Ifugao rice terraces task force that was organized, I was a member of the task force. But after a while that I was the only one taking it seriously. I was organizing in the various towns that had rice terraces community development projects for the poorest of the poor: food for work but the work is to work on the rice terraces. But that was the only specific activity that was being put forward.

So when I became President we abolished the task force because committees don't work. Task forces work for a specific period with a deadline. But if it is within a particular geographical jurisdiction I believe that the primary responsibility, as Evelyn has told me, should be on the local government of Ifugao. And let us support the governor of Ifugao — a very young Ifugao, educated, dynamic, dedicated. Let's empower the people of Ifugao to preserve their cultural heritage.

So I have given you a framework, the overarching vision: mobilize culture to improve moral standards.

I have given you a primary approach: institutionalize accommodation of ethnic traditions.

I have given also another approach: make culture attractive to the masses.

And I have given you some specific projects that comply with those approaches, that comply with the vision. I hope that the continuing conference that we have here will reinforce what I have said: let us enrich NCCA itself; let us enrich our own medium-term plan itself; and let us bring culture into the mainstream of how we want the Philippines to be in the 21st century.

Thank you.

Source: www.op.gov.ph

Macapagal-Arroyo, G. (2002). PGMA's Speech during the Culture and the Arts Conference 2002. Retrieved from https://web.archive.org/web/20100412225103/http://www.op.gov.ph/index.php?option=com_content&task=view&id=8323&Itemid=38

Speech of President Arroyo during the Awarding Ceremonies of Dr. Jose P. Rizal Awards for Excellence
Speech
of
Her Excellency Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo
President of the Philippines
During the Awarding Ceremonies of Dr. Jose P. Rizal Awards for Excellence

[Delivered at the Le Pavillon, Roxas Boulevard, Manila June 19, 2002]

Maraming salamat po.

Maraming salamat kay Tessie Ang-See, ang Simbolo ng Laban Kontra sa Krimen. Maraming salamat Tessie sa lahat ng ginagawa mo.

Dante Ang, ang Chairman ng Dr. Jose Rizal Awards for Excellence; Associate Justice Bernardo Pardo; si Mayor ng Quezon City, Sonny Belmonte, son-in-law ng Filipino-Chinese community; si Dante Liban, ang ating incoming Director-General ng TESDA; si Rony Diaz, ang publisher ng Manila Times; si Ms. Rosa Rosal, ang ating nagmamahal sa mahihirap; nandito yata si Mayor ng Naga City, si Jessie Robredo; yung mga tatanggap ng Dr. Jose Rizal Award for Excellence, pati na rin yung Top Ten Outstanding Filipino-Chinese Awardees; narito rin yata si Former Prime Minister Cesar Virata; at nakita ko si Former Central Bank Governor Gabby Singson.

If I may greet the honorees who are here tonight, John Ng, President of the Federation; Lyonel Ty, President of KAISA; si Lucio Tan, Chairman ng Allied Bank; si Henry Sy of SM; Mr. John Gokongwei of JG; Mr. George Ty of Metrobank; Mr. Pao Shih Tien of Chiang Kai Shek; si James Dy of the Philippine-Chinese Charitable Association, 'di ko siya nakita; David Chua, the son of Ben Chua; Jocelyn Ong, the sister of Lawrence Ong, volunteer worker; I think it's Elton who's here, and Mrs. Tan Yu; Ricky Lee of Arts and Culture, 'di ko siya nakita; John Lu Kwa, business and entrepreneurship; Jose Tan, community service; Kin Ali Chua, education; Julie Yap Daza, journalism; Josiah Go, management and finance; Dibon Yok, medicine; and Perry ong, science and technology.

Distinguished members of the Filipino-Chinese community; ladies and gentlemen:

Thank you for this opportunity to be once again with the leaders and members of the Chinese-Filipino community. I've been with this community three times this month before tonight, but here I am again, because the Chinese community is such an important part of our economy, and Dante Ang, who urged me to attend this affair, does so much work for me that my presence is all I can do to repay his dedication.

Congratulations to the Manila Times and its sister publication, Kabayan, for having thought of this search for excellence. I also congratulate the co-sponsors of this undertaking, the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, KAISA, Philippine-Chinese Charitable Association, and the Chinese-Filipino Business Club.

But most of all, congratulations to the distinguished company of Chinese-Filipinos being honored tonight for helping advance the interests of the Tsinoy constituency and for helping build the nation through their personal vocations.

Tonight's awards break the national stereotype that the typical tsinoy makes his mark in society only through business and entrepreneurship.

The modern, enterprising tsinoy has broken out of that mold. Tonight, Ten Outstanding Chinese-Filipinos will be cited for their exceptional accomplishments, as mentioned by Eddie Mercado, in the fields of art and culture, business and entrepreneurship, community service, education, journalism, management and finance, medicine, public service, science and technology, and sports.

And no awards night for Chinese-Filipinos, of course, will be complete without recognizing the lifetime achievements of the giant Taipans of the Philippines. What a significant night it is when we have here Lucio Tan, Henry Sy, John Hokongwei, Heorge Ty, Angelo King, representatives of Alfonso Yuchengco, and Pao Shih Tien who has educated so many of the others who are here tonight.

I share the vision of the sponsors in awarding the Rizal posthumous awards to Mrs. Betty Go-Belmonte — and that's why it's not only Sonny who is here but my daughter's dear friend, Joy Belmonte — and of course our beloved Ben Chua, as well as Lawrence Ong and Tan Yu.

Our national hero, Jose Rizal, is the classic Chinese-Filipino whose life and work helped found a nation and brought Filipinos closer together.

Rizal was deeply concerned with the ascendancy of a united Filipino nation. An eminent Filipino historian described him as one who “formulated the Revolutionary concept of the Filipino nation as including Christians and Muslims and all other peoples of the archipelago, in one all-embracing fraternal union.” Rizal wanted his countrymen to create a new nation committed to a shared destiny.

Si Dr. Jose Rizal ay bayani noon at nananatiling bayani dahil namamalagi siya sa mga puso at isipan ng mga binibigyan nating parangal ngayong gabi. sinasabuhay ang kanyang mga tinuro at hinabilin at pawang inspirasyon sa mga Chinese-Filipinos ang buhay ni Jose Rizal at simulain.

Si Dr. Jose Rizal ay bayani noon at nananatiling bayani dahil binabahagi ang talino at lakas ng ating mga Filipino-Chinese awardees para sa iba, naglalaan sila ng oras para matulungan ang mas nangangailangan, at handa silang kumilos sa abot ng kanilang makakaya para maahon ang ating mga kababayan sa kahirapan.

Si Dr. Jose Rizal ay bayani noon at nananatiling bayani dahil nanatiling bukas ang isip at puso ng ating mga awardees na Filipino-Chinese kagaya niya sa pagbabagong dulot ng paglipas ng panahon, at handa silang tanggapin ang hamon ng pag-unlad at matalino nila tong hinaharap.

The Dr. Jose P. Rizal awards for excellence, named after the pride of the Malay race, honor outstanding Chinese-Filipino individuals who have demonstrated excellence in their chosen fields and have contributed to the growth of the nation.

I am proud to have worked closely with the leaders of the Chinese-Filipino community and to have been with you in the numerous causes and programs of the tsinoy constituency. Indeed, under my administration, the government and the tsinoys have built new bridges of friendship and understanding.

I recall that one of my acts as new president last year was to visit chinatown in Binondo and have a dialogue with the leaders of the tsinoy constituency.

In my meetings, I asked the Chinese-Filipinos to help the government, the new government, carry out and complete its program of change and reform.

Now I am again asking for your support. These are difficult times for our country; and they are difficult times for me as a leader.

I am very sad that public satisfaction with my administration is much lower today than two months ago, apparently due to public dismay over electricity rates.

This is reminiscent of the mid-1995 rice crisis during the Ramos administration. At that time, President Ramos' net ratings declined even more sharply than mine have declined, notwithstanding the small effect of one commodity, rice, on the overall inflation rate in 1995.

It is now clear that the price of electricity is also very socially sensitive.

Learning from President Ramos' experience, I have kept the price of rice down. It has not risen since I became president. But then, there's another commodity that has replaced rice as the political commodity.

My consolation is that when President Ramos was able to solve the problem from — his very low satisfaction rating in the middle of the rice crisis, to the short period up to the APEC summit — he recovered quite comfortably.

Although half of the public believe that I have no power to restrain the price of electricity, a significant one-third see me as having partial power, and one-sixth see me with full power over this price.

Though the price of electricity is not a problem of my making, I am doing my best within my power to alleviate the situation. Last may, I instructed, last month, I instructed the National Power Corporation to reduce its purchased power cost adjustment to 40 centavos. Because of this, from being the second most expensive cost of electricity in the region, we will go down to number six after your PPCA reduction takes effect in your July billing. Until then, and even afterwards, I ask for your patience and understanding.

In turn, I assure the tsinoys once again that my administration will help you realize your programs and projects, as I have been doing during the past year-and-a-half of my administration.

For instance, at your request, I pushed into law a naturalization measure designed to speed up the legalization of stay of qualified foreigners, including undocumented Chinese. Now please help me get the Chinese community to avail of this law because if the Chinese we expected to avail will avail it will greatly achieve our budget deficit ceiling target, which is so important for macroeconomic stability, which in turn is so important for the low interest rates, the low inflation rate, and the stable exchange rate that the business community is enjoying today.

Part of what I promised you was the observance of a National Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day. And I have delivered on that promise that's why I've been with you three times this past month because on June 7, we celebrated the first Filipino-Chinese Friendship Day.

My greatest wish is to see the tsinoy community living in peace.

I believe, as you do, that progress is not possible without peace, just as Peace is not sustainable without progress.

I realize that our effort to create jobs in order to fight poverty will not succeed as long as terrorism and criminality threaten the well-being of our citizens. I need your help and assistance in bringing to an end the terroristic and criminal activities that our country has been suffering.

